ALGERNON S. SULLIVAN,
Plaintiff's Attorney, 32 Chambers st.

2883 Supreme court, city and county of New York.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company against SIDNEY W. HOPKINS, FRANK A. COLLINS, & Robert J. Carpenter.

The complaint of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, plaintiff in the above entitled action, against Sidney W. Hopkins, Frank A. Collins, & Robert J. Carpenter, the defendants therein.

The said plaintiff, by Algernon S. Sullivan, their attorney, respectfully show to this court that they are a body corporate and politic, created and existing under and by virtue of an act of the legislature of the State of North Carolina, passed on the fifteenth day of February, in the year 1855, entitled "An act to incorporate the Western 2884 North Carolina Railroad Company," and another act of the legislature of the same State, passed the nineteenth day of August, in the year 1868, entitled "An act to amend the charter of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company;" and that the defendants, at and during the times of the transactions hereinafter mentioned, were and from thence hitherto have been and still are, copartners together, doing business in the cities of New York, and London, England, under the firm name & style of S. W. Hopkins and Company.

That on or about the tenth day of November, in the year 1870, at the said city of London, by virtue of an agreement between the owners and holders of the bonds hereinafter mentioned and the said plaintiffs and said defendants, eight hundred instruments for the payment of money or bonds of the State of Florida, commonly called Florida bonds, each of said bonds being for the sum of one thousand dollars, payable in the gold coin of the United States, with interest thereon at the rate of eight per cent. per annum, and then being in the possession of said defendants, were assigned and transferred to said defendants to be held 2885 as the property of the plaintiffs, and to be sold on account of said plaintiffs, and the proceeds of the sale thereof to be paid over to said plaintiffs, and said defendants thereupon acknowledged to said plaintiffs in writing that they held said bonds for sale as the agents of said plaintiffs.

And said plaintiffs further allege that said defendants have since sold a large amount of said bonds, if not the whole thereof, and have received a large amount of money, to wit, not less than four hundred thousand dollars in the gold coin aforesaid, on account of the sales thereof; and that they have paid over to the plaintiffs on account of such sales the sum of $53,776.66 and a further sum of $1,000, and no more; that said plaintiffs have, since such sales were made of such bonds, frequently and from time to time demanded of the said defendants that they account for and pay over to them the residue of the moneys so received by them as aforesaid on account of such sales, but that said defendants have refused and still refuse to account for or pay over the same.

And the said plaintiffs further say that by reason of the refusal 2886 to account as aforesaid, they are not certainly informed as to whether said defendants have in fact sold all of said bonds; but they allege that the said defendants have fraudulently, for a long time prior to the bringing of this action, made use of said bonds and the proceeds thereof for their own private schemes and enterprises, and that they fraudulently and in violation of their trust in the premises design and intend to continue to so use said bonds if any remain unsold in their hands, and the proceeds of such as may have been sold, and that the personal credit of said defendants is very low, and their personal pecuniary responsibility wholly insufficient to furnish any sufficient protection in the premises to the plaintiffs; and that the said plaintiffs will be without adequate remedy in the premises as to any of their said bonds remaining unsold, unless the benefit is vouchsafed to them by this court of its orders and judgment by way of injunction and specific relief.

Wherefore the said plaintiffs demand judgment that the said 2887 defendants account to them in respect of the said bonds and the sales thereof and the moneys or other proceeds of such sales, and that they pay over and deliver to said plaintiffs the amount of moneys or other proceeds so received by them, with interest, and that as to any of said bonds which remain unsold they surrender and deliver up the same.

2888 Supreme court, city and county of New York.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS, FRANK A. COLLINS, AND Robert J. Carpenter.

Sufficient cause having been shown to me by the verified complaint herein and by affidavit, I do hereby order and direct that Sidney W. Hopkins, Frank A. Collins, and Robert J. Carpenter, the defendants in the above entitled action, and each of them and their and each of their agents, attorneys, or servants, be and they and each of them hereby are enjoined and restrained, and ordered to refrain from, selling, assigning, transferring, or any manner parting with or disposing of any of a certain parcel of eight hundred instruments in writing for the payment of money or bonds of the State of Florida, commonly called or known as Florida bonds, at any time held by said defendants as the agents of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, and which may not have been sold by said defendants, and 2889 from in any manner parting with or disposing of the proceeds of any of said eight hundred bonds as may have been sold; and that the said defendant's show cause on the complaint and affidavits served herewith, before one of the judges of the court, at a special term thereof, to be holden at the chambers of said court, at the City Hall in the city of New York, on the first Monday in July next, at twelve o'clock, noon, why this injunction should not be continued until the trial of this action, and why the plaintiffs therein should not have such further order or relief by way of the appointment of a receiver or otherwise as may be just.

GEORGE G. BARNARD, J. S. C.

2890 Order to arrest and hold to bail.

Supreme court.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company, plaintiff, against
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS, FRANK A. COLLINS, AND Robert J. Carpenter, defendants.

To the sheriff of the city and county of New York:

It having been made to appear to me by affidavit that the plaintiff above named has a sufficient cause of action against Sidney W. Hopkins, Frank A. Collins, and Robert J. Carpenter, you are required forthwith to arrest Sidney W. Hopkins, Frank A. Collins, and Robert J. Carpenter, the defendants in this action, for the cause aforesaid, and hold each of them to bail in the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, and to return this order to Algernon S. Sullivan, plaintiff's attorney, at his office, No. 32 Chambers Street (dist. att'y's office), New York City, on the first Monday of July, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.

Dated June , 1871.

Plaintiff's Attorney,
No. 32 Chambers Steeet (Dist. Att'y's Office).

2891 Supreme court, city and county of New York.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company, plaintiff, against
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS, FRANK A. COLLINS, and Robert J. Carpenter, defendants.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss.:

Nicholas W. Woodfin, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is a citizen and resident of the State of North Carolina, and one of the commissioners appointed by an act of the legislature of said State, passed the 24th of March, 1871, entitled "An act to provide funds for the completion of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company," which said act was afterwards and prior to any of the transactions hereinafter mentioned with the defendants above named duly accepted, ratified and approved by the stockholders, and afterwards by the board of directors of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, the plaintiffs above named, and that by the provision of the said act, and the acceptance, ratification and 2892 approval thereof, as aforesaid, this deponent, together with the other persons named in said act as commissioners, have power and are charged with the duty of recovering and receiving certain of the debts, dues, claims, and assets of the said company, including among other things the eight hundred bonds hereinafter mentioned of the State of Florida and the proceeds thereof.

And this deponent further says, that the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company is a body politic and corporate of the said State of North Carolina by virtue of a certain act of the legislature of that State, passed on the 15th day of February, in the year 1855, entitled "An act to incorporate the Western North Carolina Railroad Company," and a certain other act of the said legislature, passed the 19th day of August, in the year 1868, entitled "An act to amend the charter of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company," and divers other acts of the same legislature amendatory of the said two above mentioned acts, and that Sidney W. Hopkins, Frank A. Collins, and Robert J. Carpenter, the defendants above named, were at and during the time of the transactions herein stated to have been had with them, and from thence hitherto have been and still are, as the deponent is informed and verily believes, merchants and bankers, and co-2893 partners in business, having their principal office or place of business in the city of New York, where they carry on their business under the firm-name of S. W. Hopkins & Company, and another office or place of business, or branch house in London, England, where they carry on their business under the like firm-name. And this deponent further says that, for a long time prior to the 10th day of November, 1870, he, together with others of said commissioners, had diligently engaged in efforts to recover, as far as possible, a large portion of the funds and property of said company, which had been, by certain officers of said company, improperly and in violation of their official duty and trusts diverted from the uses of said company and misapplied or squandered in divers ways, and that such efforts had, prior to the day last mentioned, been so far successful that deponent and others of said commissioners associated with him had procured an agreement bearing date at Washington, D. C., the 16th day of April, 1870, to be executed by and between certain railroad companies, bodies corporate of the State of Florida, and one M. S. Littlefield, and George W. Swepson, of the first part, and deponent and others of said commissioners of the second part, whereby it was agreed in substance that the proceeds of 2894 certain bonds for the payment of money of the said State of Florida, then about to be issued, and delivered to or for said parties of the first part, and by them upon the issue thereof, to be placed in the hands of the said firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company for sale, should be divided and paid over as the same were received, one half to said Florida railroads, and the other half to the said commissioners for the use and benefit of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, until the sum of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand and thirty-six dollars, with interest at the rate of eight per cent. from the date of the agreement last mentioned, should be received by said commissioners, which agreement was based by way of consideration upon the fact conceded by all the parties thereto; that the said Florida railroad companys had received to the extent of the sum last mentioned the moneys and funds of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company wrongfully diverted as aforesaid, and that it was represented by and on the part of the parties to the said agreement before the execution thereof that the amount of bonds of the said State of Florida so to be issued, as aforesaid, was four millions of dollars. And this deponent further says, that after the making of the agreement last men-2895 tioned and prior to the said 10th day of November, 1870, bonds of the said State of Florida of the character aforesaid, to the amount of three millions of dollars or thereabouts, were in fact issued and delivered to the said Florida railroad companies, and were afterwards and before said 10th day of November, 1870, and in accordance with the contemplation of the parties to the said last mentioned agreement placed in the hands of the said firm of S. W. Hopkins and Company, in the city of New York, for sale, and that at or about the time when the said bonds were so placed in the hands of the said firm for sale, the said firm and the several members thereof had, as deponent has reason to believe and does believe, due knowledge and notice of the agreement last above mentioned and of the rights of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

And this deponent further says that afterwards, and in the month of August, in the year 1870, M. S. Littlefield, hereinbefore named, who had the principal management of the financial affairs of the said Florida railroads, and to whom the said three millions dollars of bonds last mentioned had been delivered on the issue thereof, and by whom the same had been placed in the hands of the defendants for sale as above mentioned, wrote a letter addressed to S. W. Hopkins & 2896 Company, a copy of which is annexed hereto marked Exhibit A, which letter this deponent received from said Littlefield, and in the month last aforesaid delivered to the defendant Sidney W. Hopkins, in the city of New York, and at the same time asked him if he would recognize and accept the order contained in said letter; that said Hopkins put this deponent off upon the pretence that he desired to consult with his counsel, and said that as soon as he could so consult he would give this deponent and answer; but that deponent upon calling the next day at the office of said firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company, in the city of New York, assertained that said S. W. Hopkins had gone to one of the Western States, and he could obtain from no one else at said office a satisfactory answer as to whether said firm would recognize and accept the order contained in the said letter of said Littlefield, and thereupon he wrote and left with the defendants at their said office in the city of New York a letter of which a copy is annexed hereto marked Exhibit B, to which deponent received from said defendants an answer, a copy whereof is annexed hereto marked Exhibit C.; that such answer not being satisfactory to deponent, he again visited the office of said S. W. Hopkins & Company, and say the writer of 2897 said letter, one L. L. Spring, who appeared to have charge as partner or otherwise of the business of said firm, and remonstrated with him concerning the unsatisfactory character of said answer, and insisted that he, deponent, was entitled to an express recognition and acceptance of the order contained in said letter of said Littlefield; and afterwards again visited said office together with his counsel, Algernon S. Sullivan, esq., who explained to said Spring that deponent was entitled to such express recognition and acceptance, but that deponent could obtain no such recognition or acceptance, and no satisfaction in the premises.

And deponent further says, that before he received said letter from said Littlefield, he had received information that said Littlefield designed in a very short time to leave New York, where he then was, and go to Europe without the knowledge of deponent, which was the reason why deponent desired to obtain from him such a letter, and that when he applied to said Littlefield and requested him to give him, deponent, such a letter, said Littlefield at first refused so to do, upon divers pretexts, but that deponent insisted that he should give such a letter and 2898 threatened that unless he did, he, deponent, would take legal proceedings to protect the interest of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company in the said Florida bonds, and that thereupon the said Littlefield wrote said letter, and almost immediately thereafter embarked for Europe, and that said Littlefield for several days prior to the departure of said Sidney W. Hopkins for the West, as aforesaid, was in the habit of frequent and confidential communication with said Sidney W. Hopkins; and deponent says that from the circumstance hereinbefore stated he had reason to apprehend, and did apprehend, that said Littlefield and said Sidney W. Hopkins were in collusion with each other, and that it had been arranged and understood between them that the order contained in said letter of said Littlefield should not be recognized or accepted by said firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company, and that some fraudulent scheme was in contemplation by said Littlefield and said Hopkins, prejudicial to the rights and interest represented by deponent, and having been informed prior to that time that said bonds had been some time in July, 1870, transmitted by said firm of S. W. Hopkins &
2899 Company to their branch house aforesaid in London, he deemed it expedient and necessary, in order to protect the right and interests aforesaid, to proceed himself with all possible dispatch to London, England, with the view of there taking suitable measures to secure such rights and interests and that he did accordingly forthwith embark for England, and arrived in London on or about the 29th of August, 1870; that he there ascertained that the said Littlefield was on the continent of Europe, in company with the defendant Collins, and deponent remained in London awaiting his return, and while so awaiting was very frequently at the office or place of business of said branch house of the defendants in London, where he saw and frequently conferred, from time to time, with the defendants Collins (who returned to London before said Littlefield) and Carpenter in reference to the transactions hereinbefore mentioned; that deponent soon after his arrival in London, as aforesaid, exhibited to said defendant Carpenter copies of the said letter of said Exhibits A, B, and C, but learned from him that he had alread' received copies of the same from the said firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company, New York, and deponent demanded of said Collins and Littlefield that the order contained 2900 in said letter of Littlefield should then be recognized and accepted, which they at first refused to do, but at a later period, and after deponent had declared to them his determination to take such legal measures as should seem best calculated to secure the right and interest he represented, they informed deponent they would recognize and accept said order in any manner deponent might desire, provided deponent would return to New York, where, as they pretended, deponent might with advantage attend to the interest connected with the negotiation of said Florida bonds, but that deponent refused to accede to such terms, being then determined to remain until he could see said Littlefield, and, if possible, better secure the rights and interests he, deponent, represented. And deponent says that he also learned from said defendant Carpenter, on his arrival in London, that the said Florida bonds, so issued and placed with said S. W. Hopkins, as hereinbefore mentioned, had been received by said S. W. Hopkins & Company, in London; but the said Carpenter pretended and represented that the same had been taken by the said Littlefield and the defendant Collins to the continent of Europe, for purposes connected with negotiation thereof.

2901 And deponent further says that some weeks after his arrival in London aforesaid the said Littlefield returned from the continent to that city, and that thereupon deponent had frequent interviews with him, both alone and together with said Collins and Carpenter, and that after divers negotiations between all those parties last mentioned a mode of satisfying the agreement hereinbefore mentioned was arranged and agreed upon by and between this deponent, the said Littlefield, and said firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company, and thereupon a new agreement in writing was drawn up and executed by the said Littlefield, acting on behalf of himself and as the president of and on behalf of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, a corporate body then recently created, as was stated and represented by said Littlefield, under the laws of the State of Florida, by an amalgamation of the Florida railroad companies hereinbefore mentioned, and into which the said first-mentioned Florida railroad companies had become merged, as the party of the first part, and by deponent, acting on the part and behalf of said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, as the party of the second part therein; and that the said firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company, in pursuance of the arrangement and understanding under which the said last-mentioned written acknowledgment is annexed hereto, marked Exhibit E; and deponent says that at that time, as was stated and represented by said Littlefield, Collins, and Carpenter, said firm held the whole of said three millions dollars of said Florida bonds, which said bonds were three thousand in number, each for the sum of one thousand dollars, 2903 payable in the gold coin of the United States, with interest at the rate of eight per cent.; and immediately afterwards deponent executed in writing, and delivered to said firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company, a letter of instructions concerning the sale of said eight hundred of said bonds, of which last-mentioned letter a copy is annexed hereto, marked Exhibit F.

And this deponent further says that thereupon he returned to the city of New York, where he arrived on or about the 30th of November, 1870, and upon his arrival visited several times the place of business of said defendants in said last mentioned city, and there had several interviews with the defendant, Sidney W. Hopkins, and conferred with him concerning the agreement which had been made as last above mentioned; that on the first of the visits last mentioned the said Sidney W. Hopkins informed him that he had, the day before, received from the branch house of his said firm in London a telegram apprising him of a sale of a large amount of the said bonds, including the said eight hundred belonging to the said last-mentioned railroad company, and produced the said telegram and read the same to deponent, and that it was, as read 2904 by said last-mentioned defendant, in substance and in the very words, or nearly so, as follows: "Satisfactory sale of fifteen hundred bonds; eight hundred for Woodfin, seven hundred for us; private; tell Woodfin only; contract by mail by City of Paris."

And deponent further says that on the following day he went to the said office of S. W. Hopkins & Company with William W. Rollins, one of the commissioners hereinbefore mentioned, associated with deponent, and also the president of the said last mentioned railroad company, and stated to said Sidney W. Hopkins that said Rollins was such president, and that he could keep no secret from him concerning said company, and wished the said Hopkins to read the said telegram, which he, the said Hopkins, then did.

And deponent further says that, being then about to go to Raleigh, North Carolina, where the legislature was then in session, the said Sidney W. Hopkins earnestly requested him, upon some pretense that it would be detrimental to negotiations connected with said bonds if the agreement made in London, as hereinbefore mentioned, were known, not to make the same public; and with the view of enabling depo- 2905 nent to furnish some reason therefore to those who had the right to call upon him for an account of his doings in the premises, gave deponent a letter to be exhibited to such persons as he thought fit, a copy of which letter is annexed hereto, marked Exhibit G.

And deponent further says that at this time the said Sidney W. Hopkins faithfully promised to obtain, as soon as possible, all the particulars concerning the sale mentioned in the telegram aforesaid, and to communicate promptly and fully to deponent and to said Rollins, and by letter, if they should not be in New York, all the information he should at any time receive concerning the said eight hundred bonds, and any sale thereof; and that prior to his departure from London, as hereinbefore mentioned, the defendant Collins had, in like manner, promised to keep deponent fully informed concerning the last-mentioned bonds, and concerning everything which might happen effecting the same.

And deponent further says that he thereupon left the city of New York, together with said Rollins, and went to North Carolina, where he remained until about the middle of March, 1871, when, having received no communication from said defendants, or any of them, concerning said Florida bonds, and no iron having arrived in accordance 2906 with the said agreement in London, deponent again came to the city of New York for the sole purpose of learning what had been done with said eight hundred bonds and the proceeds thereof, and attending generally to the interest of said last mentioned railroad involved in the agreements hereinbefore mentioned, and the transactions connected therewith, and that a few days after his arrival in New York he was there joined by said Rollins and James L. Henry, another of said commissioners associated with deponent, who visited New York for the same purpose. That upon this visit deponent and said Rollins remained about three weeks and the said Henry about two weeks, and during the period of about ten days after their arrival they, the three persons last named, were almost daily at the office of said defendant, where they saw, from time to time, said Sidney W. Hopkins and said Carpenter. That at this time, in answer to the inquiries of deponent and his said associates concerning said bonds, said Hopkins and Carpenter stated that the sale mentioned in the telegram hereinbefore mentioned had not been consummated, but that the completion thereof was awaiting the furnishing of evidences to be procured from Florida 2907 touching the regularity and validity of said bonds, and further stated on divers occasions thereafter, and during the same visit of deponent and his said associates, that the sale of said Florida bonds was proceeding in London slowly, and professed to be unable to furnish deponent and his associates with the particulars of of such sales or any other more definite information in respect thereto.

And deponent further says that he also made inquiries during the visit last mentioned concerning the iron mentioned in the last abovementioned agreement, and which was to be furnished by said Littlefield. In answer to which said Sidney W. Hopkins informed deponent that such iron had not been shipped in consequence of the slow sale of said Florida bonds. That during the visit last mentioned the inquiries of deponent and his said associates concerning the premises were made almost daily of said Sidney W. Hopkins or said Carpenter, and it was represented to them by said Hopkins and Carpenter that they were in daily expectation of receiving advice from London of sales of said bonds, and of remittances of money on account thereof; and that as soon as any such remittances were received, payment should be made to deponent and his associates. That after deponent and his said associates had remained in New York about ten days, said 2908 Hopkins and Carpenter announced their intention of going to the West, but stated that they would be absent but for a few days; that deponent and his associates remonstrated against their both leaving New York while communications and remittances from London were from day to day expected, and it was finally agreed that said Carpenter should not go, but should remain in New York; but that notwithstanding they did both leave New York together, and were absent about nine or ten days; during which time deponent and said Rollins were obliged to remain in New York awaiting the expected remittances from London; that upon the return of said Hopkins and Carpenter deponent could obtain no satisfactory intelligence from them as to what was being done in London in reference to said bonds or the shipment of said iron, and said Hopkins pretended that it was necessary for him to proceed at once to Florida upon business in some way connected with said Florida bonds, and told deponent that he was then able to pay over ten thousand pound sterling, and in a very short time would be able to pay over at least one hundred and fifty thousand dollars more, or thereabouts, and probably indeed the whole amount of the proceeds of the sale of said eight hundred bonds; that he accordingly did pay over 2909 to deponent and his associates, on or about April 3d, 1871, the sum of fifty-three thousand seven hundred and seventy-six dollars and sixty-six cents ($53,776.66), for which amount he requested deponent and his associates to draw on said firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company, and at the same time to sign a letter addressed to said firm respecting the same. That deponent objected to so drawing such draft and signing such letter, for the reason that it would appear as if he and his associates were borrowing money instead of receiving the proceeds of bonds sold; but said Hopkins represented to deponent that it was important that the business should be put in that shape for the reason that he did not wish one Houstoun, who also had bonds of a similar description in the hands of said firm for sale, to know that he was receiving and paying over proceeds of the sales of said bonds, and that deponent and his said associates accordingly drew the draft, as desired by said Hopkins, and signed a letter in form as drawn by him, a copy of which letter is hereto annexed, marke' Exhibit H. But deponent says that the said Hopkins did not pretend that the said money so paid over by him was in fact an advance, but paid it over as and for 2910 so much proceeds of sales of said eight hundred bonds, and the same was so received by deponent and his said associates, who afterwards applied the same to the use of said company.

And deponent further says that at this time that the said Hopkins further stated to deponent that he was in daily expectation of receiving advices from London of the purchase and shipment of iron pursuant to the terms of said agreement made in London; and upon deponent's representing to him the pressing need of said iron for the uses of the said company represented by him, said Hopkins promised that in any event the said defendant would ship from New York to Norfolk for said company five hundred tons of railroad iron within thirty days; and further promised to keep deponent fully informed concerning sales of said bonds or anything that might happen affecting the same, and thereupon deponent and said Rollins returned to North Carolina.

And deponent further says that afterwards and about the 7th of May, 1871, he and the said Rollins—no further communications having been received from said defendants concerning said bonds or shipments of iron, and the shipment of iron from New York, as promised by said 2911 Hopkins, not having been made—again visited New York for the sole purpose of attending to the business connected with said agreements hereinbefore mentioned, but were informed, upon inquiry at the office of said defendants, that said Hopkins was in Florida and said Carpenter in Michigan, and the only information they were able to obtain was given to them by one Spring, who had charge of the business of said defendants and held their power of attorney for that purpose, which was to the effect that sales of said bonds were proceeding in London slowly, but at rather better prices.

And deponent further says that on the 12th of June he and said Rollins again visited New York on the same business, and upon going on that day to the office of said defendants were told by said Spring that although said Hopkins had returned to New York on the Saturday previous he had not been at the office that morning. That on the next day deponent and said Rollins again visited said office about one o'clock p. m., and were told by said Spring that said Hopkins had not been to the office that day, but that he was expected momentarily; that after the lapse of an hour or thereabouts deponent and said Rollins again called at said office and were told by said Spring that said Hopkins was 2912 then in but engaged upon very important business, but was very anxious to see deponent and proposed to meet him, deponent, at his, deponent's, hotel between 9 and 10 o'clock the next day; that deponent accordingly remained at his hotel the next day from nine o'clock a. m. until about three o'clock p. m., sending in the meantime to said Hopkins a telegram to which no answer was received, and about four o'clock p. m. of the same day deponent and the said Rollins again visited the office of the defendants and were told by said Spring that Hopkins was in, but that he declined seeing deponent or having any further interview with him or said Rollins.

And deponent further says that from the facts and circumstances hereinbefore mentioned, and from diligent inquiry made by him from all other sources of information known to him, he verily believes and charges that sales have been made by said defendants of all or nearly all of said eight hundred Florida bonds, and that said defendants have received the proceeds thereof to a very large amount, if not to the whole amount thereof; that the rates at which said bonds have been so sold, as deponent is informed and believes from his knowledge derived 2913 during his visit to London and at other times and from the quotations of the value thereof in Europe, are from fifty to seventy cents on the dollar in gold, and that the said defendants, as deponent verily believes, have received in money for or on account of sales of said eight hundred of said bonds not less than four hundred thousand dollars in the gold coin of the United States or its equivalent.

And this deponent further says that the said defendants have not paid over to deponent or his associates or the said company represented by him any other moneys except the said sum of fifty three thousand seven hundred and seventy-six dollars and sixty-six cents, and the sum of one thousand dollars ($1,000) paid in March, 1871, and nineteen pounds sterling, being the passage money on deponent's return from Europe on his visit aforesaid to London, and that they have never shipped any iron whatever in accordance with said agreement made in London or performed with the exception aforesaid any of their promises in the premises, but that they have from the outset, and ever since the making of the agreement made in London as aforesaid, behaved towards deponent and his associates and the company represented by them in 2914 an utterly faithless manner, and have continually delayed, postponed, and put them off by false pretenses, excuses, and pretexts almost without number.

And deponent further says that said defendants, as deponent is informed and believes, are themselves largely interested with said Littlefield in the Florida railroad enterprises with which the issue of said Florida bonds is connected, as well as with other railroad enterprises in some Western State, and that they are contemplating and striving to enrich themselves therefrom; and that as deponent verily believes they are and have been from the outset dealing in the most shameless manner with the property and interest of said last mentioned railroad company which have been placed in their hands and under their control, and that they are in conjunction with said Littlefield now using and design and continue to use the moneys they have received on account of sale of said eight hundred bonds so far as they have sold the same, and the said bonds themselves which remain unsold, if any, in order to advance their own private schemes and enterprises, in utter violation of the rights of the railroad company last mentioned.

2915 And said deponent further says that he has reason to believe and does believe that unless the most stringent methods and means of redress and security which the law affords are vouchsafed to said company last mentioned, the said defendants will deal with the moneys received by them on account of sales of said eight hundred bonds and with such of the bonds themselves, if any, which remain unsold, in such manner as to utterly and forever deprive said last mentioned company of the benefit thereof.

N. W. WOODFIN.

EXHIBIT B.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11th, '70.

Messrs. S. W. HOPKINS & Co.:

GENTLEMEN: On yesterday I delivered to you a copy of the contract made between the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company by the commissioners appointed by the legislature of the State of North Carolina and approved by the said corporation on the one part, and M. S. Littlefield, acting for himself and as president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and George W. Swepson, president of the Florida Central Railroad Co., of the other part, dated the 16th of April, 1870, by which it was stipulated 2917 that said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Co. should receive one-half of the proceeds of the sales of certain State bonds which were to be placed in your hands to sell, and at the same time I handed you a letter from Gen. M. S. Littlefield, directing you to pay over to G. M. Roberts, esq., treasurer of said West. Division West. North Carolina Railroad Co., the part of the proceeds of the sales of said bonds when received, to which said corporation will be entitled according to said contract. It only remains for me to request of you the favor to acknowledge the receipt of said letter and copy of contract and to comply therewith, as the money may be received by you.

Respectfully,

2919 EXHIBIT D.

Memorandum of an agreement and final settlement made this tenth day of November, A. D. 1870, at London, England, between General Milton S. Littlefield, of the State of Florida, in the United States of America, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, by Milton S. Littlefield, the president thereof, the parties of the first part, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, acting through and represented by Colonel Nicholas W. Woodfin, chairman of the commission appointed by the general assembly of the State of North Carolina, by an act ratified the 24th day of March, A. D. 1870, to settle with George W. Swepson, and for other purposes, which act was approved by the stockholders of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company of the second part.

Whereas, on the 16th day of April, A. D. 1870, at the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, in the United States of America, a contract in writing was made and entered into by and between The Florida Railroad Company, George W. Swepson, president, General Milton S. Littlefield; The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company by Milton S. Littlefield, the president thereof, as parties of the first part, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, represented by Nicholas W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. W. Rollins, and W. P. Welsh, commissioners appointed by the legislature of the State of North Carolina, by an act ratified the 24th day of March, 1870, which act was duly ratified, approved, adopted, and made a part of the charter of the said party of the second part, the said corporation, a copy of which contract is attached hereto and made a part of this contract; and

Whereas the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company have received certain bonds of the State of Florida, under sundry acts of the legislature of said State, which bonds by the term of the laws authorizing the issue of the same are made payable, both principal and interest, in the gold coin of the United States and bearing interest at the rate of eight per cent. per annum; and

Whereas by reason of the present war in Europe all financial operations are more or less restricted, which has up to this time prevented the negotiation for the sale of said bonds; and

Whereas the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, through and by its representative, N. W. Woodfin, chairman as aforesaid, is pressing the immediate payment by the said party of the first part of the sum of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents, with interest at the rate of eight per cent. per annum since the first day of November, A. D. 1869; to pay or settle the said claim now will cause a great sacrifice to the said party of the first part; and

Whereas the said Nicholas W. Woodfin, as chairman of the said commission for the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, for the purpose of removing embarrassments out of 2920 the way, which, in his judgment, prevented the sale of said bonds, and to avoid litigation, did, on the 17th of October, 1870, contract with Henry Clews & Co., bankers in the cities of New York and London, to purchase a certain claim held by them against George W. Swepson, amounting to about twenty thousand dollars lawful money of the United States of America, which contract was made with the knowledge and approval of the said party of the first part, for the reason, it was understood by all parties to the said agreement that, this would secure the full co-operation of the said Henry Clews & Co. to aid in the sale and negotiations of the said Florida bonds:

Now, therefore, be it remembered, that for and in consideration of the premises herein stated, and for various other good and sufficient considerations, and for the further purpose of aiding the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company to complete their road from the junction with the main line at Asheville to Paint Rock, at the State line between the States of North Carolina and Tennessee, and to complete their road without delay on the one hand, and to avoid a hasty sale and sacrifice of the said bonds on the other hand, it is agreed, by and between the parties of the first and second parts, that in full compromise, payment, satisfaction, and accord of the obligation of the party of the first part to pay to the party of the second part the sum of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents, lawful money of the United States of America, with interest thereon at the rate of eight per cent. from and after the first day of November, A. D. 1869, as portions of the said contract made and executed at the city of Washington aforesaid, and that the said party of the first part may be fully and finally discharged from all and every liability on account of the terms and conditions of the said contract, hereunto appended, the said party of the first part agree to furnish the iron to the said party of the second part sufficient to lay a single track of railroad from the junction at Asheville, along the French Broad River, to Paint Rock, at the Tennessee State line, and into the State of Tennessee to the present terminus of the Cincinnati, Cumberland Gap and Charleston Railroad, with turn outs and side-tracks, provided that the whole railroad shall not exceed, including turn-outs and side-tracks, fifty-three miles in length. The iron shall be of good quality of English iron, weighing not less than fifty pounds per lineal yard, with the necessary chairs and spikes to lay the same, the iron to be shipped in the quantities and at the terms and places as follows, to wit:

To Norfok, Virginia, on or before the tenth day of December, A. D. 1873, three hundred tons; to the same place, on or before the tenth day of January, A. D. 1871, five hundred tons; to the same place, on or before the first day of April, A. D. 1871, one thousand tons, and the rest to be shipped to New York, in the State of New York, on or before the first day of September, A. D. 1871, but the said party of the first part may ship the iron as fast as he may wish, all duties and freights on the above-described iron to be paid by the party of the first part.

And it is further agreed by the party of the first part that he will ship, in addition to the above-mentioned quantity of iron, one thousand tons of the same weight and quality as the above-described iron, with the necessary chairs and spikes to lay the same, to New York, 2921 duties and freight paid, on or before the first day of September,
A. D. 1871, the shipping of which iron Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co. are to guarantee.

In addition to the shipment of the iron, the said party of the first part does hereby sell and deliver to the said party of the second part, by placing to the order of the party of the second part, with Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co., eight hundred bonds of the State of Florida, of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, numbers of said bonds to be designated by said party of the first part, but upon the express stipulation and conditions that the said bonds are to be left with Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co. for sale at such prices as the said party of the second part may direct.

And it is further agreed by the party of the first part that he will pay to the party of the second part two hundred pounds sterling, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged.

And it is further agreed by the party of the first part to assume and discharge the obligations of the party of the second part to Henry Clews & Co. of about twenty thousand dollars lawful money of the United States of America.

Now, when the foregoing undertakings and agreements of the party of the first part are fully accomplished and performed, it is to be taken as a full compliance with and final discharge of the parties of the first part to this contract, as well as all parties of the first part to the said contract executed at the city of Washington aforesaid, a copy of which is hereunto annexed, and this shall operate as a receipt and final discharge thereof from all obligations growing out of the same.

MILTON S. LITTLEFIELD.
MILTON S. LITTLEFIELD,
President J., P. & M. Railroad Company.
N. W. WOODFIN,
Chairman of the Board of Commissioners.

2922 Memorandum of agreement and settlement between the Florida Central Railroad Company, George W. Swepson, president, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, Milton S. Littlefield, president, and Milton S. Littlefield, majority owner of the stock of said companies, and also of the stock of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, of the first part, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, represented by N. W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. Pink Welch, and W. W. Rollins, commissioners appointed by an act of the legislature of North Carolina, approved by the stockholders of said corporation, of the second part, witnesseth:

That whereas George W. Swepson, late president of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, made certain investments of the funds of said company in securities of and interests in the said Florida Central Railroad, Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and the Tallahassee Railroad, of the said State of Florida, as per report made by the said George W. Swepson to the said commissioners, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents, to bear interest from the first day of November, 1869, at the rate of eight per cent. per annum;

And whereas the said George W. Swepson heretofore conveyed to the said Milton S. Littlefield, subject to the payment of the above recited claim, his interest in the above recited railroads;

And whereas the said Littlefield has received authority from the legislature of the State of Florida, and the several railroad companies, to receive bonds to be issued by and for account of the several railroad companies, which bonds are to be exchanged for bonds of the State of Florida, to be issued for the purpose of aiding the finances of said several railroad companies—all of which bonds are now in a state of preparation;

And whereas the said Milton S. Littlefield has made a contract with S. W. Hopkins & Co., No. 71 Broadway, for the disposition of said bonds, as the same may be issued, the proceeds of the issue of the bonds of the Florida Central Railroad Company of the State of Florida, amounting to nine hundred and sixty dollars, are to be applied to the payment of the existing liabilities of the said several railroad companies, including the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, to be paid to the commissioners aforesaid, for the purpose of paying existing liabilities of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

It is understood and agreed by the parties of the first and second parts that the proceeds of the sale of said bonds so to be issued by the said Florida railroad companies and the said State of Florida are to be equally divided, dollar for dollar, between the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company and the said Florida railroads; and as the commissioners aforesaid receive by this first sale of bonds only the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, it is further understood and agreed that out of the proceeds of the sale of the 2923 issue of the bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, there is first to be received by the commissioners aforesaid a sum sufficient to be equal to the amount received by and on account of the said Florida railroads, and then an equal amount is to be received by the said commissioners and the said Florida railroads, dollar for dollar, until the entire amount of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents, with interest at eight per cent., as aforesaid, being the sum reported by the parties of the first part as due to the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad, is fully paid.

It is further understood and agreed by the parties of the first and second parts that all the interest owned or claimed by the said parties of the first part, George W. Swepson and Milton S. Littlefield, or which they, as individuals, have a right to control in the said Florida railroads, are hereby pledged for the faithful fulfilment of this contract, without the right on the part of any party to interfere with our management or control of the affairs of the road.

NICHOLAS W. WOODFIN, Esq.,
Chairman of the Commissioners of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina R. R. Co.:

SIR: We are in possession of your favor of this day's date, covering order from Messrs. Littlefield, president Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, dated November 16th, 1870, for eight hundred Florida bonds. We accept the said order, and agree to hold the within described bonds as agents for the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, subject to the order of the commissioners.

NEW YORK, Dec'r 2d, 1870.

N. W. WOODFIN, Esq.,
Asheville, N. C.

DEAR SIR: We have received per steamer City of Brussels a copy of the new contract entered into between yourself on the part of the commissioners of North Carolina and Gen. M. S. Littlefield on the part of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. This contract is certainly very advantageous to those you represent. Any apparent concessions you have made being more than compensated by the security of your present position, and the definite period fixed for the fulfillment, but we beg to suggest that its provisions, and in 2926 fact its existence should not for the present be made public, as you are aware how delicate a matter is the negotiation of a security, and how easily the efforts of the enemies may prove fatal to its success.

Very truly yours,

S. W. HOPKINS & CO.

GENTLEMEN: We have this day (by our chairman, N. W. We are, gentlemen, yours respectfully, (Signed) W. W. ROLLINS.

(Signed) J. L. HENRY.

2927 Supreme court, city and county of New York.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company, plaintiffs,
against
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS, FRANK A. COLLINS, AND Robert J. Carpenter, defendants.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss:

William W. Rollins being duly sworn deposes and says that he is a citizen and resident of the State of North Carolina; that he has read the affidavit of Nicholas W. Woodfin annexed hereto, and that he is one of the commissioners associated with said Woodfin, appointed as stated in said affidavit, and that he is president of the company named in the above title; that he has knowledge of and participated in the efforts mentioned in the said affidavit to recover the funds and the property of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, and the agreement dated at Washington, D. C., April 15th, 1870, mentioned in said affidavit.

2928 Deponent further says that upon the return of said Woodfin from his visit to London, England, as mentioned in said affidavit, he met the said Woodfin in the city of New York and had an interview, togetherwith said Woodfin, with Sidney W. Hopkins, one of the defendants above named. at one of which said Hopkins read the telegram mentioned in said affidavit, and that said telegram was read in the words stated by said Woodfin in his said affidavit.

Deponent further says that in the months of March and April, 1871, he was with the said Woodfin in the city of New York for the purpose of attending to the business of said railroad company, growing out of and connected with the agreement made in London, and the guarantee in respect thereof of the said defendants as stated in said affidavit of said Woodfin, and that the statements in said affidavit of said Woodfin relating to the statements and admissions and representations of said Hopkins and Robert Carpenter concerning sales of Florida bonds, and concerning railroad iron, and promises by said Sidney W. Hopkins, are true as therein stated.

2929 Deponent further says that he accompanied said Woodfin upon the two subsequent visits made by him to New York, as mentioned in said affidavit, and that the statements of said Woodfin therein of the various calls at the office of said defendants upon such two last mentioned visit, and of what took place and was said on the occasions of such calls, are true to the knowledge of deponent.

Deponent further says that he visited the city of New York in the month of February, 1871, and remained in said city nearly two weeks upon the same business and was frequently at the office of said defendants, and was postponed, baffled, and put off in a similar manner as deponent and said Woodfin were on other occasions when they were in New York together, as described by said Woodfin in his said affidavit.

And deponent further says that he has reason to believe and does believe from the facts within his knowledge as hereinbefore mentioned, and from the information which he has derived by diligent inquiry from other sources of imformation, that said defendants have sold the whole or nearly the whole of the eight hundred Florida bonds held by them for the said railroad company, and have received the proceeds 2930 thereof to the amount of not less than four hundred thousand dollars in the gold coin of the United States, or its equivalent, and he says that it is impossible to obtain from them without the aid of legal proceedings the moneys so received by them or any amount in respect thereof.

Deponent further says that as he has learned from said Hopkins and Carpenter themselves, and from other sources, the said defendants are largely interested and involved with said Littlefield and others in railroad enterprizes in Florida, which require the use of large amounts of money, and that he verily believes that said defendants are now and have for a long time, in violation of their trust, been using the moneys received by them on account of sales of said eight hundred bonds, or portions thereof, for their own purposes, and in order to enable themselves to carry on the enterprizes in which they are so engaged, and that they fraudulently design and intend to continue to so use said moneys and also to use such, if any, of said eight hundred bonds as still remain in their hands unsold; and deponent says that by reason of the premises the said railroad company has a just cause of action against said defendants to compel them to account for and pay over to said company the amount of money so received by them as aforesaid, and also to compell to deliver up to said company such of said eight hundred 2931 bond as remain in their hands unsold.

SIDNEY W. HOPKINS AND OTHERS.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss:

Before me personally came Robert W. Pulliam, of Asheville, North Carolina, who having first been duly sworn, makes oath and says that he was well acquainted in and prior to the year 1869 with Mr. George W. Swepson, also of North Carolina.

Affiant further says that said Swepson was president of the 2932 plaintiffs herein, and by virtue of his office held bonds of the State of North Carolina to the amount of nearly six millions of dollars, said bonds having been furnished by said State to said plaintiffs to be used solely for the purpose of contracting their railway.

Affiant further says that said Swepson, to this affiant's personal knowledge, arranged to purchase in his own name a large amount of mortgage bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company, whose railroad was in the State of Florida; and in order to obtain the money wherewith to purchase said bonds said Swepson pledged and used the North Carolina State bonds above described and which belonged to the plaintiffs in the above-entitled action.

Affiant further says that said Swepson used of said money in and about said purchase about seven hundred thousand dollars, with which he purchased about one million of dollars in said Florida railroad bonds.

Affiant further states that he was present when the said Swepson made the arrangements of said purchase.

Affiant further says that subsequently said Swepson was displaced from the presidency of the plaintiffs, and was succeeded in that office by General Milton S. Littlefield; and in order to reimburse and 2933 secure as far as practicable the said plaintiffs the value of their bonds thus misapplied, as above stated, the said Swepson assigned and transferred to said Littlefield in trust for said plaintiffs all the bonds, stocks, claims, and interest which he said Swepson had acquired in said Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company, and in any other Florida railroad companies.

Affiant further says that he was president of the Raleigh National Bank, and by reason of his position he had constant intercourse with the parties above named during the period occupied in the transactions above referred to; and affiant was then cognizant of the details of said transactions.

And affiant further states that to his knowledge and information and belief the affidavit made herein by George W. Swepson, on the 9th instant, is correct and true.

On the annexed affidavit and all other papers and proceedings in this action, let the plaintiffs or their attorney show cause before me at chambers, at the new court-house, in the city of New York, on Friday, the 30th instant, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, why the order of arrest in this action should not be discharged, or why the bail should not be reduced, or why such further or other order should not be made as shall be just.

GEORGE G. BERNARD,
J. S. C.

2935 Supreme court.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company
ag'st
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS AND OTHERS.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss:

Sidney W. Hopkins, being duly sworn, doth depose and say that he is the defendant Hopkins in this action mentioned, and he further says as follows:

First. That whatever claim the plaintiffs had for which they have claimed a right to receive any of the Florida bonds mentioned in this action, or the proceeds thereof, was against George W. Swepson, individually, in the first instance, and no other person whatever, and was afterwards against Milton S. Littlefield, individually, and was not against the Florida railroads mentioned in the affidavits in this action, or any of them. That critical examination of the copy of the original agreements annexed to the affidavits on the part of the plaintiffs in this action will show this averment to be true.

2936 Said agreement recites, "That whereas George W. Swepson, late president of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, made certain investments of the funds of said company in securities of and interest in the said Florida Central Railroad, Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile, and the Tallahassee Railroad, of the said State of Florida, as per report made by the said George W. Swepson to the said commissioners, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of $1,287,436.03, to bear interest from the first day of November, 1869, at the rate of eight per cent. per annum; and whereas the said George W. Swepson heretofore conveyed to the said Milton S. Littlefield, subject to the payment of the above-recited claim, his interest in the above-recited railroads." And said agreement also contains the clause: "It is further understood and agreed by the parties of the first and second part, that all the interests owned or claimed by the said parties of the first part, both George W. Swepson and Milton S. Littlefield, or which they as individuals have a right to control in the said Florida railroads, are hereby pledged for the faithful fulfillment of this contract."

2937 And deponent doth further say, as further evidence of the truth of the above allegations, that the plaintiff in this action recently began a suit in this court against one E. Houstoun and Milton S. Littlefield, in which the said plaintiffs aver the fraudulent misapplication by the said George W. Swepson of the funds of the said plaintiffs, and allege, in substance, that in order to reimburse them for their property and funds taken and misappropriated by and on account of the said Swepson, he, said Swepson, transferred to said Littlefield a large amount of property (meaning the stock of the Florida railroads), and in which they further allege that said Littlefield has never accounted to the plaintiffs for any of said property, "and said Littlefield is largely indebted to plaintiffs therefor." And they in said complaint further aver that he, said Littlefield, had expressly pledged to the plaintiffs the whole of the interests and rights held by him, said Littlefield, of every kind, in said Florida Central Railroad Company, and in any and all other railroads in Florida, to secure said plaintiffs all moneys due to them by George W. Swepson or by said defendant Littlefield, as will more fully appear by reference to said complaint.

2938 Second. That it was represented to this deponent's firm by Nicholas W. Woodfin, chairman of the commission mentioned in the affidavits on behalf of the plaintiffs in this action, and otherwise, that the plaintiffs in this action had a valid claim upon the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company for the whole or a large part of the four thousand bond issued by the State of Florida, and it was upon the faith of these representations that the house of the defendant, S. W. Hopkins & Co., was induced to sign and deliver the letter dated London, November 16th, 1870, more particularly hereinafter mentioned; and deponent says that, under the circumstances before mentioned, he is advised, and charges, that said letter of acceptance is void against these defendants, as being a fraud upon them.

Third. And deponent doth further say that the said letter of acceptance was in the words and figures following:

LONDON, November 16th, 1870.

NICHOLAS W. WOODFIN, Esq.,
Chairman of the Commissionr of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina R. R. Co.:

SIR: We are in possession of your favor of this day's date, covering order from M. S. Littlefield, president Jacksonville, Pensa-2939 cola and Mobile Railroad Company, dated November 16th, 1870, for 800 Florida bonds. We accept the said order, and agree to hold the within-described bonds as agents for the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, subject to the order of the commissioners.

We remain, sir, your most obedient servants,

S. W. HOPKINS & CO.

And deponent says that the order referred to in the words in said letter, "we accept the said order," was in the words and figures following:

LONDON, November 16th, 1870.

MESSRS. S. W. HOPKINS & CO.,
58 Old Broad street, London, and 71 Broadway, New York:

GENTLEMEN: On the 10th day of November, A. D. 1870, I made a final settlement with the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, represented by Mr. Nicholas W. Woodfin, chairman of the commissioners appointed by the legislature of the State of North Carolina to collect the moneys due said company. The commissioners are N. W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. W. Rollins, W. P. Welsh, and J. L. Henry. One of the terms of said settlement
2940 were, that it should place to the order of said company any 800 of the Florida 8 per cent. gold bonds my railroad contracted with you to negotiate on the 13th day of April last; therefore you will place to the order of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company 800 of said bonds, and sell or dispose of the same as the said chairman may direct; but this order is subject to the following conditions:

First. The said bonds are to remain in your hands to sell.

Second. The proceeds of said bonds are to be transferred to your New York house and disbursed to said company upon the order of a majority of said commissioners.

I remain, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

M. S. LITTLEFIELD,
Pres. T., P. & M. R. R. Co.

That the above copies of said acceptance and said order are from press copies thereof in the hands of deponent, sent to him by his London office.

That the contract referred to in said order as dated the "13th day of April last" was a contract in writing between the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and S. W. Hopkins & Co., 2941 which, among other things, recites: "Whereas a certain number of miles of said road are now completed, and said company is entitled to receive from the said State of Florida about the sum of four million dollars of bonds." Said agreement, among other things, constituted the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. financial agents to sell, negotiate, and dispose of all the said four million dollars of the said bonds of the State of Florida.

And said deponent says that his firm has received the said four million of bonds, and has contracted to sell the same, and they have delivered a large number of said bonds, but they have in their possession undelivered many more than eight hundred of said bonds upon which they have not yet received any payment whatever.

Fourth. And deponent doth further say that by the terms of the said agreement, a copy of which is annexed to the affidavits on the part of the plaintiffs and dated the 10th day of November, 1870, it is provided that the numbers of the 800 hundred bonds mentioned in said agreement were to be designated by the said party of the first part to the said agreement, "but upon the express stipulations and condi-2942 tions that the said bonds are to be left with S. W. Hopkins &
Co. for sale"; and deponent says that the numbers of said 800 bonds have never been designated by the said party of the first part nor otherwise, to the knowledge or belief of deponent.

Fifth. And deponent doth further say that an action has just been begun in this court in favor of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company against the plaintiffs in this action, this deponent and his partners, the commissioners mentioned in the papers of the plaintiffs herein, and Milton S. Littlefield, a copy of the complaint in which action is hereunto annexed as a part of the affidavit.

That said complaint is verified, as appears by said annexed copy, and has attached thereto the affidavit of Aaron Barnett, a copy of which said last-mentioned affidavit is also hereto annexed, and deponent says that he is informed and believes that every averment in the said complaint and in the affidavit of verification and the other affidavit thereto annexed is true. Deponent says that he has been served with a copy of said complaint and with a notice of motion for an injunction as prayed in said complaint.
2943 Sixth. And deponent doth further say that he denies, upon information and belief, that there was any other consideration for the agreement mentioned in the ninth folio of the affidavit of Nicholas W. Woodfin sworn on the 19th day of June, 1871, than the claim of the plaintiffs in this action against said Swepson and said Littlefield individually.

And deponent says that the sale of the Florida bonds mentioned in the 32d folio of the affidavit of the said Woodfin afterwards fell through and was never completed, and in confirmation thereof deponent refers to a letter dated London, 27th March, 1871, signed George Richardson, in the possession of deponent and ready to be produced if required, and he says that the fact that said sale had fallen through was well known to the said Woodfin when he made his affidavits.

And deponent further says that the £10,000 sterling referred to in folios 44 & 45 of the affidavit of said Woodfin was what it purported to be, an advance and not a payment.

And deponent doth further say that his firm are not interested with said Littlefield in the Florida railroad enterprizes, as stated in the affidavit of the said Woodfin, except so far as they, said S. W. Hopkins & Co, have undertaken the negotiation of bonds and the sale of iron and that they are not connected with the said Littlefield in othe 2944 railroad enterprises in some Western State or any other railroa enterprises whatever, and he admits that his firm has endeavore to ake a reasonable profit out of their business transactions, but the have not otherwise striven to enrich themselves, and he denies that they design or intend to use any of the moneys whatever or the bonds in question in this action or any of them in order to advance their own private schemes and enterprises in violations of the rights of any railroad or any person whatever, and he denies all the allegations to the contrary thereof in folios 60, 61, 62, and 63 of the affidavit of the said Woodfin.

And deponent doth further say that he denies each and every allegation in the affidavits made on the part of the plaintiffs in this action and in the complaint herein inconsistent with the statement of this affidavit, and deponent doth further say that his firm are entirely unembarrassed in their pecuniary affairs and abundently able to pay all the damages claimed in this action, and further saith not.

2945 Amended answer.

Supreme court.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company
ag'st
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS, FRANK H. COLLINS, AND Robert J. Carpenter.

And the said defendants by Sewell & Pierce, their attorneys, for answer to the complaint of the plaintiff, show:

They admit that the plaintiff is a body corporate created under the laws of the State of North Carolina as in the complaint alleged, and that the defendants are and were at the times in said complaint set forth partners doing business in New York and London under the firm name of S. W. Hopkins & Co.

And said defendants, further answering, say that on the 10th day of November, 1870, these defendants as the financial agents of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, a corporation created under the laws of the State of Florida for the purpose of perfecting the public works of that State, were engaged in negotiating 2946 for the sale of four thousand bonds of the State of Florida which before that time had been issued to the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, to aid in the construction of a railroad within said State of Florida, from Quincy towards Mobile, a large proportion of which said bonds were then in the possession of the said defendants in the city of London and which said bonds were of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, payable in the gold coin of the United States, with interest at eight per cent. per annum; that said bonds were so placed in the hands of said defendants by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company for the purpose of negotiating the sale thereof for said company and for the purchase, with the proceeds, of materials for the construction of said railroad.

That on the day aforesaid and prior thereto one Nicholas W. Woodfin represented to the defendants that he and certain other persons had been appointed by the legislature of the State of North Carolina a commission invested with full power to settle certain claims which the plaintiffs herein had against the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company amounting to over one million of dollars, and falsely 2947 and fraudulently represented to these defendants that the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company was in truth indebted to the plaintiff herein in the sum aforesaid, by reason of the fact that the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company had received from one George W. Swepson, a former president of the plaintiff, the aforesaid sum of over one million dollars, the property of the plaintiff, which said sum the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company had expended for its own use and had had the benefit of, and that Milton S. Littlefield, the president of said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, had full power and authority from the board of directors of said last-named company to settle with the said commission, on behalf of the plaintiff, the said claim, and for that purpose to transfer to the plaintiff such amount of the bonds aforesaid in the hands of the defendant as would be sufficient to liquidate the said claim.

That after making the representations aforesaid the said Woodfin did present to the defendants in London an order signed by said Littlefield as the president of said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Rail-2948 road Company directing these defendants to hold for the plaintiffs any eight hundred of the said bonds and when the same should be sold to transfer the proceeds to the said commissioners for the plaintiff.

That these defendants believing the representations of the said Woodfin to be true, and relying upon them, did agree with said Woodfin to hold any eight hundred of said bonds, and when the same should be sold to deliver the proceeds to the plaintiff, and defendants allege that there was no other consideration whatever for said agreement, but that the same was made in the belief that the plaintiff had a valid claim on said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company as stated by said Woodfin, and that said Littlefield had full authority from the board of directors of said company to order said transfer. That said representations so made by the said Woodfin were false in this, that the plaintiff had no valid claim against said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; that said last named company never received any money from George W. Swepson, or any other person, the property of the plaintiffs, and never expended 2949 or had the benefit of any moneys of the plaintiffs, and said Littlefield had no authority whatever from the board of directors of said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to transfer any of the said bonds to the plaintiffs or to divert any of the proceeds thereof from the purpose for which the same were issued. That all of the aforesaid facts were well known to said Woodfin, but that said Woodfin made the aforesaid false and fraudulent representations with the intent of deceiving the defendants and of fraudulently obtaining from them the said eight hundred bonds or the proceeds thereof.

That the said pretended claim against the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, is in fact a claim for money misappropriated by said Swepson, when president of the plaintiffs, which claim was assumed by said Littlefield, and that in executing and delivering to the plaintiffs the said order for said bonds directed to these defendants, the said Littlefield, was attempting to pay a private individual indebtedness of his own with the bonds of said company which the said Woodfin at the time well knew, and these defendants deny that they have sold the said 800 bonds or any part of them, or received the proceeds thereof.

2950 And these defendants deny each and every allegation in the complaint contained not hereinbefore specifically admitted, denied, or answered.

II. And for a second and separate answer and counter-claim, the defendants show all the allegations, matters, and things which in their first answer hereto they have shown, with the same effect as if the same was repeated verbatim in this second and separate answer, and further show, that relying upon the said representations of the said Woodfin and believing the same to be true, these defendants on the 5th day of April, 1871, advanced and paid to the plaintiffs the sum of fifty-three thousand seven hundred and seventy-six dollars and sixty-six cents by way of a loan upon the security of said bonds, no part of which has been paid.

Wherefore the defendants demand judgment.

First. That the acceptance by the defendants of said order of said Littlefield, signed by him as president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, be declared to be void and of no effect and that the same be delivered up and cancelled.

2951 Second. That defendants have judgment against the plaintiffs for fifty-three thousand seven hundred and seventy-six dollars and sixty-six cents with interest from said 5th April, 1871, and costs.

SEWELL & PIERCE,
Def'ts' Atty's.

City and County of New York, ss:

Sidney W. Hopkins, one of the defendants above named, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That the foregoing answer is true of his own knowledge except as to those matters therein stated on information and belief, and as to these matters he believes it to be true.

ELEAZAR MILLER,
Notary Public, New York County.

2952 Supreme court, city and county of New York.

The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company
against
Sidney W. Hopkins, Frank H. Collins, and Robert J. Carpenter.

The reply of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, the plaintiffs in this action, to so much of the answer of the defendants therein as seeks to set up a counter-claim:

The said plaintiffs, by Algernon S. Sullivan, their attorney, deny that Nicohalas W. Woodfin, named in said answer, at the time or times in that behalf mentioned in the said answer or at any other time, made the representations or any of the representations alleged in the said answer to have been made by him, and they further deny that the order mentioned in said answer as having been presented by said Woodfin to said defendants is correctly described in said answer.

2953 And said plaintiffs further replying say that prior to the tenth day of November, 1870, the said plaintiffs had a good and valid equitable lien upon the four thousand Florida State bonds mentioned in the said answer for a much larger sum than the entire value of eight hundred of said bonds, and that at the same time the said defendants by reason of certain contracts to which they were parties in respect of said bonds, and the proceeds thereof and in other ways had an interest in the settlement of said lien and were very desirous of reducing the same to as low an amount as possible, and that accordingly on or about the day last mentioned a conditional settlement of the lien, rights, and claims of the said plaintiffs in respect to the said four thousand bonds was made by an agreement between the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and one Milton S. Littlefield, the president thereof therein named, as parties of the first part, and the plaintiffs herein named as parties of the second part, whereby it was, among other things, agreed by said parties of the first part that eight hundred of the said bonds should be and the same were thereby sold absolutely to the said plaintiffs, and in pursuance thereof the order was deliv-2954 ered to said Woodfin, the agent of said plaintiffs, and the same was thereupon duly accepted by said defendants.

And the said plaintiffs say that said last-mentioned agreement was made with the full knowledge of said defendants and in pursuance in part of their express wishes and request, and was entered into on the part of the plaintiffs upon the faith and in part in consideration that the said defendants would faithfully perform all the obligations which by the terms of said agreement would devolve upon them, which said defendants before the making of said agreement promised the said plaintiffs to do.

And the said plaintiffs further say that by the terms of said agreement the said parties of the first part had the privilege of designating out of the said four thousand bonds the particular eight hundred which should pass to the plaintiffs under the agreement aforesaid, which said privilege the said parties of the first part, a few days after the day last mentioned, waived, of which waiver the said defendants had at the time thereof due notice. And the said plaintiffs say that on or about the 16th day of November aforesaid the said defendants duly accepted the said above-mentioned order, but the said plaintiffs deny that they, 2955 the said defendants, accepted the same or agreed with said Woodfin to hold said or any eight hundred of said Florida bonds, relying upon any representations of said Woodfin; on the contrary the said plaintiffs allege that the said defendants accepted said order with full knowledge of the premises hereinbefore in this behalf stated, and because they were especially desirous that the agreement aforesaid should be made, and that the said Woodfin should be made to believe that the same would be carried out and performed in good faith.

And the said plaintiffs further replying deny the allegations, and each of them, in said answer, that the plaintiffs had no valid claim against the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and that the said company never had the benefit of any moneys of the plaintiffs, and that said Littlefield had no authority whatever from the board of directors of said last-mentioned company to transfer any of said bonds to the plaintiffs, or that the facts alleged in the said answer, and herein denied, or any of them, were ever known to said Woodfin, and they deny that said Woodfin ever made any statement or representa-2956 tion whatever alleged in said answer to be false or fraudulent, or any representations whatever with any false or fraudulent intent or with any intent to deceive said defendants or to obtain from them the said eight hundred bonds, or any of them, or the proceeds thereof or any thereof.

And said plaintiffs further deny that their claim, in respect to any of the said four thousand bonds, was a claim merely for money misappropriated by George W. Swepson, named in said answer, or that the said Littlefield, in executing or delivering the said order, directed to the said defendants, for said eight hundred bonds, was attempting to pay a mere private individual indebtedness of his own with the bonds of said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

And the said plaintiffs further replying, deny the allegations, and each of them, contained in that part of said answer beginning with the words "that relying," in the twelfth folio thereof, and ending with the words "has been paid," in the same folio.

W. W. Rollins, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he is 2957 the president of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, the plaintiffs named in the foregoing reply, and that he has heard the said reply read and knows the contents thereof, and that the same is true of his own knowledge except as to the matters therein stated on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it to be true.

W. W. ROLLINS.

Sworn to before me, this 19th day of July, 1871.

GEORGE S. McKAY,
Notary Public, New York County.

2958 Supreme court, city and county of New York.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company, plaintiffs,
ag'st
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS, FRANK A. COLLINS, and Robert J. Carpenter; Aaron Barnett, Curtis Woodruff, Jeremiah P. Robinson, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, defendants.

The supplemental complaint of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, against Sidney W. Hopkins and the other defendants above named.

The said plaintiffs, by Algernon S. Sullivan, their attorney, respectfully show to this court, that on or about the 19th day of June, in the year 1871, they made and served their original complaint, and 2959 brought an action in this court against the defendants above named, Sidney W. Hopkins, Frank H. Collins, and Robert J. Carpenter; and that a copy of their said original complaint is annexed hereto and made a part of their supplemental complaint, and marked A.

And said plaintiffs further show, that at the time of bringing of the said action they, said plaintiffs, procured from a judge of this court, upon the said original bill and the affidavit of Nicholas W. Woodfin and William W. Rollins, an order of arrest directing the sheriff of the city and county of New York to hold the said three last-named defendants to bail in the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, and also an injunction order enjoining and restraining the three last-named defendants from parting with the proceeds, or any of the proceeds, of any of the said eight hundred bonds mentioned in said original complaint which had been sold or disposed of by said three last-named defendants, and also from parting with any of the said eight hundred bonds which had not been sold by them.

2960 And the said plaintiffs further show that the said Sidney W. Hopkins having been duly served with the summons and complaint in the said action, and also with the said injunction, he afterwards gave bail, and the said three last named defendants duly appeared in said action, and put in their joint answer to said original complaint, by which said answer the said three last named defendants not denying that the said eight hundred bonds were transferred and assigned to the plaintiffs, as alleged in said original complaint, nor denying that they thereupon acknowledged to the plaintiffs in writing that they held the same for sale, as the agents of the plaintiffs, but denying that they had sold the greater part or any of said eight hundred bonds, and denying that they had received four hundred thousand dollars in gold coin, on account thereof, pretended by way of defence to said original action that they had been led to give the said written acknowledgment in consequence of pretended fraudulent representations; and further pretended that the said eight hundred bonds were really the property of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, one of the defendants above named.

2961 And the said plaintiffs further allege that more than twenty days have elapsed since the service of said answer, and that testimony has been taken in said action.

And the said plaintiffs further show that they have lately and since the bringing of said action discovered, as the fact is, that the said defendants, Hopkins, Collins & Carpenter, composing the firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company did, after the bringing of said action aforesaid and the making of the said original complaint, purchase in city of New York a large amount, to wit, two thousand pounds and upwards of iron rails or bars, for the laying of railroad track, and that they paid for the same, as the plaintiffs are informed and believe, with the proceeds of a part of the four thousand Florida State bonds mentioned in the complaint, and that as the plaintiffs have discovered with certainty since the 18th day of August, 1871, of the said four thousand bonds they, the said S. W. Hopkins & Company, have sold and disposed of twenty-eight hundred, of which two thousand at least were so sold and disposed of by them prior the bringing of this action, and that they have re-2962 ceived for all the bonds so sold not less than one million five hundred thousand dollars.

And the said plaintiffs further show that at the time the said bonds were assigned and transferred to the said plaintiffs as alleged in said original complaint there was not nor was there at any time thereafter any setting apart or designation of said particular eight hundred bonds.

And the said plaintiffs further allege that they have discovered within a few days past, and the fact is, as they are informed and believe, that the said S. W. Hopkins & Company, at the time of the purchase by them of the said iron rails or bars aforesaid, purchased the same in order to send them to the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and as a fulfillment in part of an obligation on their part under an agreement between them and the said last-mentioned railroad company, respecting the sale of the said four thousand bonds, and the disposition of the proceeds thereof, and that soon after said purchase they, the said S. W. Hopkins & Company, made a con-2963 tract for the shipment of all the said two thousand tons of iron rails or bars, to Jacksonville, in the State of Florida, for the said last-mentioned railroad company, and proceed to ship and have already shipped to Jacksonville a large amount of said iron.

And said plaintiffs further show that the agreement mentioned in the complaint under which the 800 bonds aforesaid were signed and transferred to the plaintiffs, was an agreement to which the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company was a party, and that the same was for the purpose of satisfying prior obligations of a larger amount on the part of said railroad companies to these plaintiffs; and they say that by reason thereof and of the facts set forth in the original complaint and in this supplemental complaint these plaintiffs have, as they are advised and believe, a priority over the said last-mentioned railroad company, and the right to receive the proceeds of the said four thousand bonds to the extent of eight hundred thereof before the 2964 said railroad company receives any of such proceeds, but that at all events they have the right to share in the proceeds of the sale of the said bonds, as the same are and have been sold, to the extent of their interest therein, and they say that as they are informed and believe the said Jacksonville, Pensacola, Mobile Railroad Company has already received from the proceeds of the sales of said four thousand bonds very large sums of money, so that, if an accounting were had, in respect of the said railroad iron, the said plaintiffs would be found to be entitled to the whole thereof, even without giving them the benefit of said priority.

And the said plaintiffs further allege that the said railroad iron, or all of the same which remains unshipped, is now in possession of defendants Curtis, Woodruff, and Jeremiah P. Robinson, who are storekeepers under the firm of Woodruff and Robinson.

And said plaintiffs further allege that the defendant Aaron Barnett claims to have purchased the said railroad iron from said but they say the said Barnett is a director of the said last-mentioned railroad company, and has at all times had due notice and knowledge of the rights of the plaintiffs in the premises, and that his claim is fraudulently set forth by him in collusion with said S. W. Hopkins & Co., and the said last-mentioned railroad company, in order to defeat the rights of the plaintiffs and others.

And the said plaintiffs further show that the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. have in their hands, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, a very large amount of the proceeds of the sales of the said four thousand bonds which belonged to these plaintiffs and to other parties interested therein, and that they intend to conceal and fraudulently retain such proceeds to their own use, and to that end the defendants Sidney W. Hopkins and Robert J. Carpenter are keeping themselves out of the reach of the process of law in this State by absenting themselves there-selves therein, and that, as plaintiffs believe and are advised, their principal if not their only means of securing their rights in the premises is to invoke the equitable interposition of this court in respect to the proceeds of said bonds in whatever form the same may be found.

And the plaintiffs further say that the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company are a corporate body created by and existing under the laws of the State of Florida.

Wherefore the said plaintiffs demand judgment that this complaint be allowed as supplemental to the said original complaint, and that it be adjudged that the whole of said railroad iron is in equity the property of the said plaintiffs by virtue of their right of priority as hereinbefore mentioned; or if not this relief, then that an accounting be had between said last-mentioned railroad company and the plaintiffs in respect of the proceeds of the sales of said bonds, to the end that it be ascertained how much of the proceeds of the same, represented by the said iron, 2967 belong to the plaintiffs and how much to the said last-mentioned railroad company, and that the said iron be sold and the proceeds thereof be distributed according to the result of such accounting, and that in the meantime any removal or disposition of said iron be prevented by an injunction order, and that a receiver thereof be appointed with the usual powers, and that the plaintiffs have such further or such other relief as may be just, with their costs.

ALGERNON S. SULLIVAN,
Plaintiff's Attorney.

CITY & COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss:

Nicholas W. Woodfin, being duly sworn, deposes and says, that he is a resident of the State of North Carolina, and that he is charged by the plaintiffs in the foregoing entitled action with the duty of attending to the bringing and prosecution of the original action mentioned in the foregoing supplemental complaint, and of this supplemental action.

Deponent further says that he has read the foregoing supplemental complaint, and knows the contents thereof, and that the 2968 same is true of his own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it to be true.

N. W. WOODFIN

Sworn to before me this 21st day of August, 1871.

GEORGE A. BLACK,
Comm'r of Deeds, N. Y. City.

Supreme court, city and county of New York.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company
ag'st
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS AND OTHERS.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss:

Nicholas W. Woodfin, being duly sworn, deposes and says: That he is a citizen and resident of North Carolina, and has been by the legislature of that State and by the plaintiffs above named charged with the duty of seeking to recover for said plaintiffs very large sums of money belonging to said plaintiffs which had been wrongfully misappropriated, and that he has been actively engaged for the greater part of the time during a year past in endeavors to recover such moneys, and in the course of such endeavors has attended to the bringing and prosecution of the action mentioned in the supplemental complaint to which this affidavit is annexed.

2970 And he further says that, as was his duty, he has made himself very familiar with the matters stated and set forth in the original complaint mentioned in said supplemental complaint as well as those set forth in said supplemental complaint, and that a large part of said matters are within his personal knowledge, and are true to his personal knowledge, and that all the rest of such matters are, as he verily believes, true.

And this deponent further says, that at the time of the bringing of the original action mentioned in said supplemental complaint, the defendant, Sidney W. Hopkins, was arrested and held to bail by the order of one of the judges of this court in the sum of three hundred thousand dollars, and an order to show cause was granted on the said original complaint, and the affidavits of William W. Rollins and this deponent, of which the affidavit of this deponent was the principal and most 2971 material one, why the defendants in the said original action should not be restrained from parting with the proceeds of the eight hundred bonds mentioned in said complaints, received by them, and with such of said eight hundred bonds as remained undisposed of, with an interim injunction order. That said last-mentioned defendant moved to vacate said order of arrest, and said motion to vacate, as well as the motion for an injunction, have been argued with great fullness before Mr. Justice Cardozo, who has not as yet rendered his decision thereon.

And said deponent further says, that on the argument of said motion, the said defendants last mentioned, not having then put in their answer, did not deny, by their affidavits or otherwise, the allegations of the plaintiffs that they had sold the greater part of said eight hundred bonds, and received as the proceeds of such sales the sum at least of four hundred thousand dollars in gold coin, but put their case 2972 upon the pretense that the written acknowledgment mentioned in said original complaint, that they held said eight hundred bonds as the agents of the plaintiffs, was obtained from them upon certain statements made by this deponent, which statements they alleged were untrue, although they did not presume to charge deponent with any fraud or deceit in the making of them, and upon the further pretence that the said eight hundred bonds were in fact originally the property of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, a Florida corporation, and that the transfer and assignment thereof to the plaintiffs was without the authority of said company. But as these pretences would not of themselves be sufficient to defend them, the said defendants, against their written acknowledgment aforesaid, they, said defendants, collusively procured, as deponent has the best information and reasons for believing, a pretended action to be brought 2973 against themselves, and said plaintiffs, by the said Florida corporation, for the pretended purpose of setting up the claim of said Florida corporation to said eight hundred bonds, and the proceeds thereof, and of enjoining said defendants from parting with the same

And deponent further says that Sidney W. Hopkins, one of said defendants in said original action, was arrested a few days before the 28th day of June, 1871, under the order of arrest aforesaid, and that his affidavit, on which he moved to vacate his order, set forth the bringing of said pretended action, and that said last mentioned affidavit and the complaint in said pretended action against himself were both sworn to on the same 28th day of June, and before the same notary public, the said complaint being verified by Aaron Barnett, one of the defendants herein, and the summons in said pretended action was dated the same day, and the attorneys of record for said Florida corporation in said pretended 2974 action were the counsel for said Sidney W. Hopkins and the other defendants in said original action who prepared the affidavit aforesaid of said Hopkins.

And deponent further says that in said pretended action notice of motion was given for an injunction restraining the defendants therein, the said Hopkins and his copartners, Collins and Carpenter, composing the firm of S. W. Hopkins & Company, from parting with said bonds and their proceeds, and also restraining the plaintiffs in said original action from prosecuting the same against said S. W. Hopkins & Company, and such motion was argued at the same time with the other motions hereinbefore mentioned, and that on such argument the same counsel appeared and argued for the said S. W. Hopkins & Company and the said Florida corporation.

And deponent further says that after the argument of said motions said S. W. Hopkins & Company put in their joint answer to the said original action of the plaintiff, but that in such answer they made 2975 no pretence by way of defence; that the said Florida corporation made the claim and brought the pretended action aforesaid.

And deponent further says that after the said original action of the plaintiff was at issue, and on or about the 20th of July last, he gained information which led him to believe that the said S. W. Hopkins & Company had purchased the railroad iron mentioned in said supplemental complaint, and that they designed the same for said Florida Railroad corporation; and they had made such purchase with part of the proceeds of the four thousand bonds mentioned in said supplemental complaint; but such information was not sufficient to enable him to act thereon; but he says that shortly thereafter the firm of L. P. Bayne & Company, of the city of New York, creditors of the said Florida corporation, caused the said iron to be attached as being the property of said corporation; whereupon said S. W. Hopkins & Company 2976 claimed the same, which claim was tried on or about the 7th day of August, 1871, before the sheriff of King's County and a jury, and the title found in said S. W. Hopkins & Company; that said L. P. Bayne & Company thereupon indemnified the said sheriff who had executed the attachment, and thereupon Aaron Barnett, one of the defendants herein, who is one of the directors of said Florida corporation, and the same person who verified the complaint in the pretended action aforesaid, appeared and made another claim in his own name to said property, pretending to have purchased the same; and that upon the trial of the claim last mentioned, before the same sheriff and a jury, the 19th day of August, the said Barnett produced a pretended receipted invoice of the said iron from said S. W. Hopkins & Company to himself, dated the 17th day of July last, and certain orders for the 2977 delivery of said iron to him, dated the 8th day of said August, but he did not pretend that he had taken possession of said iron until after the trial of the claim first aforesaid, nor would he undertake to swear, although pressed upon this point, that said invoice was received by him before said 7th of August, but stated that he did not know when he received it.

Deponent further says that he has within a few days last past learned from one Mr. Gleason, late lieut. governor of Florida, who is one of a committee constituted by said Florida corporation, for the purpose, among other things, of attending to its financial concerns with S. W. Hopkins & Company; that said firm, prior to the month of July last, made out an account and statement of the disposition made by them of said four thousand bonds and the proceeds thereof, and delivered the same to said corporation; and that it appears by the same that 2978 said S. W. Hopkins & Company had, prior to the third of June, 1870, out of the proceeds of the said four thousand bonds, and said S. W. Hopkins & Company so claim, paid over to or for said Florida corporation the sum of nine hundred and five thousand one hundred and nineteen 77-100 dollars, without including the sum paid for said railroad iron, and that after the purchase of said railroad iron the said S. W. Hopkins & Company charged the same on the foot of said account or statement to said Florida corporation at the sum of $150,000.

And deponent further says that, as he is informed by said Gleason, and verily believes, the said account or statement with the last mentioned charge thereon was in the possession of said Barnett prior to the 17th day of July last.

Deponent further says that the testimony of John Collinson has been taken in said original action de bene esse, and that in such testi-2979 mony he stated that he was the party who had agreed to buy the said four thousand bonds of said S. W. Hopkins & Company, and that he had paid the said firm on account thereof in full for 2,800 of the same at the rate of one hundred and thirty-eight pounds sterling for each bond, less a deduction of the amount of three coupons for each bond, each of said coupons being four per cent. and the bonds being each for $1,000 in gold. Deponent further says that said iron will, as he is informed and believes, be shipped to Florida in a very few days, unless such removal is enjoined by this court.

And this deponent further says that, as he verily believes, the said plaintiffs will not be able by any judgment and execution against the dfendants Hopkins, Collins, and Carpenter, personally to recover the amount of the proceeds of the sale of said Florida bonds which belong to the said plaintiffs, and that the interposition of the equitable 2980 powers of this court is absolutely necessary in order to prevent an irreparable injury to the rights of the plaintiffs.

Comm'r of Deeds, N. Y. City.

Injunction by order.

Supreme court, city and county of New York.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company, plaintiffs,
against
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS, FRANK A. COLLINS, Robert J. Carpenter, Aaron Barnett, Custis Woodruff, Jeremiah P. Robinson, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, defendants.

It appearing satisfactorily to me by the affidavit of Nicholas W. Woodfin and the verified supplemental complaint that sufficient ground for an order of injunction exist', I do hereby order 2981 that the defendants in the above entitled action show cause before me at the chamber of the judges of the supreme court, in the City-Hall, in the city of New York, on the first Thursday of September, 1871, at 10½ o'clock a. m., why an order should not be made restraining the defendants Aaron Barnett, Curtis Woodruff, Jeremiah P. Robinson, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and each of them, from selling, removing, or in any manner disposing of or interfering with the railroad iron or any part thereof, consisting of iron rails, bars, &c., now in the custody of Woodruff and Robinson, storekeepers in Brooklyn, and now or lately held by them on account of or subject to the order of Aaron Barnett or Barnett & Company, and why a receiver should not be appointed thereof, &c. And in the meantime and until the hearing and decision on the motion, I hereby order that the said last named defendants, and each of them and their and each of their officers, agents, servants, or clerks, do absolutely refrain from selling, removing, or in any manner disposing of or interfering with the said railroad iron or any part thereof, and 2982 from aiding and assisting in any removal of or interference with the same or any part thereof until the further order of this court, and in case of disobedience to this order you will be liable to the punishment therefor prescribed by law.

Dated August 21, 1871.

J. S. C.

2983 Supreme court.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company
against
SIDNEY W. HOPKINS, FRANK H. COLLINS, AND Robert J. Carpenter, impleaded.

First. That the defendants herein answer as before they have answered to the complaint in this action and make their said answer a part of this their supplemental answer, and ask that the same be taken to be a part hereof, with the same force and effect as if the contents thereof were herein repeated verbatim, and they also refer to said 2984 answer as to what they admitted and what they denied of the allegations in the complaint.

Second. The defendants deny that after the bringing of this action, which was brought on or about the 21st day of June, 1871, they purchased two thousand tons of iron, as set up in said supplemental complaint, but allege that they purchased the same before the commencement of this action in the regular course of their business, and that the said iron was the property of these defendants, and say that said iron or a part of it was purchased with the intent that the same should be sold by them to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and they deny that after such purchase they made a contract with the said company for the shipment of said iron. And defendants admit that they have sold 2,800 of the 4,000 bonds mentioned in the 2985 complaint and have received a large amount of money therefor, to wit, the sum of $997,920, after deducting the commissions and allowances to which they were entitled, which sum they have duly credited said railroad company in account and a large part of which sum had been advanced by these defendants to said company before the sale of said bonds.

Third. And defendants show that after crediting said company with the said sum, the said company is indebted to defendants to a large amount, to wit, in the sum of several hundred thousand dollars, including obligations of these defendants for said company.

Fourth. And defendants say that the proceeds of said bonds were paid into the office of these defendants in London, at divers different 2986 times, and that during the period of time covered by such payments divers other large sums of money were paid into their said London office, the proceeds of other and different business, and that all the moneys so received were mingled together, and that remittances were made by the London office to the New York house from time to time, in round amounts, without any reference to a specification of the sources from which the same was derived, and such remittances went into the general funds of the New York house, and said iron, as well as other iron, was paid for and other payments were made from the said general funds, and the proceeds of the sale of said bonds were not kept separately, wherefore the defendants deny that the iron in the complaint mentioned was purchased with the proceeds or a part of the proceeds of said bonds.

2987 And defendants deny that the assignment or transfer of the said eight hundred bonds to the plaintiffs was made to satisfy prior or other obligations of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company to the plaintiffs, but, as defendants are informed and believe, was unlawfully made for the purpose of satisfying an obligation of Milton S. Littlefield to the plaintiffs, and for which said company was not liable.

Sixth. And defendants deny that they have any of the proceeds of said 4,000 bonds, or of any of them, in their hands, and deny that they intend to conceal or fraudulently retain the same or any part thereof to their own use, and deny that Hopkins or Carpenter are keeping themselves absent from the State or lurking and concealing themselves 2988 therein, but, on the contrary thereof, allege that all of said defendants are pursuing the ordinary business of their mercantile establishment, and that the defendant Hopkins has at all times since the commencement of this action been daily at his office, in the city of New York, excepting for a short period in the month of August, when his business required his presence in a Western State, and that his absence at that time was only for about ten days.

Wherefore the defendants pray that the complaint and supplemental complaint may be dismissed with costs.

SEWELL & PIERCE,
Def't's Att'ys.

2989 CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK:

Sidney W. Hopkins, being duly sworn, deposes that he has heard read the foregoing answer; that he is one of the defendants named therein; that the same is true of his own knowledge, excepting as to those matters therein stated on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it be true.

S. W. HOPKINS.

2991 Supreme court.

THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA AND MOBILE
Railroad Company
against
THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN
North Carolina Railroad Company and others.

On reading the complaint in this action, and the affidavits thereto annexed, it is ordered that the defendants in this action show cause before one of the justices of this court, at special term, to be held at the chambers of this court, at the new court house in the city of New York, on Monday, the third day of July, 1871, at twelve o'clock noon, why the injunction prayed for in said complaint should not be granted, or why such further or other order should not be made as shall be just, and upon the facts stated in the annexed papers, let the papers be served upon any one of said commissioners who can be found in the city of New York; and if such service cannot be made, then let service 2992 be made upon Algernon S. Sullivan, esquire, attorney for the railroad company, defendants, and let service also be made on one of the firm of S. W. Hopkins & Co.

New York, June 28th, 1871.

GEORGE G. BARNARD,
J. S. C.

Supreme court, city and county of New York.

THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA AND MOBILE Railroad Company, plaintiffs, against
THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company, Sidney W. Hopkins, Frank H. Collins, and Robert J. Carpenter, who compose the firm of S. W. Hopkins & Co.; Nicholas W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. P. Welsh, William W. Rollins, and James L. Henry, commissioners appointed by an act of the legislature of North Carolina, and Milton S. Littlefield, defendants.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss.:

The said plaintiffs, by Martin & Smith, their attorneys, complain and show to this court as follows:

2993 First. Said plaintiffs are a corporation created by and under a law of the State of Florida, approved June 24th, 1869, and which law is entitled "An act to perfect the public works of the State."

Section 1 of said act is in part as follows:

"In order to secure the speedy completion, equipping, and the maintenance of a connection, by railroad, between Jacksonville, on the Atlantic coast, and Pensacola, on the Gulf coast, and Mobile in Alabama, running through the State of Florida," &c., as will more fully appear by reference to said act.

Second. By section 14 of the said act it was among other things provided:

"That it shall be lawful for the several companies owning the roads or parts of roads from Quincy to Jacksonville, from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, and the branch to Monticello, or either of said companies, by a vote of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest, and with the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, to consolidate with the latter company so as to become one corporation under its name on such terms as may be agreed on," as will more fully appear by the act in question, to which reference is made for greater certainty.

And the said plaintiffs further say that the said last mentioned act was amended by a law approved January 28, 1870, and that section 2 of said amended act is, in part, as follows:

"In order to aid said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to complete, equip, and maintain its road, and to aid in perfecting one of the public works embraced in the internal improvem of the State, the governor of the State is hereby directed to deliver 2994 to the president of the said company coupon bonds of the State to an amount equal to sixteen thousand dollars per mile for the whole line of road and length of railroad owned by, or belonging to, said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in exchange for first mortgage bonds of said railroad company, of the denomination of one thousand dollars, when the president thereof shall certify upon his oath that the road or parts of roads for which he asks for the exchange of bonds is completed and is in good running order."

And they say that section 4 of said act was, in part, as follows:

"That the governor shall, for the purpose of further aiding said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in the speedy construction of its railroad, deliver to the president of said company coupon bonds of this State, of the same character as those above described in this act, to the amount of sixteen thousand dollars per mile, upon receiving for and from the president of said company first mortgage bonds of like amount, on any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville," as will more fully appear by reference to said act.

Fourth. And the said plaintiffs further say that Jacksonville is upon the St. John's River, and is the eastern terminus of a line of railroads running and designed to run from said Jacksonville to Pensacola, on the Gulf, and which is designed to be extended to reach Mobile in the State of Alabama; that the first link in the line from Jacksonville is the Florida Central Railroad Company, running from Jacksonville to Lake City, about sixty miles, and is a railroad already completed; that the second link in said line extends from Lake City to Quincy, about one hundred and twenty-five or one hundred and thirty miles; that said last mentioned link passes through the city of Tallahassee, 2995 about twenty-three miles before reaching Quincy, from which last mentioned point there is a railroad to St. Mark's, on the St. Mark's River; that said railroad from Lake City to Quincy, and from Tallahassee to St. Mark's was, before the consolidation hereinafter mentioned, known as the Tallahassee Railroad, and was a railroad already completed; that the third link is designed to extend from Quincy aforesaid to Pensacola and to Mobile, but the same is now under construction, and no part of the same is completed; that previous to the consolidation hereinafter mentioned, the said link, extending from Quincy westward, was known as the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

Fifth. And said plaintiffs further say that in or about the months of May or June, 1870, the said railroad, extending from Lake City to Quincy, with its branch from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, which, together, were known as the Tallahassee Railroad, and the said railroad in process of construction from Quincy westward, known as the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, were, under section fourteen of said original act, as before in part quoted, consolidated under the name of the last-mentioned road, to wit, under the name of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

Sixth. And the said plaintiffs further say that the principal object of the consolidation was to facilitate and accomplish the construction of the said railroad extending westward from Quincy, and for that purpose to obtain from the State of Florida the bonds of said State for sixteen thousand dollars per mile upon the said completed railroad extending from Lake City to Quincy, and from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, to be used in such construction.

2996 Seventh. And the said plaintiffs further say that after the said consolidation, the governor of the State of Florida issued to these plaintiffs, in exchange for three thousand of their own bonds and one thousand of the bonds of the Florida Central Railroad Company, of one thousand dollars each, four thousand of the bonds of the State of Florida for one thousand dollars each, for the purposes mentioned in the said amended act, as above quoted.

Eighth. And the said plaintiffs further say that the said four millions of the bonds of the State of Florida so obtained by them as aforesaid, and for the purposes aforesaid, was placed by them in the hands of the defendants, Hopkins, Collins and Carpenter, who are bankers, in company, under the name of S. W. Hopkins & Co., doing business in th city of New York, and having an office in London, for the purpose an under an agreement that the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. should dispose of said bonds for the benefit of said plaintiffs, in order that the proceeds thereof should be applied to the exclusive benefit of the said plaintiffs in the construction of the said railroad extending westward from Quincy as aforesaid; and they further say that the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. have made a contract for the disposition of said four thousand bonds in Europe, at a price satisfactory to these plaintiffs, and have delivered, upon such last-mentioned contract, some of said bonds, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, and that they still have in their hands, as said plaintiffs are informed and believe, a large number of said bonds, and many more than eight hundred of said bonds under contract as aforesaid, but not delivered, and upon which no part of the price has, as yet, been received by the said S. W. Hopkins & Co.; and the said plaintiffs further say that the money to be received for the said bonds, still in the hands of the said S. W. Hopkins & Co., is absolutely necessary to carry out the object for which the said bonds were issued, namely, to proceed with the construction of the said railroad westward of Quincy as aforesaid, and that if these plaintiffs are deprived 2997 of the said bonds temporarily or permanently, or are prevented temporarily or permanently from receiving the price thereof, it will greatly embarrass them, and greatly delay and possibly defeat the construction of the said road, and will produce an irreparable injury.

Ninth. And the said plaintiffs further say that they are informed and believe that the defendants, the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, to be called hereafter in this complaint the North Carolina Railroad Company, are a corporation created by and under the laws of the State of North Carolina; that previous to October, 1867, they had as their president George W. Swepson, and from that time for a considerable period had as their president the defendant, Milton S. Littlefield; that the said Milton S. Littlefield is one of the defendants herein, and for some time past has been the president of the plaintiffs, and the plaintiffs further say that it is claimed by the said North Carolina Railroad Company that the said Swepson, when president of their road, misapplied a very large amount of the proceeds of North Carolina State bonds, which had been issued to enable said company to build their road, and that he had purchased with such funds, among other things, a large number of shares of the said railroad extending from Jacksonville to Lake City, known as the Florida Central Railroad Company, and also the bonds of the road extending from Lake City to Quincy, and from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, then respectively known as the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company, and the Tallahassee Railroad Company; and they claim further that when the said two last-mentioned railroads were sold, by authority of the State of Florida, that said Swepson, either at the time of such sale, or shortly afterwards, surrendered the said last-mentioned bonds, and became interested in the stock of the said two last-mentioned roads, which were reorganized under the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company; and they claim further that the said Swepson after that time sold 2998 out all his interest in the stock of the said Florida Central Railroad and in the stock of the said last-mentioned Tallahassee Railroad, to the said defendant Littlefield, and that the said Littlefield became liable to the said North Carolina Railroad Company in the same manner as they claimed the said Swepson had theretofore been liable, or in some other manner; and they claim further that they, the said North Carolina Railroad Company, were entitled to all of the said stock in the said Florida Central Railroad Company and the said Tallahassee Railroad Company, purchased as aforesaid by the said Swepson.

And the said plaintiffs further say that they are informed and believe that the said North Carolina Railroad Company claim, in addition, that they had, because of their said claims against the said Swepson, and also against the said Littlefield, a right to take for their own benefit so many of the said four thousand bonds so issued or to be issued by the said State of Florida as would pay them the sum of $1,287,436.03 with interest, being the amount of their alleged claim against the said Swepson and the said Littlefield as aforesaid.

And the said plaintiffs say that at the time that said last claim was made, and in the month of April, 1870, the date of the making of the agreement next hereinafter mentioned, and in the month of November, 1870, the date of the making of another agreement hereinafter mentioned, the said Swepson and the said Littlefield were both in fear of criminal prosecutions threatened against them by and on behalf of the said North Carolina Railroad Company, and they have both of them, in fact, either before or since that time, been indicted in North Carolina.

And the said plaintiffs say that the said claims so made against the said Swepson and Littlefield were yielded to by both, and they, on or about the 16th day of April, 1870, entered into an agreement in form "between the Florida Central Railroad, George W. Swepson, president, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, owners of the stock of said companies, and also of the stock of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, of the first part," which agreement was with the defendants, the North Carolina Railroad Company, of the second part, represented by the said Woodfin, Candler, Welsh, and Rollins, as commissioners. And the said plaintiffs say that they annex hereto as a part of their complaint a copy of the said agreement, marked A.

And the said plaintiffs say that the object of the said agreement was to give to the said North Carolina Railroad Company the proceeds of so many of the said four thousand bonds as would pay them the said sum of $1,287,436.03 with interest, and they say that neither the said Swepson nor the said Littlefield had any authority whatever to make any such agreement; that neither the Florida Central Railroad Company nor these plaintiffs have ever in any manner, by resolution or otherwise, conferred upon the said Swepson or the said Littlefield any authority whatever to dispose of the said bonds except only for the purpose for which the said bonds were issued or to be issued as aforesaid, and have never given them, or either of them, any authority to dispose of the said bonds, or the proceeds thereof, or any part of the said bonds or any part of said proceeds to or for the benefit of the said North Carolina Railroad Company. That neither the said Florida Central Railroad Company nor these plaintiffs have ever in any manner, directly or indirectly, by resolution or otherwise, assumed any part of any alleged debt, legal or equitable, due by the said Swepson or the said Littlefield to the said North Carolina Railroad Company; and they further say that they are advised and they charge that neither of said companies had any power by any vote of their board of directors to assume any such debt or to pay it.

Tenth. And the said plaintiffs further say that on or about the 3000 10th day of November, 1870, an agreement was entered into in form
"between the said Milton S. Littlefield, of the State of Florida, in the United States of America, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railway Company, by Milton S. Littlefield, the president thereof, the parties of the first part, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, acting through and represented by Colonel Nicholas W. Woodfin, chairman of the commission," &c., which said last mentioned agreement was evidently designed as a substitute for the said agreement marked A as aforesaid, and a copy of said substitute agreement is hereto annexed marked B, and the said plaintiffs say that the said Littlefield had no authority whatever, direct or indirect, to make or execute such an agreement on behalf of the plaintiffs.

Eleventh. And the said plaintiffs further say, upon information and belief derived from the said S. W. Hopkins & Co., and from the affidavits in the suit by the North Carolina Railroad Company hereinafter mentioned, that on or before the 16th day of November, 1870, the said S. W. Hopkins & Co., in London, were apprised of the making of the said pretended contract, of which the copy is marked B as aforesaid, and they upon that date wrote a letter to Nicholas W. Woodfin, esq., chairman of the commissioners, &c., in which they said:

"We are in possession of your favor of this day's date, covering order from M. S. Littlefield, president Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, dated November 16th, 1870, for the 800 Florida bonds. We accept the said order and agree to hold the within described bonds as agents for the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, subject to the order of the commissioners.

"We remain your most obedient servants,

"S. W. HOPKINS & CO."

3001 And the said plaintiffs say that the order from Milton S. Littlefield, president, mentioned in the said last mentioned letter of the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. was in the words and figures following, to wit:

LONDON, November 16, 1870.

Messrs. S. W. HOPKINS & Co.,
58 Old Broad street, London, and 71 Broadway, New York:

GENTLEMEN: On the 10th day of November, A. D. 1870, I made a final settlement with the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, represented by Nicholas W. Woodfin, chairman of the commissioners appointed by the legislature of North Carolina to collect the moneys due said company.

The commissioners are N. W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. W. Rollins, W. P. Welsh, and J. L. Henry.

One of the terms of said settlement was that it should place to the order of said company any 800 of the Florida 8 per cent. gold bonds my railroad contracted with you to negotiate on the 13th of April last; therefore you will place to the order of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company 800 of said bonds, and sell or dispose of the same as the said chairman may direct; but this order is subjected to the following conditions:

First. The said bonds are to remain in your hands to sell.

Second. The proceeds of said bonds are to be transferred to your New York house, and disbursed to said company upon the order of a majority of said commissioners.

I remain, gentlemen, your most obedient servant,

M. S. LITTLEFIELD,
Pres. J. P. & M. R. R. Co.

And the said plaintiffs in fact say, that the said S. W. Hopkins 3002 & Co. wrote such letter and made such acceptance in respect to the said eight hundred bonds entirely without authority from these plaintiffs, and that such acceptance is, as these plaintiffs are advised and believe, entirely void as against plaintiffs, and to affect their rights, but the plaintiffs fear that the said acceptance may, as between the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. and the said North Carolina Railroad Company, be held to be of some effect.

Twelfth. And the said plaintiffs further say, upon information and belief, that the said defendants, such commissioners as aforesaid, at the time of the making of the said agreements A and B, knew, and have ever since known, that no authority existed in the said Swepson and the said Littlefield to make the said agreements A and B, or to make any disposition of the said bonds such as was sought to be made by such agreements.

Thirteenth. Said plaintiffs further say, upon information and belief, that in the month of May last a suit was brought in the fourth judicial circuit court in the State of Florida, by Aaron Barnett, a stockholder in the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, against the said S. W. Hopkins & Co., the said North Carolina Railroad Company, the said commissioners, and several other persons, in which it was, among other things, prayed that S. W. Hopkins & Co. be enjoined from delivering any part of the said bonds, or the proceeds thereof, to any of the defendants in said suit, and such injunction was issued accordingly, and served upon the said S. W. Hopkins.

Fourteenth. And the said plaintiffs further say, that afterwards and on or about the 19th day of June instant, the said North Carolina Railroad Company, in their name of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, commenced a suit in this court against the defendants herein, Hopkins, Collins and Carpenter, in the complaint in which suit it is in substance stated that eight hun-3003 dred of the said bonds being in the possession of the said S. W.
Hopkins & Company were assigned and transferred, to be held by the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. as the property of the said North Carolina Railroad Company, and to be sold on their account, and the proceeds thereof paid over to them, and that said S. W. Hopkins & Co. had acknowledged to the said North Carolina Railroad Company, in writing, that they held said bonds for sale as the agents of the said company.

And in which said complaint the said plaintiffs in substance further allege, that S. W. Hopkins & Co. had sold a large amount of said bonds, if not the whole thereof, and had received a large amount of money, to wit, not less than four hundred thousand dollars in gold, on account of the sales thereof; that they had paid over $53,776.66 and $1,000 thereof to the said North Carolina Railroad Company; that the said North Carolina Railroad Company had demanded that the said S. W. Hopkins account, and that they pay over the residue of said money; that they refuse to do so, and the said complaint demands judgment that the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. account and pay over and deliver to the said North Carolina Railroad Company the moneys so alleged to be received by them, and interest, and any bonds remaining unsold.

That in such suit the said North Carolina Railroad Company obtained an order of arrest against the said Hopkins, Collins and Carpenter, bailable in the sum of $300,000, under which order the said Hopkins has been arrested.

And they say that the said suit last mentioned is being prosecuted by the said commissioners, defendants in this action, or by some of them, and that the affidavits upon which the order of arrest was granted were sworn in this city by the said defendant Woodfin and the said defendant Rollins on the 19th day of June instant; and they say that the attorney of record who is prosecuting the said suit of the said North Carolina Railroad Company is Algernon S. Sullivan, esquire, who resides and does business in the city of New York.

3004 Fifteenth. And said plaintiffs say, that they fear that the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. may be constrained by the said suit, and by the difficulty of giving so large bail, or by some other suit or proceeding, or in some other manner, to comply with the requirements of the said North Carolina Railroad Company, and may give up to them some part of the said four thousand bonds, or some part of the proceeds thereof, and that these plaintiffs will be greatly and irreparably injured and embarassed thereby.

And the said plaintiffs pray that an injunction issue to enjoin and restrain the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. from delivering the said bonds, or any part thereof, to the said The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, or to any other person for their use, and that they be in like manner enjoined and restrained from paying over to the last mentioned railroad company, or for their use, any part of the proceeds of any of such bonds as are claimed by the said railroad company, and that the said railroad company be enjoined and restrained from prosecuting their said suit against the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. to recover the said bonds, or any part thereof, or the proceeds thereof, or of any part thereof; and that the said railroad company be enjoined and restrained from beginning any other suit or proceeding having in view the recovery of the said bonds, or any of them, or of the proceeds thereof, or of any part thereof, and that said injunction be extended to the said commissioners in this complaint named, and to the agents, attorneys and counsel of the said North Carolina Railroad Company.

And they do further pray, that it be decreed that all of the said four thousand bonds, hereinbefore mentioned, were the property of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, held by them in trust, and to apply the same and the proceeds thereof to the uses and purposes mentioned in the acts of the legislature of the State of Florida, hereinbefore referred to; and that said company are 3005 bound to apply the same, and the proceeds thereof, to the completion, equipment and maintenance of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; and that neither the said railroad company, nor their president, had any authority to divert the same or the proceeds thereof, or any part thereof, from such purposes; and that said agreements of April 16th, 1870, and November 10th, 1870, were void so far as the same undertook to dispose of or appropriate any portion of the said four thousand bonds, or the proceeds thereof; and that an absolute and final injunction be issued in substance as hereinbefore prayed, and that such further or other relief be granted in the premises as shall be just.

Memorandum of agreement and settlement between the Florida Central Railroad, George W. Swepson, president, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, Milton S. Littlefield, president, and Milton S. Littlefield, majority owner of the stock of said companies, and also of the stock of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, of the first part, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, represented by N. W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. Pink Welsh, and W. W. Rollins, commissioners appointed by an act of the legislature of North Carolina, approved by the stockholders of said corporation, of the second part: Witnesseth,

That whereas George W. Swepson, late president of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, made certain investments of the funds of said company, in securities of and interests in the said Florida Central Railroad, Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and the Tallahassee Railroad of the said State of Florida, as per report made by the said George W. Swepson to the said commissioners, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents, to bear interest from the first day of November, 1869, at the rate of eight per cent. per annum; and

Whereas the said George W. Swepson heretofore conveyed to the said Milton S. Littlefield, subject to the payment of the above recited claim, his interest in the above recited railroad; and

Whereas the said Littlefield has received authority from the legislature of the State of Florida, and the said several railroad companies, to receive bonds to be issued by and for account of the several rail-3007 road companies, which bonds are to be exchanged for the bonds of the State of Florida, to be issued for the purpose of aiding the finances of the several railroad companies, all of which bonds are now in a state of preparation; and

Whereas Milton S. Littlefield has made a contract with S. W. Hopkins & Co., 71 Broadway, for the disposition of the said bonds as the same may be issued, the proceeds of the issue of the bonds of the Central Railroad Company of the said State of Florida, amounting to nine hundred and sixty thousand dollars, are to be applied to the payment of existing liabilities of the said several railroad companies, including the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars to be paid to the commissioners aforesaid for the purpose of paying the existing liabilities of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

It is understood and agreed by the parties of the first and second part, that the proceeds of the sale of the said bonds so to be issued by the said Florida Railroad Companies, and the said State of Florida, is to be equally divided, dollar for dollar, between the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company and the said Florida railroads, and as the commissioners aforesaid receive by this first sale of bonds only the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, it is further understood and agreed that out of the proceeds of the sale of the issue of the bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad there is first to be received by the commissioners aforesaid a sum sufficient to be equal to the amount received by and on account of the said Florida railroads, and then an equal amount is to be received by the said commissioners, and the said Florida railroads, dollar for dollar until the entire amount of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand and thirty-six dollars and three cents, with interest at eight per cent. as aforesaid, being the sum reported by the parties of 3008 the first part as due to the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad, is fully paid.

It is further understood and agreed by the parties of the first and second parts, that all the interest owned or claimed by the said parties of the first part, both George W. Swepson and Milton S. Littlefield, or which they, as individuals, have a right to control in the said Florida railroads, are hereby pledged for the faithful fulfillment of this contract without the right on part of any party to interfere with our management or control of the affairs of the road.

EXHIBIT B.

Memorandum of an agreement and final settlement made this tenth day of November, A. D. 1870, at London, England, between General Milton S. Littlefield, of the State of Florida, in the United States of America, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company by Milton S. Littlefield, the president thereof, the parties of the first part, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, acting through and represented by Col. Nich-3009 olas W. Woodfin, chairman of the commission appointed by the general assembly of the State of North Carolina, by an "act," ratified twenty-fourth day of March, A. D. 1870, to settle with George W. Swepson, and for other purposes, which "act" was approved by the stockholders of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company of the second part.

Whereas, on the sixteenth day of April. A. D. 1870, at the city of Washington, in the District of Columbia, in the United States of America, a contract in writing was made and entered into by and between the Florida Railroad Company, George W. Swepson, president, and General Milton S. Littlefield, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, by Milton S. Littlefield, the president thereof, as parties of the first part, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, represented by Nicholas W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. W. Rollins, and W. P. Welsh, commissioners appointed by the legislature of the State of North Carolina, by an "act," ratified on the twenty-fourth day of March, A. D. 1870, which "act" was duly ratified, approved, adopted and made a part of the charter of the said party of the second part—the said corporation—a copy of which contract is attached hereto, and made a part of this contract; and

Whereas the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company have received certain bonds of the State of Florida, under sundry acts of the legislature of the said State, which bonds, by the term of the laws authorizing the issue of the same, are made payable, both principal and interest, in the gold coin of the United States, and bearing interest at the rate of eight (8) per cent. per annum; and

Whereas, by reason of the present war in Europe, all financial operations are more or less restricted, which has, up to this time, prevented the negotiation for the sale of said bonds; and

3010 Whereas the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad, through and by its representative, Nicholas W. Woodfin, chairman aforesaid, is pressing the immediate payment by the said party of the first part of the sum of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents, with interest at the rate of eight (8) per cent. per annum, since the first day of November, A. D. 1869; to pay or settle the said claim now will cause a great sacrifice to the said party of the first part; and

Whereas the said Nicholas W. Woodfin, as chairman of the said commission for the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, for the purpose of removing embarrassments out of the way, which, in his judgment, prevented the sale of the said bonds, and to avoid litigation, did, on the seventeenth day of October, A. D. 1870, contract with Henry Clews & Co., bankers, in the cities of New York and London, to purchase a certain claim held by them against George W. Swepson, amounting to about twenty thousand dollars, lawful money of the United States of America, which contract was made with the knowledge and approval of the said party of the first part, for the reason, it was understood by all parties to the agreement, that this would secure the full co-operation of the said Henry Clews & Co. to aid in the sale and negotiation of the said Florida bonds.

3011 Tennessee, and to complete their road without delay on the one hand, and to avoid a hasty sale and sacrifice of the said bonds on the other hand, it is agreed by and between the parties of the first and second parts that in full compromise, payment, satisfaction, and accord of the obligation of the party of the first part to pay to the party of the second part the sum of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents, lawful money of the United States of America, with interest thereon at the rate of eight

(8) per cent., from and after the first day of November, A. D. 1869, as per terms of the said contract, made and executed at the city of Washington aforesaid, and that the said party of the first part may be fully and finally discharged from every and all liability on account of the terms and conditions of the said contract hereunto appended, the said party of the first part agree to furnish iron to the said party of the second part sufficient to lay a single track of railroad from the junction at Ashville, along the French Broad River to Point Rock, at the Tennessee State line, and into the State of Tennessee, to the present terminus of the Cincinnati, Cumberland Gap, and Charleston Railroad, with turnouts and side tracks, provided that the whole of the railroad shall not exceed, including turnouts and side tracks, fifty-three miles in length. The iron shall be of a good quality of English iron, weighing not less than fifty pounds per lineal yard, with the necessary chairs and spikes to lay the same. The iron to be shipped in the quantities and at the times and places as follows, to wit:

To Norfolk, Virginia, on or before the tenth day of December, A. D. 1870, three hundred tons; to the same place on or before the tenth day of January, A. D. 1871, five hundred tons; to the same place on or before the first day of April, A. D. 1871, one thousand tons, and the rest to be shipped to New York, in the State of New York, on or before the first day of September, A. D. 1871, but the said party of the first part may ship the iron as fast as he may wish, all duties and freights

And it is further agreed by the party of the first part, that he will ship, in addition to the above-mentioned quantity of iron, one thousand tons of the same weight and quality as the above-described iron, with the necessary chairs and spikes to lay the same to New York, duties and freights paid, on or before the first day of September, A. D. 1871, the shipping of which iron Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co. are to guarantee.

In addition to the shipping of the iron, the said party of the first part does hereby sell and deliver unto the said party of the second part, by placing to the order of the party of the second part, with Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co., eight hundred bonds of the State of Florida, of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, numbers of said bonds to be designated by the said party of the first part, but upon the express stipulations and conditions that the said bonds are to be left with Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co. for sale at such prices as the said party of the second part may direct. And it is further agreed by the party of the first part that he will pay to the party of the second part two hundred pounds sterling, the receipt whereof is hereby acknowledged.

And it is further agreed, by the party of the first part, to assume and discharge the obligation of the party of the second part to Henry Clews & Co. of about twenty thousand dollars, lawful money of the United States of America.

Now, when the foregoing undertaking and agreement of the party of the first part are fully accomplished and performed, it is to be taken as a full compliance with, and final discharge of the parties of the first part to this contract, as well as all parties of the first part to the said contract, executed at the city of Washington aforesaid, a copy of 3013 which is hereto attached, and this shall operate as a receipt and final discharge thereof from all obligations growing out of the same.

Aaron Barnett, being duly sworn, doth depose and say:

That he is a director of the plaintiffs; that he has heard the complaint in this action read, and knows the contents thereof, and he says that the said plaintiffs are a corporation as in the complaint stated; that deponent has examined the laws mentioned in the said complaint passed by the legislature of the State of Florida, and that said laws are correctly stated in said complaint. And deponent says that the facts stated in the 4th, 5th, 6th, and 7th clauses of the said complaint are facts of a public nature, or otherwise within the knowledge of deponent, and the allegations in said clauses are true; and he says that it is true, as stated in said complaint, that the proceeds of the said four 3014 millions of bonds still to be received for or on behalf of the said company are absolutely necessary to carry out the object for which the said bonds were issued, namely, to proceed with the construction of the said railroad westward of Quincy, as stated in the said complaint; and it is true, as stated in said complaint, that if the plaintiffs are deprived of the said bonds, or are prevented from receiving the price thereof, it will greatly embarrass them and greatly delay and possibly defeat the construction of the said road, and will produce an irreparable injury; and he says that the facts stated in the 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, and 14th paragraphs of said complaint appear substantially from the complaint and affidavits served on the part of the said North Carolina Railroad Company, in a suit brought by them against Sidney W. 3015 Supreme court, city and county of New York.

THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA AND MOBILE
Railroad Company
against
THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN
North Carolina Railroad Company and others.

The joint and several answer of The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, and William W. Rollins, one of the commissioners appointed by an act of the legislature of North Carolina, defendants in this action, to the complaint therein of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, the plaintiff therein.

The said defendants, by Algernon S. Sullivan, their attorney, protesting against the right of the said plaintiffs to implead them in this action, and reserving all objections to the said complaint for the manifold insufficiencies thereof, nevertheless, for their joint and several answer thereto, respectfully show to this court as follows:

The said defendants deny any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that the said plaintiffs were created a corporation by or under the particular law of the State of Florida, in that behalf mentioned in the said complaint, or that the said act was amended as therein alleged, although they say they have no reason to suppose that the allegations in that behalf in the said complaint are untrue.

3016 The said defendants also deny any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that the link in the line of railroads mentioned in said complaint as running and designed to run from Jacksonville westward to Pensacola, and in the 13th folio of said complaint described as the "second link," and as extending from Lake City to Quincy, was, together with the railroad from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, known as the Tallahassee Railroad, as alleged in said complaint; but they say that at a time prior to the consolidation mentioned in the 14th folio of said complaint, the said "second link," or a part thereof, was known as the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad, and, as the said defendants are informed and believe, was built in whole or in part by a corporate body, whose corporate name was the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company.

The said defendants further deny any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that the four millions of dollars of the bonds of the State of Florida mentioned in the eighth clause or paragraph of said complaint were placed in the hands of the defendants Hopkins, Collins and Carpenter, under an agreement such as is described in said eighth clause or paragraph; and for better and more certain knowledge in that behalf, these defendants pray that said agreement be produced.

And these defendants also deny any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that S. W. Hopkins & Company still have in their hands more than eight hundred of said bonds, upon which no part of the price has been paid, as alleged in said complaint, and they also deny any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that any money received, or to be received, for any of said bonds yet in the hands of said S. W. Hopkins & Company is necessary, in order to proceed with the construction of the railroad westward from Quincy, or that the plaintiffs, if they are deprived of said bonds, will be greatly embarrassed, or that the construction of said railroad will be defeated, or any

And these defendants further answering, wholly deny the allegations, and every allegation from the 26th to the 33d folios of said complaint, to the effect that the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company has ever claimed that by reason merely of any claims against Swepson and Littlefield mentioned in said complaint, or either of them, individually and without regard to other facts and circumstances creating equities in favor of said Swepson and Littlefield, or one of them, and of the railroad company last mentioned, the said last mentioned railroad company had any right to take for their own benefit any of the four thousand bonds issued by the State of Florida, as mentioned in the complaint.

And these defendants further say, that neither in the month of April, 1870, nor at any time prior to the entering into the agreement mentioned in said complaint on the 16th day of that month, was the said Swepson or the said Littlefield indicted, as alleged in said complaint, nor was the said last mentioned agreement, or any agreement, procured by the company last mentioned from said Swepson or said Littlefield by or through any threats of criminal prosecutions.

And these defendants further answering, deny each and every allegation contained in that part of said complaint beginning with the words in the 37th folio thereof "And they say that neither," and ending with the words "North Carolina Railroad Company," at the 39th folio thereof, and they also in like manner deny the allegation in the 42d folio of said complaint, that the said Littlefield had no authority to make or execute such an agreement as the one mentioned in said complaint as having been made on or about November 18th, 1870, and said defendants also in like manner deny the allegations, and each and every of them, in the 48th and 49th folios of said complaint, to the effect that S. W.
3018 Hopkins & Company wrote the letter and made the acceptance therein mentioned, without authority from the plaintiffs, and that such acceptance is void as against the plaintiffs and to affect their rights; and they deny any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that the allegations contained in the fourteenth clause or paragraph of said complaint are or that any of them are true.

And the said dafendants deny that the commissioners mentioned in the 58th folio of said complaint are prosecuting the action therein mentioned in any other sense, way or manner than that as agents and officers for said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, and not otherwise. They gave directions that said action should be commenced, and as such agents and officers, and not otherwise, they are doing everything in their power to aid and assist in the prosecution thereof.

And the said defendants further answering, say, upon information and belief, that this action is not brought or prosecuted in good faith by the plaintiffs, but that the same is brought and prosecuted at the special instance and request, or by collusion with and for the benefit of, the defendants Hopkins, Collins and Carpenter, and for the fraudulent purpose of baffling, hindering, delaying and defeating the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railway Company in the prosecution of their action aforesaid against the said defendants Hopkins, Collins and Carpenter.

Wherefore the said defendants demand judgment that said complaint be dismissed, with the costs of the action.

ALGERNON S. SULLIVAN,
Defendants' Attorney.

CITY AND COUNTY OF NEW YORK, ss:

William W. Rollins, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is one of the defendants in the above entitled action and president of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company; that the foregoing answer is true to his own knowledge, except as to the matters therein stated upon information and belief, and as to those matters he believes it to be true. 3019

THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA AND MOBILE Railroad Company
against
NICHOLAS W. WOODFIN, IMPLEADED AS ONE of the commissioners appointed by an act of the legislature of North Carolina with the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, and others.

The answer of Nicholas W. Woodfin, one of the defendants in the above entitled action, impleaded as above mentioned, to the complaint therein of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, the plaintiffs therein.

3020 The said defendant, by Algernon S. Sullivan, protesting against the right of the said plaintiffs to implead him in this action, and reserving all objections to the said complaint for the manifold insufficienc'es thereof, nevertheless for his separate answer thereto, respectfully shows to this court as follows: The said defendant denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that the said plaintiffs were created a corporation by, or under the particular law of, the State of Florida, in that behalf mentioned in the said complaint, or that the said act was amended as therein alleged, although he says he has no reason to suppose that the allegations in that behalf in the said complaint are untrue.

The said defendant also denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that the link in the line of railroads mentioned in said complaint as running and designed to run from Jacksonville westward to Pensacola, and in the 13th folio of said complaint described as the second link, and as extending from Lake City to Quincy, was, together with the railroad from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, known as the Tallahassee Railroad, as alleged in said complaint; but he says that at a time prior to the consolidation mentioned in the 14th folio of said complaint, the said second link, or a part thereof, was known as the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad, and as deponent is informed and believes, was built in whole or in part by a corporate body, whose corporate name was the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company.

The said defendant further denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that the four millions of dollars of the bonds of the State of Florida mentioned in the eighth clause, or paragraph, of said complaint, were placed in the hands of the defendants, Hopkins, Collins and Carpenter, under an agreement such as is described in said eighth clause, or paragraph, and for better or more certain knowledge in that behalf this defendant prays that said agreement be produced.

And this defendant also denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that S. W. Hopkins & Company still have in their hands more than eight hundred of said bonds, upon which no 3021 part of the price has been paid, as alleged in said complaint; and he also denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that any money received, or to be received, for any of said bonds yet in the hands of said S. W. Hopkins & Company is necessary in order to proceed with the construction of the railroad westward from Quincy, or that the plaintiffs, if they are deprived of said bonds, will be greatly embarrassed, or that the construction of said railroad be defeated, or any irreparable injury be produced as alleged in the complaint.

And this defendant further answering, wholly denies the allegations, and every allegation, from the 26th to the 33d folio of said complaint, to the effect that the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company has ever claimed that by reason merely of any claims against Swepson and Littlefield, mentioned in said complaint, or either of them, individually, and without regard to other facts and circumstances, creating equities in favor of said Swepson and Littlefield, or one of them, and of the railroad company last mentioned, the said last-mentioned railroad company had any right to take for their own benefit any of the four thousand bonds issued by the State of Florida, as mentioned in the complaint.

And this defendant further says, that neither in the month of April, 1870, nor at any time prior to the entering into the agreement mentioned in said complaint, on the 16th day of that month, was the said Swepson or the said Littlefield indicted, as alleged in said complaint, nor was the said last-mentioned agreement, or any agreement, procured by the company last mentioned from said Swepson or said Littlefield, by or through any threats of criminal prosecutions.

And this defendant, further answering, denies each and every allegation contained in that part of said complaint beginning with the words in the 7th folio thereof, "and they say that neither," and ending with the words "North Carolina Railroad Company," at the 39th folio thereof; 3022 and he also in like manner denies the allegation in the 42d folio of said complaint that the said Littlefield had no authority to make or execute such an agreement as the one mentioned in said complaint as having been made on or about November 10th, 1870; and said defendant also in like manner denies the allegations, and each and every of them, in the 48th and 49th folios of said complaint, to the effect that S. W. Hopkins & Company wrote the letter and made the acceptance therein mentioned without authority from the plaintiffs, and that such acceptance is void as against the plaintiffs, and to affect their rights, and he denies any knowledge or information sufficient to form a belief that the allegations contained in the thirteenth clause or paragraph of said complaint are, or that any of them are, true.

And the said defendant denies that the commissioners mentioned in the 58th folio of said complaint are prosecuting the action therein mentioned in any other sense, way, or manner that that as agents and officers for said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, and not otherwise; they gave directions that said action should be commenced as such agents and officers, and not otherwise; they are doing everything in their power to aid and assist in the presecution thereof.

And the said defendant, further answering, says, upon information and belief, that this action is not brought or prosecuted in good faith by the plaintiffs, but that the same is brought and prosecuted at the special instance and request of, or by collusion with and for the benefit of, the defendants Hopkins, Collins, and Carpenter, and for the fraudulent purpose of baffling, hindering, delaying, and defeating the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company in the prosecution of their action aforesaid against the said defendants Hopkins, Collins, and Carpenter.

And said defendant protesting that he has no authority to answer herein for or on behalf of said last mentioned railroad company, 3023 or to submit such company, in any way or manner, to the jurisdiction of this court, demands judgment that said complaint be dismissed, as against him, with his costs.

Com'r of Deeds.

On the return of the order to show cause, Sewell & Pierce appeared as attorneys for S. W. Hopkins & Co., defendants, and made no opposition to the motion, and did not answer the complaint.

3024 Deposition of Adolph Engler, a witness produced and sworn and examined the 3d day of May, A. D. 1879, at my office in the post-office building in the city of New York, under and by virtue 3025 of a commission issued out of the circuit court of the United States of America for the fifth circuit and northern district of Florida, in a certain cause therein depending and at issue, wherein J. Fred Schutte, Jan Prins, Adrianus Prins, and others are complainants, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company and others are defendants.

ADOLPH ENGLER, of New York City, aged 54 years of age, occupation, commission merchant, being duly and publicly sworn on the part of the complainants, doth depose and say as follows:

First. To the first interrogatory he saith: My name is Adolph Engler, and I reside at No. 437 West 23 street, in the city of New York.

Second. To the second interrogatory he saith: I have read a copy of the bill of complaint referred to. I never met personally any of the complainants except Mr. Jacobus Wertheim; I know some of the defendants.

3026 Third. To the third interrogatory he saith: The only authority I have ever received from the complainants or any of them in respect to the bonds spoken of, is the paper of which I annex a copy to this answer, marked Exhibit A. E. No. 1, J. A. S., commissioner.

Fourth. To the fourth interrogatory he saith: I do not own any of the bonds spoken of, and never have; and have never had any transfer made to me of such bondholders, except as is contained in the paper spoken of in my last answer.

Fifth. To the fifth interrogatory he saith: I was examined as a witness several months ago by Joseph B. Stewart, in a suit entitled the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company against Geo. F. Drew, governor, and others; I did then testify that I had a large number of the Florida eight per cent. bonds as trustee, 3027 for the purposes named in the papers executed to me by the owners of said bonds, a copy of one of which papers I have made a part of my testimony in this examination. I used the word trustee, meaning that I held the bonds simply as custodian, and in no other way. I have never considered that I had power to institute any suits or direct the litigation in respect to said bonds as Messrs. Jacobus Wertheim and Charles D. Willard are the sole solicitors and attorneys for the owners of the bonds which I held, and I have always recognized the right upon the part of Wertheim and Willard to control all litigation in respect to the bonds, and the bonds in my possession have been and are subject to their direction in any suit instituted by them in respect to the same.

Sixth. To the sixth interrogatory he saith: I am a native of Germany, and my profession or business is commission merchant. I 3028 am not acquainted with the technical law terms or phrases such as are used in the jurisprudence of the United States.

Seventh. To the seventh interrogatory he saith: I have in my possession about 2,950 of the bonds named in the bill of complaint; they are owned by about two or three hundred different people in Holland, and they were sent to me simply to hold as custodian, subject to the directions of the solicitors of said bondholders, Jacobus Wertheim and Charles D. Willard, who are conducting the present litigation. I hold the bonds for no other purpose and in no other way, and do not own a single bond, and never have. They were first delivered to me for the purposes of the execution of the memorandum plan of agreement between the holders of the complainants' bonds and the holders of 3029 the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad bonds, as set out in the paper annexed to this answer, and marked Exhibit A. E. No. 1, since which time the present suit was commenced by the Dutch bondholders, and I am instructed to follow the directions of Wertheim and Willard in the use of the bonds in such suit.

To the eighth interrogatory he saith: The memorandum plan refers to the Florida eight per cent. bonds, and the bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad, and also refers to the fact that the Florida eight per cent. bonds shall be sent forward to some person in America, as custodian, for the purpose of such plan, which was done by sending the same to me. If for any cause the plan fails of execution in this suit, the bonds will either be returned to the owners, or such disposition made of them as the court directs, and my control or au-3030 thority of them will be at an end, because I do not own any of them.

Ninth. To the ninth interrogatory he saith: I first heard of the institution of this suit through Mr. C. D. Willard, about the time it was commenced in May, 1877, through Mr. Willard, who has from the first directed the entire litigation for the bondholders. I have in no way, or at any time, had anything to do with conducting the suit, and have never and do not now claim to be a party to the litigation, and could not be one of the complainants in this suit, for I own no bonds.

Tenth. To the tenth interrogatory he saith: I can state nothing further.

3031 To the cross-interrogatories propounded by Jos. B. Stewart, esq., solicitor for the defendant The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, the witness answering says:

First. To the first cross-interrogatory he saith: If I sent any authority at all to Colonel Carter it was a copy of such authority as is referred to in the answer to the third direct question, and was sent at the request of Mr. Willard. I did not send any letters or telegrams at the time referred to to the governor of Florida. The general terms of the letters and telegrams sent to Colonel Carter were suggested by Mr. Willard, who was at the time in Jacksonville, Florida.

Second. To the second cross-interrogatory he saith: I expect to be compensated for my trouble either from the owners of the Florida 3032 eight per cent. bonds or through their attornies, Wertheim and Willard. The fees, expenses, and charges of this prosecution of the suit I have never had anything to do with, as it is a matter entirely and directly between the bondholders themselves and their attornies. I have never had authority from the bondholders to incur any expenses for them. The authority for the prosecution of the litigation is direct from the bondholders to Messrs. Wertheim & Willard as their attorneys and solicitors. I have never had any authority to institute any suits or to become a party to any litigation. I do not know what agreements exist between the bondholders and their attorneys. I do not know that Mr. Willard is bound in any way to pay any of the expenses or costs of the litigation. I have no letters from any of the Dutch bondholders as to the management of this suit. The letters from Mr. Willard are of a private character only. I think I only 3033 have received one or two from General Davis, and cannot just now lay my hands on it. I have already annexed a copy of the paper to me from the bondholders in answer to my direct examination, which is the only authority I have.

Third. To the third cross-interogatory he saith: I was examined as a witness in the suits named by Joseph B. Stewart, and what I then stated was true. I did notify Mr. Willard I was subpœnaed. I do not remember what he advised. I appeared and gave my testimony. Service was made on me, as stated, wherein I was styled trustee, but I have been advised by Mr. Willard to whom I sent the subpœna to pay no attention to it, as I was not a trustee for the bondholders in the legal sense intended and could not be a party, and I was advised by Mr. Willard to make no appearance in the said suits. Mr. Willard has the 3034 subpœna I suppose, as I have sent it to him. I have been spoken to by Mr. Willard as to the testimony I gave in the case named, and he seemed to think it all perfectly proper and in accordance with the facts and state of the case, except that I did not put a proper legal construction upon the word trustee when I referred to my duties. I have not been advised by Mr. Willard or any other counsel what reply to make to the fifth direct interrogatory, and I have not seen or been supplied with a copy of either of the direct or cross interrogatories until read to me now by Commissioner Shields.

Fourth. To the fourth cross-interrogatory he saith: I am well acquainted with the English language, and read, write, and speak it perfectly. I simply use the word trustee in the deposition as meaning that I was merely the custodian to hold the bonds subject to the exe-3035 cution of the memorandum plan or the order of the court made in this case. I did read over my testimony carefully before signing it.

Fifth. To the fifth cross-interrogatory he saith: I do hold a large number of the bonds involved in this suit, and they are the same bonds I testified about in the former examination. I hold the same now, and by the same authority and for the same purposes, for the complainants in this suit. I append a copy of authority to me from J. Fred. Schutte as part of my answer to this question, and the same is marked Exhibit A. E., No. II, J. A. S., commissioner. By said authority I am to receive bonds in exchange in the name of and from the Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad after decree and sale of the railroad property as set out in this suit. I am authorized to deliver the bonds under instructions from Messrs. Wertheim & Willard, for the purposes in this suit, as 3036 named in the bill of complaint, as is set out in the authority from the bondholders to Messrs. Westhein & Willard, their attorneys, which authority I am advised is on file in this suit.

AD. ENGLER.

Examination taken, reduced to writing, and by the witness subscribed and sworn to this 3rd day of May, A. D. 1879, before

JOHN A. SHIELDS,
Commissioner.

Sherwin, agent of the owners and holders of the bonds of the said State of Florida, issued in aid of said railroad*s* companies, on the first part, and the owners and holders of the first mortgage bonds of the Pensacola en Georgia en Tallahassee Railroad Company of said State, issued under the provisions of the 3038 act of January 6th, 1855, generally known as the internal improvement act, represented by Henry R. Jackson, of Savannah, in the State of Georgia, and Charles H. Simonton, of Charleston, in the State of South Carolina, of the second part.

That do hereby appoint lawful trustee Adolph Engler, partner of the firm of Kremelberg & Co., handing to him herewith as trustee said, as above numbered, bonds, with the power to deliver and to exchange the so in trust given bonds as aforesaid, with all the coupons attached, to a company to be formed under the general incorporation laws of the State under style of the the name "Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company," for the purpose of purchasing the present lines of constructed and completed railways extending from Lake City to Chattahoochee and from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, known as the Jacksonville, 3039 Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and the road extending from Jacksonville to Lake City known as the "Florida Central Railroad," together with all their depots, rolling-stock, machine-shops, and all their other saleable property, and such in the proportion of 33⅓ per c't. in bonds and 16⅔ per. c't. in shares lawfully and legally issued by the said new company to be formed as aforesaid, i. e., for each old bond of $1,000, with coupons attached, $333⅓ in bonds and $166⅔ shares, all however under the following terms and conditions:

1°. That the said bonds shall be part of a first mortgage bond, of a maximum not exceeding $12,000 per mile, redeemable in 40 years by lot bearing 5% c't. interest per annum in gold, bonds and interest at maturity payable in Amsterdam and New York, at the rate of $2.50 Dutch currency per dollar, first coupon for interest to be paid on the 1st July, 1878.

2°. That no expenses whatsoever already incurred or to be made 3040 for the reorganization as per the memorandum plan aforesaid shall be at the charge of the bonds or of the bondholders.

3°. That the exchange and delivery of the old bonds against the bonds and shares of the new company must be completed before or on the 1st of December, 1877.

That on or before the 1st of June, 1877, the directors of the new company to be formed, Mess. Robert Walker, Hubbard L. Hart, John Clark, C. H. Allen, and Robert P. Dodge, shall depose with my said trustee an authentic act, containing that they accept to execute the said memorandum plan, and that the necessary funds for the purpose of placing the said lines of the new railroad company in first-class order, and to repair as to road bed, rolling-stock, and otherwise, is secured.

In witness whereof have signed this day of A. D. 1800 seventy-seven, at Amsterdam.

J. F. SCHUTTE & AL.
v.
W. DIV., &c.
} No. 3.

Gen. Davis moves to dismiss bill as to West. Div. W. N. Car. R. R., as to the directors of the J., P. & M. R. R. Co. & of Central R. R. Co., and as to Littlefield & Washington.

Stewart objects, at this late stage—unfair after their defence is developed, & they are all ready for argument.

Carpenter replies: (Held over.)

Stewart moves to suppress certain testimony; also moves to examine a witness under rule 67.

Affidavit of J. B. Stewart that Jacobus Wertheim, who is now present, & could not have been examined before, &c.

MAY 20, 1879.

Ordered bill dismissed as applied for, without prejudice as to any evidence that may have been taken in the cause affecting the rights of the parties still remaining parties in the cause.

3055 Stewart now applies for leave to amend his bill, in cases No. 1 & No. 2.

Adjourned to Wednesday, May 21st, 1879, at 12 noon, to see amendment proposed.

After hearing application for attachment against Dr. Wertheim for not attending according to subpœna. Application refused because no tender of mileage.

Adjourned to May 21st, 12 m.

Judge Settle held separate court to try case of U. S. v. Hull & Gauldin.

12 m. court met and a discussion ensued as to the status of the causes.

Mr. Stewart offers to amend his bills, presents the proposed amendments.

Carpenter speaks adversely.

Stewart replies.

Withdraws amendment to bill vs. Fla. Central, No. 1.

Court refused leave to amend as proposed; suggested striking out evidence & argument.

Recess to 4 p. m.

Stewart reads his proposed amendment as modified.

3056 Ordered that amendment as proposed and read to the court be made to the bill upon terms. Def'ts need not answer under oath. No further evidence unless def'ts elect.

Carpenter applies to strike out Schutte, Prins & als. from record in Nos. 1 & 2, because not served with process according to law. Refers to Rev. Stat. § 738.

Stewart replies. The Dutch bondholders were here apply'g to the governor to sell the road. They contested our application for injunction. Mr. Engler, their trustee, is here.

Decided Schutte & Co. must appear to N. Carolina bills for reasons expressed in order.

Mo. to suppress depositions made and argued.

Davis in opposition.

Walker in favor.

Depositions overruled on the ground that the answers were prepared in writing.

Carpenter moves to suppress the depositions taken in New 3057 York, because not taken by a commissioner properly authorized; the objection being that the oral examination pointed out in rule 67 must be taken by an examiner appointed by the court; but within the jurisdiction of the court.

Stewart contends that the rule authorizes the appointment of an examiner outside of the circuit.

Davis refers to sect. 868, Rev. Stat.

Motion is denied. I think the rule intended to authorize the court to appoint an examiner as well outside as within the jurisdiction of the court so as to dispense with the necessity of a commission, and have an open examination.

MAY 23d, 1879.

Carpenter presents answers in Nos. 1 & 2; ordered to be filed. The answer is filed by all the bondholders in the Schutte bill. Carpenter, also, presents & files a suggestion of an act of legis. of No. Car., passed Feb'y, 1879, repealing the charter of the Western Division of W. N. Car.
R. R. Co., and declaring said co. extinct, and moves the cases of 3058 the co. be declared abated. The act transfers to W. N. Car. R.
R. Co., all the property and rights of action of the extinguished co. with power to conduct all suits in No. Car., or elsewhere.

Also refers to constitution of No. Car. adopted in 1868, declaring that all general laws & special acts forming corporations may be altered or repealed; art. 8, sec. 1.

The charter of West. Div. W. N. C. R. Co. was created by special act in August, 1868, under this constitution.

Moves that the causes of said company be declared abated.

Court intimates that the causes are abated, but gives the complainants time until to-morrow morning to elect whether they will abide by the motion or file a bill of revivor.

Stewart says that they will not risk the abatement, but will seek authority from W. North Car. R. Co. to file a bill of revivor, and asks the time allowed.

McLeod, of N. Car., states he is a director of W. Division, and that said co. is not prepared to accept the act of extinction. Matter stands over.

3059 Stewart refers to code of N. Car. of 1854, p. 134, §§ 5, 6; allowing a company whose charter is repealed 3 years to wind up its affairs.

Carpenter refers to act of No. Car., 1870, also repealing same charter. Matter stands over. (Acts of 1869-70, p. 84.)

(N. B.—Original charter of Western N. Car. R. R. Co., passed Feb'y 15, 1855. Private laws N. C., 1854-5, p. 257.)

Carpenter files answers to the bills of revivor and confessing same.

Orders made reviving suits Nos. 1 & 2 in name of Western North Carolina Railroad Company, complainant, dated May 26, 1879.

Gen. Jackson presents an agreed statement of facts raising a question between the holders of Pa. & Ga. R. R. Co. & the Dutch bondholders. Jackson explains the matter. Some of the Pa. & Ga. holders might stand out. The trustees contested them.

Agreement of Jan. 29, 1879. 1 Dutch, 2 trustees, 3 P. & G. bondholders. 1 agree to prosecute against the Cos. & N. Car. R. Co., & to sell the road—all holders of P. & G. bonds to be allowed to come in.

3063 Rainey states that the trustees take their position because a minority of the Pa. & Ga. holders do not enter into the Mem. plan and insist upon their full priority of lien.

Carpenter presents a list of the State bonds held by pl'ffs in No. 3—2,946 in all, viz: (below 3,000) 2,749; (above 3,000) 197—2,946. (See N. Y. testimony, No. .)

MAY 31.

Court, Bradley, J., delivered opinion.

(Indorsed:) Supreme Court U. S. 1879, Octo. term. Nos. 1022, 1023, & 1024. The Florida Central R. R. Co. & al., appellants, vs. J. Fred. Schutte & al. Copy of minutes of Justice Bradley at hearing in circuit court to be inserted in record. Filed 12 April, 1880.

3066 Supreme Court of the United States.

THE FLORIDA CENTRAL R. R. CO., APPELLANT,
vs.
J. FRED. SCHUTTE ET AL.,

THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA AND MOBILE R. R. Co., appellant,
vs.
J. FRED. SCHUTTE ET AL.

THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA R. R. CO. et al., appellant,
vs.
GEORGE F. DREW, GOV'ER, &C., ET AL.

The motion of Mr. Baker, of counsel for the appellants, to eliminate certain papers from the supplemental record in these cases was argued by him in support of the same; Mr. Willard appearing for the appellees. On consideration whereof it is ordered that in printing the record in the above cases the following matters be omitted; but the same to be printed in full or in part by the parties, respectively, as they may be advised; that is to say, all acts and parts of acts of the legistatures of Florida and North Carolina, and the constitution of the latter 3067 State, all and any copies of cases or opinions of the supreme court of Florida, taken from the published reports of said State.

And it being suggested by counsel at the bar that the record as returned contains many redundant matters that can have no bearing on the determination of the causes, it is further ordered that any other matters which the counsel for the appellants and appellees may mutually stipulate may be omitted.

It is further ordered at the request of the counsel of the parties respectively, that the minutes of Mr. Justice Bradley, taken at the hearing of said causes, showing the evidence offered at the hearing and the proceedings had before him, be printed as part of the record.

12th April, 1880.

Committee.

All of which was adopted, and the terms therein proposed agreed to unanimously.

On motion of Gen'l Littlefield, the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

Whereas, by the fourteenth section of an act entitled "An act to perfect the public works of this State," it was made lawful for this company to consolidate with the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company by a vote of the owners of a majority of its stock in interest, so as to become one corporation under the name of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, on such terms as may be agreed on:

Be it therefore resolved, That the Tallahassee Railroad Company be, and the same is hereby, consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pen-3611 sacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and merged in said company under the corporate name of said company, and that the Tallahassee Railroad shall hereafter be merged in said Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad upon the terms agreed on by the parties in interest.

Resolved, further, That as a condition to the consolidation aforesaid, the said Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company shall assume all debts and obligations created by this company since its organization, and especially that it shall assume the redemption of the transportation tickets issued by the said Tallahassee Railroad Company.

On motion, a committee, consisting of Messrs. Papy, Huling, and Hawkins, was appointed by the chair to notify the stockholders of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company of the action of this company, agreeing to the terms of consolidation reported by the committee aforesaid, and of the adoption by this meeting of the preamble and resolutions aforesaid, and that they furnish a copy of said preamble & resolutions to the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company.

3612 On motion, the meeting took a recess of one hour.

At the expiration of the hour the chair called the meeting to order.

A committee on the part of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, appointed before the meeting and by D. P. Holland, their chairman, stated that "We have been appointed a committee on behalf of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile R. R'd Co., and of the stockholders thereof, to notify the stockholders of the Tallahassee Railroad Company that the stockholders of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company accept the terms of consolidation reported by the committee to confer upon that subject, and have adopted a preamble and resolutions of consolidation, a copy of which we are instructed to furnish to this meeting."

The copy of the preamble and resolutions so presented by said committee are ordered to be recorded in these minutes, and is as follows:

to Jacksonville, from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, &c., by a vote of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest, and with the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company to consolidate with the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, so as to become one corporation, under its name, on such terms as may be agreed upon; and whereas the Tallahassee Railroad Company have agreed to consolidate with this company, by virtue of the provisions of said section:

Be it therefore resolved, That the consent of the owners of the stock in this company is hereby given to such consolidation, and that the said Tallahassee Railroad Company be, and the same is hereby, consolidated with this company, and that hereafter the said Tallahassee Railroad Company shall be merged in the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company.

Resolved, further, That upon such consolidation the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company will assume all debts and 3614 obligations created by said Tallahassee Railroad Company since its organization, including the redemption of the transportation tickets issued by said company.

Whereupon Mr. Papy offered the following preamble & resolutions:

Whereas a committee from the stockholders of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad having reported to this meeting the resolutions adopted by said stockholders, agreeing to the terms of consolidation, and giving their assent thereto according to the terms of the law,

Be it now resolved, that the president and directors of this company are directed to transfer and deliver to said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company the Tallahassee Railroad, together with the engines, cars, stock, material, and property of ever kind, which shall thereafter vest in the said Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company.

Resolved further, that as by the terms of consolidation agreed on the owners of the stock in this company are to become, and by adopting said terms do become, stockholders in said Jacksonville, Pensa-3615 cola & Mobile Railroad Company, when this meeting adjourns the stockholders interested in said consolidated stock will unite in a meeting of the stockholders of the Jacksonville, Pen. & Mobile Railroad Company for the purpose of a new organization of said company.

Adjourned.

3619 A committee appointed by the Tallahassee Railroad Company appeared before this meeting and by M. D. Papy, their chairman, stated as follows:

REPORT.

We have been appointed a committee of the stockholders of the Tallahassee R. Rd. Co. to notify the stockholders of the Jacksonville, Pen. and Mobile R. Rd. Co. that the stockholders of that company have unanimously agreed to the terms of consolidation proposed by the committee before that time appointed to consult with the committee appointed by this company, and that they have resolved according to the terms of the fourteenth section of the act entitled "An act to perfect the public works of the State," to consolidate with this company upon those terms, and upon the condition that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall assume all debts incurred by that company since its organization, and especially the transportation tickets issued by that company, and I submit to this meeting a copy of the resolutions adopted by that company, as follows:

(Copy.)

3620 Whereas, by the fourteenth section of an act entitled "An act to perfect the public works of this State," it was made lawful for this company, to consolidate with the Jacksonville, Pen. & Mobile Railroad Company, by a vote of the owners of a majority of its stock in interest, so as to become one corporation under the name of the said Jacksonville, Pen. & Mobile Railroad Company on such terms as may be agreed on;

Be it therefore resolved, that the Tallahassee Railroad Company be and the same is hereby consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and merged in said company under the corporate name of said company, and that the Tallahassee Railroad shall hereafter be merged in the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad upon the terms agreed on by the parties in interest.

Resolved further, that as a condition to the consolidation aforesaid, the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall assume all debts and obligations created by the company since its organization, and especially that it shall assume the redemption of 3621 the transportation tickets issued by this said Tallahassee Railroad Company.

Whereupon Gen'l Littlefield offered the following:

Whereas, by the fourteenth section of an act entitled "An act to perfect the public works of this State," it was made lawful for the several companies owning the roads or parts of roads from Quincy to Jacksonville, from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, &c., by a vote of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest and with the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, to consolidate with the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company so as to become one corporation under its name on such terms as may be agreed upon; and whereas the Tallahassee Railroad Company have agreed to consolidate with this company by virtue of the provisions of said section;

Be it therefore resolved, that the consent of the owners of the 3622 stock in this company is hereby given to such consolidation and that the said Tallahassee Railroad Company be, and the same is hereby consolidated with this company, and that hereafter the said Tallahassee Railroad shall be merged in the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad.

Resolved further, That upon such consolidation the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company will assume all debts and obligations created by the said Tallahassee Railroad Company since its organization, including the redemption of the transportation tickets by said company.

All of which was unanimously adopted and agreed to.

On motion, a committee consisting of Messrs. Holland, Purman, and Wentworth were appointed to report to the stockholders of the Tallahassee Railroad Company the acceptance of the terms of consolidation, and that the directors be authorized to receive from the Tallahassee 3623 Railroad Company the Tallahassee Railroad, with all its engines,

Mr. Houstoun offered the following resolution:

Resolved, That Edward Houstoun is authorized to place the bonds referred to in the preamble and resolutions of the stockholders adopted June 20th, 1870, in the hands of S. W. Hopkins & Co. for the purpose mentioned in said resolutions, subject to the same exceptions as thereon expressed with respect to the proportion thereof applicable to the stock owned by other parties and according to the same terms therein mentioned. Which was adopted.

3625 TALLAHASSEE, May 25*th*, 1870.

The directors elected this day at a meeting of the stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad Company convened this day and were present, J. P. Sanderson, M. S. Littlefield, M. D. Papy, A. Huling, and J. M. Baker.

Mr. Papy was called to the chair and F. H. Flagg acted as secretary.

On motion, a ballot for president was taken, and Col. J. P. Sanderson was duly elected president of this company and assumed the chair.

On motion, the by-laws of the Tallahassee Railroad Company relating to a vice-president was adopted by this board.

On motion, a ballot was taken for vice-president, and it was found that Alonzo Huling, esq., was duly elected vice-president of this company.

3626 Gen'l Littlefield stated that Mr. Swepson, late president, had appointed H. H. Thompson, esq., as secretary and treasurer of this company for the past year, and moved that the action of the late president in this respect be approved and confirmed; which was agreed to.

On motion, a ballot was taken for secretary and treasurer for the ensuing year, and resulted in the election of F. H. Flagg as secretary and treasurer of this company.

On motion, Mr. Jas. Anderson was retained as superintendent of the road.

Gen'l Littlefield offered the following preamble and resolution:

3627 Whereas, by the extension of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad to the Chattahoochee River, the business of this road will be largely increased; and whereas also several large steam saw-mills are about being erected on the line of the road, which will demand a corresponding increase in the facilities of the company to enable it to do the business:

Resolved, That it has become an imperative necessity upon this company to complete the improvements at Jacksonville, heretofore contemplated, and the president is hereby authorized to proceed at once to have said improvements completed according to the plans and specifications furnished by the engineer, and for that purpose he is authorized to use any funds of the company to an amount not exceeding the sum of one hundred thousand dollars.

All of which was adopted and agreed to.

3628 On motion, the president and superintendent of this road be authorized to confer with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company as to the terms of the joint running of the two roads and to arrange the same with that company.

Adjourned subject to the call of the president.

F. H. FLAGG,
Secretary.

TALLAHASSEE, June 2, 1870.

The stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad Company convened this day, pursuant to a call of the chairman of the last meeting.

M. S. Littlefield offered the following resolution:

3629 Resolved, That bonds to the extent of sixteen thousand dollars per mile be issued by this company, which bonds shall be a first lien or mortgage on the Florida Central Railroad, its equipments, franchise, road-bed, work-shops, and depots, excepting, however, the town lots in the city of Jacksonville not used for depot purposes.

And whereas the late president, George W. Swepson, caused to be prepared bonds to be issued by this company preparatory to an order of the board of directors to that effect, and which bonds were signed by said Swepson as president of this company and countersigned by H. H. Thompson, treasurer:

Be it therefore resolved, That the said bonds so signed by said Swepson and countersigned by said Thompson, to the extent of sixteen thousand dollars a mile, be and they are hereby adopted as the bonds to be issued under the foregoing resolution, and that such bonds when 3630 so issued shall be a first lien or mortgage on the said Florida Central Railroad, its equipment, franchise, road-bed, work-shops, and depots (excepting the lots in Jacksonville not used for depot purposes).

Be it further resolved that said bonds shall be placed in the hands of Edward Houstoun for the purposes agreed upon by an arrang'ment between himself and Milton S. Littlefield, who is the owner of nearly all the stock in this company, which bond' or their proceeds are to be held and applied according to the terms of said arrangement, except the proportion thereof applicable or apportionable to the stock owned by other parties and upon the satisfaction otherwise of the terms of said arrangement with said Houstoun, the said bonds are to be by him transferred to Milton S. Littlefield, or according to his direction, to the extent of the stock owned by him at the time.

Resolved further, That the directors be directed to carry the foregoing resolutions into effect.

All of which were unanimously adopted.

3635 WASHINGTON CITY,
District of Columbia:

This agreement, executed on this the 16th day of April, 1870, between N. W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. W. Rollins, commissioners appointed by an act of the legislature of North Carolina, entitled "An act to provide for the completion of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad" and "ratified March 24, 1870," which said act has been approved by the stockholders of the said corporation and the said commissioners now representing the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad, of the first part, and George W. Swepson, (formerly president of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company) of the second part, witnesseth:

That whereas a deed of agreement of this date has been made between George W. Swepson, as president of the Florida Central Railroad, and Milton S. Littlefield, in his own right, as president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad, and as majority stockholder in all of these three railroad companies, of the first part, and the aforesaid com-3636 missioners of the second part, which agreement has been signed in triplicate; and whereas by said agreement an interest in said railroads, amounting to the sum of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents has been transferred and conveyed to the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company;

And whereas the said George W. Swepson, through his brother, Robert R. Swepson, has this day paid to the said commissioners the sum of fifty thousand dollars, cash;

And whereas the said George W. Swepson has this day executed and delivered to the said commissioners his obligation, in the form of a draft, accepted by M. S. Littlefield, as president of the J., P. & M. Railroad Co., and endorsed by M. S. Littlefield and George W. Swepson, as president of the Florida Central Railroad Company, for the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, payable four months after date;

And whereas the said George W. Swepson has this day executed and delivered to the said commissioners his other obligations, in the 3637 form of a draft, accepted by M. S. Littlefield, as president of the J., P. and Mobile Railroad Co., and endorsed by M. S. Littlefield and George W. Swepson, as president of the Florida Central Railroad Company, for the sum of one hundred and sixty-four thousand dollars, payable twelve months after date, with interest on both of said premises at the rate of six per cent.

And whereas, as a security for the payment of the last aforesaid obligations of one hundred and sixty-four thousand dollars, the said George W. Swepson has agreed to execute a mortgage deed or deed in trust, with full relinquishment of all rights of dower upon the following lands, viz: the marble and lime lands at Catawba County, North Carolina, owned in copartnership with Dr. A. M. Powell, his interest being one-half; an undivided half of the Eagle Hotel, in Ashville, North Carolina; the Dr. Woodfin place, in Moore County, about three hundred acres; the Jarret place, on Nautahala River, about four hundred acres in Cherokee; the Gid Morris plantation, about sixteen hundred acres; the Charles Moore place, about six hundred acres; the David Hennessee place, 3638 about acres; the Sharp place, about three hundred acres; one-half interest in fifteen trails' length Horshaw, of Burke County, all on Valley River; one half interest in about twenty thousand acres in copartnership with M. Fair, also in Cherokee County; all of his interest in about sixty-two thousand acres in Macon County (this land has been paid for, but the grants are not yet received); about ninety thousand acres of land in Macon, Cherokee, and Clay, known as the Olmstead's; a lot of about fifty thousand acres, held by Joseph Keener in trust for George W. Swepson.

And whereas the said George W. Swepson has agreed that the said mortgage or deed in trust, with relinquishment as aforesaid, shall be executed within the next thirty days;

And whereas R. R. Swepson and R. Y. McAden have agreed that they will guarantee that the said lands so to be mortgaged shall be relieved and discharged from all liens by reason of any judgments against George W. Swepson;

And whereas it is expressly understood that the said notes of one hundred thousand dollars and one hundred and sixty-four thou-3639 sand dollars may be paid in railroad iron, delivered at Portsmouth, Virginia, and if so paid before their maturity the unaccrued interest shall not be charged.

And whereas the said Robert R. Swepson has this day advanced the sum of fifty thousand dollars to aid in this settlement, and whereas it is understood that the directory of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company will resolve that all stock on which 5 per cent. has not been paid shall be forfeited to the company and the stockholders released therefrom, the said commissioners hereby, so far as they have any authority or interest therein, express their consent thereto.

And whereas it is further understood that upon the payment upon the said note of $164,000 of the sum of five thousand dollars, the Eagle Hotel may be discharged of the trust; upon the payment of twelve thousand dollars, the Gid Morris place may be discharged; upon the payment of seven thousand five hundred dollars, the Hennessee lands may be discharged; upon the payment of six thousand five hun-3640 dred dollars, the Charles Moore place may be discharged; upon the payment of three thousand dollars, the Sharp place may be discharged; upon the payment of two thousand dollars, the Woodfin place may be discharged; upon the payment of five thousand dollars, the Jarret place, on Nautahala River; upon the payment of five thousand five hundred dollars, the Horshaw lands; and upon the payment of five thousand dollars, the Fair lands may be discharged.

Now, therefore, considering the premises, and in consideration of the said interest and security, amounting to the sum of $1,287,436.03, transferred by said agreement of George W. Swepson and M. S. Littlefield as aforesaid, special reference being here made to said agreement, and in consideration of the further sum of fifty thousand dollars, this day paid in cash, as aforesaid; further, in consideration of the two obligations of $100,000 and $164,000, each respectively, in consideration of the disbursements heretofore made by the said George W. Swepson for and on account of the said railroad company, the said commissioners, in their capacity as commissioners, by authority of the said act of the legislature of North Carolina and its approval by the stockholders, agree and promise to execute 3641 and deliver to the said George W. Swepson a full and final release and discharge and receipt of all claims, demands, and accounts of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company against the said George W. Swepson, of any character whatever, when the said Swepson shall have executed the said mortgage or deed in trust with relinquishment of dower, as aforesaid, and the said Robert R. Swepson and the said R. Y. McAden shall have given a satisfactory guarantee that the said lands shall be discharged of any and all judgments as aforesaid, and when the sum of $880,000 of the amount of $1,287,436.03, transferred in Florida railroads shall have been paid or made fully secure; provided, nevertheless, that it shall be determined by N. W. Woodfin and M. W. Ransom, and in case they cannot agree they are to call in an umpire, that George W. Swepson was not authorized to make such investments in Florida by his board of directors of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company. But it shall not be determined by the said referees, or the said referees and umpire, that George W. Swepson was 3642 authorized to make such investments, or that the said directors recognized and approved the investment, then there shall be no obligation on Mr. G. W. Swepson to guarantee the payment of the said sum of $880,000, but the compliance with the other obligations shall be his receipt and discharge.

It is further understood that the said mortgage or deed in trust will be executed and delivered within ninety days from the date of these presents, unless there should be cause sufficient and satisfactory to the said commissioners to postpone the same at their discretion. But it is expressly understood that the said commissioners do not approve of the payment by Soutter & Co. of the expenses to attorneys, etc., in the university case, but that they protest against the same, and that nothing in this agreement shall be construed to prevent the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company from recovering the same or any part thereof from those receiving the same.

In witness whereof the parties of the first and second parts have hereunto set their hands.

3642½ (Indorsed:) Copy of agreement & settlement bet. Fla. Cent. R. R. Co. and J., P. & M. R. R. Co. & Littlefield with W. D. W. N. C. R. R. Co., & approved by lat'er comp. April 16, 1870.

3643 THE STATE OF FLORIDA & HARRISON Reed, governor of the State of Florida; Horatio Bisbee, jr., attorney-general of the State of Florida; Rob't H. Gamble, comptroller of the State of Florida; John S. Adams, commissioner of lands and immigration of the State of Florida, trustees of the internal improvement fund of said State, plaintiffs,

THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA AND MOBILE Railroad Company, Milton S. Littlefield, Calvin Littlefield, Franklin Dibble, John L. Requa, Alonzo Huling, Edward M. Cheeny, Mariano D. Papy, Converse L. Chase, Francis H. Flagg, Aaron Barnett, George W. Swepson, and the Florida Central Railroad Company, defendants.

The defendant the Florida Central Railroad Company, answering the amended complaint herein, says:

1st. That under an act of the legislature of the legislature of the State of Florida, entitled "An act to incorporate the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company, and for other purposes," approved Jan'y 24th, 1851, and an act amendatory thereto approved January 7th, 1853, the said "Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company" was incorporated, and by that name the stockholders and mem-3644 bers of said company, their successors and assigns, were authorized and impowered to construct and operate a railroad from some tributary on the Atlantic Ocean, within the limits of said State, having a sufficient outlet to the ocean to admit of the passage of sea steamers then running through said State, in the most eligible direction to some point, bay or arm or tributary of the Gulf of Mexico, west of the Apalachicola River, in West Florida, having a sufficient outlet for sea steamers, as in and by the said act and amended act, reference being thereunto had, will appear.

2. That, under the powers, rights, and privileges conferred by said acts, and in accordance with the provisions thereof, the said company constructed a railroad from the city of Jacksonville to the town of Lake City, in said State, and surrendered their right to build any portion of their line west of Lake City.

3. That, in accordance with the authority of an act of the legislature of said State, entitled "An act to provide for and encourage a liberal system of internal improvements of this State," approved January 6th, 1855, and generally known and designated as the "internal im- 3645 provement law," the said Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company, for the purpose of constructing its road, as authorized by its charter, issued coupon bonds amounting, in the aggregate, as the defendant is informed and believes, to the sum of five hundred and fifty-five thousand dollars.

4th. That under said internal improvement law, and by virtue of the contract therein expressed, the bonds issued thereunder became and constituted a first lien or mortgage on the road-bed iron, equipments, workshops, depots, and franchise of any railroad company, *ex*cepting the provisions of said law, and it was in the said law provided that any company *ex*cepting the provisions of said law, and failing to provide the interest as therein provided, on the bonds issued by said company, and the sum of one per cent. per annum as a sinking fund as therein provided, that after the expiration of thirty days from such default or refusal, that it should be the duty of the trustees of the internal improvement fund to take possession of said railroad and all its property of every kind and advertise the same for sale at public auction to the highest bidder, either for cash or additional ap- 3646 proved security, as they might think most advantageous to the interest of the internal improvement fund and the bondholders, the proceeds arising from said sale to be applied by said trustees to the purchaser, and cancelling of the outstanding bonds issued by said defaulting company, and said sale to be made upon the condition that the purchaser should be bound to continue the payment of one-half per cent. semi-annually to the sinking fund until all the outstanding bonds were discharged, under the penalty of an annullment of the contract of sale and a forfeiture of the purchase money paid in, as in and by the said internal improvement law, reference thereunto being had, will appear.

5. That the said Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company having accepted the provisions of said law, and having failed to comply with the requirements thereof, the said trustees took possession of the said Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad, then and for several years previous thereto a fully completed and finished road from Jacksonville to Lake City, and sold the same, together with 3647 all its property of every kind, as authorized by said law, at public auction, for cash, on the 4 day of March, 1868, at which said sale Wm. E. Jackson and associates became the purchasers thereof, for the sum of one hundred and eleven thousand dollars, being a pro ratta of twenty per cent. on the whole amount of bonds issued by said company under said law.

6. That immediately after said sale said purchase money was paid, and a deed to said road and its property, in accordance with the terms of sale, executed and delivered by the said trustees to the said William E. Jackson and associates.

7. That by virtue of an act of the legislature of said State, entitled "An act for the relief of William E. Jackson, Edward Thomas, Wm. Sheor, John Craig, James B. Walker, and their associates, now owning and operating the railroad from Jacksonville to Lake City," approved July 29, 1868, the said Wm. E. Jackson and his associates were vested with the powers and franchises granted the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company in and by an act entitled "An act to 3648 amend an act to incorporate the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company," approved January 7th, 1853, and the said William E. Jackson and associates, they and their successors and assigns, authorized and empowered to exercise the said powers and franchises so far as they appertained to the said railroad, constructed from the city of Jacksonville, in Duval County, to Lake City, in Columbia County, in this State; and the said William E. Jackson and associates made and created a body politic and corporate, under the name of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and by that name they and their successors declared capable to enjoy and hold the said railroad from Jacksonville to Lake City, and all the benefits thereof, subject only to the condition annexed to the sale thereof by the trustees of the internal improvement fund, and as a body politic and corporate entitled as aforesaid to exercise all the powers and franchises granted in said above referred to act of the said Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company, and various other powers and rights not 3649 necessary to be here enumerated as in and by the said act, reference being thereunto had, will more fully and at large appear.

8. That under and in pursuance of the grants, powers, and privileges conferred in and by the said act of incorporation, this defendant, the Florida Central Railroad Company, on or about the 13 day of August, 1868, having accepted the provisions of said act, organized said company by the election of directors and the election of a president and other officers, and by the taking of all other legal, needful and proper steps to perfect its organization according to law, and that from that time to the present time this defendant, The Florida Central Railroad Company, has been at all times duly and legally organized as a separate and independent corporation, with its own board of directors, president, and other needful and proper officers and agents, and that the minutes of the meetings of the stockholders and directors of this defendant show this to be the fact.

9. This defendant denies in most positive terms that this defendant was, at any time, consolidated with, or became a part of, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; and this defend-3650 ant avers that, under the laws of this State, no such consolidation could have taken place except by a vote of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest of this defendant, and with the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and that no such action was ever proposed, considered or taken by the stockholders of this defendant, or any of them, or by the stockholders of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, or any of them, so far as this defendant is informed and believes; that the minutes of the meetings of the stockholders of this defendant, from its first organization to the present time, which are true and correct, do not show that any such act, or pretended act, of consolidation was ever brought forward, considered or acted upon by this defendant, and that no such consolidation, in fact, ever did take place. And this defendant further avers that this defendant has always since its first organization had its own board of directors, president and other needed officers separate and independent of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; that at the time of the institution of this 3651 action, it had its own board of directors and president, duly elected, who held their respective offices wholly independent of any connection with, or control on the part of, the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; that very soon after the seizure of the road of this defendant by a receiver in this suit, based upon the ground of its alleged consolidation with the said Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, a meeting of the stockholders of this defendant was held, on the 2nd day of April, 1872, at which meeting a resolution was unanimously adopted denying any such consolidation or pretended consolidation, a copy of which is hereto annexed, marked Exhibit A, and prayed to be taken and considered as a part of this answer, and that the trustees of the internal-improvement fund, the plaintiffs in this action, at whose instance such seizure was made, admitted that their action in this behalf was erroneous and without just ground, and met and adopted a resolution agreeing to a release and return of the road of this defendant and to a vacation of the order appointing a receiver in this action, but afterwards, in violation of

lution.

10. This defendant denies that Milton S. Littlefield was ever president of the whole line of railroad from Jacksonville to Quincy as a consolidated line of road; that, as hereinbefore stated, this defendant has been since its first organization, and is now, a separate and independent corporation; that it is true that said Littlefield was at one time, to wit, from on or about the 10th day of April, 1872, president of this defendant, but that he held said office by virtue of his election by the directors of this defendant in conformity to its charter and by-laws, and not by virtue of any connection which he may have had as president or otherwise of or with the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; that at the last regular annual meeting of the stockholders of this defendant, held in April, 1872, Aaron Barnett was duly elected president of this defendant, and is now the president of this defendant; and this defendant further avers that if the said Milton S. Littlefield ever assumed to represent, as president or otherwise, the whole line of railroad from Jacksonville to Quincy as one corporation, or a consolidated line of road, which this defendant in nowise admits, 3653 that such action or assumption of the said Littlefield was, so far as this defendant is concerned, without any authority, and was wholly illegal and void.

11. This defendant further denies that all contracts of affreightment and transportation supplies, and for labor and the sale of tickets over, and all and singular the entire business, has been done and performed in the name of the said Milton S. Littlefield as president of or in the name of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company as one entire corporation, from Jacksonville to Quincy, as in said complaint alleged. And this defendant avers that very soon after the organization of this defendant, to wit, on or about the 15th day of August, 1868, this defendant leased its road and property to the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company, and was operated by it until about the time of its sale by the trustees of the internal-improvement fund, when the said case was determined and cancelled, and the road of this defendant and its other property surrendered and returned to this defendant and to its own proper management and control; and this defendant had but little rolling stock, and from time to time made such arrangements with the Tallahassee (formerly Pensacola and Georgia) Railroad Com-3654 pany with reference to the use of its rolling stock and the prorating of freights and other matters as were deemed mutually advantageous to both parties; that on the 20th day of January, 1870, an agreement was made between said companies, based upon the report of their respective superintendents, with respect to the receipts for freights and the rent, use of rolling stock, &c., a true copy of which, taken from the minute book of the proceedings of the directors of this defendant, is hereto annexed, marked Exhibit B, and prayed to be taken and considered as a part of this answer; that this agreement has been substantially the basis upon which the defendant has operated its road in connection with the said Tallahassee Railroad Company, and afterwards with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company up to the present time; that the accounts of this defendant have been kept separate and distinct by its treasurer, this defendant being charged with its share of expenses and credited with its proportion of earnings, according to this agreement, and that every freight list used by the two roads shows the proportion of freight due to each road.

This defendant further avers that the legal place of business or corporation domicil of this defendant, as fixed by a resolution of its 3655 stockholders, at a meeting held on the 17th day of December, 1869, is now, and from the date of said resolution has been, the city of Tallahassee, in this State, at which place, by said resolution, all meetings of the stockholders and directors of this defendant are required to be held. And this defendant further avers that said city of Tallahassee, and not the city of Jacksonville, as in the said complaint alleged, is also the legal place of business of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and was so advertised according to law, by its secretary, on the 9th day of July, 1870, a copy of which advertisement, taken from the Florida Sentinel, a newspaper published in the said city of Tallahassee, is hereto annexed, marked Exhibit C, and prayed to be taken and considered as a part of this answer.

12. This defendant denies that the city of Jacksonville is the eastern terminus of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and avers that Lake City, in the county of Columbia, in the third judicial circuit of this State, is the eastern terminus of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad; that the said city of Jacksonville is the eastern terminus this defendant, and that the depots, 3656 wharves, and other property used in its business, and located at that point, is the property of this defendant, bought and paid for by it; that this defendant was at one time indebted to the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company for advances made on account of this defendant in the construction of certain improvements at that point, but that all such advances have been fully paid by this defendant.

13. That shortly after the sale of the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad, as hereinbefore stated, the trustees of the internal improvement fund appointed Edward Houstoun their agent to take up the outstanding bonds of said road, and placed money in his hands for this purpose; that nearly all the bonds issued by said company had been paid in by the purchasers and cancelled, leaving outstanding upon which the purchasers were required to pay the sinking fund only about one hundred and twenty thousand dollars; that the said Houstoun as agent of said trustees has from time to time, as fast as he could obtain information of their whereabouts, taken up said bonds until there is now outstanding and uncancelled, as this defendant is informed and be-
lars; that, as will appear by the book of the treasurer of said trustees, the sinking fund due by this defendant was fully paid up to the 4th day of March, 1870, and that, as will appear by reference to a report of the said Houstoun, as agent of said trustees, made May 16, 1872, and now in the possession of J. S. Adams, secretary of said trustees, he, the said Houstoun, had in his hands, to the credit of this defendant on account of such sinking fund, six hundred and thirty dollars paid to the said Houstoun by this defendant; that as far as this defendant has been able to obtain information respecting the bonds outstanding upon which this defendant is liable to pay the sinking fund there was nothing due by this defendant on account of said sinking fund at the time of the filing of said complaint; but if upon obtaining accurate information it can be shown that there was at that time a small amount due, this defendant denies that it has incurred any such penalties and forfeiture as therein pretended and claimed; that the said trustees, in their course of dealing with this defendant with respect to said sinking fund, 3658 have never been rigid and exacting in requiring payment on the day when due; that the sinking fund being only payable on the amount of outstanding bonds, time was often required to ascertain the amount of such outstanding bonds, and that such information could only be ascertained through the said Houstoun, the agent of said trustees. This defendant was always ready and willing to pay whatever may be due, if anything, on account of said sinking fund, and that the said trustees were fully aware of such willingness and readiness on the part of this defendant, and well knew its ability to respond at any moment to any claim in this behalf which might be made upon it; that no notification or even information was given to this defendant of any such default or pretended default, and that no demand or request for payment was made before the commencement of this action; all of which was and is at variance with the course of dealing heretofore pursued toward this defendant with respect to the said sinking fund; that since the seizure of its road and property by the receiver appointed in this action, the said receiver has received and now has or ought to have in his hands to the credit of this defendant, and realized from the opera-3659 tion of its road, many thousand dollars more than enough to pay the small amount of sinking fund, if any, that upon a correct statement of accounts might now be found due. And this defendant denies that under the circumstances this defendant has incurred any penalty or forfeiture under the said internal improvement law; and this defendant insists that this honorable court cannot, in equity and good conscience, on the ground of such pretended default of this defendant of such an inconsiderable amount as may be supposed still to be be payable on account of said sinking fund, decree a sale of its road as prayed for by said plaintiffs.

14. This defendant believes it to be true, as in said complaint alleged, that after the purchase of the said Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company by the said William E. Jackson and associates, that George W. Swepson did become the owner of a majority of the stock subscribed for and issued by this defendant; that it appears by the stock-ledger and transfer book of this defendant that Edward Houstoun assigned and transferred to the said Swepson 3,110 shares of the capital stock of this defendant, April 13th, 1869; that afterwards the 3660 said shares of stock were transferred by said Swepson to Milton
S. Littlefield, and by said Littlefield to the said Houstoun, and now stands on said books in the name of said Houstoun.

15. That this defendant is informed and believes that said stock was assigned and transferred to said Houstoun, by said Littlefield, as collateral security for the payment to said Houstoun of certain drafts given to said Houstoun for the purchase of certain first mortgage bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and the Tallahassee Railroad Companies and of other stock in this defendant; that shortly after this assignment and transfer said Littlefield expressed a desire to have bonds issued on the road of this defendant for the benefit of its stockholders; that said

Houstoun and other parties in interest objected to the issuing of such bonds except upon the express condition and understanding that the same should be placed in the hands of said Houstoun as additional security for the payment of what was due him; that was agreed to between said Littlefield and said Houstoun. Afterwards at a meeting of the stockholders, and also a meeting of the directors of this defendant held June 2nd, 1870, resolutions were adopted authorizing the 3661 issue of bonds to the extent of sixteen thousand dollars per mile on the road of this defendant, to be a first lien or mortgage on its equipment, road, franchise, workshops, and depots, excepting the town lots belonging to this defendant in the city of Jacksonville, not used for depot purposes, true copies of which, taken from the minute book of this defendant, are hereto annexed, marked Exhibits D & E, and prayed to be taken and considered as a part of this answer; that some time before the adoption of these resolutions, and while Geo. W. Swepson was president of this defendant, the said Swepson, in expectation of obtaining the sanction and authority of this defendant, through its stockholders and directors, but without any such sanction or authority having been previously given, had caused to be prepared one million dollars bonds of this defendant, signed by the said Swepson, as president, and countersigned by one H. H. Thompson, as treasurer; that the said Swepson never communicated with any meeting of the stockholders or directors of this defendant as to his purpose or design in having said bonds prepared, and that said bonds, so far as any action or knowledge of this defendant was concerned, were prepared
3662 without any reference to an exchange thereof for bonds of the State of Florida, as was afterwards done; that at the time the stockholders and directors of this defendant adopted the resolutions aforesaid authorizing the issue of first-mortgage bonds as aforesaid, they were for the first time informed that the said Swepson, as president, had caused to be prepaired and had signed, the bonds aforesaid; and it being represented that the adoption of said bonds as executed as the bonds of the company then authorized to be issued would save expe'se and prevent delay to the company, they were asked to adopt them as aforesaid; that without any knowledge of the form of said bonds, or that they were made payable to the State of Florida, or that it was intended that they were to be used in exchange for State bonds, and without any suggestion of such purpose, or that they were to be employed as they were afterwards attempted to be, the said bonds so signed by the said Swepson, as president, and countersigned by the said Thompson as treasurer, were by the said resolutions adopted as the bonds to be issued by said defendant, and declared to be when issued a first lien 3663 or mortgage on the equipment, franchise, road-bed, workshops, and depots, except the lots in Jacksonville not used for depot purposes of this defendant; that, as will be seen by reference to the said resolutions, said bonds were authorized to be placed in the hands of the said Edwin Houstoun for the purposes agreed upon between the said Littlefield and himself, as hereinbefore stated; and the said bonds or their proceeds were directed to be held and applied according to the terms of said arrangement, except the proportion thereof applicable or apportionable to the stock owned by other parties; and upon the satisfaction otherwise of the terms of said arrangement with the said Houstoun, it was further directed that the said bonds were to be by the said Houstoun transferred to the said Littlefield, or according to his direction, to the extent of the stock owned by him at the time; that at the meeting of the directors of this defendant at which the resolution herein-before referred to was adopted (a further resolution was adopted), authorizing the president of this defendant to do any and all acts, and, if necessary for that purpose, to execute and deliver any proper, 3664 and under the seal of this defendant, that might be deemed needful to make the first lien or mortgage in favor of the bonds authorized to be issued as aforesaid effectual to all intents; that this last resolution was adopted because at that time it was not contemplated or intimated that said bonds were to be exchanged for bonds of the State of Florida, as was afterwards done, and because it was thought that some such deed might be necessary to create a lien; that shortly after the adoption of these resolutions the said Houstoun demanded the delivery of said bonds in pursuance thereof, and the said Littlefield then for the first time insisted that bonds of the State of Florida to be exchanged for bonds of this defendant, under the authority of an act of the legislature of said State entitled "An act to perfect the public works of this State," and the act amendatory thereto, should be the bonds to be received by the said Houstoun. To this the said Houstoun objected principally upon the ground that these were not the bonds contemplated by the agreement between said Littlefield and himself, and 3665 that if it should be required to sell said bonds as provided for in said agreement, in order to get the benefit of his security, he did not wish to sell bonds of the State of Florida which were issued and exchanged to carry out a public work in this State; that upon the said Littlefield insisting that the said Houstoun would soon be paid, and that the said Houstoun would then have no further interest or right to make opposition, and that as president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, which position the said Littlefield then occupied, he could not use the said bonds so issued by this defendant for the benefit of his company, the said Houstoun at length consented to a modification of the agreement between the said Littlefield and himself and consented to receive the State bonds, upon the express understanding, however, that instead of selling the State bonds according to the terms of his agreement, he should, if he so desired, have the privilege of returning said State bonds and taking back the bonds issued as hereinbefore stated by this defendant; that the drafts due said Houstoun 3666 toun in accordance with the option and authority given him by his said agreement returned said State bonds to the governor of the State, and received back the bonds of this defendant which had been deposited with him, but which, being payable to the State of Florida, were not available for sale under the terms of his agreement with said Littlefield; that said Houstoun then made a request of the directors of this defendant to issue to him other bonds in lieu of those he had obtained from the governor as aforesaid, secured by a deed of trust, so that he might obtain the benefit of the agreement with said Littlefield by a proper sale. Before this could be done two of the stockholders of this defendant filed a complaint in Leon circuit court, in this State, and obtained an injunction against the said Houstoun restraining him from making any disposition of said bonds. Whilst the injunction was pending, Mr. C. B. Coddington, who was in the city of Tallahassee, in this State, representing S. W. Hopkins and Company, who claimed to be financial agents to sell said State bonds for the benefit of the 3667 Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, made some arrangements with the plaintiffs in said injunction suit by which the injunction therein granted was waived, and at the request of the said Coddington the said Houstoun authorized Robert H. Gamble, one of the said plaintiffs and comptrollers of the State of Florida, in whose office he had deposited the said railroad bonds, to deliver the same to the said Coddington, which was done by him, and the said Coddington himself delivered the bonds issued by this defendant to the governor and obtained from him in exchange the State bonds which had been before issued by the governor, under the law, to the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and that it was in this way, and without any sanction or assent on the part of this defendant, the governor got possession of the bonds of this defendant.

16. This defendant denies that as a matter of prudence and caution it was required by the State that the bonds issued by this defendant should be issued in its name and under its seal, and not in the name of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, with 3668 whom it is charged this defendant had consolidated as in the said complaint alleged; on the contrary, this defendant alleges the facts to be, and of which facts the defendant believes the said plaintiffs were fully cognizant before filing their said complaint, that the State of Florida had nothing whatever to do with the form and manner of the execution of said bonds, and never made or insisted upon any requirements in connection therewith; that Harrison Reed, the governor of said State, and one of the plaintiffs in this action, was advised and well knew at the time that the road of this defendant constituted no part of the road of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; that there never had been any consolidation or pretended consolidation of said roads, and that this defendant was a separate and independent corporation, and that it was upon the ground that no such consolidation had taken place, and that this defendant was a separate and independent corporation, that he was authorized by law to exchange bonds of the State of Florida for bonds of this defendant, and that it was 3669 upon this ground and this only, and not upon the now pretended ground of consolidation, that he made such exchange; and this defendant avers that he never heard of any such pretension or claim on the part of the governor or any one else representing or assuming to represent the State of Florida until the commencement of this action; and this defendant believes that such pretension and claim were but a mere afterthought to furnish a pretext for the wrongful and unjust seizure of the road of this defendant, and the placing the same in the hands of a receiver, all of which this defendant alleges to be in flagrant violation of the principles of equity and good conscience.

17. This defendant has never been informed save by the allegation contained in the said complaint whether the said Milton S. Littlefield ever gave such verified certificate for the purpose of obtaining State bonds on the whole line of road from Quincy to Jacksonville, as reconsolidated line of road, as in said complaint alleged. But this defendant insists that such certificate, if any such was given, is in no manner binding on this 3670 defendant, and this defendant denies that at the time such certificate is alleged to have been given that the said Littlefield was president of this defendant or authorized to bind it; and this defendant avers that at the time the resolution hereinbefore*before* mentioned, authorizing the issue of bonds, were adopted, the said Littlefield was not the president of this defendant, nor was the said Littlefield president at the time of the pretended exchange of said bonds for State bonds, founded upon his alleged certificate as to the whole line of road, but that Jno. P. Sanderson was such president.

18. That this defendant is informed and believes that the State bonds delivered to the said Coddington by the governor, as hereinbefore stated, have not been sold, and that said bonds are about to be returned to the State, and the bonds of this defendant surrendered to it, thus relieving the State of all liability or pretended liability on account thereof, and of all interest or pretended interest in or connection with this defendant; and this defendant denies that it is by any act of its own or any act or assumed act of others in its behalf by virtue of any law of this State, liable to be taken possession of by the governor of this 3670½ State and sold, as in the said complaint claimed and alleged.

THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company, a corporation created by and existing under the laws of said State, and a citizen thereof, the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, the Florida Central Railroad Company, corporations created by and existing under the 3676 laws of the State of Florida, and citizens thereof, Edward Lewes, Patrick Houston, Robert H. Gamble, Charles E. Dyke, sr., Edward M. L'Engle, Robert Walker, Clayton A. Cowgill, and George W. Betton, directors in the said last mentioned corporation, and who are citizens of the State of Florida, James M. Baker, George R. Foster, W. J. Lawton, Milton S. Littlefield, N. K. Sawyer, J. C. L'Engle, Edward M. L'Engle, and Charles B. Fenwick, who are citizens of the State of Florida, and Joseph B. Stewart, who is a citizen of the State of New York, claiming to be directors in said Florida Railroad Company; George F. Drew, governor of the State of Florida, Walter Gwynn, treasurer of the State of Florida, Hugh A. Corley, commissioner of lands and immigration of the State of Florida, George P. Raney, attorney-general, Walter Gwynn, treasurer, Columbus Drew, comptroller, George F. Drew, governor, which officers are 3677 trustees of the internal improvement fund, and herein sued as such, Milton S. Littlefield, in his own right, and Robert J. Washington, who is a citizen of the State of Virginia.

Interrogatories to be propounded to A. L. Worfbain, P A. T. Van Ogtrop, Jan Frederick Schutte, Johannes Herman, Warring Abraham, Carel Wertheim, Frederick William Sewel, and F. H. Ziegelaar, witnesses to be examined in behalf of the complainants in the above-entitled cause, who reside in Amsterdam, in the kingdom of the Netherlands:

Interrogatory first. What is your name, age, occupation or business?

Interrogatory second. Where did you reside in the years 1871, up to and including the year 1873?

Interrogatory third. What was your occupation and business through the period before named? Were you or not directors of or members of the bourse or stock exchange of the city of Amsterdam; and 3678 were you or not, at any time during the period before named, engaged in the purchase and sale of bonds and their securities, such as were sold at the bourse or stock exchange before mentioned; and were you or not acquainted with the dealings which took place in the said bourse or stock exchange in domestic and foreign bonds?

Interrogatory fourth. Do you or not know of the introduction, sale and dealings in bonds purporting to have been issued by the authority of a law of the State of Florida to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in aid of the construction, maintenance and repair of the line of railroad which was owned by the said corporation, a copy of which bonds is hereto annexed, marked with the letter A?

Interrogatory fifth. If you answer and say that you have such knowledge and information, please state by whom said bonds were put upon the market at the bourse or stock exchange in Amsterdam or 3679 elsewhere, and state what representations were publicly made by the persons by whom said bonds were so introduced and offered for sale, and if such representations were made in print or writing. Please annex to your answer to this interrogatory a copy of such printed or written statement and say whether the sales and purchases of said bonds were made, to your knowledge, in reliance upon the correctness of such statement.

Interrogatory sixth. Do you or not know whether or not the directors of said bourse or stock exchange gave any authority to those persons who were members of said institution to deal in such bonds as a part of the business of said bourse; and if you say that such dealings were permitted by such authority, please state whether or not an examination or an investigation as to the character, validity, and legality of the issue of said bonds were first made by the directors or other authorities governing the said bourse; and if you answer in the affirmative, state fully what was 3680 done by such authorities in respect to such bonds, and what decision was arrived at in relation to nature, character, and validity of said bonds.

Interrogatory seventh. Please state fully as you may be able to state what was decided by the said authorities of said bourse as to the nature and character of said bonds; whether the same were or not decided to be treated as and authorized to be dealt in as a public security and obligation of the State of Florida.

Interrogatory eighth. At what time were the said bonds first bought and sold publicly at the bourse or stock exchange of the city of Amsterdam, and at about what price? Say whether the dealings in respect to such bonds were public or general, among a large class of buyers, or whether such dealings were confined to a small number of persons. Say whether such bonds changed hands frequently or otherwise, and whether the buyers were numerous or not.

3681 Interrogatory ninth. Please state about what price the said bonds were first sold, and whether the price varied from time to time, and what was the highest price paid therefor at any one time.

Interrogatory tenth. Did said bonds decline in value or price from the amount first paid therefor, or from the highest price thereafter; and, if so, say when said decline took place, and what was the cause of such decline, if you are able to state such cause.

Interrogatory eleventh. Do you know and can you state anything as to the termini of the railroad of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, which were designated by the persons by whom said bonds were introduced and sold in Amsterdam? If you do know and can state, please answer and say at what point said railroad was by said persons represented to commence, and at what point to terminate, and what branch or branches thereof from the main line was represented to form a part of and belong to the main line of the railroad of said road of said company, which said persons alleged to belong to and be in the use of said company.

Interrogatory twelfth. Do you or not know whether or not the persons by whom said bonds were introduced on the market in Amsterdam made any public or written statement as to the place of commencement and termination of said railroad, and as to its branches, and as to the number of miles completed and in use by the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and whether or not there was included in such statement any averment that the said line of railroad and branches so designated and described was by a law of the State of Florida made subject to a lien for the payment of the said bonds? Relate fully all that you know as to the matters herein inquired of.

3683 Interrogatory thirteenth. Do you or not know whether or not at the time of the introduction and sale of said bonds in Amsterdam, whether at the bourse or otherwise, there was any public information given or published to the effect that any portion of the line of railroad between Jacksonville, in the State of Florida, and Chattahoochee, the western terminus of the line of railroad, of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, was the property of any other corporation in the State of Florida than the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, or that any portion of said line belonged to or was claimed to be owned by a corporation called the "Florida Central Railroad Company," or whether the existence of said last named corporation was by any means, or in any manner, made known to the persons who bought and sold said bonds at the bourse in Amsterdam, or elsewhere in the kingdom of the Netherlands, or to the directors and members of said bourse or to the public in general.

Interrogatory fourteenth. State fully all you know as to the inducements which caused the persons who dealt in said bonds to pur-3684 chase the same, what they relied upon in making such purchases, as to the nature of such security, and what it was that gave character and credit to said bonds as valuable securities, and caused them to realize the prices at which they were sold; and say whether any public notice was given in Amsterdam to the dealers in bonds and public securities who transacted business in said city on the bourse or stock exchange, by the president and directors or the stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad Company, that such corporation was the owner of any portion of the line of railroad commencing at Jacksonville, and running westward to Lake City, or that said corporation disputed the rightfulness and legality of the actions of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in selling and disposing of said bonds, or in making representations to the public in Holland that such last named corporation was the owner of the entire line of railroad which commences at Jacksonville, and which at the time of the sale 3685 of said railroad bonds terminated at Quincy, in the State of Florida. Do you or not know of any such claim of ownership of a portion of said railroad having been made known to the persons who bought and sold said bonds prior to the first day of July, 1873, or to the public in general in Holland?

Interrogatory fifteenth. Did said bonds decline in value in Amsterdam after the first day of July, 1873? If you answer that such decline did take place, state, if you know, what was the cause of such decline.

Interrogatory sixteenth. Please state, if you know, what representations were made by the persons by whom said bonds were placed upon the market, and sold at Amsterdam, as to the payment of the interest thereon, and as to whence the money for such payment was derived; by whom such payment was to be made, whether by an agent appointed by the governor of the State of Florida, or otherwise.

3686 Interrogatory seventeenth. Were any payments of interest made to the holders of said bonds; were such payments annual or semi-annual; in what amount per bond was each payment; by whom such payments were made; was there public notice given in Holland that any agent for the payment of such interest had been appointed by the governor of the State of Florida? If you answer that such notice was given, state all that you know in relation thereto, and append a copy of such notice, if you have it in your possession, and say whether the dealers in said bonds accepted said notice as valid and true, and whether or not they relied upon the statements therein made, and what effect such notice produced among the dealers in such bonds.

Interrogatory eighteenth. If you say that any public notice was given in Amsterdam, such as that as to which you have been interrogated in the preceding question, please say what effect the publication of such notice had upon the buyers and sellers of said bonds in Amsterdam or elsewhere, as to the validity of said bonds, and as to the correct-3687 ness of the representations which were before made, if any there were, by the persons who put aside bonds on the market in Amsterdam, and sold the same, as to the validity of said obligations, the number of miles of railroad owned by the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, its commencement, termination, and the branches thereof; state freely all that you know as to the effect produced upon the minds of the persons who bought and sold said bonds by the notice made public, if any there was, that the governor of Florida had appointed an agent to pay the interest of said bonds and the subsequent payment of any such public agent of such interest.

Interrogatory nineteenth. Do you or not know, or are you or not acquainted the complainants, or any one or more of them, in the suit in which you are now examined as witness? If you say that you are acquainted with any or all of them, please say who they are, what is their occupation, credit, and standing in the place where they reside?

3688 Interrogatory twentieth. Have you any knowledge of any purchases made by any one or all of said complainants of any of said bonds? If you have such knowledge, say whether or not, to the best of your knowledge, information, and belief, said persons made such purchases in good faith or otherwise, and if you say that you know of any such purchase, please say what you know in relation thereto, how you acquired your information, and what induced the said purchase's to b'y said bonds?

Interrogatory twenty-first. Did you purchase or sell any of said bonds for your own account, or for the account of others? If you answer affirmatively, state at what time such purchases or sales were made, what price was paid, and the numbers of the respective bonds, as far as you are able to furnish the same, and the names of the parties from whom purchases were made or bonds sold to?

Interrogatory twenty-second. State, if you can, the manner in 3689 which said bonds were introduced on the market and sold, whether by general public subscription or by private sales; relate fully the manner of proceeding, the names of those who subscribed for the loan, and all that took place when said bonds were first sold.

Interrogatory twenty-third. Did you at any time when said bonds were first introduced and put on the market in Amsterdam, or at any time thereafter up to the commencement of said suit, receive any information or acquire any knowledge of any claim or demand made or put forward by the defendants, the trustees of the internal improvement fund of the State of Florida, for any sum of money claimed to be due and unpaid now owing by any persons by whom any part of said line of railroad had been purchased at any sale of any part of such line of railroad made by said trustees, acting under authority of a law of the State of Florida? Did you ever learn of such claim? If so, say how and when? Was there any notice, public or private, of the ex-3690 istence of such claim given in Holland to your knowledge? If such notice was given, or such claim had been made, is it likely you would have know' of it; and, if so, why?

Interrogatory twenty-fourth. Had the president, directors, or stockholders of the Floriday Central Railroad Company caused to be published and made known in Holland, in any manner, either at the Bourse in Amsterdam, or in a gazette or newspaper, that any part of said line of road was the property of such company, or that any of the bonds issued by the governor of the State of Florida to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company had been illegally issued, or were in any manner unauthorized by the said Florida Central Railroad Company, what effect would such action have produced in Holland among the bankers and brokers and members of the Bourse?

Interrogatory twenty-fifth. Please say what effect would have been produced at the Bourse in Amsterdam, or among the dealers in 3691 securities in Holland, had the trustees of the internal improvement fund given, in 1871, 1872, or 1873, public notice in Amsterdam, or elsewhere in Holland, that they claimed to have a lien on any part of the railroad of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company for any large sum of money; in what way would sales of said bonds have been effected thereby?

Interrogatory twenty-sixth. Can you say or do you know whether at any time said bonds were put on the market and sold in Amsterdam the laws of the State of Florida, mentioned in the body of said bonds, were exhibited for inspection by the persons who introduced and sold said bonds, and were opened to be read by the authorities of the Bourse and by bankers and brokers generally in Amsterdam? Were there any other public acts of the authorities of the State of Florida likewise exhibited and made public in like manner? Give copies of all such documents if you can, or, if you cannot, then describe them to the best of you' recollection, and say whether any other public acts of the 3692 authorities of the State were so exhibited or in any way published or made known in Amsterdam within your knowledge.

Final interrogatory. Do you know or can you set forth any other matter or thing which may be a benefit or advantage to the parties at issue in this cause or either of them, or that may be material to the subject of this your examination on the matters in question in this cause? If yea, set forth the same fully and largely in your answer.

J. FRED SCHUTTE ET AL.
vs.
THE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY et al.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., February 8th, 1871.

Messrs. HOLJE BOISSEVAIN,
Bankers, Amsterdam, Holland:

3697 GENTLEMEN: On December 18th, 1870, Governor Harrison Reed, of Florida, received a telegraphic dispatch from you, substantially as follows:

"Being negotiating four million bonds issued by your State, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad begs to know by telegraph from you whether provision made for payment interest, whatever result railroad traffic. Financial provision of State really sound and bonds undoubted security."

To this dispatch Governor Reed replied as follows:

"Bonds recently recalled by the company, no provision will therefore be made for interest."

It was hoped that Governor Reed's telegram would have the effect of causing the bonds to be returned, as the railroad companies desired they should be. This has not been done, but on the contrary more bonds than were then out have been sent to Europe for negotiation, though no money I infer has yet been realized. I feel it to be my 3698 duty therefore to make a statement of facts to you, which I hope that you will lay before others who may be interested with you in the negotiation.

When the legislature of Florida enacted the laws under which the bonds your telegram enquired about were issued, it was believed by the two railroad companies, hereafter named, that the proceeds of the State bonds when sold would be honestly and legitimately applied to the extension, through the western portion of this State, of the lines of railroad already built from the eastern to the middle portion. That extension was so much desired by the two companies owning the completed railroads that they were willing to mortgage, and did mortgage, their roads to the State in order to secure the issuing of State bonds upon which to raise money to enable the newly organized company to build said extension.

The railroads which so pledged their mortgage bonds to the State were the Florida Central Railroad, sixty miles long, and the Tallahas- 3699 see Railroad, one hundred and fifty miles long.

The former gave its mortgage bonds to the amount of one million dollars; the latter to the amount of three million dollars; and this latter road consolidated its line with that proposed to be built westward from the completed road, and the two companies became one under the name of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

But the Florida Central Railroad, commencing at Jacksonville and running westward sixty miles, was not included in the consolidation. Subsequently, and after three millions of the State bonds had been sent to Europe, it was discovered that the president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, who had been active in procuring the legislation and inducing the completed roads to give to the State their bonds in exchange for the State bonds which were issued to him, had made, even before he got the bonds, secret contracts with some of his creditors by which the larger portion of the proceeds were to be 3700 diverted from the purposes for which the bonds were issued, and were to be applied in payment of individual debts. This produced such dissatisfaction, and caused such investigation by the companies which had mortgaged their roads to the State, as resulted in both of the companies, through their several directories, rescinding the action by which their roads were mortgaged and recalling the bonds. The million of bonds issued by the State on a security of a like amount pledged to the State by the Florida Central Railroad, had not then gone into the hands of the president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, but were held by a party till certain conditions precedent were performed before delivery to the president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad. That million of bonds were then returned to the State, and the bonds of the company, upon the security of which the others were issued, were withdrawn from deposit with the State, and were in the hands of the party already referred to, to be re-3701 turned to the company for cancellation, when they were by that party, without the authority or knowledge of the railroad company or of any of its officers, and in violation of the company's resolutions of recall and rescission, delivered to an agent of the president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, who by influences best known to himself effected with the governor of the State their re-exchange for the State bonds, which latter were hurri'dly and secretly sent out of the State and to Europe before any legal process could be obtained for their detention. This re-delivery to the governor of Florida of the Florida Central Railroad Company's million of bonds is a gross fraud on that company, and none who are advised of it, and buy or advance money on the State bonds for which they were exchanged, will have any legal or moral right to ask that they receive any benefit or advantage from the security so wrongfully obtained.

The same may be said of the three million of State bonds issued on the pledge of the same amount of bonds of the Tallahassee or 3702 Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad. No one who, having notice of that company's rescission of its action and recall of its bonds, advances money on or buys the State's bonds for which the others were pledged, will have legally or morally any locus standi in curia as against that railroad company. The creditors and stockholders of the railroad companies will assert their right, resist the wrongs that have been perpetrated and attempted, and seek successfully redress in the judicial tribunals. You have had the above mentioned action of the railroad companies brought to your notice by the telegram from Governor Reed, who sent it after consulting with the said companies, and at their instance, and you have incurred all the legal disqualifications to urge against the railroad companies any claim based on their supposed suretyship for any bonds of the State.

An examination of the law under which the State's bonds were issued discloses that the governor had caused half a million more 3703 of bonds to be issued than the law provides for. The law allows the issue of $16,000 per mile upon so much of said roads as may be completed and in running order; only 210 miles were, when the bonds were issued, completed, and only a mile and a half have been completed since, and no more is being completed. This would allow of an issue at the time it was made of only $3,360,000. Add the liberal allowance of ten miles for side-tracks, &c., if such unreasonable construction of the law be claimed, and it legalizes only $3,520,000 of the bonds.

To secure the principal and interest of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company's bond but not of the bond, of the Florida Central Railroad, the law gives the State of Florida a statutory lien, valid as a first mortgage on that company's road and property and authorizes the governor, on failure of the company in any payment of principal or interest, to seize and sell the road at auction, 3704 and authorizes the State to purchase and to pay for it with any evidence of indebtedness the State may hold against the road, while every other bidder would, in case of purchase, have to pay cash.

This summary process is not applicable to the Florida Central Railroad, but to the other road only. What would be the result in case of failure of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad to pay principal or interest on its bonds? The State, if no resistance, or if unsuccessful resistance through the courts were had, might seize, sell and buy, paying for the purchase with the road's obligations, while the State might not, perhaps could not or would not, pay her own, nor is there any way known to our system of government by which a State can be compelled to pay its obligations. You will thus perceive the character of the securities offered you, and the taints of fraud that affected them from their first issue, and that still do, and will act advisedly.

3705 This communication is made in the interest of the stockholders of the companies whose bonds have, by misrepresentation and bad faith, been obtained and exchanged with the State of Florida for the State's bonds, which you have been and may still be negotiating for. The stockholders do not intend to submit to the fraud which has been attempted on them. They seek to have the State's bonds brought back, and a re-exchange affected, and it is to that end that this letter is written. Such a course will prevent litigation. Persistence in the wrong will insure it. Attempts may be made to give credit to the bonds by professional and perhaps by judicial opinions from this State, but the facts that I state are incontestable and I can give you much more and more detailed information concerning the worthlessness of the securities that you are negotiating for, and I will do so if desired, but I have said enough to make discreet men repudiate the securities and 3706 abandon negotiation.

I will say, further, that since the mortgage of the railroads to the State, 128 miles of the completed road, being all except twenty-two miles on which the State has any statutory lien, have been sold by the United States under a judicial process in their favor, issued from a United States court, thus divesting the company's title, and vesting it in the individual purchaser. That sale of course relieves that much of the road of the lien created in favor of the State of Florida by the mortgage above mentioned. You are at liberty to show this letter to whom you please, and to give it the widest publicity, and will oblige me by acknowledging its receipt. I will presume on a very slight acquaintance to refer you, touching myself, to Hon. H. S. Sanford, late U. S. minister to Belgium, at Brussels.

Respectfully,

THE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, ET AL.

3708 FLORIDA STATE BONDS.

TALLAHASSEE, FLORIDA, June, 1871.

To Chairman States and Corporations Arrears Committee, 193, 194, 195, Gresham House, London:

SIR: It is understood here that General M. S. Littlefield, the president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, a corporation existing under the laws of Florida, Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co., financial agents in the same interest, are endeavoring, with a prospect of success, to negotiate a sale of a very large number o f bonds of the State of Florida, issued under the provisions of the act of the legislature of this State, entitled "An act to perfect the public works of the State," and subsequent acts amending the act named.

It is only fair that capitalists who have been induced to think favorably of these State bonds as an investment should be informed as to the character of the securities in which they are about to embark their means, and the purpose of this letter is to place you, and through 3709 you others concerned, in possession of such facts connected with the history of these bonds, and the law under which they were issued, as it may be to their interest to know.

The Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and the Tallahassee Railroad Company were railroad corporations existing under the laws of this State. These corporations having availed themselves of the benefits of the legislature of this State, commonly called the internal improvement act, approved January 6th, 1855, and having failed afterwards to comply with its requirements, by payments of the semi-annual interest and sinking fund due upon the debt contracted, on account of the first mortgage bonds issued by the companies under the provisions of the said act, these road beds, property, and franchise were, in accordance with the requirements of the said act, taken possession of by the trustees of the internal improvement fund and sold, after due advertisement, to the highest bidder, on the day of , 1869. This sale was in one essential feature, a fraud. The law permitted that 3710 the trustees sell either for cash, or for additional approved security, as they might think of most advantage to the fund and the first mortgage bondholders, to satisfy whose claim the sale was made. In this case the trustees elected to sell for cash, and so advertised to the world up to the moment of sale. And the sale purported to be a cash sale. In point of fact, however, the purchasers did not pay cash, but only made partial payment by a surrender to the trustees of about $1,000,000 of the first mortgage bonds. The entire first mortgage debt of the two companies were about $1,473,000, and this payment of $1,000,000 in the bonds left a balance due upon the price bid, which was in amount equal to the entire bonded debt, of about $473,000, which amount on payment would have been at once applicable to take up and pay off the balance of bonds outstanding, about $473,000 in amount. The trustees, however, delivered possession of the railroad property to the purchasers upon this partial compliance by them with the terms 3711 (cash), for sale. This indebtedness, which has never been paid except in small part (there being still about $300,000 of first mortgage bonds outstanding and unsatisfied), has a legal priority, and has been always so recognized by the parties now in possession through this purchase, as a first lien, anterior to all others now existing, or that may be created upon the property and franchise of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company (formerly, as will appear hereafter, the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Companies).

The parties in possession of the property have constantly promised payment, and doubtless have induced persons abroad to believe that they have already paid off the debt. After the sale of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads, referred to above, the parties in possession through this incomplete sale procured the passage by the legislature of several acts for their benefit, and first among them of the "Act to perfect the public works of the State," approved June 3712 24th, 1869. This act consolidated the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Companies, and incorporated the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and authorized aid to be given by the State of Florida to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, by the issue to the company of bonds of the State to amount of $14,000 per mile. This act, however, provided that the State, as a condition precedent to the issue of its bonds, should be made secure by a lien to be taken by the State upon the property and franchise of the corporation for whose benefit this aid was to be given. This was a condition fixed by the act, and with this provision it passed the legislature; and when some time after the act had passed it appeared that by its fraudulent enrollment the provision securing the State had been omitted, and that a forged law had been filed in the office of the Secretary of State, and officially published as a law of the State, 3713 certain citizens of the State, property holders and taxpayers, filed their bill on the chancery side of the circuit court of Leon County, second judicial circuit of Florida, praying for an order of injunction against Harrison Reid, governor of Florida, and against S. B. Conover, treasurer of the State, and for an order of the court against these officers to restrain and enjoin them from signing, countersigning, or delivering the bonds authorized by this fraudulent law, and from doing any act whatever under the pretended act, upon the ground of the forgery and fraud practiced in omitting from the enrolled bill the clause which required a security to the State in the issue of its bonds by a mortgage upon the railroad property and franchise.

You will readily perceive, in view of the fact that the balance of $473,000 first mortgage debt referred to was unpaid, that the purpose in this fraud was to relieve the railroad company of the necessity of paying off its existing incumbrances before getting the benefit of the funds to be raised on the State bonds.

3714 The court acted favorably and at once upon this application, and granted without hesitation the injunction prayed for; and so patent was the fraud that no answer was ever made to the bill and no effort was ever made to dissolve the injunction. So matters rested until the next convening of that great and good body of law-givers—the Florida legislature. The next legislature which assembled on the day of , 1870, passed an act to alter and amend the aforesaid act, which last act validified and made of force the "Act to perfect the public works of the State," which had been enjoined, except as amended and modified by the last law. Under these two acts Messrs. Littlefield and associates, parties in present possession of the railroad property, are now endeavoring to raise money upon State bonds. These acts authorized the aid to be given to the corporation, but required as a condition precedent to the granting this aid and the delivery of the State bonds, that the State be made secure by a lien to be taken in the 3715 manner pointed out by the acts on the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad property and franchise, and of course that corporation could not be in condition to comply with the requirement and give this until incumbrances already existing and resting on the property should be removed, by payment of the outstanding first mortgage bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Companies.

That the statement as to liability is correct there is not the least doubt, and in order to show that it is admitted to be correct, I refer you to the annexed copy of a letter addressed by me to Harrison Reed, governor of the State of Florida, to whom it was intrusted under the law to see that the State was protected before the delivery of its bonds, and his reply endorsed. In both the letter and the pledge endorsed, in reply, the position is taken that the unpaid first-mortgage bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad and Tallahassee Railroad Companies, outstanding, constitute a first lien upon the railroad property and franchise, and that no issue of the State bonds could or would be made 3716 until these lien incumbrances resting upon the property should be removed by payment and satisfaction of the first-mortgage bonds, outstanding, after which the company would acquire the power to mortgage unincumbered property to the State. Notwithstanding these admitted opinions of Governor Reed, this solemn written pledge, and his full knowledge that this first mortgage bonded indebtedness outstanding against the railroad was unpaid, after quieting the apprehensions of the holders of the unpaid first-mortgage railroad bonds by this pledge, he signed, at a time when he had lulled suspicion, and delivered the State bonds, thus imposing upon the State a security which he knew to be imperfect. Can you suppose that a vast indebtedness, placed upon a people already insolvent, under these circumstances, will ever be paid.

The principal security which those who may invest in the bonds of this State will have must be that security which has been given to the State.

3717 The principal security for any investment to be made in railroad securities of this State must be the road-bed and franchise. In the light of the past and present history of this State you cannot rely either upon its willingness or ability to pay a security of the character of these bonds when all the benefits result to stockholders in the corporation. In this case, the chief security being incumbered by prior mortgages, it is clearly the interest of the purchaser of the State bonds to see that such an amount of the money paid, as may be necessary, be applied to the discharge of this prior indebtedness. The bonds representing this prior incumbrance may be purchased at reasonable rates, but they will not be sacrificed by the holders.

In the mean time suit has been instituted and is now pending in the United States circuit court for the district of Florida, for the purpose of subjecting the railroad property to sale, unless the original first mortgage debt, outstanding, be paid up. You may have been advised that the purchaser of the State bonds will have nothing to do with the 3718 corporation, and may look entirely to the State; but a very little reflection must show the error into which this view may lead those who may purchase the State bonds. It is true a bond of this character is a State bond and imports a State liability; but the law makes no specific provision by which the holder of the bond can collect either the principal or interest from the State, and in the absence of such a provision any intelligent lawyer will advise you that the bondholder has no remedy in the courts by which principal or interest can be collected by judicial process from the people or out of their property. And even if such provision existed as a part of the law, it could not be enforced in a case where the bonds have been issued by means of a fraud upon that requirement of it which stipulates that the State should have been made secure by a good lien on unincumbered property as a precedent condition.

The sole reliance, then, of a holder of State bonds must be the 3719 good faith of the State, and that good faith under all the circumstances connected with the issue of these bonds will not be measured by the letter of the contract, but will be fixed entirely by the value of the security which the corporation has placed in the hands of the State to indemnify it against loss, and that security should be the roadbed and franchise of the road itself, unsaddled by anterior law.

I especially direct attention, in connection with this consideration of the State's security, to the provisions of section 13 of the "Act to perfect the public works of the States," which gives to the railroad company the privilege of paying off and discharging the lien taken by the State at any time before maturity of the debt in the State's own paper, now immensely depreciated by reason of the great quantity issued during the past few years beyond its capacity to pay. It is very evident, and ought to be patent to every one who will be at the pains to examine this provision, that it is to the interest of the railroad com-3720 pany to depreciate all all the paper of the State, to depreciate the very bonds they are now selling, and the moment the bonds shall be sold Littlefield and his associates will become the enemies of the holders, for their interest will clearly be to buy up the paper of the State. These very bonds will answer as good a purpose as any other, and thus relieve their mortgage to the State, and the result will be that the purchasers will be left looking to the State when the security of the State is gone. Littlefield to-day can force $500,000 of State bonds upon the market and buy them at 25 cents, and can with them destroy the State security to the extent of a half million. You may rest assured that to that extent the people will think your bonds should be retired also. You must perceive that it would be great folly to make any investment in the State bonds, unless those investing shall secure an application of a sufficient amount of the money paid to a settlement of the incumbrances existing on the railroad property on account of the 3721 original first mortgage bonded debt now outstanding.

But even after this shall have been done, it concerns the interest of capitalists to reflect upon the following facts, additional to those already set forth:

1. The people of Florida have not the ability to pay this debt.
2. The legislature which passed the acts referred to did not, to any extent, represent the tax-payers and property holders of the State, and the legislature which fixed this indebtedness upon the State was notoriously corrupt, and in the interest of a few railroad speculators not identified even by citizenship with the people of Florida, and these men manipulated the votes of the legislators by corruption so open and flagrant that there are at this time indictments pending in the circuit court of Leon County against several of the legislators for receiving, and against General Littlefield for paying, bribes to secure the passage of the very acts under the provisions of which these State bonds were issued.

3. The whole series of acts, both in and out of the legislature, 3722 including and beginning with the sale of railroads referred to in the first part of this communication, connected with the issue of these State bonds, has been dishonest, flagrantly corrupt, and going solely to aggrandize Littlefield, Hopkins, and a few others, their co-schemers and confederates, and it cannot be matter of surprise that the entire property-holding and tax-paying part of the people of Florida are not only adverse, but hostile to the payment of a debt which they know to have been put upon the State by the combined fraud of their governor, their indigent legislators, and a set of sharks and financial free lances under the leadership of Milton S. Littlefield, now president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. The people of this State, while they earnestly desire the success of any railroad enterprise which is legitimate and conducted with honesty, would greatly regret if foreign capitalists should make so injudicious an investment as a purchase of these State bonds must be. The 3723 State bonds, without the road as a security, available for the benefit of the bondholders (which now is not the case) amount to nothing. And if there be any truth in a report now current, that certain persons abroad have been already induced to make advances upon the State bonds, they should require such legislation to be had as will enable them to get this security. As a matter of course, they can, by refusing to advance further, force the corporation to make any just contract within its corporate powers or that the legislature will authorize. If the holders of the State bonds had the simple authority to exchange securities with the State it would be a great advantage to them. It is certainly advisable, at any rate, that they get all the security they can. One hundred and sixty miles of completed road, after being relieved of its existing encumbrances, can certainly be made a good security for the cost of constructing a road of same distance, and this, with a mortgage also upon the newly-constructed road, will be safe security.
3724 I ask that these suggestions may be considered.

Respectfully,

T. W. BREVARD, Jr.,
Counsel for Holders of First-Mortgage Bonds of P. & G. & T. R. R. Companies.

P. S.—I enclose herewith copies of the acts of the legislature referred to in the above communication, as officially published; also majority report of a committee of the assembly of the legislature of Florida, appointed under resolutions of the body to examine and take evidence concerning the conduct of Harrison Reed, governor, pending proceedings then inaugurated to impeach the governor upon charges of corruption in office, certain portions of which will be of some interest to you in connection with the history of the railroad manipulations to which reference is made in the above.

TALLAHASSEE, February 21, 1870.

His Excellency HARRISON REED,
Governor of Florida:

DEAR SIR: On behalf of parties holding original first-mortgage bonds of the (late) Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Com-3725 panies, I have been authorized to institute legal proceedings by an application for an injunction to restrain the issue of the State bonds in exchange for first-mortgage bonds upon the railroad property under the provisions of the act of the legislature passed at its last session, entitled "An act to alter and amend an act to perfect the public works of the State," the parties whom I represent apprehending that by such issue of bonds as that proposed by the said law, their rights of lien would be imperiled.

I am satisfied, however, that such proceedings will not be necessary if your excellency shall agree with me in the following propositions, viz: (1st.) That the original first mortgage bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad and the Tallahassee Railroad Companies, which remain outstanding and unpaid, incumbers the said property with a lien prior to all others now existing, or that may be created; and (2.) That there can be properly no issue of first-mortgage bonds upon the said property 3726 until the outstanding unpaid first-mortgage bonds of the original issue shall be paid up (at the pro rata valuation fixed by the sale) and cancelled.

I am sure that should your excellency agree with me in these views, no bonds of the State will be signed and delivered to the parties who are the beneficiaries under the said act until after a redemption of the outstanding bonds referred to, in which event the right of the new company to rebond the property cannot be disputed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. W. BREVARD, Jr.

(Reply endorsed:)

"I concur in the view of Colonel Brevard, and shall issue no bonds under the new law until the lien upon the road is satisfied.

(Signed) HARRISON REED,
Governor.

Exhibit C to cross-interrogations of Florida Central Railroad Company.

Articles of impeachment exhibited by the assembly of the State of Florida, in the name of themselves and all of the people of Florida, 3728 against Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, in maintenance and support of their impeachment against him for high crimes and misdemeaners in office, for incompetency and malfeasance, and conduct detrimental to good morals.

Article 1. That said Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy, at Tallahassee, in the State of Florida, unmindful of the high duties of his office, of his oath of office, and of the requirement of the constitution, that he shall see that the laws are faithfully executed, did unlawfully, and in violation of the constitution and laws of the State of Florida, cause*d* to be issued, and did himself sig*h* his official signature as governor, to a large number of State bonds, to the amount of five hundred and twenty-eight thousand ($528,000) in excess of the amount of bonds authorized to be issued by the act of the legislature of the State of Florida entitled "An act to alter and amend an act entitled 'An act to 3729 perfect the public works of the State,'" approved June 24, A. D.
1869, approved January 28, A. D. 1870, with intent, then and there, to violate the said act, whereby the said Harrison Reed, governor of Florida did, then and there commit and was guilty of a high crime in office of incompetency and malfeasance.

Article II. That in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy, at Tallahassee, in the State of Florida, said Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, unmindful of the high duties of his office, of his oath of office, and in violation of the constitution of the State of Florida, and contrary to the provisions of an act entitled "An act to alter and amend an act entitled 'An act to perfect the public works of the State,'" approved June 24, A. D. 1869, approved January 28, 1870, did, then and there, with intent to violate the constitution of the State and the act aforesaid, and without authority of law, fraudulently conspire to issue State bonds to the amount of one million of dollars ($1,000,000) and Gulf Central Railroad Company, for the use and benefit of persons and parties, and with full knowledge of the consent to said purpose, and in collusion with such persons and parties, for his and their pecuniary benefit, whereby said Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, did then and there commit, and was guilty of, a high crime in office, and of incompetency and malfeasance.

Article III. That said Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, unmindful of the high duties of his office, and of his oath of office, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy, at Tallahassee, in the State Florida, did cause to be issued, and did, himself, sign his official signature, as governor, to one million dollars of State bonds, for the purpose of purchasing the stock of the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company, for the use and benefit of persons and parties, contrary to and in violation of the constitution of the
pecially in violation of an act of the legislature of the State of Florida, entitled "An act to alter and amen*t* 'An act to perfect the public works of the State,'" approved June 24, A. D. 1869, approved January 28, 1870, and with intent to violate the laws of the State of Florida, and especially said act, whereby the said Harrison Reed, governor of the State of Florida, did then and there commit, and was guilty of, a high crime in office, and of incompetency and malfeasance.

Article IV. That Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy, at Tallahassee, in the State of Florida, unmindful of the high duties of his office, and of his oath of office, and in violation of the constitution and laws of the State, and especially of an act entitled, "An act to alter and amend," &c., did cause to be issued and did, himself, sign his official signature, as governor, to four million dollars of State bonds, for the use and benefit of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in the State of Florida, having full notice of the fradulent title of said company to the property of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads, and with intent to violate the constitution and laws of the State of Florida, and especially of the act of the legislature of the State of Florida, entitled "An act to alter and amend an act entitled 'An act to perfect the public works of the State,'" approved June 24, A. against 3733 THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company, The Florida Central Railroad Company, and others.

The Florida Central Railroad Company objects to the interrogatories filed by the complainants in the above cause, to be propounded to witnesses, none of whom are named, to be examined in behalf of the complainants, and states grounds of objection, as follows:

It objects to the said interrogations, and to each of them, because no witnesses are named to whom the said interrogatories are to be propounded. For this reason the said Florida Central Railroad Company objects to the issuing of a commission to take any testimony on the said interrogatory.

To the third interrogatory: The said Florida Central Railroad Company objects, because it is irrelevant and immaterial.

To the fourth interrogatory: It objects on the same ground.

To the fifth interrogatory: It objects on the same ground.

To the sixth interrogatory: It objects on the same ground, and because the testimony sought is hearsay, and not the best that the case admits of. 3734

To the seventh interrogatory: It objects on the same ground.

To the eighth interrogatory: It objects, because it is irrelevant and immaterial.

To the ninth interrogatory: It objects on the same ground.

To the tenth interrogatory: It objects on the same ground, and because a portion of the testimony sought is not the best that the case admits of.

To the eleventh interrogatory: It objects on the same ground.

To the twelfth interrogatory: It objects on the same ground.

To the thirteenth interrogatory: It objects, because the said interrogatory is irrelevant and immaterial.

It objects to the fourteenth interrogatory on the same grounds, and because the testimony sought is not the best that the case admits of.

It objects to the fifteenth interrogatory on the same ground.

It objects to the sixteenth interrogatory because it is immaterial and irrelevant.

3735 It objects to the seventeenth interrogatory on the same ground, and because the testimony sought is hearsay, and not the best that the case admits of.

It objects to the eighteenth interrogatory on the same grounds.

It objects to the nineteenth interrogatory because it is irrelevant and immaterial.

It objects to the twentieth interrogatory on the same grounds, and because the testimony sought is hearsay, and not the best that the case admits of

It objects to the twenty-second interrogatory because it is irrelevant and immaterial.

It objects to the twenty-third interrogatory on the same ground.

It objects to the twenty-fourth interrogatory on the same ground.

It objects to the twenty-fifth interrogatory on the same ground.

It objects to the twenty-sixth interrogatory on the same grounds.

Cross-interrogatories to be propounded by and in behalf of the Florida Central Railroad Company to such witnesses (though not now named) as may be produced on the part of the complainants in the above-entitled cause, if any should be produced:

3736 First cross-interrogatory. When were the bonds mentioned in the fifth direct interrogatory first put upon the market at the bourse or stock exchange in Amsterdam or elsewhere? Where were they first put upon the market? When, where, and by whom, to whom, and at what prices, were the first sales and deliveries of said bonds or of any of them made? When, where, and by whom, to whom, and at what prices were each subsequent sale and delivery of said bonds, or of any of them, made, so far as you know or can ascertain and disclose? State the number of the bonds sold and delivered each time.

Second cross-interrogatory. Read the printed paper annexed hereto, marked Exhibit A, being a copy of a communication dated at Jacksonville, Florida, February 8th, 1871, purporting to have been addressed by E. M. L'Engle to Holje Boissevain, bankers, Amsterdam, Holland, and state when and where you first saw the original, or what purported to be the original, or a copy of the said communication, and who 3737 had it. When and where, and from whom did you first hear of it? Where, when, and from whom did you subsequently hear of it as often as you did hear of it? State whether or not the said communication was received by the person or persons to whom it was addressed, and whether such person or persons were members or directors, or other officers of the bourse or stock exchange, of Amsterdam, in Holland. Where did he or they live, and what were his or their occupations? State whether such person or persons were connected in any manner with the sale of the bonds referred to in the telegraphic correspondence mentioned in the said communication; and if so, how were they connected therewith? State what degree of publicity was given to the said communication; was it made known to the members or directors or other officers of the bourse or stock exchange of Amsterdam, or to any, and which of them? Was it known to the persons or to any, and which of them, engaged in selling the said bonds? When, 3738 as nearly as you can state, was the said communication received or known in Amsterdam? State all that you know on the subject.

Third cross-interrogatory. Read the printed paper annexed hereto, marked Exhibit B, being a copy of a communication dated at Tallahassee, Florida, June, 1871, purporting to have been addressed by T. W. Brevard, jr., to the chairman of States and corporations arrears committee, 193, 194, 195, Gresham House, London, England, and state when and where you first saw the original, or what purported to be the original, or a copy of the said communication, and who had it? Where, when, and from whom did you first hear of it? Where, when, and from whom did you subsequently hear of it, as often as you did hear of it? State whether or not the said communication was received by the person or persons to whom it was addressed, and whether such person or persons were members or officers of the bourse or stock exchange of Amsterdam, in Holland. Where did he or they live, and what were his or 3739 their occupations? State whether such person or persons were connected in any manner, and what manner, with the sale of the bonds issued by the State of Florida, in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad. State what degree of publicity was given to the said communication; was it known to the members or directors, or other officers of the bourse or stock exchange of Amsterdam, or to any, and which of them? Was it known to the persons, or to any, and which of them, engaged in selling the said bonds? When, as nearly as you can state, was the said communication, or a copy of it received, or known in Amsterdam, or received by, or known to the persons, or any of them, who were selling said bonds of the State of Florida? What action was taken upon it? State all that you know on the subject.

Fourth cross-interrogatory. Read the printed papers attached hereto marked exhibit C, being a copy of articles numbered one, two, three, and four of impeachment, exhibited by the assembly of the State 3740 of Florida, against Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, and state when and where you first saw the said articles of impeachment. State when and where you first became informed that articles of impeachment had been exhibited by the assembly of the State of Florida against Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, for the cause stated in the said articles, or for any of the said causes. Were the said impeachment and the causes thereof, as set forth in said articles, known to the members or directors or other officers of the bourse or stock exchange of Amsterdam, or to any, and which of them, and when did they become so known? Were they known to John Collinson, of London, England, or to the persons, or to any of them, and to which of them, engaged in selling the said bonds of the State of Florida, issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and when did they become so known, as nearly as you can state?

Fifth cross-interrogatory. State whether or not any member or 3741 members, officer or officers, of the bourse or stock exchange of Amsterdam, in Holland, have ever been expelled, deposed, suspended, required to resign, or withdraw therefrom, fined, censured, or otherwise punished, or reflected upon by the said bourse or stock exchanges, government, guild, or association for improper practices or conduct, whether of commission or omission, in connection with the negociation or sale, or putting upon the market of said bonds (or any of them) of the State of Florida, issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. If you state who such member or members, officer or officers, were, whether he or they were expelled, deposed, suspended, required to resign or withdraw, fined or censured, or how otherwise punished or reflected upon, what was the improper practice or practices or conduct? State all you know on the subject.

Sixth cross-interrogatory. State whether in December, 1870, or about that time, Harrison Reed, the governor of Florida, did not send to one Boissevain, or to him and others in Amsterdam, Holland, a 3742 telegraphic dispatch, in substance, as follows: "Bonds recently recalled by the company; no provision will, therefore, be made for interest." State whether said telegraphic dispatch was not an answer to a telegraphic dispatch, in substance, as follows: "Being negotiating four million dollars of bonds issued by your State to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, beg to know, by telegraph from you, whether provision will be made for payment of interest, whatever the result of railroad traffic may be. Is the financial position of the State really sound, and have the bonds undoubted security?" Which was sent at or about that time to the said Harrison Reed, governor of the State of Florida, by the said Boissevain, or by him and others from Amsterdam, in Holland? State all that you know about this telegraphic correspondence. State who the persons were who sent the said dispatch to Governor Reed, and to whom he sent the reply. Where did they live? What was their occupation? Were they, or any of them, members or officers of the bourse or stock exchange of Amsterdam, or connected in any manner with the sale of the said bonds; if so what connection had they, or any of 3743 them, therewith? What degree of publicity was given to the said telegraphic correspondence? Was it made known to the members or directors or other officer of the bourse or stock exchange of Amsterdam, or to any, and which of them?. Was it known to the persons engaged in selling the said bonds, and to which of them? Had any of said bonds been sold and delivered at that time?

JAMES M. BAKER,
Solicitor for F. C. R. R. Co.

(Endorsed:) United States circuit court, northern district of Florida. J. Fred Schutte and others vs. the Western Divison of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, the Florida Central Railroad Company, and others. Exceptions and cross-interrogatories by the F. C. R. R. Company. Filed January 15, 1879. P. Walter, clerk.

3744 To DAVID ECKSTEIN, Esq.,
U. S. Consul, Amsterdam, Netherlands:

SIR: A commission was heretofore sent to you from this office, with interrogatories annexed, entitled in the cause of J. Fred Schutte and others against the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company and others, authorizing you to take the deposition of A. L. Worfbain, P. A. L. Van Ogtrop, Jan Frederick Schutte, Johannes Herman Warring, Araham Carel Wertheim, Frederick William Oewel, and F. H. Zieglaar, witnesses on the part of complainant.

By an omission in the proceeding, the cross-interrogatories on the part of the defendant were not sent to you, which, being brought to the attention of the court, the leave to file and forward cross-interrogatories was granted, which are herewith inclosed to you.

You are therefore instructed to address to each of the several witnesses the said cross-interrogatories, certified copies of which, from the originals on file in this office, are hereto annexed, which you are 3745 directed to return to this office, with the direct interrogatories and deposition of the witnesses duly certified.

Respectfully, yours,

PHILIP WALTER, Clerk.

Jacksonville, Fla., March 1, 1879.

P. S.—These instructions are sent at the request of the defendants' solicitor.—P. W.

Northern district of Florida.

vs.
THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company et al.

Cross-interrogatories on the part of defendants, to be propounded to A. L. Worfbain, P. A. L. Van Ogtrop, Jan Frederick Schutte, Johannes Herman Warring, Abraham Carel Wertheim, Frederick Willem Oewell, and F. H. Zieglaar, witnesses on the part of complainants.

Defendant excepts to the third, fourth, fifth, sixth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth, eleventh, twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth, twentieth, twenty- 3746 first, twenty-second, twenty-third, twenty-fourth, and twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth direct interrogatories, on the part of the complainants, because the said several interrogatories are leading, illegal, irrelevant, and incompetent, and the defendant further excepts for the reason that the said interrogatories call for conclusions and opinions of the witnesses instead of facts, and call for hearsay evidence, and call for secondary and not the best evidence, and because the same are not complete, in omitting to file the Exhibit A mentioned in the fourth interrogatories; and defendant further objects to the said interrogatories because they are a*u*gumentative and suggest conclusions to the witnesses instead of calling for facts and information within their knowledge.

And the exceptions of defendant are not waived by the cross-examination of the witnesses, but, on the contrary, are expressly and hereby reserved.

Cross-interrogatory number one. When did you become a 3747 member or director of the stock exchange or bourse of Amsterdam? State precisely what functions you perform therein; are you not a speculator in stock and bonds on the said bourse or exchange? and state fully your connection therewith.

Cross-interrogatory number two. When did you first see or hear of a Florida State bond? Who brought the same to your attention; in what manner, and for what purpose? How do you know what railroad the bonds you saw, if any, were designed to construct? Was your information written or verbal; and, if written, by who and when written? and produce a copy thereof. When, how, and from whom did you learn the matters you speak of? Please give full details, with names, dates, and particulars.

Interrogatory number three. If you say you are familiar with the purchase and sale of bonds, foreign and domestic, then please state what, within your knowledge, is and ought to be the value of an eight (8) per cent. bond issued by a State free from all doubt as to validity and title. What did first-class 8 per cent. bonds sell for on 3748 the bourse and exchange of which you are a director or a member in 1870 and up to 1872? State fully your knowledge and information on this subject.

Cross-interrogatory number four. How do you know by whom the said Florida State bonds were put on the market at the exchange or bourse? If you say they were put on the same, what connection, if any, had you thereunto, and what induced you to have such connection, if any? With whom did you converse, or from whom did you acquire your information in regard to said bonds?

Cross-interrogatory number five. Do you not know that said Florida State bonds were put on the market in Holland after they had failed in England? And do you not know that they were so put on the market by John Collinson, G. M. Boissevain, A. J. Milden, Adrian Stoop, Joseph Zadock, with the co-operation and knowledge of yourself, for purely speculative purposes? And do you not know that the bonds were offered in Holland by a proposal or prospectus which had just 3749 been printed in England, in English, and then translated and printed in Holland in the Dutch language? And do you not know that the printed paper hereto annexed, marked B, is a correct copy of the proposal or prospectus which was translated into the Dutch language and used for placing said bonds on the market? And did you ever see any other prospectus or proposal used for the sale of said bonds? And if you say you did, please produce a copy thereof, and make the same a part of your answer.

Cross-interrogatory number six. Do you not know that before the said bonds were sold or purchased on your said bourse or stock exchange, that statements had been circulated and published in the public journals, and circulated before the public, that said Florida State bonds were alleged to have been fraudulently and illegally issued, and were issued in violation of the constitution or organic law of the State of Florida, and had been so pronounced? And do you not know that in consequence of such charges, that legal opinions were asked and telegrams sent to the governor of Florida for information, and that was alleged to 3750 be the opinion of some of the judges of the supreme court of Florida, which opinion was sought and procured for the purpose of allaying the suspicions and charges of fraud alleged against said Florida State bonds, from and after about the month of June, 1870, up to and in the year 1871. Please state fully and in detail all the knowledge and information in reference to the charges of fraud alleged against said bonds, before and during the time the same were being sold in the market.

Cross-interrogatory number seven. Do you not know that no decision of any kind was made by the directors or managers of your said bourse or stock exchange until after the legal opinions were asked and the telegrams sent to the governor of Florida inquiring into the validity of said Florida State bonds, as mentioned in the preceding cross-question? And amongst other modes of inquiry caused by the reports that were in circulation, do you not know that Messrs. Holje, Boissevain, or Holje and Boissevain, bankers of Amsterdam, Holland, on the 18th 3751 day of December, 1870, addressed a telegram to the governor of Florida, in the following, or substantially the following, words, that is to say:

"Being negotiating four million bonds issued by your State, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, beg to know by telegraph from you whether provisions made for payment interest, whatever result, railroad traffic; financial position of State really sound, and bonds undoubted security?"

And do you not know that in reply to said telegram so sent that the governor of Florida sent by cable the following information:

"Bonds recently recalled by the company; no provision will therefore be made for interest."

And do you not know that on the 8th day of February, 1871, that E. M. L'Engle addressed to said Holje and Boissevain an elaborate letter, advising them and all persons through them, that said Florida State bonds were fraudulent; illegal and void, and were not good or valid securities, and do you not know that the charges of fraud and 3752 illegality, so pronounced in the United States and England, were reported and published, in whole or in part, by the papers published in Amsterdam and other places? Please state with care and particularity, all that you know or were informed on the subject of the fraudulent issue of said bonds.

Cross-interrogatory number eight. Do you not know that the first disposal of said bonds was made by John Collinson, Hopkins and Company, and Boissevain and others, on or after the 19th day of November, 1870, and that the last sale or disposition of said bonds was made on or previous to the 21st day of July, 1871? And do you not know that none of the said bonds numbered about twenty-eight hundred (2800) were sold within the time above named? If you say you ever saw, sold or purchased, or held any of said bonds, numbered above twenty-eight hundred (2800), previous to the year 1873, state where it was, who owned the same, and what disposition was made of said bond or bonds, and by whom. Please give the names of the parties, and state all the facts and circumstances.

3753 Cross-interrogatory number nine. Do you not know that said Florida State bonds, in consequence of the charges of fraud and illegality circulated against them, were not regularly sold in the market, either in London or Amsterdam, but on the contrary do you not know that said bonds were nominally taken into account by Hopkins and Company at about one-half of their par value, or say at £100 sterling, or about five hundred ($500) dollars for a thousand ($1,000) dollar bond? And do you not know that the same were taken on speculation by John Collins, at about £38 sterling, or about $190 per bond advance, which said advance was a speculative profit shared in by the said Hopkins and Company, Collinson, Boissevain and others, in London and Amsterdam, who formed a syndicate for that purpose? Please state fully when, and in what manner, you were connected with the purchase and sale of said bonds.

Interrogatory number ten. Do you not know that about the sum of $400,000 of the gross proceeds of the sale of said bonds were deducted to pay the interest as it accrued from time to time and to 3754 float said bonds in the market? State fully your knowledge and information on this subject of the sale and purchase of said bonds.

Cross-interrogatory number eleven. If you say bonds varied in price, do you not know that such price, or decline in price, was wholly caused by yourself and others, who were speculating in them on the market, which you created for speculative purposes? Do you not know that parties speculating in said bonds would sell them at one time and purchase at another for purely speculative purposes, and thereby change the market up or down to suit their own purposes; and that it was only by such speculation that the price of said bonds were effected upward or downward in the market? Or if you say that the said market price of said bonds was affected by any other cause, state fully and distinctly what such cause was, giving the particulars thereof.

3755 Cross-interrogatory number twelve. Give the exact names and address of the persons, if any, who placed said bonds on the market, and spoke to you about the "termini" of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad. And were you at any time advised of the existence of a body corporate called and styled the Florida Central Company? And, if yea, state who spoke to you about such railroad company, when such conversation occurred, and what was said. Please give the name of the person or persons who spoke to you about said Florida Central Company and state and set forth the reason therefor with all the details.

Cross-interrogatory number thirteen. Do you not know that said bonds were offered in the market in the Netherlands by said John Collinson, Hopkins and Company, Boissevain and others, after the same had failed in England because of the charges of fraud and illegality alleged and charged before the public in the issue of said bonds; and do you not know that said bonds were propounded to the public by a prospectus first printed and used in England, and then translated into the Dutch language and used in the Netherlands; and is not the printed 3756 paper annexed hereto, marked B, a correct copy of the original prospectus in English, before the same was translated into the Dutch language? And produce a copy of the translated prospectus as used in Amsterdam, and elsewhere in Holland, in the offering of said bonds on the market.

Cross-interrogatory number fourteen. Do you now own, or did you ever own, any of said Florida State bonds? And if you say you did, or do now, own any of said bonds, state the exact number thereof, and state when you made the first purchase, and when you made the last purchase of said bonds, or any of them, and state the precise amount you paid for said bonds at each and every time you was a purchaser thereof. And state from whom you made such purchase, or purchases, and what induced you to make the same. And state whether such sale and purchase was written or verbal, and if written produce the same or a copy thereof as part of your answer. And state fully, and in detail, all the facts and circumstances attending your purchase of said bonds.

3757 Cross-interrogatory number fifteen. Do you not know that the interest on said bonds was paid up to and including January, A. D. 1873, out of the proceeds of the bonds, and from no other source or fund, and that a large amount of the proceeds of said bonds were set apart for that purpose, and that the payment of interest ceased as soon as the proceeds of the said bonds set apart for that purpose was exhausted?

Cross interrogatory number sixteen. Do you not know that soon after the payment of interest on said bonds ceased in the year 1873, and in the month of October of that year, that a committee, composed of some of said syndicate, which speculated in said bonds, and who placed the same on the market in Amsterdam and Rotterdam, that is to say, G. M. Boissevain, A. J. Milders, A. Strow, N. J. den Tex, and Joseph Zadocks, were appointed a committee or board of trustees, under special articles of association, to assume charge of all litigation affecting said bonds, and to represent in that behalf and to bind the holders of said bonds? And if you state such was the fact, then state whether said 3758 committee still exists with their process so delegated unrevoked.

State fully your knowledge on this subject.

Cross-interrogatory number seventeen. Do you not know that on or about the 12th day of January, 1877, that one Frank K. R. Sherwin, Henry R. Jackson, and Charles H. Simonton, for themselves and associates, entered into a speculation and adventure, called the memorandum plan, which is made part of the bill of complaint filed in this cause, marked Schedule D, and do you not know that said Sherwin and his associates, as a part of said adventure and speculation, did, previous to the said 12th day of January, 1877, to wit, under date of the 15th day of October, 1876, form a pretended company, or body coporate, called the Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company, with a capital stock of $3,000,000 and a bond issue of $2,808,000? And do you not know that the said Sherwin, Jackson, Simonton and their associates were, by said plan to have and retain two thirds part or upwards of the benefits derived from said memorandum plan, or so-called Jacksonville and 3759 Mobile Railroad Company, and the holders of said Florida
State bonds were to have one-third part or less of the proceeds of said bonds? Please state fully all you know, if anything, about the existence of said memorandum plan and formation of said so-called Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company.

Cross-interrogatory number eighteen. Do you not know that the expense of proceeding under said memorandum plan, to secure the sale by the governor of Florida, as trustee of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile, and Florida Central Railroads, was and is to be borne by the said Sherwin and his associates, in consideration of their receiving two-thirds part and upwards of the benefits to be derived therefrom? And do you not know that the sale and real object of this suit is to carry said so-called memorandum plan, adventure, and speculation into effect?

Cross-interrogatory number nineteen. Are you not interested in the result of this suit, personally and pecuniarily? And, if yea, state the exact amount, nature, and extent of such interest, and when, and 3760 in what manner you acquired such interest.

Cross-interrogatory number twenty. Do you or not know Frank R. Sherwin, Charles D. Willard, and Jacobus Wertheim; and have you made their acquaintance in connection with said memorandum plan and the prosecution of this suit? And have you not been conversed with by said Sherwin, Willard, and Wertheim, about the prosecution of this suit, and your testimony to be given in the same? And have you or not been talked to and conversed with by said Sherwin, Willard and Wertheim, or any one else, about your testimony and the purport and tenor thereof in this cause? And give the name and address of each person who has spoken to you about the same previous to this, your examination. And have you or not been furnished or shown, and had read to you the same interrogatories upon which you have been examined by the complainants in this suit, or have you not been shown, or had read to you, interrogatories of the same or similar tenor and 3761 effect, previous to your being sworn and examined in this suit under the present commission? State the name or names, and give the address of each and every person who so spoke to you, showed, or read to you any paper about the subject-matter of your examination; and state when, and where, and under what circumstances it occurred; and state who applied to you to give your testimony in this cause, and when and where it occurred.

Cross-interrogatory number twenty-one. Did you or not execute any power of attorney, or give any authority, written or verbal, to one Frank R. Sherwin at any time, and especially previous to or on the 22d day of September, 1876, authorizing him to represent you or any other holder of Florida State bonds, or empower him to petition the State of Florida, through the governor thereof, as your trustee, to seize and sell the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and the Florida Central Railroad; or had you any knowledge of said Sherwin preparing and presenting said petition in your name at the same time it was done, if such, in fact, did transpire?

3762 Cross interrogatory twenty-two.

(NOTE. This and the succeeding interrogatories, addressed especially to the witness, J. Fred. Schutte.)

Are you or are you not the same J. Fred. Schutte who is a party complainant in this suit? Are you or are you not the same J. Fred. Schutte who made a sworn affidavit before the United States consul at Amsterdam on the first day of March, A. D. 1877, in which you stated upon oath you were the holder, and only the holder, of one hundred and three (103) bonds of the State of Florida, issued under the act of January 28, 1870, a copy of which said sworn statement, containing the list and numbers of said bonds, is made part of this question, marked C? And are you or are you not the same J. Fred. Schutte who made another sworn statement and executed another power of attorney, dated the 26th day of July, 1878, wherein you, at the last named date, state you are the holder or owner of four hundred and forty-seven (447) additional numbers of said bonds, a copy of which said power of 3763 attorney, with the numbers of said additional bonds, is made part of this question, marked D? And are you or are you not the same J. Fred. Schutte who, on the 5th day of August, 1878, upon your oath, executed two additional affidavits and powers of attorney, one of which described you as the holder or owner of fifty-eight (58) additional of said bonds, and the other as the holder and owner of thirty-nine (39) additional of said bonds? The numbers of the bonds described in said two papers are made a part of this question and appended hereto, marked E and F, respectively.

Cross-interrogatory number twenty-three (addressed to the witness, J. Fred. Schutte). If you say you are the same J. Fred. Schutte who is one of the complainants in this suit, and who made the several statements mentioned in the preceeding interrogatory number twenty-two, then please state—

I. From whom and when did you obtain possession of the said 103 bonds described in the paper "C," made part of the last preceding question number twenty-two. Please give the exact deates when you acquired the same, and state the exact price you paid therefor giv-3764 ing the name or names of the persons from whom you received them, with a verified account of the sale and purchase thereof.

II. From whom and when did you obtain possession of the 447 bonds described in the paper D, made part of the preceding question, number twenty-two? Give the exact date thereof and the name and address of the person or persons from whom you received them; and if you say you purchased said bonds, then give the exact price you paid, and to whom, together with a verified copy of account of sale and purchase so made by you.

III. From whom and when did you obtain possession or purchase, if you say you did purchase, the 58 bonds described in the paper "C," made part of said question No. 22? State the exact date, together with a verified copy of the account of said sale and purchase, if any such was made.

IV. From whom and when did you obtain possession or purchase, if you say you did purchase, the 38 bonds described in the "F," made part of the last preceding interrogatory No. 22? State the exact 3765 date, and also the exact price, if any, you paid therefor, a' present a part of your answer, a verified copy of such sales and purchase.

V. State who, besides yourself, if any one, is interested in the said several lots of bonds so held by you and described in the said papers C, D, E, and F, giving the exact name and address of each party, with the extent and amount of their interest therein, and how and in what manner the same was acquired.

Cross-interrogatory number twenty-four (addressed to the witness, J. Fred. Schutte). Do you not know that none of said bonds, numbered above 2800, were sold in the market in the manner that these numbered from 1 to 2800 were handled and speculated in? But on the contrary, do you not know that said bonds numbered above 2800 were taken to account and in pledge by John Collinson and G. M. Boissevain and others, who advanced the money thereon, to pay certain private debts, and to pay the interest due January 1st, 1873, on the remainder of said bonds to float and keep up the price of the same in the market 3766 for speculative purposes? And do you not know that said Boissevain and Collinson and others, engaged in placing said bonds in the market, are still interested therein, and are still in part or in whole the owners thereof? And do you not know that all the bonds numbered above 3000, held by you, and especially the bonds numbered above 3000, described in your power of attorney to Jacobus Wirtheim and C. D. Willard, dated July 26th, 1878, were received by you from said Boissevain and others connected with him for the purposes of this suit, and for the promoting the sale of said Florida railroads, under said memorandum plan.

Cross-interrogatory number twenty-five (addressed to the witness, J. Fred. Schutte). Do you not know that a large majority of said Florida State bonds involved in this suit and held by yourself and others for the purpose of said memorandum plan, besides those held on account by said Collinson and Boissevain, have been purchased at mere nominal prices—say five or six cents on the dollar—by the parties prosecuting this suit, and are you not personally interested therein?

3767 Cross-interrogatory number twenty-six (addressed to the witness, J. Fred Schutte). Why did you not state the whole interest you had in the said bonds in your affidavit sworn to on the 1st day of March, 1877 (paper "C" is cross-interrogatory number twenty-two), and what motive had you in acquiring or becoming the holder of any more of said bonds after that date, or since the said bonds have been declared fraudulent, void, and unconstitutional by the supreme court of the State of Florida? State in what manner you expect to realize on said bonds, and were they or not placed in your hands by Jacobus Wertheim, Frank R. Sherwin, C. D. Willard, or others, co operating with Williard or others, co-operating with them to be held by you for the purposes of this suit.

Cross-interrogatory number twenty seven (addressed to the witness, J. Fred Schutte). Do you not know that the bonds numbered above 3,000 represented by you, as the holder thereof, are the same bonds described as the property of G. M. Boissevain, and Dr. Nicholas Jacob den Tex, in the petition addressed to the governor of Florida, by 3768 your attorney in fact, C. D. Willard, on the 31st day of March, 1877, and described in the affidavit of said Boissevain and Den Tex, sworn to before the United States consul. And if you say they are the same bonds described and numbered in said petition and affidavit, then state what was their motive for transferring said bonds to you, and what was your motive for receiving and holding the same? State fully and in detail the facts in reference to your possession of said bonds, and whether you have not acquired such possession in reference to said memorandum plan since the commencement of this suit?

Cross-interrogatory number twenty-eight (addressed to the witness, J. Fred Schutte). Are you or not bound to defray the expense of this suit? And if you say you are not so bound, then state who is to provide the means for the prosecution of this suit? And do you not know that the same is prosecuted for the sole purpose of absorbing and appropriating the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile and Florida Central 3769 Railroads into a corporation called the Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad through the medium of the memorandum plan, to which you are a party in interest?

Cross-interrogatory number twenty-nine (addressed to the witness, J. Fred. Schutte). Do you or not know that a large number, and in fact, a majority of said Florida State bonds have been obtained from those who originally purchased them upon the market at mere nominal prices, say from five to seven cents on the dollar, by parties interested in the said memorandum plan, and the prosecution of this suit; and, if yea, state to the best of your knowledge, information, and belief what number of said bonds have been so purchased, and the prices paid therefor.

JAS. B. STEWART,
Solicitor for Defendant.

DEFINITIVE PROSPECTUS.

A.—Annex referred to in the affidavit of J. Wertheim, LL. D., dated 28th day of May, 1877.

1870.

FLORIDA STATE LOAN.

Issue of 4,000,000 dollars authorized by act of the legislature, dated 28th of January, 1870, in bonds to bearer of 1,000 dollars each, bearing interest at the rate of 8 per cent. per annum.

Principal and interest payable in gold, free from all United States taxes.

Payments will be made at the Florida State agency in the city of New York of the principal at par on January 1st, 1900, and the interest on January 1st and July 1st, in each year.

The bonds, with accrued interest since 1st July (being £6 18*s.* 2*d.*) are offered at the price of £183 per $100, making the interest equal to nearly 9½ per cent. per annum.

3771 Payment on application £10 per 1,000 dollar bond, and the remainder on allotment. Should no allotment be made the application money will be returned in full.

Messrs. are authorized to receive subscriptions for the Florida State bonds to the amount of $14,000,000.

The State of Florida pledges its credit for the above, guaranteeing payment in gold of both principal and interest.

The governor of Florida (Harrison Reed) makes the following statement:

That the real property therein, taken at its present minimum value, is $50,000,000, on which a tax of ½ of one per cent. is annually levied, being $250,000.

That an addition of $30,000 to $50,000 is receivable from specific taxes on polls, specific licenses, etc.

That there are four hundred miles of railroad and a thousand miles of telegraph line in operation, oyster beds and fisheries along a thousand miles of the co'st, equal to the best in the world; foreign corporations doing business in the State, insurance companies, etc.; all of which pay no taxes, and from which large tributes can, if necessary, be levied.

3772 As further security for her debt, the State of Florida possesses already 11,000,000 acres of public lands, and will receive, when the government surveys are completed, over 5,000,000 acres additional.

The money to be now raised is solely to be devoted to railroad purposes, and will be paid on completion of every twenty miles, at the rate of $16,000 per mile, the State being secured by first mortgage liens conditional upon the payment by the company of principal and interest.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, to aid in constructing which the money will be applied, is a line 450 miles in length, of which 250 miles are completed, fully equipped, and given over to traffic. The full paid capital stock is $6,550,000, and the present earnings on the finished portion of the road show a net return of over $1,380,000 per annum. This railway company has mortgaged to the State its entire property, including all real estate, road-bed, iron, equipments, and all franchises, as additional security for the prompt payment 3773 of principal and interest of these bonds.

The total debt of the State of Florida is $1,011,756, held by the United States Government, and within the State itself.

All the original documents connected with this loan have been submitted to Messrs. Ashurst, Morris & Co., solcitors, of 6, Old Jewry, London, who have stated that they are fully satisfied that they are in perfect order, and that the bonds are properly issued.

Subscription lists will be simultaneously opened in London, Frankfort, Amsterdam, and Rotterdam, and prospectuses and forms of application can be obtained in London of Messrs.

D., advocate, of Amsterdam, and Charles D. Willard, solicitor and counsellor at law, at Washington, D. C., United States of America, jointly or separately, as they may deem advisable, my solicitor and attorney, to take such proceedings in the U. S. courts as they, or either of them, may deem best for my protection as a holder and owner of said bonds, and especially to prosecute and to terminate the proceedings instituted and now pending in the U. S. courts for the northern district of Florida, United States of America, under and in the suit commenced by the said Charles D. Willard in the court, entitled J. Fred. Schutte et alii. vs. The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mo-3782 bile Railroad Company and others, under which suit so entitled by Charles D. Willard, as the attorney-in-fact for said complainants, Hon. Joseph P. Bradley, associate justice of the United States Supreme Court, did appoint Col. Calvin H. Allen receiver of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, on the 14th day of August, A. D. 1877.

The said Jacobus Wertheim and Charles D. Willard, as said solicitors, jointly or separately, as they may determine, are especially hereby authorized and empowered to prosecute said cause to a final hearing, and to obtain and to execute a sale of the Florida Central and of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, as therein prayed in said bill, and [or] to take such other proceedings for my protection as they may deem best for my interest, hereby ratifying and confirming all that my said solicitors and attorneys, or either of them, may do or cause to be done in the premises, as I could if personally present at the 3783 doing thereof.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Northern district of Florida:

I, Philip Walter, clerk of the United States circuit court, in and for the northern district of Florida, do hereby certify that the foregoing is a true copy of the original cross-interrogatories and exhibits on file in my office.

Witness my hand and the seal of said court, at the city of Jacksonville, in said district, this third day of March, 1879.

[SEAL OF COURT.]

PHILIP WALTER,
Clerk.

3786 Deposition of Jan Frederik Schutte.

On the 29th day of March, 1879, the said JAN FREDERIK SCHUTTE, being first duly sworn by the said commissioner (by interpretation of William Anderson, an interpreter specially sworn by the said commissioner, truly and faithfully to interpret the oath and interrogatories to be administered and the answers to be given thereto by the witness), to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, relative to the cause specified in said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross-interrogatories by interpretation as beforesaid, as follows:

To the first interrogatory, this witness saith: My name is Jan Frederik Schutte, aged 45 years, and I am a commission agent in stocks.

2. To the second interrogatory: At Amsterdam, in Holland.

3. To the third interrogatory: I have been a member of the stock exchange in Amsterdam, since 1858, and have from that date 3787 dealt largely in foreign and domestic securities.

4. To the fourth interrogatory: I know perfectly well that the Florida 8 per cent. State bonds, so called, were sold in Amsterdam, and that the Exhibit A referred to is a correct copy of said bonds.

5. To the fifth interrogatory: The bonds were put upon the market by the banking-houses of Holje & Boissevain, of Amsterdam, and A. J. & M. Milders, of Rotterdam, Holland, upon a printed prospectus issued to the public over their signatures, bearing date December 19th, 1780, a copy of which I herewith annex as part of my answer, printed in Dutch and translated into English, marked J. F. S., No. 1. There were also open for inspection at the banking-house of Holje & Boissevain, at the same time, the act of the legislature of Florida of January 28th, 1870, duly authenticated under the great seal of the State of Florida, authorizing the issue of said bonds; a map issued by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, showing the railway as commencing at Jacksonville and running west 250 miles; the opinion 3788 of the supreme court of Florida, showing the legality of the bonds, and various other documents of a like public character.

6. To the sixth interrogatory: No authority from the officers of the stock exchange was necessary.

7. To the seventh interrogatory: I have answered this already.

8. To the eighth interrogatory: In December, 1870, at from 80 to 80½ per cent.; there was a very large number of buyers at such prices, and the bonds passed through many hands at those prices.

To the ninth interrogatory: First at about 80, and afterwards rising as high as about 86 per cent.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: They declined as soon as the coupon due on the 1st of July, 1873, was not paid.

11. To the eleventh interrogatory: I know only what was stated in the prospectus and exhibited on the map, open for inspection at Holje & Boissevain's at the time when the bonds were first put 3789 on the market. I recollect perfectly well that 250 miles were said to be completed, and to belong to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, which the map I have mentioned very clearly showed.

12. To the twelfth interrogatory: I have already stated all I know about this.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: I never heard of any such statement until after default in payment of the coupon in July, 1873.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: The bonds were considered a good investment, with double security, viz: the State of Florida and the railway, 250 miles long and in operation, as represented, and I never heard that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company had not the right to sell or depose of said bonds.

15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: This I have already answered.

16. To the sixteenth interrogatory: I never heard anything about this.

17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: Such payments were 3790 made semi-annually until default; each coupon was forty dollars and payable in New York. We sold the coupons to the bankers and brokers, who collected them, because no notice was given in Holland.

18. To the eighteenth interrogatory: Holje and Boissevain informed the public in Holland by advertisement in the financial papers that the governor of Florida had appointed an agent in New York to pay such interest. The publication of such notice confirmed the confidence in the bonds.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I am one of the complainants, and know all my co-sufferers, and we join together to vindicate our rights against robbers who stole our property. I would never have joined people unless I knew they were of high standing on the exchange of Amsterdam.

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: I know that a large number of the complainants purchased the bonds and did so believing they 3791 were making a good investment. I know it because some of them bought at the exchange when I was present.

21. To the twenty-first interrogatory: I purchased and sold for my own account, and for others. I did so at several times, and at various prices, from 80 per cent. downward. I do not remember the names of the persons for whom I purchased.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: They were introduced in the market in the manner I have already stated.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: I never heard of any such claim.

24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: I never heard of any such notice or claim.

25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: Had such a notice been published, it would have been considered a forgery, but if confirmed in an authentic way, the bonds would have lost all credit in the market.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: I have already said that the law respecting the bonds was opened for inspection at the bank-3792 ing house of Holje & Boissevain, together with other documents, showing the validity of the same, and the opinion of the judges of the supreme court of Florida, the governor of Florida, and others, at and during the time of the sales.

Final. To the final interrogatory: I have nothing further to add.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendants, the Florida Central Railroad Company.

1. To the first cross interrogatory: I have already said all I know about this.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I have never heard anything about this before.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: I never before heard of any such person as F. W. Brevard, or of the person to whom such alleged letter purports to have been sent, and have never before heard such a matter mentioned.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: This is the first time I 3793 have heard of the impeachment of the governor of Florida, or that I have heard it spoken of.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: No person was ever to my knowledge expelled, or required to resign, becaus' of his connection with the sale of the said Florida bonds.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I never heard any such telegrams spoken of before.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendants, The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, et al.

1. To the first cross interrogatory: I am a commission agent in stocks, and a member of the firm of J. Fred Schutte & Company, at Amster dam, Holland, since 1858, and became a member of the stock exchange in the said year. My firm deals in foreign and domestic stocks and bonds.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: First heard of the Florida 8 per cent. State bonds, so called, in December, 1870, through the prospectus issued to the public in Holland by the banking house of Holje & 3794 Boissevain, of Amsterdam, and A. J. and M. Milders, of Rotterdam. The bonds referred to were represented to be secured by a line of complete railway, commencing at Jacksonville, Florida, running west to Quincy, with branches at Monticello and Tallahassee, and 250 miles long, being then actually in operation, as shown by a printed map duly published and exhibited at said banking houses at the time such prospectus was issued, in December, 1870, together with other documents already spoken of in my previous answers.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: It would depend on circumstances.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I know that Holje & Boissevain and A. J. and M. Milders were the bankers, because the prospectus spoken of stated to that effect, and it was so advertised in several financial papers in Holland. I had no connection with putting the said loan on the market, excepting in buying said bonds for many of my cus-3795 tomers, by their orders, in the regular course of business as well as on my own account. My knowledge was acquired in the manner I have already stated.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: I have no knowledge of John Collinson or of attempts made in England to sell the bonds. I believe the prospectus was printed in Amsterdam. I have already spoken of such papers as I saw respecting the loan, but have no copies thereof. The only prospectus I ever saw or heard of is the one issued by Holje & Boissevain and A. J. and M. Milders, December 19, 1870.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I never saw any such statements before the bonds were sold, but saw the opinion I have already stated.

7. To the seventh cross-interrogatory: I know nothing about any telegram sent or received by Holje & Boissevain in respect to these bonds, or of any letter from E. M. L'Engle, and have never before heard of any such person as L'Engle.

8. To the eighth cross-interrogatory: I only know that the bonds 3796 were put on the market in Holland, as I have already stated.

9. To the ninth cross-interrogatory: I knew that said bonds wers sold in the market regularly like other securities, first at 80 per cent., and that they afterwards rose as high as 85 or 86 per cent. I know nothing about Hopkins & Co. or Collinson. I bought my bonds in the market in the usual and regular way.

10. To the tenth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing about the payment of the interest, except what I have already stated.

11. To the eleventh cross-interrogatory: I only know that the bonds varied in price from time to time, like other securities did.

12. To the twelfth cross-interrogatory: I have already stated all I know on this matter. I had never heard of any such company as The Florida Central Railroad Company until the present litigation.

13. To the thirteenth cross-interrogatory: I have already answered all I know about the prospectus issued by Holje & Boissevain 3797 and A. J. and M. Milders.

14. To the fourteenth cross-interrogatory: I have already answered this question.

15. To the fifteenth cross-interrogatory: I have already answered as fully as possible that I know nothing about where the interest money was obtained from.

16. To the sixteenth cross-interrogatory: I know that such a committee was appointed, but that committee no longer exists, the bondholders having directly authorized their attorneys, Jacobus Wertheim and C. D. Willard, to act for them in all proceedings in America which they may deem proper to take for their interest and protection.

17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: I know that such an agreement, called the "Memorandum Plan," dated January 12th, 1877, was entered into, and that the same was and is now approved of by the bondholders. I believe the Schedule "D" is a correct copy of the same, and that The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company was organized as required by said "Memorandum Plan."

18. To the eighteenth cross-interrogatory: I know that the 3798 holders of said State bonds expect to pay their attorneys, Wertheim and Willard, as they have agreed to, for their services.

19. To the nineteenth cross-interrogatory: I am interested as an owner of bonds, as I have stated.

20. To the twentieth cross-interrogatory: I have known Dr. Wertheim for more than twenty-three years. I know Mr. Willard and Mr. Sherwin only since the present legal proceedings commenced. I have talked with my attorneys, Wertheim and Willard, about this suit and about the testimony to be given by me; and Dr. Wertheim has read over to me both the direct interrogatories and the cross-interrogatories proposed to me. Dr. Wertheim requested me to give my testimony in this suit.

21. To the twenty-first cross-interrogatory: The proceedings of the 22d of September, 1876, were taken at the instance of my then sole attorney, Dr. Wertheim, and met my approval.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: I am one of the com-
3799 plainants in this suit, and I am also the person who made the affidavits and powers of attorney referred; I believe that the papers marked C and D as well as those marked E and F are correct copies, and that they are true.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: I bought such bonds in the regular course of business in the open market, at prices varying from 80 per cent. downwards; but it is impossible for me to state from whom, or the dates when they were so purchased by me.

24. To the twenty-fourth cross-interrogatory: I bought the bonds which I now hold and own without any regard to their number, never even looking at their numbers, and knowing no distinction in the bonds by their numbers. I own and now hold the bonds as identified by numbers in the said powers of attorney and affidavits, and bought them all in regular course of business.

25. To the twenty-fifth cross-interrogatory: I know only at what prices and in what way I myself bought bonds. I know nothing 3800 about what other people paid, except from the daily quotations on 'change. I know nothing of the dealing of Collinson or Boissevain, except what I have already stated.

26. To the twenty-sixth cross-interrogatory: I have never made any concealments as to my dealings in said bonds. I bought my bonds, and I do not know whether Wertheim, or Willard, or Sherwin has any bonds. No bonds were ever placed in my hands by any one of them.

27. To the twenty-seventh cross-interrogatory: The bonds mentioned were only temporarily represented by Boissevain and Den Tex, as members of a committee, acting as trustees, which committee was discharged not long ago.

28. To the twenty-eighth cross-interrogatory: I have already answered this question as fully as I can.

29. To the twenty-ninth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing of that sort.

Examination taken, reduced to writing, subscribed by the witness and by the sworn interpreter, and sworn to by the witness this 3801 29th day of March, 1879, before

{ SEAL AM. CONSULATE, AMSTERDAM. } D. ECKSTEIN,
U. S. Consul and Commissioner.

Deposition of Andrea Godewyk Worfbain.

And on the first day of April, 1879, the said ANDREA GODEWYK WORFBAIN, being first duly sworn by said commissioner to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth relative to the cause specified in the said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, as follows, viz:

1. To the first interrogatory this witness saith: My name is Andrea Godewyk Worfbain; my age is forty-seven years; I am chairman of the board of the union for the stock exchange and stockbroker.

2. To the second interrogatory: At Amsterdam.

3802 3. To the third interrogatory: Yes. I was elected in December, 1871, member of the committee of the stock exchange, and also engaged and acquainted with the purchase and sale of domestic and foreigh securities.

4. To the fourth interrogatory: Yes. I know that they were put into the market, and believe that the copy shown me is a true copy of the said bond.

5. To the fifth interrogatory: Yes. Messrs. Holje & Boissevain, at Amsterdam, and Messrs. A. J. and M. Milders, at Rotterdam, put these bonds on the market, and they issued a prospectus, dated 19th December, 1870, and laid for public inspection several documents and a map on which the road was indicated; and reliance was placed in the correctness of the statements put before the public.

6. To the sixth interrogatory: No authority was given; none was necessary.

7. To the seventh interrogatory: I have already answered this question in my answer to the preceeding interrogatory.

3803 8. To the eighth interrogatory: I have given, with Mr. T. A. L. Van Ogtrop, deputy member, on the 5th of December, 1877, a certificate sworn to before the United States consul, which answers completely your question.

9. To the ninth interrogatory: The certificate referred to answers this question.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: I have again to refer to my certificate in answer to this question.

11. To the eleventh interrogatory: I had no other information than those received from the bankers Holje & Boissevain on their prospectus and other documents published by them.

12. To the twelfth interrogatory: I must refer to my previous answer.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: I have not heard anything about it.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: I have never heard anything about it.

15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: This question is answered in my certificate I before referred to.

16. To the sixteenth interrogatory: I' answer to this question I must refer to the prospectus issued in Amsterdam.

3804 17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: The semi-annual coupons of 40 dollars each were sold by the owners and bought by bankers who collected them in America.

18. To the eighteenth interrogatory: No publication was given in Holland to my knowledge.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I know some of the complainants, not all of them; those whom I know are respectable persons and of good standing.

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: I cannot exactly answer this question, but I believe these persons bought those bona fide as an investment.

21. To the twenty-first interrogatory: I may have purchased for account of my customers, but don't remember price and number.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: They were first offered to the public by subscription, and the balance may have been sold in the open market.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: I don't know anything, nor did I ever receive any information about the matters here questioned.

3805 24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: It would has destroyed the confidence of the public in those bonds.

25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: It would have injured if not entirely stopped the sale.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: The bankers have advertised that the laws of Florida referring to this loan laid for public inspection at their office. As to the particulars of what those laws were I do not remember.

Final. To the final interrogatory: I have nothing to add, but I wish to confirm, as part of my testimony, the statement made by me on the 5th of December, 1877, before the United States consul at Amsterdam.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendant, the Florida Central Railroad Company:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory the witness saith: I refer to my statement made the 5th of December, 1877, before the United States consul at Amsterdam.

3806 2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I never saw any such documents as Exhibit A, now produced and shown to me, nor did I ever hear of it.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: I never knew or heard of any such communication as now exhibited to me marked "B."

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I knew nothing of any such articles of impeachment against the governor of Florida as contained in Exhibit C.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: Nobody has been expelled or in any other way punished on account of these Florida bonds business.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I don't know anything about such telegraphic correspondence.

Cross examined by and on behalf of the defendant, the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company et al.:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory this witness saith: I have answered this question already in answer to the direct interrogatories.

3807 2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I had my information from the prospectus issued at the time by Holje & Boissevain and A. J. and M. Milders.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: I cannot answer this question.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: Only by the prospectus issued by Holje & Boissevain. I had no connection whatever with the placing of the bonds on the market.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: I don't know that the Florida State bonds were placed at this market after they had failed in England. I only know of the prospectus issued by Holje & Boissevain.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I never heard of any charges of fraud in the issue of those bonds at the time they were issued and placed on the market.

7. To the seventh cross-interrogatory: I am utterly ignorant of any knowledge of the matters I am questioned about in this interrogatory.

8. To the eighth cross-interrogatory: I have to refer, in answer to this question, to the testimony given before the United States consul 5th December, 1877.

3808 9. To the ninth cross-interrogatory: As to the matters I am questioned on in this cross-interrogatory, I know nothing whatever. I had no connection with any such syndicate, if it ever existed.

10. To the tenth cross-interrogatory: I don't know anything about it.

11. To the eleventh cross-interrogatory: I know that such things happen, but as to whether any such practice prevailed in this instance, I cannot say.

12. To the twelfth cross-interrogatory: I never heard of any Florida Central Company.

13. To the thirteenth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing of the failure of the Florida bonds in the English market, before they were put on the market of Amsterdam, and I know of no other prospectus than that issued in Holland.

14. To the fourteenth cross-interrogatory: I never owned, nor do I now own, any Florida State bonds.

15. To the fifteenth cross-interrogatory: I have no knowledge of the matters I am questioned about in this cross-interrogatory.

16. To the sixteenth cross-interrogatory: Such a committee was formed, and I have no knowledge of its going out of existence.

3809 17. To the seventeenth cross-interrogatory: I don't know anything about such memorandum plan arrangements.

18. To the eighteenth cross-interrogatory: I don't know anything about these matters.

19. To the nineteenth cross-interrogatory: I am not in the least or anywise interested therein.

20. To the twentieth cross-interrogatory: I knew Mr. Wertheim for several years, and have been introduced to Mr. Charles D. Willard, and those gentlemen asked me to give my testimony.

21. To the twenty-first cross-interrogatory: I never gave such power of attorney to Frank A. Sherwin.

[SEAL OF CONSUL'S OFFICE.] D. ECKSTEIN,
U. S. Consul and Commissioner.

Deposition of Johannes Herman Warring.

And on this 1st day of April, 1879, the said JOHANNES HERMAN WARRING, first duly sworn by the said commissioner (by inter-3810 pretation of Alexander William Anderson, an interpreter specially sworn by the said commissioner, truly and faithfully to interpret the oath and interrogatories to be administered to and the answers to be given thereto, by the witness), to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, relative to the cause specified in said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, by interpretation, as aforesaid, as follows:

1. To the first interrogatory, this witness saith: My name is Johannes Herman Warring. I am 31 years of age, and commission agent in stocks at Amsterdam.

2. To the second interrogatory: At Amsterdam.

3. To the third interrogatory: I was commission agent in stocks and member of the stock exchange at Amsterdam, and I was engaged in the purchase and sale of bonds and other domestic and foreign securities dealt in on the bourse of Amsterdam.

3011 4. To the fourth interrogatory: Yes; I know that certain bonds, called 8 per cent. Florida bonds, were issued by authority of a law of the State of Florida to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, of which bonds the Exhibit "A" is a copy.

5. To the fifth interrogatory: The bonds referred to were introduced on the market of Amsterdam by the banking houses of Holje & Boissevain, of Amsterdam, and A. J. and M. Milders, of Rotterdam, according to a prospectus issued and signed by them on the 19th December, 1870. Various authenticated documents, as well as a map showing a continuous line of 250 miles railroad, were laid down for public inspection at the office of Holje & Boissevain. I believe that the prospectus and copies of the map were sent to several firms of brokers.

6. To the sixth interrogatory: At the time of floating the loan there existed no board of directors of the bourse whose authority was required.

7. To the seventh interrogatory: I have answered this in reply 3812 to the foregoing interrogatory.

8. To the eighth interrogatory: In December, 1870, the said bonds were first sold in the open market at about 80½ per cent.; there were large dealings in them by nearly all the stock brokers, and the bonds went from hand to hand with numerous buyers.

9. To the ninth interrogatory: I have already stated the price at which the bonds were at first sold; the price varied from time to time; I believe the highest figure was about 85 per cent.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: Yes; the price declined in 1873, when it was known that the July coupon remained unpaid.

11. To the eleventh interrogatory: I know nothing more than was stated in the prospectus issued by Holje & Boissevain, and A. J. and M. Milders, and shown in the map and other documents laid down for public inspection. I positively know that the bonds were issued on a line of 250 miles of railroad in operation.

3813 To the twelfth interrogatory: I have already fully answered this question.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: I state positively that no private or public information was ever given that any portion of the line of railroad indicated in the prospectus, and shown on the map laid down for public inspection, belonged to or was claimed to be owned by a corporation called the Florida Central Railroad Company. No one ever heard anything of the existence of the corporation called "The Florida Central Railroad Company" until the litigation commenced, after the default in the payment of interest.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: The bonds were bought because they were considered, according to the prospectus and other documents laid down for inspection at Holje & Boissevain's, to be a first-class security, and because the investment had a double guarantee, viz., the State of Florida and the railway property. We never got any public or private notice from the president, directors, or stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad Company, of any kind whatever, before July, 1873. We never heard that such a company did exist.

3814 15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: Yes; the bonds decline because the coupons which fell due was not paid.

16. To the sixteenth interrogatory: I heard nothing but what was stated in the prospectus and other documents to which I have referred; it was afterwards made known that the governor of the State of Florida had appointed a financial agency, and we believed that the money for the interest was derived from the State treasurry.

17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: The interest was paip semiannually, each coupon with $40, until July, 1873, when the default took place; no public notice of the payment of the coupons was given, because such payment was stipulated by the prospectus to be made at New York.

18. To the eighteenth interrogatory: I have already answered this question as fully as I am able.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I know nearly all the complainants since many years, and they are all, as far as I know, of high 3815 standing, and well deserve reputation for honesty.

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: I do not know anything as to the time when and the prices at which the complainants bought their bonds: but what I do know is that they bought them in the open market and for cash down.

21. To the twenty first interrogatory: I do not own a single Florida bond; I bought at several times and at various prices, for my customers, whenever I got orders for these bonds.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: The bonds were sold in the open market.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: I never heard of any claim as herein referred to, either by private or public notice.

24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: I never saw in any newspaper or in any other manner of publication in Holland, by the president, directors, or stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad Company, that any part of the road belonged to them, or that the bonds referred to had been illegally issued. Such a publication, had it been made, 3816 would have had a bad influence on the value of these bonds.

25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: If such notice had been given, the bonds would have lost all value and nobody would have bought them.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: If I recollect well, I think t a copy of the law of the State of Florida mentioned in the bonds was amongst the papers laid down for public inspection at Holje & Boissevain's office.

Sworn and subscribed before me, this first day of April, 1879.

Deposition of Johannes Herman Warring.

And on this 1st day of April, 1879, the said JOHANNES HERMAN WARRING, first duly sworn by the said commissioner (by inter-3810 pretation of Alexander William Anderson, an interpreter specially sworn by the said commissioner, truly and faithfully to interpret the oath and interrogatories to be administered to and the answers to be given thereto, by the witness), to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, relative to the cause specified in said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross-interrogatories, by interpretation, as aforesaid, as follows:

1. To the first interrogatory, this witness saith: My name is Johannes Herman Warring. I am 31 years of age, and commission agent in stocks at Amsterdam.

9. To the ninth interrogatory: I have already stated the price at which the bonds were at first sold; the price varied from time to time; I believe the highest figure was about 85 per cent.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: Yes; the price declined in 1873, when it was known that the July coupon remained unpaid.

line of 250 miles of railroad in operation.

3813 To the twelfth interrogatory: I have already fully answered this question.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: I state positively that no private or public information was ever given that any portion of the line of railroad indicated in the prospectus, and shown on the map laid down for public inspection, belonged to or was claimed to be owned by a corporation called the Florida Central Railroad Company. No one ever heard anything of the existence of the corporation called "The Florida Central Railroad Company" until the litigation commenced, after the default in the payment of interest.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: The bonds were bought because they were considered, according to the prospectus and other documents laid down for inspection at Holje & Boissevain's, to be a first-class security, and because the investment had a double guarantee, viz., the State of Florida and the railway property. We never got any public or private notice from the president, directors, or stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad Company, of any kind whatever, before July, 1873. 3814 15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: Yes; the bonds decline because the coupons which fell due was not paid.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I know nearly all the complainants since many years, and they are all, as far as I know, of high standing, and well deserve reputation for honesty. 3815

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: I do not know anything as to the time when and the prices at which the complainants bought their bonds: but what I do know is that they bought them in the open market and for cash down.

21. To the twenty first interrogatory: I do not own a single Florida bond; I bought at several times and at various prices, for my customers, whenever I got orders for these bonds.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: The bonds were sold in the open market.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: I never heard of any claim as herein referred to, either by private or public notice.

24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: I never saw in any newspaper or in any other manner of publication in Holland, by the president, directors, or stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad Company, that any part of the road belonged to them, or that the bonds referred to had been illegally issued. Such a publication, had it been made, would have had a bad influence on the value of these bonds. 3816

25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: If such notice had been given, the bonds would have lost all value and nobody would have bought them.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: If I recollect well, I think t a copy of the law of the State of Florida mentioned in the bonds was amongst the papers laid down for public inspection at Holje & Boissevain's office.

Final. To the final interrogatory: I have nothing further to add.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendants The Florida Central Railroad Company:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory: I have already answered this as fully as I know.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I have never before heard anything about what is spoken of in this question.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: I have never before heard anything about the matter mentioned in this interrogatory.

3817 4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I never heard of what is named and spoken of in this question till I read about it in the newspapers, after the non-payment of the coupon due in July, 1873, became known.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: No one was ever expelled from or requested to resign as member of the stock exchange in Amsterdam, because of his connection with the sale of Florida bonds, but I do believe that if John Collinson were to appear on 'change here and be known, he would very soon be expelled and put out.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I have never before in any way heard about this.

Cross examined by and in behalf of the defendants The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company et al.:

1. To the first interrogatory: I have been a member of the stock exchange of Amsterdam for the last seven years. I deal in stock and bonds.

3818 2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I have already answered this as fully as I can.

3. To the third cross interrogatory: Such bonds are worth what people will give for them; the price would depend on circumstances.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I have already stated all connection I ever had with such bonds.

5. To the fifth cross interrogatory: I only saw the prospectus issued December 19, 1870, and the other documents which Holje & Bossevain and A. J. and M. Milders had made public; knew nothing about Collinson.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: Before the bonds were sold I never heard anything about this.

7. To the seventh cross-interrogatory: Never were such telegrams shown to me or brought to my knowledge, and I know nothing about them.

8. To the eighth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing about the disposal of the bonds of Hopkins & Co. and Collinson. I know only that the bonds were sold by Holje & Boissevain and A. J. and M.
3819 Milders. I never paid any attention to the numbers of the bonds, and knew no distinction in the numbers above or below 2800.

9. To the ninth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing about illegality or fraud in respect of these bonds; they were sold regularly in the open market.

10. To the tenth cross-interrogatory: I never heard anything of this kind, and never thought so.

11. To the eleventh cross-interrogatory: I only executed the orders of my customers, and have never speculated in Florida bonds.

12. To the twelfth cross-interrogatory: I have already stated all I know about this; I have never heard of a Florida Central Railroad Company.

13. To the thirteenth cross interrogatory: I have already answered, as regards this question, that the prospectus of December 19th, 1870, issued by Holje & Boissevain and A. J. and M. Milders is the only one I ever knew or heard of.

14. To the fourteenth cross-interrogatory: I do not own a single Florida bond.

3820 15. To the fifteenth cross interrogatory: I know the interest was paid up to and including January 1st, 1873, and always thought the money came from the treasurer of the State of Florida, which is all I know.

16. To the sixteenth cross-interrogatory: A committee was appointed by the bondholders for their protection after the default had been made in the payment of the coupon due the 1st of July.

17. To the seventeenth cross interrogatory: I only know that the "memorandum plan" was recommended to be accepted by Dr. Wertheim, the counsel for the bondholders, and I learned afterward from him at a public meeting that the Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company was duly formed. I may say that the bondholders were pleased with the memorandum plan.

18. To the eighteenth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing about this.

19. To the nineteenth cross interrogatory: I am not myself principally interested, but only for my clients in order that they make good their losses by getting their bonds paid.

3821 20. To the twentieth cross-interrogatory: I have known Dr. Wertheim for many years, but I do not know Mr. Sherwin. I have met Mr. Willard at Dr. Wertheim's. Dr. Wertheim requested me to give testimony in this cause, and read the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories to me.

21. To the twenty-first cross-interrogatory: I never executed such authority to anybody. I know nothing about what is spoken of in this question.

J. H. WARRING.

ALEX. W. ANDERSON.

Examination taken, reduced to writing, subscribed by the witness and by the sworn interpreter, and sworn to by the witness, this 1st day of April, 1879, before

D. ECKSTEIN,
U. S. Consul & Commissioner.

CITY OF AMSTERDAM,
Kingdom of the Netherlands, to wit:

3822 I, the undersigned, David Eckstein, United States consul and the commissioner named in the hereunto annexed commission and instruction, do hereby certify that the said commission was executed, and the testimony of the following named witnesses, namely, Gideon Maria Boissevain, Frederick Willem Oewel, Jan Fredrick Schutte, Petrus Antonious Ludovicus Van Ogtrop, Andries Lodewyk Worfbain, Johannes Herman Warring, Abraham Carel Wertheim, Frederick Hendrick Ziegelaar, and Edward Constatine Boissevain, Dzn., taken before me at the United States consulate, in the city of Amsterdam, at the time following, viz: the taking of the said testimony was commenced on the 26th day of March, 1879, and concluded on the fourteenth day of April, 1879. That the said testimony was taken in pursuance and by virtue of the authority and requirements of the said commission and instructions, and upon the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories which are hereunto attached and herewith returned, to be used in a certain cause pending in the United States circuit court of the northern 3823 district of Florida, in equity, wherein Jan Fredrick Schutte, Jan Prins, Adrianus Prins, and others are complainants, against the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company and others, defendants. That each of the trustees, before examination was duly sworn by me to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth relative to the cause specified in the said commission; that neither of the parties to the cause specified in the said commission was present or represented by counsel at the taking of the said depositions; that the said witnesses appeared before me, one at a time, and was separately examined, and that the interrogatories and cross-interrogatories were propounded to them, and their answers thereto returned in the English language, excepting as to the witnesses Jan Frederick Schutte and Johannes Herman Warring, who were examined through a sworn interpreter; that the said witnesses made use of written memoranda, prepared beforehand, to which they referred in giving their testi- 3824 mony, and that the reason and object for so doing they stated and explained to be that it served them in giving their testimony more intelligently, in proper language, and saved time, to them a valuable consideration; that the said testimony was correctly taken and reduced to writing by Alexander H. Anderson, British vice-consul in this city, excepting the testimony of Frederick Willem Oewel and Andreas Lodewyk Worfbain, which was reduced to writing by August S. Doceu, clerk at United States consulate, both disinterested persons, in my presence and under my directions; that the testimony of each of the several witnesses was carefully read to them respectively by me, and subscribed by each of them in my presence, and that I, the said commissioner, am not of kin to either party to the said cause, or interested therein.

Dated at Amsterdam, this fourth day of April, A. D. 1879.

D. ECKSTEIN,
U. S. Consul and Commissioner.

3825 Deposition of Edward Constantin Boissevain, Dzn.

And the said EDWARD CONSTANTIN BOISSEVAIN, Dz., being first duly sworn by the said commissioner, on this 4th day of April, 1879, to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth relative to the cause specified in the said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross-interrogatories as follows, viz:

1. To the first interrogatory this witness saith: My name is Edward Constantin Boissevain, Danielzoon (the son of Daniel); my age, thirty-eight years. I am a stock-broker.
2. To the second interrogatory: At Amsterdam, Holland.
3. To the third interrogatory: I was engaged in and acquainted with the dealings in foreign and domestic bonds.
4. To the fourth interrogatory: Yes.
5. To the fifth interrogatory: Holje & Boissevain and A. J. & M. Milders put the bonds on the market; Holje & Boissevain and A. J. & M. Milders issued a prospectus, and laid down for public inspection several documents, and a map showing the line of road to an extent of two hundred and fifty miles, lines in operation from Jacksonville 3826 west, in Florida. The prospectus was published also in the leading financial paper in Holland, in the latter part of December, 1878.

6. To the sixth interrogatory: No authority was given, to my knowledge.

7. To the seventh interrogatory: This I have just answered.

8. To the eighth interrogatory: In December, latter part, 1870, the bonds were sold at the market at the price of eighty per cent. The dealings in said bonds at that time were general among a large class of buyers and also publicity. The bonds changed hands very frequently, and the buyers were numerous.

9. To the ninth interrogatory: The bonds first sold at eighty per cent., rose as high as eighty six per cent., and prices varied from time to time.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: Yes; they declined when the July coupon, in 1873, was not paid.

11. To the eleventh interrogatory: I know only what was stated by the prospectus and the map already mentioned, i. e., that the railroad was constructed two hundred and fifty miles, and in operation, commencing at Jacksonville west, inlcuding branches.

12. To the twelfth interrogatory: I understood at the time that 3827 the railroad spoken of was an additional security of the State bonds; an authenticated copy of the act of legislature of Florida so stated, which the bankers selling the bonds have exhibited and made publicly known.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: I never before heard anything about it.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: I bought the bonds, relying on what was said in the prospectus and shown on the map and in other documents exhibited at the time by the bankers selling the bonds being true, and also believing that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company owned the road spoken of. I have never heard of any claim to the contrary, until the present litigation.

15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: Yes; the bonds declined because the July coupon, 1873, was not paid at maturity.

16. To the sixteenth interrogatory: All I know about this is that the bankers who sold the bonds here gave public notice in the papers that the governor of Florida had appointed an agent in New York City to pay the interest. I know not where the money had to come from.

17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: The payment of interest was semi annually until the default spoken of. Each coupon was $40, 3828 payable at New York.

18. To the eighteenth interrogatory: The fact that such agent had been appointed by the governor of Florida, and that such payment of interest had been made, strengthened the credit of the bonds. I have already said that confidence was maintained in the bonds in consequence of that official document.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I know many of them, and also that they are of high respectability and credit.

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: I believe such people, like myself, bought these bonds in good faith.

21. To the twenty-first interrogatory: Yes; I bought, on or about the 22d of December, 1870, 45 of said bonds, at the price of 80 per cent.; they were delivered to me and I paid the amount, which bonds I still own, and are numbered: 97, 122, 123, 336, 519, 520, 599, 876, 901, 927, 955, 978, 1182, 1183, 1184, 1185, 1211, 1212, 1213, 1214, 1215, 1216, 1543, 2740, 2741, 2742, 2743, 2744, 2745, 2746, 2747, 2748, 2749, 2750, 2751, 2752, 2753, 2754, 2755, 2756, 2757, 2758, 2759, 2929, and 3015.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: I have answered as fully as I can.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: No; I never heard of such claim till now.

24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: It would have depre-3829 ciated the bonds if such publication should have been made, and rendered them valueless.

25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: If they had done so it would have rendered the bonds worthless.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: The State law was exhibited, and also the various other public acts in relation to the bonds, notice of which was published in the newspapers.

Final. To the final interrogatory: I have nothing to add.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendants, the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company et al:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory: I have answered as fully as I know.

2. To the second cross interrogatory: I never heard anything about that.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: It is entirely unknown to me.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I never before heard anything about this.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: It never happened as far as my knowledge goes.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I never heard before of such telegram.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendants, the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company et al:

3830 1. To the first cross-interrogatory: This I have already answered.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I have already answered as completely as possible.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: It would depend entirely on circumstances.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I have already answered all I know. I bought my bonds as an investment, and have got the same bonds, as already stated.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing about said bonds being offered in England, and only know they were sold here, as I have said, and the only prospectus I know or heard of was the one published by Holje & Boissevain, and A. J. and M. Milders, December 19, 1870.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I never heard before of such fraud.

7. To the seventh cross-interrogatory: This I have already answered. I never before heard of any person named L'Engle, or of any letter written by him, or of any such telegraphic correspondence.

8. To the eighth cross-interrogatory: I know only what I have already told. I never heard or knew of any distinction in the numbers of the said bonds.

9. To the ninth cross-interrogatory: I have answered all I know. I never knew anything about Collinson, or any member of the firm 3831 of Hopkins & Co.

10 To the tenth cross-interrogatory: I know not where the interest money came from.

11. To the eleventh cross-interrogatory: I only know these bonds varied in prices, for reasons I have already stated.

12. To the twelfth cross-interrogatory: This I have already answered.

13. To the thirteenth cross-interrogatory: I have already answered this.

14. To the fourteenth cross-interrogatory: I own bonds, as I have already answered.

15. To the fifteenth cross-interrogatory: I have answered as much as I know about this.

16. To the sixteenth cross-interrogatory: I know that such committee was appointed, but discharged at the time that Messrs. Wertheim and Willard became the attorneys of the bondholders.

17. To the seventeenth cross-interrogatory: I know that Dr. Wertheim was then authorized at that time to take such steps for the protection as he thought safe, and that he caused the memorandum plan to be executed, which the bondholders approved, and that Schedule D is a correct copy of that plan. I believe that the Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company has been organized as required.

18. To the eighteenth cross-interrogatory: I know that the 3832 bondholders expect to pay to their solicitors all that they have agreed to.

19. To the nineteenth cross-interrogatory: I am a bondholder, and of course deeply interested in the suit. I believe myself to be swindled by the railroad company.

20. To the twentieth cross-interrogatory: I know the gentleman named. I have known Dr. Wertheim for many years. He requested me to give evidence in the case. He did so because he is the counsel for the bondholders, and he read to me the interrogatories.

21. To the twenty-first cross-interrogatory: This I have already answered.

Sworn to and subscribed to before me this fourth day of April, 1879.

D. ECKSTEIN,
U. S. Consul and Commissioner.

Desfosition of Petrus Antonius Ludovicus Van Ogtrop.

And on the 31st day of March, 1879, the said PETRUS ANTONIUS LUDOVICUS VAN OGTROP, being first duly sworn by the said commissioner to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, relative to the cause specified in said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross interrogatories as follows, viz:

1. To the first interrogatory this witness saith: My name is 3833 Petrus Antonius Ludovicus Van Ogtrop; my age forty-four (44) years; I am deputy member of the board of the union for the stock exchange at Amsterdam, and stock-broker.

2. To the second interrogatory: At Amsterdam.

3. To the third interrogatory: Yes; I was at that time a member of the committee of the stock exchange; I was also engaged in and acquainted with the dealings in domestic and foreign bonds.

4. To the fourth interrogatory: Yes; I know that they were introduced at the exchange.

5. To the fifth interrogatory: By Messrs. Holje & Boissevain and Messrs. A. J. and M. Milders. These bonds were put on the market; a prospectus was issued on the 19th December, 1870, and several documents, together with a map showing the line of railroad, were laid down by them for public inspection.

6. To the sixth interrogatory: No authority was obtained or required for the free or non-official stock list.

7. To the seventh interrogatory: I have already answered this question.

8. To the eighth cross-interrogatory: On the 5th day of December, 1877, I, together with Mr. A. L. Wortbain, made a sworn certificate before the American consul, at Amsterdam, wherein this question 3834 is answered, and which I now annex hereto, marked P. A. L. V-Q., No. 1, together with a translated copy thereof.

9. To the ninth interrogatory: I have answered this question by the said sworn certificates.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: I have answered this as fully as I can by the said sworn certificates.

11. To the eleventh interrogatory: I had no other information than the prospectus and pamphlets issued by Messrs. Holje & Boissevain and Messrs. A. J. and M. Milders.

12. To the twelfth interrogatory: I never saw anything else but the prospectus and the other publications I have mentioned.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: I have never heard anything about this.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: I have never heard of any such thing.

15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: I have already answered this question by the sworn certificate I have put in evidence.

16. To the sixteenth interrogatory: I know nothing but what was stated in the said prospectus published by the bankers who emitted the bonds.

17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: The coupons were sold at the exchange to bankers, who collected them for remittances to New 3835 York and London. No public notice was given of the appointment of an agent.

18. To the eighteenth interrogatory: No notice whatever was given, the coupons being only payable at New York.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I know some of the complainants, and those who are members of the stock exchange are of good repute.

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: Some bought them, either for investment on the brilliant prospectus or for speculation.

21. To the twenty-first interrogatory: I have bought some at various prices for account of my clients.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: This I have answered by the sworn certificate made part of my reply to the eighth interrogatory.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: I have never heard of such information or claim.

24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: I cannot say.

25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: Had such publication or claim ever been made known, the effect would have been disastrous to the 8 per cent. Florida State bonds.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: The bankers announced that they were open for inspection at their offices, but I never saw them.

3836 Final. To the final interrogatory: For the information of the court, I annex hereto, as part of my answer, some original financial newspapers called "Hieuw Algerneen Effecten Blaad," in which the quotations of the 8 per cent. Florida bonds are noted, and wherein extracts from the prospectus, as well as other advertisements of the bankers about the said bonds, are published. This exhibit I mark P. A. L. V. O., No. 2.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendant, the Florida Central Railroad Company:

1. To the first interrogatory this witness saith: All I know as to this I have answered by the sworn certificate forming part of my reply to the eighth direct interrogatory.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I have never before seen or heard of the paper marked A, now shown to me.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: Neither have I ever before seen or heard of the paper marked B, now produced and shown to me.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: The articles of impeachment, marked C, now shown to me, have never before been brought to my knowledge.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: No one was ever expelled from the exchange at Amsterdam, or otherwise punished, in connection with the Florida bonds.

3837 6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I have never heard or seen anything about the telegraphic correspondence referred to in this cross-interrogatory.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendants, the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company et al:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory this witness saith: I am a stockbroker, and became a member of the stock exchange in 1865. In 1855 I was elected member of the committee of the stock exchange, which I am still.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I first saw the printed prospectus I have mentioned on or about the 20th December, 1870.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: I believe that the price realized by the subscription of the eight per cent. Florida State bonds was a fair price, considering the opinion in our market with regard to securities of the Southern United States at that period.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I know that Messrs Holje & Boiessevain and Messrs. A. J. and M. Milders emitted the Florida bonds by their prospectus, dated the 19th December, 1870. I had no connection whatever with the emission thereof.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: I have never before seen the prospectus marked B, now shown to me, and know nothing about 3838 the previous failure in placing the bonds on the English market.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing as to all these points.

7. To the seventh cross-interrogatory: I know nothing as to all these points.

8. To the eighth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing about these points, and have no means of ascertaining whether I ever bought bonds numbered above 2800.

9. To the ninth cross-interrogatory: I was not interested in the syndicate, and know nothing about the other particulars inquired into by this cross-interrogatory.

10. To the tenth cross-interrogatory: I do not know anything about this.

11. To the eleventh cross-interrogatory: I, for myself, never speculated in these bonds, but I cannot say anything as to what others did.

13. To the twelfth cross-interrogatory: I have never before heard of the Florida Central Company.

13. To the thirteenth cross-interrogatory: I refer to my answer in reply to the fifth cross-interrogatory.

14. To the fourteenth cross interrogatory: I have never possessed a single Florida bond.

3839 15. To the fifteenth cross-interrogatory: I do not know, because the bankers who emitted the bonds never announced this.

16. To the sixteenth cross-interrogatory: Such a committee did exist, but I cannot say whether it is still in existence.

17. To the seventeenth cross-interrogatory: I have never before heard of the "memorandum plan."

18. To the eighteenth cross-interrogatory: I refer to my answer in reply to the seventeenth cross-interrogatory.

19. To the nineteenth cross-interrogatory: I am not at all interested therein.

20. To the twentieth cross-interrogatory: I have known Dr. Wertheim since several years as an advocate of good repute; I have been introduced to Messrs. Sherwin & Willard, and Messrs. Wertheim and Willard have shown me the interrogatories in this matter, and asked me to give evidence thereto, in my quality as deputy member of the board of the Amsterdam stock exchange.

21. To the twenty-first cross-interrogatory: I have never given any power of attorney in this matter, not being interested in the case.

[SEAL OF CONSUL.] D. ECKSTEIN,
U. S. Consul and Commissioner.

3840 In the United States circuit court for the northern district of Florida, fifth judicial circuit. In equity.

JAN FREDERICK SCHUTTE, JAN PRINS, ADRIANNUS Prins, et al., complainants,
vs.
THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN North Carolina Railroad Company et al., defendants.

Depositions of Gideon Maria Boissevian, Frederick Willem Oewel, Jan Frederick Schutte, Petrus Antonius Ludovicus Van Ogtrop, Andries Lodewyk Worfbain, Johannes Herman Warring, Abraham Carel Wertheim, Frederick Hendric Zieglaar, and Edward Constantin Boissevain, Dz., all of the city of Amsterdam, in the Kingdom of the Netherlands, witnesses produced and sworn and examined in this cause above entitled, by David Eckstein, United States consul, pursuant to a commission issued to him out of the circuit court of the United States for the northern district of Florida, bearing date the 30th day of January, 1879, and by virtue of instructions directed to him by the court aforesaid, signed by the clerk of the said court, and dated the 1st day of March, 1879, both hereto annexed, upon the interrogatories and cross interrogatories annexed to the said commission and instructions, and hereto returned.

3841 Deposition of Gideon Maria Boissevain.

The said GIDEON MARIA BOISSEVAIN, being first duly sworn by the said commissioner to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, relative to the cause specified in the said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross-interrogatories as follows, viz:

1. To the first interrogatory the witness saith: My name is Gideon Maria Boissevain; aged 41 years; I am a member of the board of commissioners of the bank "Kas Vereeniging," and a member of the Amsterdam board or delegated committee of the Banque de Paris et des Bas of Paris.

2. To the second interrogatory: I have resided since 1837, when I was born, uninterruptedly at Amsterdam, Netherlands.

3. To the third interrogatory: Besides having had since many years the above mentioned occupations, I was established here from 1859 until 1872, under the firm of Holje & Boissevain, being stockholders and general banking and commission business. My partner, being Mr. Holje, retired from the house as early as 1862. I retired from business and liquidated my firm in 1872, for the reason of my health being shaken at that time. During said period, 1859–'72, I was engaged in the pur-3842 chase and sale of bonds and other securities, such as were sold at the bourse or stock exchange before mentioned, and was acquainted with the dealings which took place in the said bourse or stock exchange in domestic and foreign securities. I was then a member of the bourse or stock exchange of the city of Amsterdam; and in 1871 I was appointed by my co members in the stock exchange one of its directors.

4. To the fourth interrogatory: I myself, or rather my firm, introduced in December, 1870, the $4,000,000 8 per cent. Florida loan, a copy of one of the bonds of which loan is annexed to your interrogatory, marked A, in our market. We did so by the authority of John Collison, of 50 Old Broad street, London. We acted for joint account with Messrs. A. J. & M. Milders and A. J. B. Maingay, both of Rotterdam, and in pursuance of an agreement entered intered into on this subject with John Collison. The heading of this agreement runs at follows:

FLORIDA STATE LOAN.

$4,000,000.

Memorandum of agreement entered into this fourteenth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, between Messrs. Holje and Boissevain, of Amsterdam, A. J. & M. Milders and A. J. B.
Maingay, of Rotterdam, hereinafter called the consortior, of the 3843 one part, and John Collinson, of the other part.

It further contains six articles relating to the price to be paid by the consortion (that is, Holje and Boissevain, A. J. and M. Milders, and A. J. Mangay, for the bonds), which by letter of John Collinson of the 19th of December, 1870, was modified, and finally agreed upon at £152 sterling and accrued interest per bond (which was the price paid by us to Collinson for the entire issue of 2,800 bonds, the remaining 406 having been disposed of as stated hereafter), the dates of payment for certain amounts of bonds and options for further amounts, amounting in all to the total amount of four million dollars. We received from Mr. Collinson the following official documents, "or legal copies of the same," relating to the loan in due time for inspection after the prospectus was issued.

Copy of an act to alter and amend an act entitled "An act to perfect the public works of the States," approved June 24th, 1869; passed the Senate January 22d, 1870; passed the assembly January 26th, 1870; approved January 28th, 1870.

(It may be considered superfluous to add a copy of this document to this statement.)

Copy of a request, dated 6th May, 1870, of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to the governor of Florida, asking and authorizing him to deliver all the bonds of the State of 3844 Florida to which said company was entitled by law to the financial agents of the company, Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co.

(Copy of this document, marked G. M. B., No. 1, goes herewith.)

Copy of an appointment, dated 4th of May, 1870, of Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co., as financial agents of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

Copy of a declaration of the governor of Florida, dated 6th May, 1870, stating that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company is entitled to receive from the State $4,000,000 of the bonds of the State, and that, pursuant to the request of the said company, he will deliver these bonds to Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co.

(Copy of this document, marked G. M. B., No. 3, goes herewith.)

Copy of an appointment, dated 6th of May, 1870, of S. W. Hopkins & Co., as financial agents of the State.

(Copy of this document, marked G. M. B., No. 4, goes herewith.)

Copy of letter of Littlefield, president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, to Collinson, dated November 28th, 1870, confirming directly to him that S. W. Hopkins & Co. possessed 3845 full authority to sell or otherwise dispose of the $4,000,000 8 per cent. gold bonds of the State of Florida.

(Copy marked G. M. B., No. 5, goes herewith.)

Copy of authorization of John Collinson by S. W. Hopkins & Co., to invite subscriptions for Florida State 8 per cent. loan of four million dollars, dated 17th November, 1870.

To which copy I add copy of the contract for the sale of the said $4,000,000 Florida State bonds, made on the 14th November, 1870, between S. W. Hopkins & Co. and John Collinson, and copies of four letters from S. W. Hopkins & Co. to John Collinson, granting extensions for the terms stated in said contract.

(Copies marked G. M. B., No. 6, goes herewith.)

Nomination by John Colli'son, in accordance with authorization of S. W. Hopkins & Co., dated November 17th, 1870, of my firm and A. J. & M. Milders to bring out for subscription in Holland the Florida State 8 per cent. loan of four million dollars.

And letter of John Collinson, dated 19th day of December, 1870, authorizing to open the subscription during the week, closing on or before Saturday, 24th December, 1870.

(Copies marked G. M. B. go herewith, No. 77.)

Copy of a letter of the solicitors, Ashurst, Norris & Co. to John Collinson, dated November 15th, 1870, relating to the validity and bona fides of the Florida State bonds.

3846 (Copy marked G. M. B., No. 8, goes herewith.)

All these documents were deposited for public inspection at my office, when we invited subscriptions, a statement to that effect being inserted in the prospectus.

So, too, was a map showing the route of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, which we received for that purpose from Mr. Collinson, an original copy of which map, marked G. M. B., No. 9, goes herewith. We also received, besides much verbal information concerning the State of Florida, its resources, etc., and the railroad, several written informations, amongst others:

Copy of a letter of Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, dated June 18th, 1870, confirming the issue of the 8 per cent. State bonds, etc.

(Copy of same, marked G. M. B., No. 10, goes herewith.)

At the same time Mr. John Collinson sent us the draft of the prospectus which was issued by us (translated into Dutch) when we invited subscriptions, the principal contents of which were as per annexed statement, marked G. M. B., No. 11. The prospectus was issued by my firm on the 19th December, 1870, under reference to the official documents before mentioned, the loan being at the same time advertised in the leading financial papers in Holland.

The sales and purchases of the bonds were made on entire 3847 reliance upon the correctness of such statements as were then published and deposited for public inspection, and which everybody, as well as we, ourselves, considered as proving most undoubtedly, that the bonds of the 8 per cent. Florida State loan were a bona fide government bond, secured by the credit of the State, and besides by the railway property as additional security. Immediately following on the subscription, regular and almost daily transactions on 'change took place in the bonds, the first quotations being, as far as I know, 80½ per cent. on December 27th, 1870. In the first days of January, 1871, however, Mr. Collinson wrote to my firm, "not to push on the loan for a short time in the face of the recent disasters in American securities." We entirely approved this policy, and we, from our side, had called Mr. Collinson's attention to the fact that the January coupons of the Alabama, Chattanooga Railroad bonds, guaranteed by Alabama, had not been paid. Mr. Collinson, in perfect accordance with our desires, made new enquiries regarding the character of the Florida bonds.

In February, 1871, we received intelligence of telegraphic advices, confirming the constitutionality of the loan on, as we considered it to be, the most official and unquestionable way (copies of telegrams, etc., relating hereto, marked G. M. B., No. 12, go herewith). We, from our side, gave public notice of the information received by advertise-3848 ment (copy of which, marked G. M. B., No. 13, goes herewith).

In the meantime, transactions in the bonds had gone on 'change at 80¼ to 80½ per cent., almost daily, but without much animation. The news then received brought lots of new buyers in the market, and more still when it had been confirmed by written advices received some weeks afterwards, and which will be mentioned forthwith.

We, agreeably to Mr. Collinson's instructions, resumed our sales, and had no difficulty to complete same up to the amount of 2,800 bonds of $1,000 before the end of July, 1871. According to intelligence and instructions received from Mr. Collinson, the sales were provisionally not to be further extended. So little difficulty had we indeed to sell the bonds, which were quite a favorite investment on account of the twofold security (the credit of the State and the railway property), that we succeeded in selling some at rising prices, namely, very soon at prices ranging from 82 to 84 per cent. The price was so many per cent., the dollar calculates at f. 2.50, two guilders and a half, being the full value of the gold dollar, to which was added the accrued interest.

The further advices which (in April, 1871) we had received, were as follows:

Declaration of the governor of Florida, the secretary of state, 3849 and State treasurer, giving the most solemn confirmation of the perfect legality and constitutionality of the 8 per cent. Florida bonds, and C—of the additional security of the bonds on account of the railway property. (Copy of this document, marked G. M. B., No. 14, goes herewith.)

A certificate of the clerk of the supreme court, State of Florida, city of Tallahassee, given under the seal of the supreme court of the State of Florida, with legalization of the clerk's (Charles H. Forster's) signature by the governor of Florida and the secretary of state, and further legalization by the British, German and Netherlands consuls, stating:

"I, Charles H. Forster, clerk of the supreme court of the State of Florida, do hereby certify that the unanimous opinion of the supreme court of the State of Florida is that railroads are public works within the terms of the State constitution, and that the legislature may authorize the issuing of State bonds for the purpose of perfecting the same."

In witness whereof, &c.

"Tallahassee, 18th February, 1871."

Besides, we received full copies of the opinions of Judges Randall, Heart, and Wescott, chief justice, justice, and associate justice of the supreme court of the State of Florida, as found in volume 13, supreme court of Florida, pages 699 to 722, both inclusive. We at once, under the date of 29th April, 1871, gave full publicity, by a printed circular, 3850 to the declaration of the governor of Florida, adding a communication from the fiscal agents of the State, Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co., giving many particulars regarding the general state of affairs in Florida, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and specially referring to the legality of the bonds as confirmed by the supreme court, and had copies of the opinions of the judges of the supreme court open for inspection at our bank, notice of which was given to the public by advertisement in financial papers.

(A copy of this circular goes herewith, marked G. M. B., No. 15, also a copy of the original communication of Messrs. Hopkins, it having been translated in the circular marked G. M. B., No. 16.)

To conclude at once the history of the emission and sales of the Florida State bonds in our market, I add, that about the last days of 1872, and in January, 1873, Mr. Collinson sold to myself and friends, and at 'change and through other brokers and additional amount of bonds, 406, as appears from what is said hereafter (namely, in addition to the 2,800 bonds sold in 1870 and '71), the price being at the time about 75 per cent. By the following documents be proved the legality of the additional sales, and of the bonds thus sold, as also their bona fides:

Declaration of government of Florida, stating that 224 bonds 3851 were cancelled, and that the balance, namely, $3,776,000, were legal issue, and that the balance of the same, in addition to 2,800 sold before, viz, 976 bonds, were equal obligation on the State of Florida.

(Copy of said document, marked G. M. B., No., 17, goes herewith.)

Appointment of the New York State Loan and Trust Co., of New York, as financial agent of the State of Florida.

(Copy of this document, marked G. M. B., No. 18, goes herewith.)

Appointment of the same company as fiscal agent of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company for the sale of the said bonds, &c.

(Copy of this document, marked G. M. B., No. 19, goes herewith.)

Acceptance of said company of the appointment as fiscal agents of the State of Florida, and of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

Copy of advertisement, running as follows:

FLORIDA STATE BONDS.

Notice is hereby given that on and after the 1st day of January, 1873, the undersigned are prepared to pay the coupons maturing on that date, on the Florida 8 per cent. State bonds, numbered from 1 to 3776, 3852 inclusive (excepting the coupons on bonds numbered 442 and 1736, which have been lost, unnegotiated).

The New York State Loan and Trust Co., New York City (signed for T. A. Lawrence, sec., December 30, 1872, fiscal agents of the State of Florida.

This advertisement of the payment of coupons by the fiscal agent of the State on 3776 (or 3774) bonds was certainly a most undoubtful confirmation of the legality of the issue of the loan to that amount. It appears from a statement of Mr. John Collinson that the entire amount of bonds sold, in addition to the previously sold 2,800 bonds, was 406. In September, 1873, his secretary and he himself writing to me as follows:

50 OLD BROADSTRET, LONDON,
September 15*th*, 1873.

G. M. BOISSEVAIN, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: I regret that I have been unable to send you sooner a complete list of the Florida bonds, issued, as requested by your favor of the 10th inst., but I enclose herewith a paper giving the information I understand that you require.

I remain, yours truly,
(Signed) D. G. BRUCE GARDYNE.

Florida State eight per cent. loan. Distinctive numbers of bonds issued.

No. 1 to 441	441 bonds.
" 443 to 1735	1293 "
" 1737 to 3200	1464 "
3853 No. 3769 to 3776	8 bonds.
Total bonds issued	3206

50 OLD BROADSTREET, LONDON,
September 23*d*, 1873.

G. M. BOISSEVAIN, Esq.:

DEAR SIR: In reply to your favor of the 20th inst., regarding the numbers of the Florida bonds issued, I beg to inform you that the statement forwarded to you, detailing the numbers of 3206 bonds issued was perfectly correct.

I remain, yours faithfully,
(Signed) JOHN COLLINSON.

This information was asked by me from Mr. Collinson, as I desired to make a statement of the numbers of the bonds sold previously to the default in payment of interest in July, 1873, and as some of the numbers of these bonds, not having passed through my hands, were not known to me, I knew, however, and most solemly confirm, that the entire amount of bonds represented here, namely, 3206, was sold previous to said default.

5. To the fifth interrogatory: I have fully answered that question in my reply to the preceding interrogatory, and having annexed thereunto copies of such printed and written statements as are asked for, and I repeat that I made the sales of these bonds in perfect reliance on the correctness of these statements.

3854 6. To the sixth interrogatory. The Dutch stock exchange being, or rather having been at that time, and until quite recently, an open and entirely free market, no such authority was necessary, nor any examination or investigation of such a kind. All new securities were brought in the market without any formalities of the kind.

7. To the seventh interrogatory: The bonds were considered, generally and unanimously, as "a public security and obligation of the State of Florida," and recorded as such in all the price-lists.

8. To the eighth interrogatory: I refer to my answers to the fourth and fifth interrogatories. All the dealings in respect to the bonds were public and general, and among a very large class of buyers. They were, and continued all along to be, the subject of a regular business on "'change," and changed hands frequently.

9. To the ninth interrogatory. I refer to my answers to the fourth and fifth interrogatories. The price went up quietly from 80 to about 84 per cent., or somewhat above, perhaps 86 per cent., and remained about 83 and 84 per cent. for many months. In 1872, 83½ per cent. was still paid.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: These bonds first declined in 3855 the latter part of 1872 and beginning of 1873, in sympathy with American securities generally. The great fall occurred only after the July, 1873, coupon remained unpaid, and besides in consequence of of the general crisis.

11. To the eleventh interrogatory: I refer to my several statements in answer to the fourth and fifth interrogatories. I never knew but that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad was running from Jacksonville to the Apalachicola River, and to be terminated to the western borders of Florida and to Mobile, two hundred and fifty miles, branches included, were stated to be in operation.

12. To the twelfth interrogatory: Referring again to statements as given before, I confirm, and most peremptorily, that by all documents and other information communicated to my firm and by my firm, and otherwise, to the public, it was intimated that the State of Florida had a first lien on the entire line of said road beginning at Jacksonville, and to the length of 250 miles, at the time of the original issue of the bonds.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: Nothing of what is referred to in this question was ever heard of until in the later years. We knew absolutely nothing here at the time of the issue of the loan of 3856 any claims of a Florida Central Railroad Company, or anything of the kind.

The only notion that ever came to me regarding anything of the kind was in a letter received in March, 1871, from a certain Mr. L'Engle, who said to refer to a telegram which I never received, and who made some statements that were entirely contradicted by all the facts, official documents, and information that had come to our knowledge. On referring to said letter to Mr. Collinson, and communicating it to him, he told us to consider it as a black-mailing letter, showing us by all the official documents and further information that the statements made in it were perfectly incorrect. Annexed is a copy of Mr. Collinson's writing on this subject, marked G. M. B., No. 21. It was about the same time that we received the governor of Florida's declaration of the 26th of February, 1871, which contradicts entirely and anew, and at the latest date, Mr. L'Engle's sayings. This letter was put aside, and really no notice could be taken of such assertions from an unknown quarter, contradicted most peremptorily by the highest official authority; nor was anything further heard from it. I can only add to this, that really we had no idea or notion that statements such as were received from the governor 3857 of Florida, under the government seal, and duly attested, legalized by all authorities, &c., left any room for the possibility of the facts not being as stated therein.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: The 8 per cent. Florida bonds were considered here as being a safe and good State bond, having further security through the government's lien on the railroad property; all the information received by my firm confirmed this, and consequently I, in my turn, did not hesitate in endorsing that opinion to my clients and the public at large.

As a specimen of the manner in which Mr. Collinson wrote and spoke about the loan I annex hereto a paper writing, marked G. M. B., No. 22, containing extracts from letters of Mr. Collinson. No notice was ever made here by the president and directors or the stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad that such corporation was the owner of any portion of the line of railroad commencing at Jacksonville and running westward to Lake City, or that the said corporation disputed the rightfulness and legality of the actions of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in selling and disposing of said bonds, &c. I never, at the time of the issue and sale of the bonds, heard anything of such a claim.

3858 15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: I refer to what I have already said on this subject.

16. To the sixteenth interrogatory: The coupons were to be and have been, as far as I know, regularly advertized by the agents of the State. They were only advertised in New York, being only payable there.

17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: The coupons were paid semi-annually, at $40 per coupon, in New York. No public notice was given here, the coupons not being payable here. People here sold their coupons to bankers, who sent the coupons to New York for collection, either direct or via London, as is habitual with all coupons payable in New York.

18. To the eighteenth interrogatory: I refer to what I have said before on these subjects.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I know the complainants as being highly respectable people here; some of them, indeed, of the very highest standing at our bourse.

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: I know several of the complainants as being holders of the Florida bonds, and can only refer to what I have said in answer to the fourteenth interrogatory.

21. To the twenty-first interrogatory: I refer to my full statement regarding the negotiation of the bonds in our market.

3859 22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: I add to what I have said before on this subject, that at the original subscription for the bonds of the 22d and 23d December, 1870, $475,000 were taken up and paid for at 80 per cent. by Messrs. J. L. Kloos, Van Hellesteyn & Co., J. Van Goor & Co., J. B. Westmoreland & Zoon, Rahnsen & Waller, Westendorp & Co., Joh Ruys & Co., De Lanoy & Zoon, Jan Kalf & Co., Boissevain & Brothers, F. Phillipean, and many other people. The further sales were made in the market at prices ranging from 80 to 84 per cent., with the exception of the sales in January, 1873, made at about 65 per cent., the purchasers being very numerous; to give the names, of which I have no note at hand, would be giving the names of half the brokers in our market, perhaps.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: I knew nothing of any claim of the trustees of the internal improvement fund of the State of Florida; no notice, public or private, of the existence of such claim was given in Holland as far as I know.

24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: In the eventualities supposed here, a most full investigation would certainly have been made, and the price of the bonds would have given way more or less in the meantime.

25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: My answer hereto is exactly the same as to the twenty-fourth interrogatory.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: I refer to my full statement or publications made here. 3860

Final. To the final interrogatory: I know nor can set forth any other fact.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendants The Florida Central Railroad Company:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory the witness saith: On the 22d and 23d of December, 1870, at Amsterdam and Rotterdam; I have fully answered this question already.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I have already given a full answer regarding the letter of Mr. L'Engle, and what I did in connection therewith.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: I never saw or heard about this paper before, neither do I know the persons named in this question.

4. To the fourth cross interrogatory: As far as I remember, I never saw the document referred to, before. Some information was received here in 1872 regarding the impeachment of Governor Reed, but very few details were given, and it was shortly afterwards that we heard he was tried and acquitted.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: Nothing of this kind happened.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: Referring to previous statements, I beg to add on this subject that it was my firm that addressed 3861 the telegraphic message here referred to to the governor of Florida. But I never received any answer, and having in the mean time received official documents from the governor of Florida, and other officials of the State, giving a full answer to the questions put in my message to the governor of Florida, I was fully satisfied.

Further examination of the witness Gideon Maria Boissevain adjourned until to-morrow, Thursday, March 27th, 1879.

D. ECKSTEIN,
Commissioner.

THURSDAY, March 27th, 1879—3 p. m.

The witness Gideon Maria Boissevain reappeared and his examination was resumed.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendant The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company et al.:

1. To the first cross-interrogotary the witness saith: I have already answered as fully as possible.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I have already answered as fully as I can.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: I considered at the time of the issue and sale of the 8 per cent. Florida bonds 80 per cent., or thereabout to be a fair price for an 8 per cent., government bond of one of the Southern States, and it was in harmony with the prices obtained at that time in our market for American securities generally, considering, too, that, of course, the market price could not be the net price for the selling railroad company or government; now-a-days such a price would be considered too low, and an offer of such a bond at such a price would not be good proof for the soliciting of the bond, but we ought to remember that at that time only a few years had passed since we bought 6 per cent. United States gold bonds as low as 40 per cent. or thereabout. 3862

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I have answered this as fully as possible already.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: I know that the bonds were bought by John Collinson from the railroad company or its agents, and that John Collinson sold them to my firm and our associates, and we paid Collinson £152 sterling, and accrued interest nett for each bond of $1,000. They were resold by us, as already stated. Among the buyers of such bonds from us were Adrian Stoop and Joseph Zadocks, who paid for the bonds 80 per cent. and upwards on all bonds. Stoop and Zadocks were both large buyers, and were no associates of ourselves.

The prospectus was printed by us in Amsterdam, as already stated. The paper marked B I supposed to be a correct copy of a draft of the prospectus, correct as regards the substantial contents of the same, but was one addition that was changed it, namely, says that subscription lists would be opened at London, Amsterdam, Rotterdam, and Frankfort; but finally no subscription lists were asked for in London and Frankfort on account of the territorial bonds question, which was considered as preventing to do so at London and Frankfort, but not in Holland. 3863

With reference to this subject I beg to call attention to the fact, that in the prospectus that was issued in Holland, and which really was the only prospectus that was ever issued, the special attention was called to that territorial bonds question, a full history of which was related. I am desirous to call the attention to that fact, in order to show that we honestly, and with perfect bona fides, put before the public all the facts, to our knowledge, whether favorable or not so, that might be useful for them to know to appreciate the bonds that were offered to them.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I never heard of such published statements, and had they been made would certainly have heard of same. It was only a long time after the bonds had been sold that anything of that kind was published.

I have already answered everything I know about the opinions of the judges of the supreme court of Florida. No charges of fraud or illegality were made against such bonds during the time they were being sold. 3864

7. To the seventh cross interrogatory: Regarding any decisions taken or not taken by the directors of the bourse, I refer to what I said before.

I know perfectly well I addressed the telegraphic message referred to here by the governor of Florida, but I never received any answer, and having received in the mean time official documents from the governor of Florida, and other officials of the State giving full answer to said message to the governor, I was fully satisfied.

Regarding the letter of Mr. L'Engle, I have already answered. I have already answered that there were no publications in Amsterdam or elsewhere, to my knowledge, as to fraud about said bonds.

8. To the eighth cross-interrogatory: I have already answered that Collinson bought the bonds from the company, or its agents; the firm of Holje and Boissevain, associated with A. J. & M. Milders, and A. J. B. Mainjay, bought the 2,800 bonds from Collinson as already stated. The 2,800 bonds were all bought and paid for by us previous to July 22, 1871. The 406 bonds were bought by us and others from Collinson, in January, 1873, as I have already stated as fully as I can. The 3865 406 bonds were sold and resold many times over as the 2,800 were, and it is impossible for me to give the names of such holders. I may add, that never was anything known by me or other people in Holland about any difference between the 2,800 and the 406 bonds, or between bonds numbered under or above 2,800.

9. To the ninth cross-interrogatory: I know that the bonds were sold in Holland in the usual manner and perfectly regular way, as already stated. I know nothing about Hopkins & Co.'s dealings with Collinson, or their dealings with the railroad company. I only know that the price which my firm and associates paid to Collison was £152 sterling, and accrued interest, for each bond of $1,000. In the copy of Collinson's agreement with Hopkins & Co., which he gave us to show his authority to sell the bonds, the price to be paid by Collinson to Hopkins was left in blank (see exhibit marked G. M. B., No. 6), but Collinson told us that the price of £152 sterling, which we paid to him, left him only a small margin on the price paid by him to Hopkins & Co. I have no knowledge whatever what Collinson paid or agreed to pay to Hopkins, or the railroad company; neither myself nor any member of the firm, or Messrs. Milders or Mainjay, were associates in any way, either with Collinson or any member of the firm of Hopkins & Co., 3866 or any officer or agent of said railroad company in relation to the sale of said bonds. Myself and associates, Messrs. Milders and Mainjay, simply bought the bonds from Collinson and paid for them as stated.

10. To the tenth cross-interrogatory: I know that neither myself nor my associates deducted any part of the price we paid for the bonds. We paid the amount in full to Collinson. I have already stated fully about the sale of the bonds. No part of the purchase was retained by us to float the bonds; we never thought of exacting such a condition.

11. To the eleventh cross-interrogatory: The prices varied in these bonds as they did in other securities, the statement given in this question regarding speculative and fictitious prices, is perfectly false. The bonds were sold by us in the very first instance on the 22d and 23d of December, 1870, and thereafter at different times, as I have already stated, to a large number of persons, many of whom are leading citizens, bankers, brokers and business men generally, in Amsterdam, and the provinces, of the very highest respectability. From the very first bargains made in these bonds, the business was perfectly real and bona fide.

12. To the twelfth cross-interrogatory: I have already stated 3867 fully as to who sold the bonds in Holland. Our knowledge of the railroad, its location, length and so forth, was derived entirely from the official documents already referred to, and made a part of my testimony. I never heard of the Florida Central Company only as stated already.

13. To the thirteenth cross-interrogatory: I have already answered this fully.

14. To the fourteenth cross-interrogatory: I have already fully stated all the particulars about the purchase and sale of said bonds by my firm and associates.

15. To the fifteenth cross-interrogatory: The coupons were regularly advertised for payment by the agents of the State in New York. Myself and associates had nothing whatever to do with the payment of the interest, and never retained any money for that purpose.

16. To the sixteenth cross-interrogatory: There was a committee appointed by the bondholders to defend their rights, but not to speculate for them on their own account. I was appointed a member with Mr. A. J. Milders, Mr. A. Stoop, Dr. H. J. den Tex, and Mr. J. Zadocks; but that committee does no longer exist, the bondholders having given their power of attorney to Dr. J. Wertheim and Chas. D. Willard.

17. To the seventeenth cross-interrogatory. I know of no specu-3868 lation or adventure between Sherwin, Jackson, and Simonton. I know only the memorandum plan, which makes a part of the bill of complaint, marked Schedule D. I know the memorandum plan provides for the organization of a company to be called the Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company, and have been informed by Dr. Wertheim that such organization took place. I only know what the memorandum plan shows of itself.

18. To the eighteenth cross-interrogatory: The memorandum plan speaks for itself; and I further know only that the bondholders will pay to their counsel what was agreed upon.

19. To the nineteenth cross-interrogatory: I feel a deep interest in this litigation; for the reason that myself and my associates bought and paid for these bonds, as already stated, and immediately thereafter sold the same to a large number of my countrymen in the manner which I have fully stated; I am exceedingly anxious, therefore, to give any assistance I can for having the bonds paid.

20. To the twentieth cross-interrogatory: I have known Dr. Wertheim for about twenty-five years; I know Mr. Sherwin and Mr. Willard, who were both introduced to me by Dr. Wertheim. Dr. Wertheim requested me to give my testimony in this case, he being, with Mr. Willard, the counsel and attorney of the bondholders. Both the interroga-3869 tories and cross-interrogatories were exhibited to me before my examination by Dr. Wertheim and Mr. Willard.

21. To the twenty-first cross-interrogatory: I know that Dr. Wertheim has given an authority and power to Frank R. Sherwin to represent the bondholders and to file the petition you refer to, and that the authority given by Dr. Wertheim, as counsel for the bondholders, met with the entire approval of the bondholders.

(Signed) G. M. BOISSEVAIN.

Sworn and subscribed to before me this twenty-seventh day of March, 1879.

D. ECKSTEIN,
U. S. Consul and Commissioner.

Deposition of Frederick Hendrick Ziegelaar.

And the said FREDERICK HENDRICK ZIEGELAAR, being first duly sworn by the said commissioner, on this second day of April, 1879, to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, relative to the cause specified in the said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross interrogatories as follows, viz:

1. To the first interrogatory this witness saith: My name is Frederick Hendrick Ziegelaar; I am 40 years of age; and my occupation is a stock broker.

2. To the second interrogatory: From the 1st of May, 1873, I have had a banking-house in this city, and have continued such business since that date. 3870

3. To the third interrogatory: I was engaged in the purchase for customers, and dealing in stocks and bonds, foreign and domestic, such as were dealt in on the stock exchange, and during this time I was familiar with the prices of foreign and domestic stock and bonds, and have been a member of the stock exchange since the 1st of May, 1873.

4. To the fourth interrogatory: I know that Messrs. Holje & Boissevain, bankers in Amsterdam, and Messrs. A. J. & M. Milders, bankers in Rotterdam, Holland, placed an issue of Florida 8 per cent. State bonds, issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, upon this market in the latter part of 1870, and the paper marked A I believe to be a true copy of the same.

5. To the fifth interrogatory: These bonds were put upon the market by the person' I have named. They issued a prospectus to the public over their signatures, dated the 19th day of December, 1870; advertisements were made by them at the time in the leading financial papers in Holland, according to which the loan was in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, as appeared on the back of said bonds by endorsement. The act of the legislature, authorizing the bonds to be issued, stated that the same were in aid of the said railroad company. The act of the legislature duly authenticated, a map of said railroad, which appeared to be published by the company, the decision of the supreme court of Florida, and various other proofs from the governor of the State of Florida and other State officials were properly authenticated and upon file at the office of Holje & Boissevain for inspection of the bankers, brokers, and others, of which notification was made to the public by advertisements in the financial papers in Amsterdam at the time. 3871

The prospectus so issued to the public stated that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad was constructed already at that time and 250 miles in operation. The said map showed, and it was so stated and represented in Holland at the time, that the railroad commenced at Jacksonville, on or near the Atlantic coast, and was in operation west 250 miles, via Lake City, Live Oak, and Tallahassee, with branches, and this loan on these bonds were desired to be sold to build the road west, and complete a main trunk line. The bonds, I know, were bought and dealt in at the time upon such representations, believing them to be true, as I did.

6. To the sixth interrogatory: No rule of the stock exchange was necessary at the time in order to deal in the bonds upon the bourse. I do not know if any of the officers of the stock exchange made inquiries about these bonds. 3872

7. To the seventh interrogatory: I do not know.

8. To the eighth interrogatory: They were first bought and sold publicly about the last of December, 1870, or the first part of January, 1871. They were dealt in upon the stock exchange at Amsterdam as a public security and obligation of Florida. They were dealt in largely at that time, and passed through hundreds of people's hands in the regular way, as other public obligations and securities were. The bonds changed hands frequently, and the buyers were numerous.

9. To the ninth interrogatory: The price at which the bonds first sold was 80 per cent., and varied from time to time, and even as high as about 84 or 86 per cent.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: The bonds decline' greatly when the interest due July 1st, 1873, was not paid.

11. To the eleventh interrogatory: The termini of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad was represented by the map exhibited to the public, and by those placing the bonds upon the market, to commence at Jacksonville, and in operation west 250 miles, as I 3873 have already stated.

12. To the twelfth interrogatory: It was represented that the line of railroad spoken of by me was security for the payment of these bonds.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: I never heard anything about a Florida Central Railroad. There was no publication of the kind about such company that I ever heard of. I am very sure if such notice had been published I should have heard of it.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: The inducement which led me to consider the bonds a good investment was the fact that they were the obligations of the state of Florida, issued by authority, and sustained by the opinion of all the judges of the supreme court of the State, which was published in Amsterdam; also that the bonds were issued by the State in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, represented to the public here by the people who put the bonds upon the market as a great public work and a continuous line of railway from Jacksonville west 250 miles, and the entire line was pledged as security for such bonds to the State, by solemn mortgage, to make the payment of the bonds sure, and the intention and object to complete the line to Mobile and make a leading trunk line in the southern part of 3874 the United States. I never before heard that a Florida Central Railroad Company ever claimed to own that part of the line from Jacksonville west 59½ miles to a place called Lake City. Had it been known here that such statement was true the bonds could not have been sold, as I believe.

15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: The bonds declined in 1873 when and because the interest due July 1st, 1873, was not paid.

16. To the sixteenth interrogatory: It was published there by the bankers placing the loan that the State of Florida had appointed a financial agent in New York City to pay the interest when due. This gave continued confidence to the bonds in this market.

17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: Interest was paid on the bonds until the time I have spoken of. Such public notice was given by Holje and Boissevaine and A. J. & M. Milders by advertisement in financial papers here, as I now remember, but I have not the notice. Such notice made me believe the bonds a good investment.

18. To the eighteenth interrogatory: I have answered as fully as I know.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I know a large number of 3875 the complainants in Amsterdam and in the Provinces, among whom are many leading bankers, brokers, and business men of the best standing and high reputation in Holland.

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: I know many of the people who are complainants in this suit, and saw many of them buy bonds on the stock exchange, and believe they were induced to buy the bonds because they believed them a good investment, and safe.

21. To the twenty-first interrogatory: I have, at various times, bought said bonds, on orders for my customers, at various prices.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: First by general public subscription, and afterwards dealt in upon the bourse, as other marketable securities, as well as by private sales. I do not remember who were the first subscribers to the loan.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: This is the first time I have ever heard of the internal improvement fund, or trustees of same, of Florida. I should most likely have heard of it if it had ever been made public here.

24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: Such notice, if made known as inquired, would have caused a large decline in the bonds, and they would have gone to almost nothing.

3876 25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: The bonds would have at once declined, and there would have been no market for them, as I think.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: The law properly authenticated was printed and exhibited as stated. I have previously answered what I know about the information called for in the question, as much as I know.

Final. To the final interrogatory: I can think of nothing more.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendant, the Florida Central Railroad Company:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory: About the last days of December, 1870, or the first days of January, 1871, in Amsterdam, Holland, at about 80 per cent. on the dollar, to a large number of people, sold by the bankers already named, Holje and Boissevain, and A. J. and M. Milders. I believe 3,206 of such bonds were bona fide sold and dealt in on this market altogether.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I never before saw or heard of the printed paper marked A mentioned in this question.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: I never before heard of any such person as T. W. Brevard, or of any such letter.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I never before heard that 3877 Governor Reed was impeached, and never before saw or heard of such a paper as the one marked C. I know nothing about John Collinson's connection with the sale of such bond.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: Nobody was ever expelled, to my knowledge, for dealing in said Florida State bonds, [illegible] called, issued in aid of the said railroad company.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I never before heard of such telegrams, and know nothing about them.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendants, the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, et al.:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory: I became a member of the Stock Exchange as I have already stated. The functions I perform are to buy stocks and bonds for customers.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I first saw and heard of said bonds through the prospectus spoken of in my direct examination. I only know a railroad was intended to be constructed by the act of legislature. The endorsement contained on each bond over the signature of the governor of Florida, the map already spoken of, and other documents I have named in my direct examination, I have announced as fully as possible.

3878 3. To the third cross-interrogatory: It would entirely depend upon the state of the market, and all surrounding circumstances.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I have as answered as fully as I can.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: I never heard of such bonds having been offered in England first and failing before offered here. The only prospectus I ever saw or heard of before in connection with these bonds is the one issued and printed in Dutch, dated December 19th, 1870, over the signature of Holje and Boissevain, and A. J. & M. Milders.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I never heard about such statements of fraud till after July, 1873. I know in February, 1871, the public was notified that the judges of the supreme court of Florida had unanimously said that the bonds were legal and all right.

7. To the seventh cross-interrogatory: There was never any decision about the bonds, to my knowledge, by the Bourse or Stock Exchange of Amsterdam. I never heard of such telegrams before now. I never heard before of such a letter from E. M. L'Engle.

8. To the eighth cross-interrogatory: I never heard before about John Collinson having anything to do with the sale of such bonds. I never knew any distinction in the bonds numbered below or above 2800.

3879 9. To the ninth cross-interrogatory: I know that the said bonds were regularly sold in the market at Amsterdam and in the provinces in Holland. I never heard anything about Hopkins & Co., or Collinson, at the time of the sale. I have already said that my firm dealt only with said bonds as we did with other well-known securities in the market.

10. To the tenth cross-interrogatory: I know not where the interest came from. I have already answered as fully as I can about the sale of bonds.

11. To the eleventh cross-interrogatory: I suppose the price varied from time to time as other securities did, which is all the reason I can give.

12. To the twelfth cross-interrogatory: I have already given names, and said I never heard before this of any such company as the Florida Central Railroad Company.

13. To the thirteenth cross-interrogatory: I never knew said bonds were ever offered in England at any time. I never saw or heard of any prospectus but the one published by Holje & Boissevain and A. J. & M. Milders, December 19th, 1870, as I have already said.

14th. To the fourteenth cross-interrogatory: I do not own any of said bonds. I have in the past, some time ago, disposed of such as 3880 I had. The rest of this question I have previously answered.

15. To the fifteenth cross-interrogatory: I know not where the interest money came from.

16. To the sixteenth cross-interrogatory: I know such a committee was appointed to protect the interests of the bondholders and to recover some of their money they had been defrauded of. I have heard that the committee was discharged some time ago.

17. To the seventeenth cross-interrogatory: I have heard such a "plan" was adopted. I have no personal knowledge about it, or what is else spoken of in this question.

18. To the eighteenth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing about this.

19. To the nineteenth cross-interrogatory: I was at the time a bond holder, but sold my bonds some time ago. I am not a party to the suit

20. To the twentieth cross-interrogatory: I know the persons named Dr. Wertheim requested me to testify. Mr. Willard showed me the questions upon which I had to give my testimony, and I read them myself previous to my examination.

21. To the twenty-first cross-interrogatory: I never executed any such power of attorney.

F. H. ZIEGELAAR.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this 2nd day of April, 1879.
[SEAL OF CONSUL.] D. ECKSTEIN,

3881 Deposition of Frederick William Oewel.

And on the 29th day of March, A. D. 1879, at 10 a. m., the said FREDERICK WILLIAM OEWEL, being first duly sworn by the said commissioner to testify the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth relative to the cause specified in said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross-interrogatories as follows, viz:

1. To the first interrogatory the witness saith: My name is Frederick William Oewel; my age (53), fifty-three years; and occupation administrator.

2. To the second interrogatory: I resided during that period at Baambrugge, and had my office in Amsterdam.

3. To the third interrogatory: I was administrator during that period, and was engaged in selling bonds and other securities, and was familiar with this kind of business generally.

4. To the fourth interrogatory: Yes; I do know of the introduction and sale of such bonds, and I believe that the exhibit shown me is a copy of the bonds.

5. To the fifth interrogatory: Said bonds were put upon the market by Messrs. Holje and Boissevain, in Amsterdam, and by Meilders in Rotterdam; certain representations in print; I remember to have 3882 been made, copies of which printed representations I have not now with me, and the purchase and sale of such bonds with and upon the reliance of the correctness of the statements contained in the circulars.

6. To the sixth interrogatory: The bonds in question had an official quotation, but I am not aware that any investigation or examination of said bonds by the Bourse committee had taken place.

7. To the seventh interrogatory: An official quotation was granted.

8. To the eighth interrogatory: I do not remember; the dealings in said bonds were public and general, and among a large class of buyers and sellers.

9. To the ninth interrogatory: I can positively now say, but think I am correct in saying that they sold them between 70 and 80; the price varied from time to time; I do not remember what was the price at any time.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: They did decline after default of the payment of interest, and such bonds declined in consequence of their generally prevailing distrust.

11. To the eleventh interrogatory: I am unable to give any particulars to this question.

3883 12. To the twelfth interrogatory: I remember generalities, but cannot answer in full.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: Without reference to papers, which I have not at hand, I am not able to give a positive reply to this question.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: I do not know of any unusual inducements made to the dealers in such bonds. The standing of the house which emitted these bonds, and the general confidence prevailing at that time in American securities. I do not remember as to the matters contained in the balance of this question.

15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: I know they did decline, but do not remember the exact period when. The cause in the decline was default in payment of the interest and distrust in the security.

16. To the sixteenth interrogatory: I refer to the printed circular for my answer to this subject, not remembering any other statements as having been made.

17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: Yes; I believe semi-annually, I think it was forty ($40) dollars per bond. I do not remember that any agent was appointed by the governor of Florida for the payment of the interest on the bonds.

3884 18. To the eighteenth interrogatory: Not remembering of the appointment of such an agent or of any publication in Holland of such appointment, I cannot say what, if any, effect it had upon the public.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I know and am acquainted with most of the complainants in this suit. Their occupation is commission houses in stocks, merchants, insurance agents, and so forth, and all of them are, so far as I know, of respectable standing, and enjoying of general confidence and credit.

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: I have no knowledge that any of the complainants that I know made any purchase of any of the bonds in question.

21. To the twenty-first interrogatory: I purchased none of said bonds either for myself or others.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: By general public subscription.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: I do not remember of any such claim being made by any such corporation. I have a general knowledge of complications and litigations existing about these securities.

24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: A great depression would have been thereby caused.

3885 25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: Would have had a most depressing effect.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: I know of no other laws of the State of Florida on the subject as those contained in the printed circular published at the time of the issue of the loan.

Final. To the final interrogatory: I think it of great importance that the judges should be informed that the Dutch people bought and paid bona fide the bonds in question, and that no inducements unusual in our market were ever made by the bankers who emitted the loan.

Cross examined by and in behalf of the defendant The Florida Central Railroad Company:

1. To the first cross interrogatory the witness saith: I am unable to answer, and don't know anything else as to what was published in the circular.

2. To the second cross interrogatory: I never did see the original of an exhibit shown me, marked A, and I never heard of any such exhibit existing, and therefore I cannot answer more fully to this question.

3. To the third cross interrogatory: I have never heard of or seen the exhibit marked B, now shown me by the commissioner.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I never saw the articles of 3886 impeachment contained in exhibit and shown me by the commissioner, nor did I ever hear of the mat any time previous. I knew only of general complications which had a depressing effect on the securities.

5. To the fifth cross interrogatory: I know of no members of the bourse or stock exchange who have been expelled, deposed, suspended, or required to resign, or fined, or censured, or otherwise punished for improper practices in connection with the negotiations, or sale, or putting upon the market of the said bonds; that is, the bonds of the State of Florida issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

6. To the sixth cross interrogatory: I have no knowledge whatever of any telegraphic correspondence in the year 1870 between Gov. Reed and Mr. Boissevain, or Mr. Boissevain and Gov. Reed, nor any other persons.

Cross-examined by and on behalf of the defendants The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company et al.:

1. To the first cross interrogatory the witness saith: I became a member of the bourse or stock exchange of Amsterdam in the year 1869; I am a' administrator or trustee; I am not a speculator in said stock exchange.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: In the year 1876 Florida 3887 State bonds were first brought to my attention by a printed circular issued by Messrs. Holje & Boissevain, and A. J. & M. Milders. The circular also supplied to me the information as to what the bonds were intended for, which was the construction of the said railway.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: A bond issued by a State in regard to which no doubt existed as to its perfect validity and title, and bearing 8 per cent. interest, would have sold at this market at about par, for instance, the State of Massachusetts would easily have obtained the face value of any securities it might have issued at that time; whereas the State of Florida being less known, and not standing so high in the estimation of the Dutch public, it was perfectly natural that the bonds should not have been considered worth more than from (70 to 80) seventy to eighty cents on the dollar.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I knew from the printed circular that I had no connection with the loan.

5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: I do not know that the Florida State bonds had failed in England before they were put on the market in Holland. I do not know that they were put on the market for speculative purposes by certain parties, with my co-operation and 3883 knowledge, as I in fact had nothing to do with the emission and sale of the bonds. I have never seen the prospectus printed in English now shown me, and I do not know that the prospectus printed in English is a correct copy of the one printed in the Dutch language.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I did not know of any fraud in those bonds when they were first offered and sold in this market, or of anything fraudulent or irregular in connection with the same. I read nothing at the time in any journal or publication referring to anything fraudulent about them. Later on I read one publication questioning the validity of said bonds.

7. To the seventh cross interrogatory: I do not know anything regarding those telegrams, nor of the letter of Mr. L'Engle.

8. To the eighth cross interrogatory: I do not know anything contained in this question.

9. To the ninth cross interrogatory: I do not know of the existence of any such syndicate, and was in no way connected with any.

10. To the tenth cross-interrogatory: I don't know of any such arrangements.

11. To the eleventh cross-interrogatory: I do not know of any manœuvres of this kind in connection with the Florida bonds, nor have 3889 I ever myself purchased or sold any of those bonds The value of said bonds were affected by rumors of their validity, and what I herein say refers to the period some considerable time after the bonds were placed in this market.

12. To the twelfth cross interrogatory: They were placed in this market by Messrs. Holje & Boissevain and A. J. & M. Milders, and as to the rest of this question I know nothing about it.

13. To the thirteenth cross interrogatory: I do not know.

14. To the fourteenth cross-interrogatory: I never had at any time one of those bonds, nor have I now.

15. To the fifteenth cross-interrogatory: I do not know.

16. To the sixteenth cross-interrogatory: I know that the committee was formed to protect the interest of the bondholders, but I do not know any particulars about the committee.

17. To the seventeenth cross-interrogatory: I know that Mr. Sherwin occupied himself with the protection of the bondholders' interest, and was engaged in bringing about a reorganization or settlement. Whether that is meant by the memorandum plan spoken of I do not know.

18. To the eighteenth cross interrogatory: I do not know of any such arrangements.

19. To the nineteenth cross interrogatory: I am not in anywise 3890 directly or indirectly interested therein, and as to the result of it, I am interested therein to the following extent: When Mr. Sherwin called on me some years ago in reference to this reorganization I volunteered my advice about the course he should take in the matter, and I promised him if he did follow my advice that I should use all my influence with any bondholders to support his proceeding, which I did. Later I learned that my services would be remunerated, and although I would never have asked for any pay, I do believe that I am entitled to receive a remuneration, if the result for the bondholders is satisfactory.

20. To the twentieth cross-interrogatory: Know the persons named in this question, and they have spoken to me in connection with the matter. I have seen the interrogatories previous to my examination, having been shown them by Mr. Willard.

21. To the twenty-first interrogatory: I have never given any such power of attorney, written or printed, to Frank Sherwin.

F. W. OEWEL.

Sworn to and subscribed before me this twenty-ninth day of March, 1879.

[L. S.]

D. ECKSTEIN,
U. S. Consul and Commissioner.

3891 Deposition of Abraham Carel Wertheim.

And the said ABRAHAM CAREL WERTHEIM, being first duly sworn by the said commissioner, on this second day of April, 1879, to testify to the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth, relative to the cause specified in the said commission, made answer to the said interrogatories and cross-interrogatories as follows, viz:

1. To the first interrogatory this witness saith: My name is Abraham Carel Wertheim; I am 46 years of age, and a member of the firm of Wertheim & Gompertz, bankers.

2. To the second interrogatory: At Amsterdam, Holland.

3. To the third interrogatory: Banker and member of the stock exchange; I was so engaged, and perfectly acquainted with all dealings in stocks and bonds on that market.

4. To the fourth interrogatory: I know of such introduction and sale of such bonds.

5. To the fifth interrogatory: Such bonds were placed on the market in Amsterdam by Holje & Boissevain and A. J. & M. Milders, bankers, in December, 1870. Representations were made publicly, in print, by these bankers at that time, and my conviction is that the representations were made bona fide, and purchases of such bonds on the 3892 reliance of such statements.

6. To the sixth interrogatory: No authority was required, and the quotations of such bonds were allowed on the stock-list upon the reliance of the truthfulness of the representations and statements of the bankers placing the loan on the market.

7. To the seventh interrogatory: I have already answered this question.

8. To the eighth interrogatory: About the latter part of December, 1870, and the early part of 1871, at about 80 per cent. The dealings were public among a large class of buyers. The market in these bonds being a regular and frequent one, they changed hands daily.

9. To the ninth interrogatory: They were sold as high as about 84 per cent., and varied from time to time.

10. To the tenth interrogatory: They declined from 1872 to 1873, on account of general depression in American securities, and when the interest was not paid on the 1st of July, 1873, they then declined heavily.

11. To the eleventh interrogatory: I can only refer to the prospectus issued by the bankers when the loan was put on the market.

3893 12. To the twelfth interrogatory: The prospectus made public a full statement about the length of said railroad. An advertisement was also made, showing the bonds to be a lien upon the railroad 250 miles long in Florida, of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

13. To the thirteenth interrogatory: I never heard of such a company as the "Florida Central Railroad Company" before now, or of any such claim, and they were perfectly unknown to all purchasers of such bonds, and also the directors and members of the Amsterdam Bourse.

14. To the fourteenth interrogatory: The bonds were supposed and believed to be a perfect obligation against the State of Florida, as well as a lien upon said line of railroad, and no information was ever given by the Florida Central Railroad Company, or by anybody else, of any claim on any part of said line of railroad.

15. To the fifteenth interrogatory: I have answered this question before.

16. To the sixteenth interrogatory: The prospectus gave me no information on this point, but the coupons were sold by the owners to bankers and brokers, who sent them for collection to New York, where they were payable.

17. To the seventeenth interrogatory: Yes; payments were 3894 semi annual, at 8 per cent. yearly, and payments were made in New York as I have stated. Notice was given here publicly by advertisement that an agent in New York had been appointed by the governor of Florida to pay the interest on such bonds. The dealers in said bonds accepted such notice as true, and the statement itself confirmed their reliance on the value of the bonds in this market.

18. To the eighteenth interrogatory: Such notice confirmed belief in the bonds being sold, and a lien on the line of railroad.

19. To the nineteenth interrogatory: I know several of the complainants as high-standing people, who bought the bonds as an investment, in full confidence as a good security, and have held them till this day, relying upon the ultimate payment of the same.

20. To the twentieth interrogatory: One of my customers bought for himself and his friends several hundreds of said bonds at about 80 per cent. Their names are Simon Fadooks & Son, of Dordrecht. The bonds were bought in full reliance on their validity, and as an investment, and they told me so at the time.

21. To the twenty-first interrogatory: Yes; the purchases and sales were made successively and publicly at different times in the 3895 market at Amsterdam.

22. To the twenty-second interrogatory: First by public subscription, and afterwards by sales in the open market. The subscription was publicly open and a large number of the brokers interested themselves in it for their customers.

23. To the twenty-third interrogatory: I never knew about such a claim, or heard of it before. If such a claim had been made public, it would have rendered the sale of such bonds impossible and destroyed them completely in the public opinion.

24. To the twenty-fourth interrogatory: Had such publication been made known, it would have been destructive to the value of the bonds.

25. To the twenty-fifth interrogatory: I have already answered that such notice would have prevented any sales.

26. To the twenty-sixth interrogatory: Notice was made public that the law was open for inspection, with other documents, at the office of Holje & Boissevain, when the loan was offered.

Finals to the final interrogatory: I know nothing further, except that all was done in Holland in the matter, in the purchase and sale of said bonds, was in good faith, believing the bonds valid and perfectly 3896 good against the State of Florida, as well as a first lien upon the 250 miles of railway before named.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendant the Florida Central Railroad Company:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory: In the last days of December, 1870, bonds were sold, as I have already answered. I have answered this question as completely as I can in my direct examination.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: I have never heard of any such person before as Mr. L'Engle, and have never heard of such letter before; I am pretty sure no such letter was published in Amsterdam, or I should have have heard of it.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: I have never before heard of such a document or of such persons. If any such document as this or the one named in the previous question had been addressed to the members or other directors or officers of the Bourse or Stock Exchange of Amsterdam, the same would have been made public at once.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I never before heard of this. I do not know whether John Collinson was better informed, but certainly he did not publish it.

3897 5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: Never was any member expelled for such reason or censured, or caused to resign on such account.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing about such telegrams; I never before heard of them.

Cross-examined by and in behalf of the defendant the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company et al.:

1. To the first cross-interrogatory: I became a member of the Bourse of Amsterdam in 1853; I am a banker.

2. To the second cross-interrogatory: In 1870, from the prospectus of Holje and Boissevain, and A. J. & M. Milders, I first heard of these bonds; I got all my information from such prospectus.

3. To the third cross-interrogatory: For first-rate European bonds the price should be at par; but for American bonds, where at that time the rate of interest was much higher than in Europe, the price of 80 per cent. was high enough.

4. To the fourth cross-interrogatory: I have stated from whom and how I obtained my information; I had no connection with the concern.

3898 5. To the fifth cross-interrogatory: I do not know of any attempt to put these bonds on the market in England; I only knew Holje & Boissevain and A. J. & M. Milders in connection with such loan; and the only prospectus I know or ever heard of was the one issued in Dutch, with the signatures of the above-named bankers and brokers, and dated on December 19th, 1870.

6. To the sixth cross-interrogatory: I ignore completely any such statements of this kind; I never heard of them; if any such charge or fraud had been so made, a sale of the bonds on this market would have been impossible.

7. To the seventh cross interrogatory: No decision of any kind was ever made by the Bourse; I did not know anything of such telegrams. I never heard of them before, or of such letter addressed to Holje & Boissevain.

8. To the eighth cross-interrogatory: I do not know of any sales by John Collinson or Hopkins & Co. at any time; I do not know of any distinction between bonds over or below 2,800; no difference was ever made on the market.

9. To the ninth cross-interrogatory: I ignore completely any transactions between Collinson and Hopkins & Co. about such bonds; I do not know anything about it.

10. To the tenth cross interrogatory: I do not know.

3899 11. To the eleventh cross-interrogatory: The general price of these bonds in the market changed at different times, as in other securities. They had no decided character for mere speculation, but for investment they were looked upon as solid bonds; I never speculated in them, not being a speculator.

12. To the twelfth cross-interrogatory: I have already answered this question.

13. To the thirteenth cross-interrogatory: I knew nothing of the kind. I have answered as best I can before.

14. To the fourteenth cross-interrogatory: I never had such bonds for myself, but purchased them, and held them from time to time for my customers in the regular course of our banking business.

15. To the fifteenth cross-interrogatory: I do not know.

16. To the sixteenth cross-interrogatory: There was a committee elected by the bondholders officially at a meeting in the usual way, and the members of that committee were all known as very respectable men. Such committee has since retired, the bondholders employing counsel to act for them.

17. To the seventeenth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing and never heard anything of any such matter.

18. To the eighteenth cross-interrogatory: I know nothing of this.

19. To the nineteenth cross-interrogatory: I have no interest whatever in this suit.

3900 20. To the twentieth cross-interrogatory: I do not know these gentlemen. I was requested by Dr. Wertheim to give my testimony, and to give such information as I have done, without any attempt or intimation from any person as to what I should testify. I have never before the 29th of March last, seen or read such interrogatories.

21. To the twenty-first cross-interrogatory: I never gave power of attorney to Mr. Sherwin.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Loan of the State of Florida. Issue of 4,000,000 dollars.

Issued in accordance with an act of the legislature of the State, dated the 28th day of January, 1870.

Bonds of 1,000 dollars to bearer, bearing interest at the rate of eight per cent.

Redeemable the 1st January, 1900.

Capital and interest in gold. Exempt from all taxes of the United States.

The payment will be effected at the office of the financial agency of the State of Florida in New York of the capital on the 1st January, 1900, of the interest in half-yearly coupons of 40 dollars, on the 1st January and 1st July of each year. Both in gold. 3902

The bonds are issued, the dollar computed at $2.50, at the rate of 8 per cent.; interest commencing 1 January, 1871. Messrs. Holge & Boissevain, at Amsterdam, and Messrs. A. J. & M. Milders, at Rotterdam, are authorized to take subscriptions on the said 4,000,000 dollars eight per cent. Florida bonds.

The State of Florida is the debtor of these bonds, and guarantees the payment in gold of both capital and interest.

The following statements are derived from the communications of the governor of Florida, (Mr. Harrison Reed.) and of the financial agent of the State, (the documents relating thereto, and a copy of the act hereafter mentioned are open for inspection at Messrs. Holge & Boissevain's.)

The present minimum value of the real property on which taxes have to be paid amounts 50,000,000 dollars. According to the new charter an annual tax has to be raised sufficient to cover the interest of the debt and further expenses of the State. A tax of only ½ per cent. on said amount of real property, with some other special taxes, will be adequate for both purposes, and for the forming of a sinking fund for the debt.

There are in the State of Florida four hundred miles of railway, a thousand miles of telegraph lines; along the coast extending over a length of a thousand miles, these are oyster-beds and fisheries, equal to the best in the world, various steamboats' insurance, and other companies are established in the State. Should a call be made on these resources for a contribution to the taxes, as is the case in other States, an interest liability ten times heavier than the present might be covered without rendering it necessary to impose heavier taxes on the population.

The State, moreover, possess 11,000,000 acres of lands, and will, when the government surveys are completed, acquire 5,000,000 acres more, which lands will constitute a future security for its debt.

The debt now to be issued is created in accordance with an act of the legislature, dated the 28th of January, 1870, on behalf of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad, according to the provisions of 3903 said act, namely: this company receives 16,000 dollars in bonds per completed mile of its road, and on the other hand, gives the State an equal amount in first-mortgage bonds, bearing the same rate of interest, which are held by the State as a special guarantee for the holder of State bonds.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, whose capital stock amounts to $6,550,000 paid upon, will altogether construct 450 miles of railroad—250 miles thereof now quite completed and opened for traffic.

The net receipts in six months ending the 31st July, 1870, on 237 miles, amounted to $182,546; consequently more than sufficient for the payment of the interest amount.

For the greater security of the payment of the capital and interest, the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad has issued first mortgage bonds to an amount of $16,000 per mile on the now completed 250 miles. These bonds have now been surrendered to the State of Florida, which, in accordance with the provisions of the aforesaid act, has in consideration thereof issued the said $4,000,000 State bonds.

The total amount of the previous debt of Florida is only $1,011,756, being partly indebted to the Government of the United States, and for the rest in the hands of the inhabitants of the State.

Besides this debt, however, there exists $1,300,000 so called Florida territorial bonds, partly in possession of English holders. These bonds were issued in 1835 by some banks that, with the approval of the legislature of the then "Territory," were to issue these bonds against mortgages on real property, which were in consideration thereof to be deposited at the said banks, Florida, being then as before said Territory, could not as such contract debt without the approval of the Federal Government, which approval was never granted; besides which, the approval of the legisature of the Territory for the issue of these bonds was given only under certain conditions, which were never carried out.

It has also been decided by the legal authorities in America, as well as by a committee of bankers and merchants in London, that these bonds do not constitute any claim against Florida; but the committee of foreign bondholders in London has expressed its opinion that the State of Florida, although in law not liable for these bonds, would do well to indemnify the holders.

3904 Consequent thereon, the financial agents of Florida and the holders of the said bonds, with the co-operation of the said committee of foreign bondholders, have come to an arrangement, based mainly on the issue of land warrants against the said bonds, which arrangement has now been submitted to the approval of the government of Florida and is generally considered a favorable one.

Payable January 1st, 1900. Interest payable 1st July and January, in gold, at Florida State agency, in the city of New York.

This bond is one of a series issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company to the extent of $16,000 per mile upon completed road. The State of Florida holding the first mortgage bonds of said railroad company for a like amount, as further security to the holder thereof.

HARRISON REED,
Governor of Florida.

The subscription for said 8 per cent. Florida bonds is opened at our offices, on Thursday, the 22d and Friday the 23d December, in the morning, from 10 till 2 o'clock.

The price of subscription, the dollar computed at $2.50, is 80 per cent. interest, commencing from the 1st January, 1871. At the time of subscription, 10 per cent. of the amount subscribed has to be paid, to be taken into account on the further payment.

The future payment has to be effected in one sum, three days after the assignment, against a provisional certificate, which will within a few days be taken in exchange for the original bonds.

In the event of an excess of subscription they will be proportionately reduced. A commission of ¼ per cent. will be allowed to brokers and stock agents on the amount assigned to them. Prospectuses and subscription lists are procurable at our offices.

AMSTERDAM, 5th December, 1877.

The Beshnur der Verceinging voor den Effektenhandel, (directors of the Union for the Stock Exchange,) declare:

That an 8 per cent. Florida loan was brought upon the market in 1870 by the firms of Holge & Boissevain and Milders & Co. at the rate of 80 per cent.

That according to the statement of the emittents the bonds sold at the exchange, 3,206 in number, were numbered as follows, viz: 1–441, 443–1735, 1737–3200 and 3769–3776.

That the said bonds were bought and sold bona fide at the exchange, the said bonds being considered as a State loan.

That in the first time with large dealings, and purchases and sale, many times over and over again, the said bonds rose to about 86 per cent., that is, at a premium of 6 per cent., as will appear from the daily price lists of that time.

That when in July, 1873, the coupon was not paid, the said bonds fell considerably, and that in consequence of the proposed reorganization having been adopted by the bona-fide holders thereof, the dealings therein have now again been resumed.

Memorandum of agreement made this fourteenth day of November, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, between Messieurs S. W. Hopkins and Co., of 58 Old Broad street, London, agents for the State of Florida of the one part, and John Collinson, of 9 Victoria Chambers, London, civil engineer, of the second part:

1. The said John Collinson agrees to pay to the said Messieurs Hopkins and Company against delivery, on application in London, of each State of Florida eight per cent. one thousand dollars bond, payable on the first January, one thousand nine hundred, with coupons from the first January, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, up to 3932 maturity of the bond attached, the price of for each bond, and to pay in addition such interest as shall have accrued on such bond at the date of delivery, calculated by reference of the coupon attached.

2. The said John Collinson shall take from, on Monday, the twenty-first November, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, one hundred and fifty of such bonds, and shall have for ninety days from that date the option of taking one thousand and fifty more of such bonds. In case the said John Collinson should take within that period five hundred and twenty-five of such bonds, he shall for a further period of ninety days at least, from the expiration of the first period, have the option of taking all or any of the remaining five hundred and twenty-five.

3. Should the said John Collinson, by Wednesday, November thirtieth, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, apply for five hundred bonds at least in the aggregate, including the first one hundred and 3933 fifty, then he shall for eighty-one days from that date have the option to take the entire balance, videlicit, three thousand five hundred bonds, and should he at the expiration of the said eighty-one days have applied for one thousand seven hundred and fifty, or more of the said balance, he is to have the option for ninety days additional of taking up any part of the whole of the remainder.

4. The said Messieurs Hopkins and Company agree to deliver to the said John Collinson, on application in London within the period aforesaid, against payments as aforesaid, any portion or the whole of the bonds for four million dollars, as the case may be.

5. The said Messieurs Hopkins and Company agree that until all of the said options shall have lapsed by non-compliance on the part of the said John Collinson, they will not sell or part with any of the said bonds for four million dollars, excepting through him, the said John Collinson.

3934 6. The said John Collinson agrees on or before the first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, to invite through well known and respectable firms subscriptions for the whole of the said bonds.

7. The said Messieurs Hopkins and Company hereby certify as fiscal agents of the State of Florida that the said bonds have been duly and legally issued by the said State, and that they have full authority to negotiate them in manner and upon the terms herein provided.

8 per cent. Florida loan.

The undersigned have the honor to advertise that in consequence of some difficulties occurred lately in some of the States of the U. S. of America, regarding the position of loans issued in behalf of rail-3938 roads or other public works, and desiring to give full security regarding the 8 per cent. Florida bonds which they issued to the holders of same, they decided to have the question regarding this loan submitted to the supreme court of Florida, acting therein according to advices of legal and other authorities in the matter of American law and legislation; and they now have much pleasure in stating that it appears from cable messages now to hand that the supreme court have unanimously given their decision that said loan is a constituted State loan.

DEAR SIR: We understand from S. W. Hopkins and Co. that you want a note from us stating the result of our perusal of the papers relating to the Florida matter, on which you saw us a day or two since.

3941 We have no hesitation in certifying that the original bonds and papers which were first submitted to us are in perfect order. The originals were given back by us to the parties in order, we believe, to send to the Continent to show to some parties there, but the copies which we produced to you are, we believe, correct, and from the tenor of the documents, there can, we think, be no doubt whatever as to the validity and bona fides of the bonds as certified by the State documents.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE,
Tallahassee, Fla., June 18, 1870.

SIR: Your letter of the 15th is received, and in reply to the inquiries therein contained, I have the honor to state:

3942 The eight per cent. gold bearing bonds of the State of Florida, alluded to in the communication named, were issued in exchange for the same amount of the eight per cent. gold bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, named by a first mortgage on the road, franchises, and all other property of said company, to the extent of $16,000 per mile, for such parts of said road as are now completed and in good running order.

The road for which this exchange was made is a first-class road in every respect and doing a good business, and the State is amply secured. It is one of the great public works of the State provided for in the internal improvement law enacted 1855. It having been held to be a public work by the legislative and judicial department of Florida since that time.

3943 I will further state that the completion of this great trunk line from the Atlantic coast of Florida to the city of Mobile, and the great Florida Gulf port of Pensacola has been for years the prominent object of internal improvement of the State, with all parties and with every administration.

It is unnecessary for me to state that the resources of Florida are fully sufficient to meet all her obligations, and it is the present policy to retrench as much as possible the public expenses, and devote all the energies of the State to the completion of this line of road.

I am, gentlemen, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

(Signed) HARRISON REED,
Governor of Florida.

FLORIDA STATE LOAN.

Issue of 4,000,000 dollars. Authorized by act of legislature, dated January 28th, 1870.

3944 The State of Florida guarantees payment in gold of both principal and interest, pledging the public credit of the State.

The governor of Florida (Harrison Reed) makes the following statements:

That there are four hundred miles of said road and and a thousand miles of telegraph line in operation; oyster beds and fisheries, along a thousand miles of the coast, equal to the best in the world; foreign corporations doing business in the State, insurance companies, steamship companies, all of which pay no taxes, and from which large tributes can, if necessary, be levied. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, whose share capital consists of $6,550,000 fully paid up stock, is a line 450 miles in length, of which 250 miles are now completed, fully equipped, and given over to traffic. The earnings of 227 miles for the six months ending 31st July, 1870, have produced a net income of $182,546, being more than sufficient to pay the interest on the bonds as additional security for the prompt payment of principal and in-3945 terest of these bonds. The Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company have issued first mortgage bonds at the rate of $16,000 per mile, on 250 miles of completed road. These bonds have been deposited with the State of Florida, who, in accordance with the act of the legislature of the 28th of January, 1870, have issued in respect of them the above $4,000,000 of State bonds. All the original documents connected with this loan have been submitted to Messrs. Ashuert, Morris and Co., solicitors, of 6 Old Jewery, London, who have stated that they are fully satisfied that they are in perfect order, and that the bonds are properly issued.

Be it known unto all whom it may concern, I, Edwin Augustus Burwash, notary public by royal authority, duly admitted and sworn, residing and practicing in the city of London, England, do hereby certify and attest that the paper writing hereunto annexed is a true, faithful, literal copy of the original act of denial, and under the seal of the State of Florida, of reports calculated to injure the credit of the State of Florida and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, dated Tallahassee, the capital of the State of Florida, the 26th day of February, 1871, and signed by Harrison Reed, the governor of Florida; Johnathan C. Gibbs, the secretary of state of Florida; and S. W. Connes, State treasurer, I, the said notary, having carefully collated the same and found them to agree in every respect.

JAN VAN DRUNEN.

Whereas it has come to our knowledge that reports have been circulated and measures taken to injure the credit of the State of Florida in this country and in Europe, through the press and otherwise, and to prevent the sale or injure the value of the bonds issued by the State of Florida to aid and assist in the completion and maintenance of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, under the laws of this State, amongst which are statements and reports that there was no authority for the issue of said bonds, and that the law under which they 3952 were issued was unconstitutional, for the purpose of settling that question, the governor did submit the same to the supreme court of Florida for their opinion, which has been lately rendered, and the supreme court held that the said bonds were issued with the power vested in the legislation by the constitution.

We further believe that the reports and means used are for the purpose of affecting the credit of the State, retarding the works of internal improvement of the State, by preventing the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company from extending its road to Mobile, thus crippling the great interests of the State in developing its resources, depriving the people of West Florida of means of transportation that this railroad would furnish them, promoting emigration to that portion of the State, and advancing the material, commercial, and agricultural interests of the State, feel it our duty to the State to give official denial to said reports.

We do, therefore, certify—

1. That the bonds of the State of Florida issued to aid the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company were issued in strict conformity to the statutes of Florida, and that said statutes have been declared by the supreme court of Florida, the highest judicial tribunal in the State, being the court of the last appel'ate jurisdiction, to be constitutional by the unanimous opinion of the judges of said court. 3953

2. That the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company was incorporated by the laws of this State for the purpose of securing the early completion of one of the great lines of railroads in this State forming a part of the internal improvement works of the State connecting the Gulf of Mexico and Atlantic by a line of railroads running east and west through the whole State of Florida, the largest part of said line of railroads being now completed, and there only remains to be completed that part of the line between Mobile, Alabama, and Quincy, Florida, a portion of which is now graded, which, when completed, will give a continuous seaboard line and the shortest route from New Orleans, Louisiana, to Jacksonville, Florida, on the Atlantic Ocean, running east and west through the whole State of Florida; that the title of Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to its line of railroad mortgaged is legal, clear, sound, and beyond question, and the lien is clear, perfect, and prior to any claim of whatever nature or demand, and superior in dignity to all others, and that the State of Florida has been by said company fully secured, as directed by the law, by the delivering of the bonds of the company in exchange for the bonds of the State issued to said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in accordance with the requirements of the statutes. 3954

3. That the security which the State offers to capitalists in her bonds issued by aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company is entitled to full faith and credit, and that all attacks on the same are injurious to the welfare of the State, and made for private reasons rather than for the public good.

Given at Tallahassee, the capital of the State of Florida, this 24th day of February, 1871.

FLORIDA.

The area nearly equal to that of the State of New York, with a far more extended coast line, and many and larger rivers, which are navigable to so great an extent that almost any part of the State may be reached by vessels direct; it affords ample facilities for the shipment of its varied products to all the ports and markets of the world.

The richness of its soil is such that the entire year is a perpetual season of growth, vegetation, and advance, able to produce and send to market all the productions of the tropical and temperate zones weeks and months in advance of any other locality, and at a season when all such productions are luxuries and command the very highest prices; and from its proximity (only 3 days) to the great markets of Baltimore, Philadelphia, New York, Boston, and Portland, Florida becomes in fact the garden from which all the northern markets must find their supplies.

3958 Florida is advancing most rapidly in its material improvements, wealth, and luxuries, all which will be the resultant overflow of the advance and improvements in all the territories about her, and by which she is surrounded, and leaves no reason for doubt but Florida will in each decade rival the growth and developments of each quarter of a century at the North. She is now engaged in a great public work in building and completing a grand trunk railroad through her State—the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, beginning at Jacksonville, a seaport, and connecting the Atlantic Ocean with the city of Mobile, Alabama, almost a direct line from east to west, and with its branches comprising a total distance of 450 miles, 250 of which are completed, running, and open to traffic.

In order to aid this great public work the State of Florida has loaned her credit to the J., P. & M. R. R. Co., taking a first mortgage on its entire property, including all real estate, road-bed, iron, equipments, and all franchises as a security to the State.
3959 The fully paid-up capital of the railroad is $6,500,000, and the traffic on the constructed portion shows a revenue sufficient to pay the interest on all her obligations. Arrangements are now being made on the Apalachicola River to convey the Fowler entire sugar and cotton products direct through the railroad to the Atlantic ports, instead of freighting same by the Gulf of Mexico, as heretofore.

To those acquainted with the slow, expensive, and perilous navigation of the Gulf, they will at once appreciate that the J., P. & M. R. R. is one of the most important railroad arteries on the American continent, and when completed will give a continuous seaboard line and the shortest route from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean, and the main outlet to all intermediate States. Four large steamers have been purchased by the company, paid for, and placed on the Apalachicola River for the transport of cotton.

During the year 130,000 bales were shipped from this river through the Gulf of Mexico, and it is not extravagant to say that all of 3960 this cotton will pass through the J., P. & M. R. R. C.'s line, being the shortest, safest, and cheapest route, together with the products of the valleys of the Apolachicola and the Chattahoochee will find their way through the J., P. & R. R. seaboard.

LANDS.

Beyond the river, on through to Pensacola and Mobile, the road passes through a section of one of the finest cotton and sugar lands. From the report of the U. S. Bureau of Agriculture, as telegraphs the London Times of 21st December, 1870, there is an increase of 30 per cent. in the sugar crop of Florida. There is no State in America which will derive more benefit than the State of Florida, and thus open an immense sugar region, by loaning her credit for this great public work.

All the counties next to the Apalachicola River embrace something like 70,000 square miles of productive lands, and contain nearly, if not quite, one fifth of the population, and pay fully one-fifth amount revenue of the State.

No one has ever traveled over the J., P. & M. R. R. line without 3961 being impressed by the productiveness of the soil and the immense resources everywhere visible in its inexhaustable forests of pine and its great staple products of cotton and sugar. The river bottoms, alluvial deposits, &c., of the Apalachicola and the Chattahoochee Rivers, from the Alabama line down to the Gulf of Mexico, are equal to the great Mississippi bottoms, and by the construction of this railroad they will yield a large annual tribute to the revenues of the country. Upon reaching Pensacola the country is covered by the best body timber to be found anywhere in the South. The soil, too, is capable of high cultivation and great productions. At Pensacola over 500 vessels load yearly with timber, and that trade is capable of indefinite development, and a number of immense saw-mills are being constructed along, in anticipation of the railroad.

Hence, from the above notes, it is evident that the local traffic alone will be quite enough to create an immense surplus, and under the internal improvement law of the State of Florida, in connection with the United States of America, the J., P. & M. R. R. are entitled to 2,000,000 acres of land, and the Florida U. S. Senator has just advised the 3962 president of the railroad that he has every assurance from the Washington officials that the company will promptly receive its entitled lands, with the understanding that the same shall go to the sinking fund. These lands lie between the line of the railroad and the Gulf of Mexico, and are covered with the finest body of forest pine timber, and by the construction of several small branch*es* railroads, ranging from 1 to 5 miles, the future value and advantage of this territory is apparent.

CONSTITUTIONALITY.

The question was raised by political opponents of this great public work as to the constitutionality of the State loaning her credit to aid railroads, and the governor at once consulted the supreme court as to the constitutionality of the bonds. The decision was unanimously in favor of the issue, and on the 16th February, 1871, the same was filed on the judicial records of the State; and with reference to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile R. R. Co., the governor, treasurer, and secretary of state have certified that the title of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to its line of railroad, and which has been mortgaged to the State of Florida in exchange for the bonds of 3963 the State of Florida issued to said company, is legal, sound, and perfect, and that the lien of the State on said railroad under said mortgage is perfect, prior to any other claim or lien whatsoever, and that the State of Florida has been fully secured as directed by law by said company by the delivering of the bonds of said company to the State in exchange for the said State bonds issued to said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in accordance with the provision of the statutes passed by the legislature of Florida, in return thereto. And it is further certified that said company has been duly created a body corporate and politic by the said legislature of Florida for the purpose of securing by completion of one of the lines of railroad of said State forming a part of the internal improvement works of the State connecting the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean by a line of railroad.

And it is further certified that the acts of the legislature of Florida creating said corporation and authorizing the issue of the bonds of said State to said company to aid in the construction of said railroads 3964 are constitutional and valid and have been so declared in a regular judicial proceeding by the supreme court of Florida, the highest tribunal in said State, and the court of last resort therein, by the unanimous opinion of all the judges of said supreme court. In conclusion, it is simply an historical fact that Spain, France, and England fought for this valuable territory, which was finally purchased by the United States in 1819, being admitted into the Union as a State in 1845.

John Collinson to Holje and Boissevain.

LONDON, March 17th, 1871.

The letter you have received from Tallahassee has been submitted to Collins, one of the partners of S. W. Hopkins and Co. A great deal of it does not require answering at all, as it contains no statements of facts, and the only points I have been able to detect of any importance in the letter are as follows:

1. Have the bonds been recalled at any time? Answer. When the territorial questions came up, Collins, believing that it would preclude the negotiation of the State bonds, wrote to his house in New 3980 York requesting them, if possible, to exchange those bonds for the railway bonds which had been passed to the State. $1,000,000 of these were actually exchanged when he found that we still intended to proceed with the negotiations, and consequently he sent fresh instructions to have the said bonds re-exchanged. This was effected, and the $4,000,000 bonds have been all submitted to my inspection in London.

2. Do the stockholders of the railway company approve of the issue of these present negotiations for the sale of the bonds? Answer. The reply to this will be found in the resolutions, of which you have a copy, passed by a meeting of stockholders on the 24th of January, 1871, whereat 42,043 shares out of a total of 65,550 voted (x).

3. Whether bonds have been issued for more miles of road than have been built? Answer. We have the statements of an unknown correspondent against the formal documents from the governor of the State and the president of the company, of which you have copies.

3981 Respecting all the other statements that are contained in the letter as regards the sale of a portion of the line, &c., &c., Collins declared that they are absolutely false.

Annexed copies of the resolutions of the meeting of stockholders referred to, and also of meeting of directors at a meeting of stockholders of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company held at Tallahassee on the 24th day of January, 1871, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the preamble and the several resolutions adopted at a meeting of the directors convened at the call of the vice-president, Col. J. P. Sanderson, on the 10th day of December, A. D. 1870, be, and they are hereby, rescinded, revoked, and repealed, and the directors are required to carry this into effect by resolutions.

Resolved further, That the acts and doings, contracts, and negotiations made by Milton S. Littlefield, president, relative to the sale of the bonds of the State of Florida issued to this company and 3982 delivered to the president under the charter of the company, and the acts of the legislature of Florida for the purpose of aiding and assisting the company in fulfilling the objects of its charter and perfecting the public works of the State, be, and they are hereby, approved, ratified, and confirmed, and every officer of this company is hereby required to furnish the president of this company every aid to complete the sale of the bonds issued by the State of Florida to this company, and to complete the road into Mobile as soon as possible.

Resolved further, That the stockholders at this meeting, representing forty-two thousand and forty-three (42,043) shares of stock, do hereby declare that they have full confidence in their president, M. S. Littlefield, and the directors are requested to pass such resolutions as will carry into effect this expression of confidence, and notify those interested and other parties in this country and abroad that the company sustains their president and his negotiations relative to the sale of the bonds of the State of Florida issued to aid this company.

3983 Resolved further, That the governor of this State be respectfully requested to aid and assist the president of this company in negotiating the bonds of the State now in his possession.

Resolved further, That the directors of this company be instructed to take steps to build the road to the "Spanish Mole" at the earliest practicable moment.

I certify the foregoing to be a true abstract from the minutes of the stockholders of this company.

T. H. FLAGG,
Secretary.

At a meeting of the directors of the J., P. and M. R. R. Co., held at Tallahassee, on the 24th day of January, 1871, the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, That the preamble and resolutions adopted by this board on the 10th day of December, A. D. 1870, be, and they are hereby, rescinded, revoked, and repealed.

Resolved further, That, in accordance with the resolution of the stockholders held at Tallahassee on the 24th day of January, 1871, the following resolutions were adopted:

3984 Resolved, That the acts and doings, contracts and negotiations made by Milton S. Littlefield, president, relative to the sale of the bonds of the State of Florida issued to this company and delivered to the said president under the charter of the company and the acts of the legislature of Florida for the purpose of aiding and assisting the company in fulfilling the objects of its charter and perfecting the public works of the State be, and they are hereby, approved, ratified, and confirmed, and every officer of this company is hereby required to furnish the president of this company every aid to complete the sale of the bonds issued by the State of Florida to this company, and to complete the road to Mobile as soon as possible.

Resolved further, That this board do hereby declare that they have full confidence in the president of this company, M. S. Littlefield, and that the secretary of this company be instructed to notify those interested, and other parties in this country and abroad, that the company sustained their president in his negotiations relative to the sale of the bonds of the State of Florida issued in aid of this company.

3985 Resolved, further, That the governor of the State of Florida be requested to assist the president of this company in negotiating the bonds of the State now in his possession.

Resolved, further, That the several resolutions adopted at the meeting of the stockholders this day be, and they are hereby, severally adopted, ratified, and confirmed as the resolutions of this board of directors.

Resolved, further, That, in accordance with the instructions of the stockholders, the president be authorized to build and complete the road to the "Spanish Mole" as soon as practicable.

I hereby certify that the foregoing extracts are true copies from the minutes of the board of directors of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

3989 Deed of trust, Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to D. G. Ambler, F. H. Flagg, C. S. Chase, trustees. October 2nd, 1871.

JACKSONVILLE, FLA., 1871.

The office of the trustees will be at Jacksonville, Florida..

W. G. M. Davis, solicitor and counsellor; J. A. Henderson, attorney for trustees; J. H. Gardener, general manager.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company is a corporation organized and chartered under the laws of Florida, owning and operating a line of railroad from Jacksonville to Quincy, a distance of one hundred and eighty-five miles, with branch from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, a distance of twenty-two miles, which is in successful operation with ample equipments, &c., and is exclusively authorized and allowed to extend the same from Quincy through the state of Florida to Mobile in the State of Alabama. The Florida construction company is composed of J. H. Gardener, late general superintendent of the Southern Minnesota Railroad, E. G. and C. C. Smith, contractors and bridge-builders, who built the Dubuque bridge across the Mississippi, 3990 residents and owners of machine shops at LaCrosse, Wisconsin, and C. L. Chase, late agent of Southern Minnesota Railroad Company, for the sale of lands; D. G. Ambler is a banker at Jacksonville, Florida; Francis H. Flagg is a citizen at Tallahasee, Florida, and has been secretary and treasurer of this road from the time of the organiz' of the company which commenced to build the same. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company have contracted with the Florida Construction Company that the Florida Construction Company will extend and complete the railroad from Quincy to Mobile, building all necessary bridges and wharfs, and depot at Chattahoochee, being paid therefor as the work progresses, in sections of ten miles, and other similar work being done in like proportion in advance of any payments to secure the immediate and prompt completion, equipment, and maintainance of a continuous line of railroad from Jacksonville to Mobile, and to that end that all of the resources of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company may be faithfully and exclusively applied, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company have made the following assignment or lease in trust:

3991 Deed of trust, &c.

This indenture, made and entered by and between the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company of the first part, and Francis H. Flagg, D. G. Ambler, and Converse S. Chase, of the second part, witnesseth, that whereas the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company has this day contracted with the Florida Construction Company to complete its line of railroad from the western bank of the Chattahoochee River to a point at or near Mobile, in the State of Alabama, and to build a railroad bridge across said Chattahoochee River, and the said company are desirous of securing the Florida Construction Company aforesaid in the faithful and prompt performance of the several obligations therein undertaken by the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; and whereas the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company have received from the State of Florida certain bonds for the payment of the interest on which as the same may become due they are required by law to provide, and to secure which the State has a statutory lien upon the said railroad and all its franchises; now, the said party of the first part, 3992 for and in consideration of the premises, assigns, transfers, and delivers unto the parties of the second part, their successors or the successors of them, the following described property in trust, and it is hereby expressly stipulated and agreed that the parties of the second part shall only be liable for a faithful application of any and every of the proceeds coming into their custody and under their controll, as hereinafter provided, to wit, all the rolling-stock and equipments of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and do authorize and empower the said parties of the second part to use the same in the transportation of freight and passengers over the line of the said railroad, and for that purpose do assign to them the sole right to carry freight and passengers over the line of said road from Jacksonville west to the same extent and in like manner as is possessed by the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company under its charter of incorporation and under the same obligations as public carriers of mails, passengers and freights to which the said company is by law subject, and for such purpose to occupy and use all depots, water tanks, warehouses, wharfs, machine shops, turn tables, rights of way, as 3993 are now held and possessed by said company or that may be hereafter acquired, with power to expend money in construction and repair of the finished portion of said railroad and the rolling-stock and equipments thereof, so as to keep the same in serviceable condition for the purposes aforesaid.

And it is further agreed by and between the said parties that the said parties of the second part shall have the right to collect and receive the earnings of the said railroad for the period hereinafter mentioned and shall apply the same in the manner following, to wit: first, to pay and discharge the running expense and the necessary constructions and repair account and wages and salaries of officers and employees and of the present outstanding liabilities of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to the Freedman's National Savings and Trust Company, at Jacksonville, Fla., and to D. G. Ambler and B. C. Lewisson, not exceeding twenty-five thousand dollars, and to pay the said Florida Construction Company for work, labor, materials, &c., by them done and to be done and expended for the said party of the first part on the line of said railroad between Quincy and the said Chattachoochee River; second, in case of a 3994 failure on the part of the said party of the first part to provide the necessary means to pay the interest before mentioned as the same may become due, to apply so much of the remainder of such receipts as may come to their hands to the payment of said interest; third, to pay to said Florida Construction Company such amounts as may become due to them for the fullfillment of their said contract under the terms thereof, and at the time and in the manner therein provided. It is further agreed between the said parties that at the expiration of the term of two years from this date, all the rights, interests, powers, and controll of the said parties of the second part in and to the foregoing described property shall cease and determine, and the same shall be by them delivered to the said party of the first , saving and excepting such as may have been destroyed or expended in the business aforesaid. It is further agreed between the said parties that J. H. Gardner shall be employed as the general manager of the aforesaid business, whose duties shall be prescribed by the parties of the second part.

And whereas, for the purpose of completing, equipping, and 3995 maintaining of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile
Railroad, there has been issued to the said railroad company coupon bonds of the State of Florida, signed by the governor and countersigned by the treasurer, sealed with the great seal of the State, bearing eight per cent. interest per annum, of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, to the amount of four millions of dollars, which bonds have been negotiated, and a portion of the proceeds thereof have been received.

And whereas there has been granted, bargained, and sold to the said company large bodies of lands in the State of Florida to further aid in completing, equipping, and maintaining the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad;

And whereas the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, for the purposes of completing, equipping, and maintaining its aforesaid line of railroad, may hereafter acquire further large bodies of lands by gift, grant, or purchase, and upon such lands now so held, or which may hereafter be acquired, the stockholders of said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad may elect to issue bonds, 3996 mortgages, leases, or conveyances for the purpose of raising the necessary funds for the purpose of completing, equipping, and maintaining the said line of railroad;

And whereas the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad company, by its stockholders, may hereafter elect to issue other bonds, as they are empowered by law so to do, or may be hereafter authorized by law to do, and may receive other and additional bonds to aid in the purposes aforesaid;

And whereas it is necessary to the completion, equipment, and maintenance of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad that there should be a faithful application of all the proceeds arrising from the several sources herebefore recited, and from any and every source whatsoever to the aforesaid purposes.

In pursuance whereof the party of the first part hereby transfers and assigns to the said parties of the second part, in trust as aforesaid, to be applied to the completion, maintenance, and equipment of the aforesaid Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad and the purposes hereinafter mentioned, the proceeds arising from the negotiation and sale of the before-mentioned bonds yet to be received, and which authority of John Collinson, of London, is necessary to be obtained, and such balance of the proceeds of the sale of the remainder of the said sum of four millions of bonds as remains unapplied by the said party of the first part, at the day of the date hereof; and the said party of the first part hereby authorizes and empowers the parties of the second part, their agents or attorneys, to demand and receive the proceeds aforesaid from the hands of those by whom the same are or may be held for and on account of the party of the first part.

And the said party of the first part hereby authorizes and empowers the said parties of the second part, their agents or attorneys, to receive any and every bond or bonds that may hereafter be issued by the said company for the purpose of completing, equipping, and maintaining said road, or that may be given, granted, donated, authorized, or allowed to the same for the said purposes, and to negotiate the sale of the same and receive the proceeds thereof, also to collect and receive the proceeds arising from the sale, mortgage, lease, grant of any and all lands that now belong to or may hereafter be acquired by said company, and shall apply the same to the purposes and in the manner 3998 hereinbefore provided.

And the said parties of the second part are hereby authorized and empowered to pay the liabilities of the said party of the first part that are now existing, and the amounts of which shall be adjusted, ascertained, and certified by the said party of the first part; but in the payment thereof they shall be limited and restrained to the proceeds of the sale of such of the aforesaid four millions of dollars of the bonds of the State of Florida as may come to their hands, exclusive of the said twelve hundred thousand dollars of bonds now on deposit in London, which said twelve hundred thousand dollars of bonds shall be applied exclusively to the completion of said railroad.

Nothing in this contract shall be construed to interfere or conflict with any contract or arrangement that has been heretofore made with John Collinson or Aaron Barnett, or their associates, for the sale or negotiation of bonds that may have been or may hereafter be issued.

Signed, sealed, and delivered in duplicate.

In witness whereof the said party of the first part has, by its president, hereunto signed the same, and attached thereto the corporate seal of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad 3999 Company, this the 2nd day of October, A. D. 1871.

ads.

THE STATE OF FLORIDA, SAMUEL T. DAY, governor of the State of Florida, Horatio Bisbee, jr., attorney-general, and others, trustees of the internal improvement fund of Florida, plaintiffs.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, one of the defendants in the above entitled action, by R. B. Van Valkenburgh, its attorney, for answer to the complaint of the plaintiff therein, says:

First. It admits that on the 20th day of March, 1869, the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company was a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Florida, with a line of road completed from Lake City to Quincy, engaged in the business of common carriers.

Second. It admits that on the day aforesaid the Tallahassee Railroad was a corporation then existing under the laws of said State, with a line of railway completed from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, Florida, and engaged in the business of common carriers.

4001 Third. It admits that the said Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and the said Tallahassee Railroad Company accepted and issued bonds and became subject to the provisions of the act of the legislature of the State of Florida, and became liable to pay one-half of one per cent., semi-annually, on the outstanding bonds of the said companies respectively, to be invested as a sinking fund to pay the principal of said bonds, in manner and form as the same is charged in the third subdivision of the said complaint.

Fourth. It admits that the trustees of the internal improvement fund, for the reasons mentioned, as set forth in the fourth subdivision of said complaint, sold the said roads at the same time for the sums and to the purchasers, in manner and form as is stated in said fourth subdivision of the said plaintiff's complaint.

Fifth. It admits that the terms of sale of said railroads and property thereof was cash, or its equivalent, and that the deeds and possession of the same were not to be delivered by the trustees until the full payment of the purchase money.

Sixth. It denies the charges and allegations stated in the sixth, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, and 11th subdivisions of said complaint, in man-4002 ner and form therein set out, and alleges, upon information and belief, the facts to be as follows:

On the sale of said roads by the trustees of the internal improvement fund, the same were respectively purchased by Franklin Dibble, John L. Requa, Edward M. Cheeny, Alonzo Huling, James M. Baker, Wilkinson Call, and Silas L. Niblock, under the name and style of F. Dibble and associates; that the amounts bid therefor were the exact amounts of the outstanding bonds upon the said roads respectively, to wit, the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad bonds at par and the Tallahassee Railroad bonds at between 94 and 95 per cent.

That the said trustees propose to receive the bonds of said companies respectively in payment for the same at the sale.

That one George W. Swepson was the owner of nine hundred and sixty thousand dollars of said bonds, to wit, ($806,600) eight hundred and six thousand six hundred dollars in bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company, and one hundred and fifty-three thousand seven hundred ($153,700) dollars in bonds of the Tallahassee Railroad Company. That an arrangement was then made between the 4003 said Franklin Dibble and associates, of the one part, and the said
George W. Swepson, of the other part, under which said George W. Swepson was to pay unto the said trustees the bonds so held by him as a part of the purchase money on said sales for said purchase.

That said F. Dibble and associates were to pay the remainder of the purchase money to said trustees and receive their deed of said roads, to enable them to be incorporated as a railroad company and issue bonds upon said roads; said bonds to be sold in part to pay said Swepson for his advances, commissions, interest, and a large bonus, to wit, one hundred and fifty thousand ($150,000) dollars, for his services. That said associates, or some of them, went to the city of New York for the purpose of meeting the trustees there, and paying to them the remainder of said purchase money, to wit, four and seventy-four thousand ($472,000) dollars, or thereabouts, the nine hundred and sixty thousand ($960,000) dollars in bonds, as aforesaid, having been paid by said Swepson to said trustees on account of such sales. That said associates there met A. R. Meek and R. H. Gamble, two of said trustees, 4004 who had been duly appointed by said board of trustees commissioners to proceed to New York, receive the purchase money, and deliver the necessary deeds, and the said George W. Swepson, who had been duly appointed by said board of trustees their financial agent for the purpose of receiving said money and securing, by purchase, the remaining outstanding bonds on the said two roads.

That, at the meeting so held, one Calvin Dibble gave to said trustees, in full payment for the purchase of said roads as aforesaid, his check (having first offered to make payment in money) for the sum of about four hundred and seventy-two thousand (472,000) dollars, on the firm of Dibble, Worth & Co., of the city of New York. The said check was received in full payment of the said purchase money by said Meek and Gamble, two of the trustees as aforesaid, representing the board of trustees, as was by them passed over to said Swepson, financial agent of the board, who received and receipted for the same as cash, and the deeds of said railroads duly executed were delivered to the said F. Dibble and associates by said Meek and Gamble, and possession thereof under said deeds was afterwards taken.

4005 That said Dibble, Worth & Company were a solvent firm, then doing business in the city of New York, and having on deposit money equal in amount to the full face of said check.

That said George W. Swepson was at the time responsible, having the reputation of being worth more than one million of dollars, and then being the owner of stock in the Florida Central Railroad Company, and other property and choses in the State of Florida, worth much more than the amount of said check.

That the amount of said check could have been collected either from Dibble, Worth & Co. or the said George W. Swepson, and that Calvin Dibble, the maker of said check, was a member of the firm of Dibble, Worth & Co.

That said was intended to be paid and was good for the sum mentioned therein, and was given and received in good faith.

That there was no scheme, collusion, conspiracy, or fraud of any kind, but that it was a bona fide business transaction.

That the said A. R. Meek and R. H. Gamble subsequently reported their action in the matter to the board of trustees of the internal 4006 improvement fund, the plaintiffs of this action, and their report was unanimously approved by said board; to which report and the receipt of George W. Swepson, for the sum of four hundred and seventy-two thousand and sixty-five (472,065) dollars, being full balance due said trustees from sale of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads, made by said trustees on March the 21st last, this defendant begs leave to refer should it become necessary.

13th. This defendant, further answering, alleges upon information and belief, that by virtue of an act of the legislature of Florida, approved June 24th, 1869, the said Franklin Dibble and associates were constituted a body politic and corporate under the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, thus consolidating the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Companies of which they had become the purchasers as aforesaid.

That under and by virtue of a like act of the legislature of the State of Florida approved June 24th, 1869, this defendant was incorporated under the name and style of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, with power to complete, equip and maintain 4007 a connection by railroad between Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile. That about the month of May, 1870, the Tallahassee Railroad was duly and legally consolidated with and became a part of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; that at the time of such consolidation there was in existence and running in connection with said roads another railroad, known as the Florida Central Railroad Company, extending from Jacksonville to Lake City; and the stock in said last named company was divided into five thousand five hundred and fifty (5,550) shares of one hundred dollars each. That one Milton S. Littlefield, at that time the president of this defendant, became and was the owner of a large majority of said stock, to wit, about three thousand four hundred and ten (3,410) shares.

That at the time of the consolidation of the said Tallahassee Railroad with this defendant, it was the intention of the stockholders and directors of said roads to consolidate with the said Florida Central Railroad, and thus make one continuous line of railroad from Jacksonville West to Quincy, as completed under the name and organization of this defendant, and to further complete and equip the same 4008 through to the city of Mobile.

That said Littlefield, for the purpose of accomplishing that object, contracted to purchase all the outstanding stock not owned by him in said Florida Central Railroad Company, and made provision for the purchase and payment of the same, and did actually purchase and pay for a large amount, to wit, 4,710 shares. That other contracts for purchases for about 490 shares were not actually paid up, but that he had paid there on about 82,000 dollars.

That one John P. Sanderson at that time was president of said Florida Central Railroad Company, and was in favor of the consolidation, as were all of the directors of said company, and all of the known stockholders, as this defendant was informed and verily believes.

That this defendant, being desirous to raise money for the purpose of completing, equipping, and maintaining its said road under the act passed by the legislature of the State of Florida, and approved January 28th, 1870, amending the charter of this defendant, proceeded to issue its bonds payable to the State of Florida, as in said amended act provided, for the purpose of exchanging the same for the State bonds, 4009 which said State bonds were to be sold.

That four millions of dollars of such bonds were issued in substantially the same form, excepting only that as no formal resolution of consolidation had been adopted by the said Florida Central Railroad Company, the one million of bonds issued as a lien upon that portion of this defendant's road was made payable by the said The Florida Central Railroad Company, but at the time of the issue thereof it was represented to the governor of the State of Florida, and other parties, by J. P. Sanderson, the then president of said company, and by M. S. Littlefield, the then president of this defendant, and by other directors and stockholders in the Florida Central Railroad Company, that such consolidation had actually been provided for; that the stockholders and directors had acquiesced therein, and that there was no necessity for such formal resolution on the part of the Florida Central R. R. Co.

Lee 96

That such bonds were issued and delivered by said Florida Central Railroad Company and accepted and received by the governor of this State, under the last aforesaid law of the State, as and for the bonds of this defendant, as a lien upon its property.

4010 That in exchange for said four millions of dollars in bonds issued by this defendant, as aforesaid, this defendant did receive the four millions of dollars of the bonds of the State of Florida, as provided for in the said act, and this defendant admits that at that time, and for a long time subsequent thereto, said roads were considered consolidated, were run and managed and conducted as one road and organization, to wit, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

16th. This defendant admits that Milton S. Littlefield is now the owner of a large portion of the stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company representing his interest in that portion of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, but denies, upon information and belief, that George W. Swepson is interested therein.

17th. This defendant admits the execution of the deed of trust as is charged in 17th subdivision of the said complaint.

18th. This defendant admits that the trustees accepted said deed of trust and acted under it, that they paid some of the floating debts of this defendant and expended some money in building the exten-4011 sion of said road, but the exact amounts so paid and expended by the trustees this defendant cannot now state; and this defendant further says that said trust expired in October last.

19th. This defendant denies the allegations contained in the 19th subdivision of plaintiffs' complaint.

20th. This defendant admits that at the time of filing said complaint it did own and was in possession of three steamboats running upon the Chattahoochee River.

21st. This defendant admits that said Milton S. Littlefield did make the contract, as charged, with the Gulf Steamship Company, and assigned the stock therein mentioned to Aaron Barnett.

22nd. This defendant admits that Aaron Barnett was a member of said Gulf Steamship Company, and received said stock in trust, but it denies each and every allegation and charge of fraud, deceit, or knowledge of the same, contained in the 22nd subdivision of said complaint.

23rd. This defendant denies that said Milton S. Littlefield has a large number of the first mortgage bonds of the said Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company belonging to the trustees of the internal improvement fund, as charged in said complaint, and denies, upon information 4012 and belief, that M. D. Papy holds another large number of said bonds as agent of said railroad company, or of George W. Swepson, which said bonds belong to the trustees of the internal improvement fund, as is charged in the 23rd subdivision of said complaint; and this defendant further denies that Milton S. Littlefield, as the president of said railroad company, made a certificate under oath that the length of railroad owned and belonging to said company was two hundred and fifty (250) miles, as is charged in said subdivision of said complaint.

But defendant admits that the governor of the State, by reason of a mistake, issued to this defendant two hundred and twenty four State bonds more than was contemplated by law, and received therefor an equal number of this defendant's bonds, which it now holds as security for the same. But this defendant alleges, on information and belief, that as soon as the mistake was discovered this defendant, by its directors and officers, caused the said overissue of State bonds, to wit, two hundred and twenty four (224) of them, to be cancelled, and the same are cancelled, ready to be delivered to the governor of Florida on his returning to this defendant an equal number of this defendant's bonds.

4013 24th. This defendant denies all charges of extravagance and improvidence in the use of its income and funds, as is charged in the 24th subdivision of the said complaint, and alleges it employes only the necessary officers, attorneys, servants, and employees for the proper transaction of its business, as salaries and wages only reasonable for the services and duties performed.

25th. And this defendant, further answering, denies each and every allegation of fraud, collusion, conspiracy, or deception or knowledge of the same, charged in said original or amended complaint of the plaintiffs in this action, and alleges that it has acted in good faith throughout.

26th. And for a further answer to said original and amended complaint, this defendant denies that it is indebted to said plaintiffs or either or any of them, in the amount or in the manner in said complaint in that behalf stated, or in any amount whatever, because it says that upon the payment of the said sum of money by F. Dibble and associates to the said the trustees of the internal improvement fund, as is before alleged, and the receipts thereof by them and the said George W. Swepson, their agent, which payment was in full satisfaction of the 4014 amount bid upon at the sale of the property of said Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and Tallahassee Railroad Company, the said railroad companies were released and exonerated from any further or other payments, either upon the bonds upon the said companies or the sinking funds of the State, and that the defendant acquired and took the said property, franchises and effects of the said Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and the said Tallahassee, discharged of and free from any indebtedness to said plaintiffs, or any of them, by reason of said bonds or the law creating such sinking fund.

R. B. VAN VALKENBURGH,
Att'y for Defendants, The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

In the circuit court, fourth judicial circuit, Duval County, ss:

Milton S. Littlefield, of Jacksonville, of said county, being duly sworn, says that he is president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, the defendant in foregoing answer named;
that he has read the foregoing answer and knows its contents; 4015 that the same is true of his own knowledge, except as to those matters stated on information and belief, and as to those matters he believes to be true.

MILTON S. LITTLEFIELD,
Pres. J., P. and M. R. R. Co.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 18th day of Ma'ch, A. D. 1874.

CHAS. B. FENWICK. [SEAL.]
Notary Public, State of Florida.

4016 Affidavit.

On this present day the twenty-eighth of May, 1800 seventy-seven, appeared before me, Charles Mueller, consul of the U. S. of America, residing at Amsterdam, Jacobus Wertheim, LL. D., barrister and deputy judge, who, after having been sworn in due form of law, deposeth and said:

§ 1. I am barrister and deputy judge and also a bondholder of 8 % Florida bonds, issued 1870. I have for my own interest and also requested by several other bondholders, my clients, examined the questions respecting the validity of those bonds, and I became thoroughly acquainted with all the facts of the issue of these bonds.

§ 2. In the year 1870 a prospectus for the issue of four millions V 8 % was published by John Collinson (annex A). It was intended that subscription lists would be simultaneously opened in London, Frankfort, Amsterdam, and Rotterdam.

§ 3. In the above mentioned prospectus (annex A) was said "the J., P. & M. Railway to aid in constructing which the money will be applied, is a line 450 miles in length, of which 250 miles are completed, fully equipped, and given over to traffic."

§ 4. The issue of the loan failed in London and in Francfort.

4017 § 5. The said prospectus (annex A), bearing in John Collinson's own handwriting the words "definite prospectus," was handed to Mess. Holje & Borssevain, at Amsterdam, & A. T. & M. Milders, at Rotterdam, and an agreement made with those firms to issue the intended loan in Amsterdam and Rotterdam.

§ 6. The above-named firms framed and published on the 19th December, 1870, a prospectus in Dutch language (annex B), nearly a translated copy of the first named prospectus (annex A), containing the same fact mentioned as in the foregoing § 3.

§ 7. In applying for informations the promotors said, "The J., P. and M. Railroad is a consolidation of the Pensacola and Georgia and Florida Central Railroad Companies, and under their charters the road was built from Lake City to the Chattahoochee River, with branches to Monticello and to St. Mark's, and that the company purchased subsequently the road of the Florida, Atlantic Gulf Company from Lake City to Jacksonville.

§ 8. The information related in the foregoing § 7 was corroborated—

a. By a letter from the executive office, Tallahassee, June 18, '70, signed by his ex. Harrison Reed, governor of Florida (annex C).

b. By a copy of the resolutions carried by the stockholders of the J., P. and M. Railroad, held on the 24 day of Jan'y, 1871, at Tallahassee (annex D).

4018 c. By a decree given at Tallahassee the 26th day of February, 1871, by his E. Harrison Reed, governor of Florida, Jonathan C. Gibbs, sec't'y of state, and S. W. Conners, State treasurer (annex E).

§ 9. Under these circumstances, and with such proofs and informations, the loan has been issued and the bonds have been bona fide purchased in the market, the purchasers being intimately connected and believed sincerely.

a. That 250 miles mentioned (annex A & B) completed, fully equipped and given over to traffic, consisted in the roads extending from Lake City to Chattahoochee and from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, known as the J., P. & M. Railroad, and the road extending from Jacksonville to Lake City, known as the Florida Central Railroad.

b. That the bonds also purchased were indistinctly issued to and in constructing the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad, 450 miles in length, of which 234 miles, not 250 miles as explained in (annex G), consisted in as follows:

From Lake City to the Chattahoochee River	150	miles
Branch to Monticello	4	"
" " St. Mark's	21	"
From Lake City to Jacksonville	59	"

Which 234 miles, described as aforesaid, were completed, fully 4019 equipped, and given over to traffic.

c. That there was also a perfect and indissoluble unity of line between the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile and the Florida Central Railroads.

§ 10. The purchasers of the said bonds were since corroborated and entertained in their connection as stated in § 9 by the following proofs:

a, By a certificate delivered on the second December, 1873, by his E. the governor, Harrison Reed (annex F).

b. By an opinion given in New York, June 16th, 1870, by Mr. Geo. Jackson Curtis (annex G).

c. By a petition filed in the Supreme Court of the U. S. in a land suit The State of Florida vs. Edward C. Anderson, sr., and others, by G.

M. Borssevain, A. J. Meadus, A. Stoop, J. Jodoks, Dr. Jam Fey, in their own right, and as the only authorized agents and attorneys of other persons owning and controlling of the State of Florida, which person was duly sworn in behalf of the said petitioners by Mr. Samuel A. Strong, of New York, certifying all the facts stated in said petition to be true and correct (annex H).

d. By a statement and points delivered in support of the bill and on behalf of the holders of State bonds praying to be made parties 4020 in the suit mentioned in c by W. W. MacFarland, counsel.

e. By the opinion of the Supreme Court of the U. S., delivered by Mr. Justice Bradley in chancery, October term, 1875, in the case mentioned sut. c.

f. By the second annual message of his E. the governor, Ossian B. Hart, to the legislature of Florida, 6th January, 1874, pages 9 to 14, and page 120, statement of bonds in the office of the State treasury, 1 Jan., 1874.

g. By the Railroad Manual, 1874, by Edward Vernon, No. 56 Broadway, room' 21–22, New York.

h. By a report and appendix, directed by the committee for the protecting of the rights of the 8 % Florida bondholders annis 1873–'74, to the said bondholders (annex J. & K.).

The foregoing statement, made by the appearer, and put in writing, has been signed by him after in the presence of me, the undersigned, U. S. consul, in the consulate office, at the day and year as above.

JAS. WERTHEIM.

CHARLES MUELLER,
U. S. Consul.

Further personally appeared before me, Charles Mueller, U. S.
4021 consul for Amsterdam, on the day and year above written, F. H. Zugelaor, partner of the banking house Zugelaor & Vandenbergh, of Amsterdam, and J. Fred. Schutte, partners of the firm Schutte & Company, exchange brokers, of Amsterdam, all of whom being by me sworn in due form of law, did severally, voluntarily, freely and solemnly declare, depose, and say that the statements, as set forth in foregoing instrument of writing, signed and sworn to by Jas. Wertheim, LL. D., & deputy judge at Amsterdam, are, to the best of their knowledge and belief, true and creditable in every respect, faithfully representing the views and convictions of each and all of the Dutch holders of the 8 % Florida bonds in relation thereto.

F. H. ZUGELAOR.
J. FRED. SCHUTTE.

Sworn and subscribed before me,
CHARLES MUELLER,
U. S. Consul.

4021½ (Indorsed:) Affidavit of J. Wertheim. Filed May. P. Walter, clerk.

No. 669.

AN ACT for the relief of Franklin Dibble, A. Huling, E. M. Cheney, and their Associates, Purchasers of the Railroad from Tallahassee to St. Marks, and of the Railroad from Quincy to Lake City, and incorporating the Tallahassee Railroad Company.

Whereas, at a sale of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad and the Tallahassee Railroad, on the 20th day of March, 1869, by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, under and by virtue of the provisions of the Internal Improvement Law, Franklin Dibble, A. Huling, E. M. Cheney, and their associates, became the purchasers thereof;

Preamble.

And whereas, it is essential for the interests of the people of this State that the parties aforesaid, and their associates, shall be invested with such corporate powers as are needful for the operations of said road, as well as more accurately to define their powers and duties, therefore,

The People of the State of Florida, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Corporation.

Name of Corporation.

Powers.

SECTION 1. That the said Franklin Dibble, A. Huling, E. M. Cheney, and their associates, and their successors and assigns, are hereby made a body politic and corporate, under the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, and they, their associates and assigns, as such body politic and corporate, are hereby vested with and shall be entitled to exercise and enjoy the like powers, franchises and privileges as were granted to the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company, and the Tallahassee Railroad Company, by the several acts incorporating said Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and said Tallahassee Railroad Company, and with the right to hold, operate and enjoy the said railroad, under the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, subject to the conditions annexed to the sale of said roads by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, and by and in the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, they, their associates, successors and assigns, may purchase, receive and hold lands and tenements, goods and chattels, of whatsoever character, that shall be necessary or useful for the purposes of said railroads, and the same to grant, sell, mortgage or dispose of, and to sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, to make a common seal, and at pleasure to break and alter the same, and to establish and put in execution such by-laws and regulations as may be necessary and expedient, not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida.

ertain provisions of the arter of the nsacola and eorgia R. R. . made applicable to this rporation.

Sec. 2. Be it further enacted, That the provisions of this act, incorporating the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company, for the protection of its roads from trespass, injury or intrusion, and providing for the punishment of persons who shall trespass upon or injure the same, be, and they are hereby, made applicable to all cases of trespass, injury or intrusion on, to or upon the aforesaid railroads, and the said Tallahassee Railroad Company shall be entitled to all the benefits and protection thereof and therefrom.

mount of Stock be issued.

Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, That said Franklin Dibble, A. Huling, E. M. Cheney, and their associates, shall be entitled to declare the amount of which the stock in the said Tallahassee Railroad Company shall consist, and to divide the same into shares, which shares, however, shall not be less than one hundred dollars each.

y rent or m out.

Sec. 4. Be it further enacted, That said Tallahassee Railroad Company may, when they shall see fit, rent, lease, farm out or sell, any part of the said railroad to any person or persons, corporators or corporations, upon such terms as may be agreed on, provided said sale, renting or leasing shall not be made to any person or persons, or corporation, owning any railroads out of the State of Florida.

Directors.

Sec. 5. Be it further enacted, That the Board of Directors of the said Tallahassee Railroad Company shall consist of nine Directors, of whom the President of said company shall be one. The first directors shall be elected or appointed within one month after the passage of this act, and annually thereafter, at such time as may be fixed by resolution or law, but the said company shall not be dissolved for failure to elect or appoint its directors, so long as the said railroads shall be kept running and in operation, but the directors may be elected or appointed at the next meeting thereafter.

Company may issue bonds.

SEC. 6. Be it further enacted, That said company shall have the right to issue coupon bonds, in such denominations and at such rate of interest, annual or semi-annual, and payable at such time and place as they may determine, and may secure the same by mortgage on said railroads, their equipments, depots, workshops, property and franchise, executed in such form and manner as may be determined. PROVIDED, That any deed of trust, mortgage, conveyance, bond or bonds, or security which may have been executed, made, created or contracted for, as a lien on said railroads or otherwise, by said Franklin Dibble, in behalf of himself and his associates, prior to the passage of this act, shall be valid and effectual to all intents, either at law or in equity, as a lien or mortgage, or security on said railroad, as if the same had been made by virtue of this act, and shall in no wise be affected by any provisions thereof.

Approved June 24, 1869.

CHAPTER 1716.—[No. 4.]

AN ACT to perfect the Public Works of the State.

The People of the State of Florida, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. In order to secure the speedy completion, equipping and the maintenance of a connection by railroad between Jacksonville, on the Atlantic coast, and Pensacola, on the Gulf coast, and Mobile, in Alabama, running through the State of Florida, the following named persons, viz.: George W. Swepson, Milton S. Littlefield, J. P. Sanderson, J. L. Re Qua, William H. Hunt, their associates, successors and assigns, are hereby constituted a body politic and corporate, under the name of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and as such shall have and use a common seal, may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, may purchase and hold real and personal property, which may be necessary or useful for the purposes of the road, and sell and convey the same in fee or for a less estate, or by way of mortgage or otherwise, and may make and enforce, for the government of the corporation, such by-laws and regulations, not contrary to the Constitution and laws, as they may deem best. The said company is hereby vested with the like powers, franchises and privileges as were and are conferred by the Act to incorporate the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company, and the act to amend an act entitled an Act to incorporate the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company.

Purposes of Corporation.

Corporators,

General powers

Shall have like powers as were conferred upon the Fla., At. and Gulf Cen. R. R., and the act amendatory thereof.

SEC. 2. The said corporators, associates, successors and assigns, shall have power to fix the capital stock of the company, the shares of which shall be one hundred dollars each, and shall designate the times and places of holding the meetings of the company.

Capital Stock and places of holding meeting.

The first meeting shall be called within thirty days after this act goes into operation, by notice, signed by either of the following named corporators, viz.: George W. Swepson, Milton

First meeting, how to be called.

S. Littlefield, J. P. Sanderson. The said corporators, their associates, successors and assigns, shall prescribe the number of directors of this company, and their term of service, and likewise the term of office, compensation and duties of the president, and all other officers.

What a quorum.

A majority of the corporators shall be a quorum to do business.

Powers of the Directory.

SEC. 3. The directors, or a majority of them, shall have power to transact all business of the company, unless otherwise ordered by the stockholders; may declare dividends of profits, if any, and, in general, make and enforce all such rules and regulations, consistent with the by-laws of the company, as they may deem fit.

Exclusive right to build road from Quincy to Mobile.

SEC. 4. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall have the exclusive right, for twenty years, to build a railroad, with one or more tracks, from the terminus of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad, at Quincy, touching at Mariana, in Jackson County, and at a point within five miles of Enchuana, in Walton County, thence touching at Milton, in Santa Rosa County, to the Alabama State line, in the direction of Mobile, in Alabama, crossing the Pensacola and Louisville Railroad, north of Pensacola, with the privilege of continuing the same to Mobile, and of connecting with any railroad running to Mobile.

Right of construction and right of way.

SEC. 5. The said company shall have the right and privilege to construct said railroad for the transportation of passengers, produce, goods, wares and merchandise, and all other articles whatsoever, through any land of the State of Florida; and the right of way is hereby granted for the same, two hundred feet in width, with the right to take stone, timber, earth and material from any land belonging to the State, to be used in the construction, maintenance and repairs of said railroad.

May rescind conveyances of land and materials.

SEC. 6. The said company is hereby authorized to contract for and receive conveyances of land, timber, and other materials, which may be required by the directors in the construction, operating, maintenance and repair of said railroad; and when the owner and company cannot agree upon the price, or when the owner is an infant, non-resident, or non compos mentis, then it shall be lawful for the said company to apply to the sheriff of the county in which said lands or property are located, who shall summon a jury of seven disinterested freeholders, a majority of whom shall be authorized to assess the damages, and return their award or judgment to the First Circuit Court of the County in which the said lands or other property may be located, which shall be entered by the clerk as the judgment of the court, and execution may issue thereon for the amount of said judgment and costs.

How to proceed in case owner and company disagree.

Either party dissatisfied with tho assessment may appeal to the next Term of the Circuit Court, on giving security for the prosecution of the appeal. Before proceeding to the discharge of the duties herein required, the jurors summoned as aforesaid shall take an oath or affirmation, to be administered by the sheriff, that they will well and truly inquire in, and to the best of their judgment assess, the damages accruing to the owner or owners of said land or materials by means of the proposed construction;

Party dissatisfied may appeal.

Provided, that said work and the progress of construction of said road shall in nowise be delayed on account of the proceedings had, or to be had, as aforesaid.

SEC. 7. The property so assessed and paid for by said railroad company, in conformity with the provisions of this act, and all donations from any source for the same, shall forever afterwards belong to and become the property of said railroad company, its successors in fee simple. Subscriptions to the capital stock of said railroad company may be made in lands, labor and material, upon such terms as may be agreed upon by the directors and the owner or owners thereof.

Property acquired to belong to the company in fee simple.

Subscriptions to capital stock may be made in lands, labor and material.

SEC. 8. The directors of said company shall have the right to demand and receive such prices and sums for fare and the transportation of freight, produce and merchandise as may be authorized and fixed by the by-laws of said company.

Price for fare and transportation, how fixed.

SEC. 9. In order to aid the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to complete, equip and maintain its road, and to aid in perfecting one of the public works embraced in the internal improvements of the State, the Governor of the State is hereby directed to deliver to the president of the said company coupon bonds of the State to an amount equal to fourteen thousand dollars per mile of the estimated length of the road, from Quincy westward to the Alabama line, according to the certificate of the president under the corporate seal, and the same amount per mile for the excess above this estimate, if, after the road shall be definitely located, it shall be likewise certified that the length of the road is greater than the first estimate; but said estimate shall not exceed in length the roadway already completed from Quincy to Jacksonville and from Tallahassee to St. Marks united. The said bonds shall be of the denomination of one thousand dollars, signed by the Governor, countersigned by the Treasurer, sealed with the great seal of the State, shall bear seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually, and shall be payable to bearer. They shall be dated on the 1st day of July, 1869, and shall be due thirty years thereafter, and principal and interest shall be payable at such place in the City of New York as the Governor shall designate. The coupons for interest shall be payable to bearer, and shall be authenticated by the written or engraved signature of the Treasurer.

State aid extended to the amount of $14,000 a mile in State bonds.

Character of the bonds to be issued, how signed, dated and when to fall due.

Coupons payable to bearer.

Bonds of the company to be given to the State in exchange, how issued and character of.

SEC. 10. In exchange for the bonds of the State above described, the president of the company shall deliver to the Governor of the State coupon bonds of the company, bearing a like rate of interest payable to the State of Florida, signed by the president, sealed with the corporate seal; coupons payable to the State of Florida, authenticated by the written or engraved signature of the president. The bonds shall be of such denominations, not less than one thousand dollars, as the said company may choose, and principal and interest shall be payable at the same time and place as the aforesaid State bonds.

State shall have lien on the road, its property and franchises.

SEC. 11. To secure the principal and interest of the said company bonds, the State of Florida shall by this act have a statutory lien, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a mortgage duly registered on the part of the road, on the estimated length of which the State bonds were delivered, and all the property of the company, real and personal, appertaining to that part of the line which it may now have, or may hereafter acquire, together with all the rights, franchises and powers thereto belonging; and in case of failure of the company to pay either principal or interest of its bonds, or any part thereof, for sixty days after the same or any instalment thereof shall become due, it shall be lawful for the Governor to enter upon and take possession of said property and franchises, and sell the same at public auction for cash, on such notice as he may prescribe, so as to protect the State.

Upon failure of the company to pay principal or interest of its bonds for sixty days, the Governor may take possession of the road and sell it.

SEC. 12. For the protection and additional security of the State in the issue of the bonds authorized in the preceding section, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall deposit with the State Treasurer good and sufficient security, to be approved of by the Treasurer, for the payment of all interest that may become due on the State bonds issued to them until the completion of said railroad, and shall also give to the State, before the issue of said bonds, as additional security for the faithful application of said State bonds, a lien upon the entire railroad from Quincy to Jacksonville, and from Tallahassee to St. Marks, which lien shall be canceled as the road is completed in sections of twenty miles, to wit: That when twenty miles of the road west of Quincy shall be completed and in running order, twenty miles of the road east of Quincy shall be released from said lien, and so on, in like proportion the said lien shall be released until the completion of the road to the Alabama State line, when said lien shall be fully canceled and discharged.

Approved security for the payment of interest upon the State bonds until the road is compelled to be deposited with Treasurer.

Lien upon the road from Quincy to Jacksonville to be given.

How cancelled.

SEC. 13. The said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company may, at any time before maturity of its bonds, discharge its debt to the State, or any part thereof, by payment in national currency, or in bonds of the State, provided, that this shall not be construed to include indebtedness incurred in aid of the rebellion.

owners of a majority of the stock of each company, without such consolidation, they are authorized to make such arrangements with reference to a common management and schedules as may be agreed on, and after consolidation, the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall have the privilege to raise money by way of mortgage or assignment in trust of the railroad and property, franchise and effects acquired by such consolidation, so as to secure the lenders. The said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, as to the road or roads, or parts of roads thus acquired, may likewise issue coupon bonds or other evidences of debt with coupons or otherwise, bearing such rate of interest and payable at such time and place and on such terms as the directors may determine, and to each are hereby granted the same priviliges as are herein granted to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

Consolidation of roads shall not relieve roads of their liabilities.

SEC. 15. The consolidation of any of the companies with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company under the provisions of this act, shall not operate to relieve the road or roads, or part of roads united by such consolidation with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, from their existing liability to pay any debts or obligations of the company owning the same before consolidation, but the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall not be responsible for any such debts or obligations.

Rate of freight for State freights.

SEC. 16. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, the Florida Railroad Company, and all companies organized under an Act entitled An Act to provide for and encourage a liberal system of Internal Improvements in the State, shall be bound to transport freight for the State at half the usual rates, except in time of war, when the charge for freights shall not exceed 25 per cent. over actual cost. In consideration of this liability and of the undertaking by the company to build the road herein contemplated, no railroad competing with this road for passengers or freight, which has its terminus west of Quincy shall be hereafter built or authorized within this State without the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest of this and all other railroad companies any part of whose road is now completed or authorized to be completed, nor without such consent shall be au-

May own and run steamship

SEC. 17. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, the Florida Railroad Company and the Pensacola and Louisville Railroad Company, shall have power to own and run steamships and other craft to and from any of the ports of Florida, and may enter or depart with or without pilots, and likewise in any of the navigable waters within the jurisdiction of the State.

May construct bridges provided with draws.

SEC. 18. That said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall, in the construction of said railroad, have the right to build and construct all bridges necessary to cross any and all rivers, but in crossing navigable rivers suitable draws shall be constructed to admit the passage of all steamboats and other water craft usually navigating such rivers, which draws shall always be kept in good order, and ready to be opened whenever necessary.

Gauge of road and character of road.

SEC. 19. That the gauge of said railroad shall be uniformly five feet, and the iron rail to be used shall weigh not less than fifty-four pounds per lineal yard, and the said railroad shall in all all respects be a first-class road.

When shall be completed.

SEC. 20. The said railroad shall be completed from Quincy to the Apalachicola river by the first day of January next, and the whole line within this State shall be completed within three years from the passage of this act.

Shall provide first and second class cars.

SEC. 21. That said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and all railroad companies organized under the act of June 16, 1855, relating to internal improvements, shall provide first and second class cars for the accommodation of passengers, for each of which fare shall be charged at proportionate rates, and passengers without distintion, paying fare Place of principal office and residence of corporation.

Sec. 22. That the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and all other corporations existing under the laws and by the authority of this State, shall, by a public advertisement in a newspaper printed at the seat of government, declare the place within the State at which their principal office of business shall be considered as located, and such place shall thereafter be taken to be the residence of such corporation, and all contracts made by authority of such corporation shall be considered as made in the place at which such principal office is located.

Engineer to be appointed, his duties and salary.

Sec. 23. The Governor shall appoint a competent Engineer to have general supervision of the various roads provided for under this act, and whose duty it shall be to protect the interest of the State, and see that the work is carried on and conducted in all respects in compliance with law, and shall, from time to time, report to the Governor. The salary of such Engineer shall be paid by the companies interested, and shall in no case be chargeable to the State.

Continuance of corporation.

This to be deemed a public act.

Sec. 24. That the corporation of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall be, and continue for the term of thirty-five years from the date of the passage and approval of this act. This act shall be deemed and held a public act.

Aid to line of road from Amelia Island to Tampa Bay.

Sec. 25. That for the further purpose of completing that part of the line of railroad from Amelia Island on the Atlantic to the waters of Tampa Bay, in South Florida, provided for in the Act of January 6, 1855—"To provide for and encourage a liberal system of Internal Improvements in this State"—which remains to be constructed, it is hereby provided that it shall be lawful for any corporate company which may have, or acquire, the right to construct the same; to execute and deliver to the Governor of the State of Florida, for the time being, a deed of trust, conveying to said Governor and his successors in office, all the rights, franchises and privileges possessed by such company, or thereafter to be acquired, and all the tracks, lines, and road-beds upon such road, owned by such company, or thereafter to be acquired, in trust, and as security for the ultimate payment to the holder or holders thereof, of the principal and interest of the bonds of such company, amounting to the sum of fourteen thousand dollars per mile upon such company's road; said bonds to be of the denomination of one thousand dollars each, the principal sum payable in thirty years, and bear interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and have coupons or interest warrants attached in accordance thereto; said bonds to be executed by such company under the seal thereof; and the Governor of the State of Florida for the time being is hereby directed to join with the said company in the deed of trust; and he and his successors in office are hereby charged with the execution of the trust contained therein. Said deed of trust shall be recorded in the proper offices for the record of deeds in the several counties through which said company's railroad is to pass.

D. The payment of the principal and interest of the within bond, according to the terms thereof, is hereby guaranteed by the State of Florida, in pursuance of and obedience to an act of the Legislature of said State, approved the day of , 1869," and the Governor shall deliver the bonds so certified and guaranteed to the president of said company, or other officer authorized by the board of directors of such company to receive the same, and the payment of the principal and interest of said bonds to the holders thereof, according to the terms thereof, is hereby guaranteed by the State of Florida.

May take bond of the State instead of endorsed bonds of the compan in same mann as Jacksonvill Pensacola and Mobile Railro Company.

To be issued as sections of the road are completed.

Sec. 27. That in case any company engaged in building the said unconstructed part of the line between Amelia Island and the waters of Tampa, shall prefer to take bonds of the State instead of indorsed bonds as provided for in the two preceding sections, the Governor of the State is hereby authorized to substitute State bonds similar in character to those issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in virtue of the provisions of this act, and in such case the Governor shall demand and receive the company bonds for the same amount in exchange for such State bonds, in the same manner as prescribed in the case of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; provided, however, that such bonds shall only issue in proportion as sections of the road are completed according to the stipulations of the last preceding section.

Upon default in the paymen of principal or interest, Governor may tak possession of the road, and run or sell it.

Sec. 28. If default shall at any time be made by said company in the payment of principal or interest of the bonds of said company when due, for sixty days after the same may fall due, the said Governor shall take possession of said road, and all the property, real and personal, connected therewith, and all the franchises of said company, and may operate the road for the protection of the State, and for the benefit of the trust, or may sell the same, with all the franchises and property of the company in accordance with the condition of the deed of trust, and according to law, for the benefit of the said trust.

Rights of purchasers in case of sale of roads.

SEC. 29. That in all cases of seizure and sale of the railroad, property, and franchises of any company by the Trustee of the Internal Improvement Fund, under the provisions of the Act to provide for and encourage a liberal system of Internal Improvement, the purchaser or purchasers shall be entitled to do whatever acts may be necessary to enable him or them to exercise and enjoy the franchises granted by the charter of incorporation, under the provisions of the said original charter and the amendments thereto. And in order to prevent doubt it is hereby declared that all the provisions of the Internal Improvement Act above referred to, and which act constituted a contract between the State and the companies, shall continue to apply to the said corporations so newly organized in the same manner as the same were applicable to the corporations which existed under the same charter prior to the sale:

New corporations to be subject to Internal Improvement Act.

Provided, That this section only applies to roads built under said Internal Improvement Act, and shall not authorize the issue of bonds exceeding fourteen thousand dollars per mile as provided in section twenty-six, nor any other pecuniary aid by endorsement or otherwise, and that nothing in this section herein contained shall in any wise effect any special act relating to the sales of the Atlantic and Gulf Railroad or the Pensocola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad, or the rights required under said sales.

This action applicable alone to roads built under Internal Improvement Act.

SEC. 30. That the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and the Florida Railroad Company shall at reasonable times and for a reasonable compensation draw over their respective roads the passengers, merchandise and cars of each other, and shall give and receive through way bills for freight, through tickets for passengers, and through checks for baggage to and from all points on their respective roads, and shall make no unequal discrimination for or against each other in their joint through passenger and freight rates, or in the division of the same; it being the true intent and meaning of this act to require the said railroad corporations to give as good facilities and as favorable rates, terms and conditions to each other as they enjoy themselves. If the corporations cannot agree upon thestated periods at which their cars shall be so Privileges of this act granted to other roads.

SEC. 31. All the rights, franchises, privileges, and conditions granted and prescribed in this act are hereby granted and applied to any company that is now, or hereafter may be, organized for the purpose of building a railroad from the waters of Tampa Bay and Charlotte Harbor, on the Gulf, by way of Ocala, and ending at Gainesville, on the Florida Railroad, and from Marianna, in the county of Jackson, to the waters of St. Andrew's Bay, in West Florida, and also to the waters of Apalachicola Bay, in West Florida, and to a point on the Chocktawhatchie Bay, between the mouth of Chocktawhatchie river and Boggy Bayou, and from Palatka and Mellonville, on the St. Johns river, to the nearest practicable point on the line of railway from Tampa Bay or Charlotte Harbor to Gainesville, as as far the same can be constitutionally granted. The said railroad company from Palatka is hereby authorized to connect and be entitled to all the benefits of section 30.

Local rates limited.

SEC. 32. That the local rates for freight and passengers on the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad, and the Florida Railroad, shall not exceed, at any time, the usual rates for similar distances upon the railroads of adjacent States.

SEC. 33. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Approved, June 24, 1869.

An Act to alter and amend an act entitled "An act to perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June 24th, 1868.

The People of the State of Florida, represented in the Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

Section to be amended.

Section 1. That section 4 of an act entitled An Act to perfect the Public Works of the State, approved June 24, 1869, which reads as follows: "Sec. 4. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall have the exclusive right for twenty years to build a railroad with one or more tracks, from the terminus of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad at Quincy, touching at Marianna, in Jackson county, and at a point within five miles of Euchuana, in Walton county, thence touching at Milton, in Santa Rosa county, to the Alabama State line, in the direction of Mobile, in Alabama, crossing the Pensacola and Louisville Railroad north of Pensacola, with the privilege of continuing the same to Mobile, and of connecting with any railroad running to Mobile," be altered and amended so as to read as follows:

Exclusive right to build road from Quincy to Mobile.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad shall have the exclusive right for twenty years to build a railroad, with one or more tracks, from the terminus of the late Pensacola and Georgia Railroad, now the Tallahassee Railroad, at Quincy, Gadsden County, to the dividing line between the States of Florida and Alabama, in the direction of the City of Mobile, Alabama, running through the counties of Gadsden, Jackson, Holmes, Washington, Walton, Santa Rosa, and Escambia, crossing the Pensacola and Louisville Railroad with the privilege of continuing the same to Mobile, and of connecting with any railroad running to Mobile. Provided, however, that in the construction of said railroad the line west of the Chattahoochee river shall not in any instance be run, or the road built nearer than fifteen miles of the north line of the State of Florida.

Road not to be run nearer than fifteen miles of north line of State.

Sec. 2. That section 9 of said act, entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," which reads as follows: "Sec. 9. In order to aid the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and

Section to be amended.

Mobile Railroad Company to complete, equip and maintain its road, and to aid in perfecting one of the public works embraced in the internal improvements of the State, the Governor of the State is hereby directed to deliver to the President of the company coupon bonds of the State to an amount equal to fourteen thousand dollars per mile of the estimated length of the road from Quincy westward to the Alabama line, according to the certificate of the President, under the corporate seal, and the same amount per mile for the excess above this estimate, if, after the road shall be definitely located, it shall be likewise certified that the length of the road is greater than the first estimate, but said estimate shall not exceed in length the roadway already completed from Quincy to Jacksonville, and from Tallahassee to St. Marks, united. The said bonds shall be of the denomination of one thousand dollars, signed by the Governor, countersigned by the Treasurer, sealed with the great seal of the State, shall bear seven per cent. interest, payable semi-annually, and shall be payable to bearer. They shall be dated on the first day of July, 1869, and shall be due thirty days thereafter, and principal and interest shall be payable at such place in the City of New-York as the Governor shall designate. The coupons for interest shall be payable to bearer, and shall be authenticated by the written or engraved signature of the Treasurer," be altered and amended so as to read as follows:

Company not to issue first mortgage bonds to greater amount than $16,000 per mile.

Sec. 5. That section 12 of said act, entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," which reads as follows:

"Sec. 12. For the protection and additional security of the "State in the issue of the bonds authorized in the preceding "section, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad "Company shall deposit with the State Treasurer good and "sufficient security, to be approved by the Treasurer, for the Section repealed.

" payment of all interest that may become due on the State
" bonds issued to them until the completion of the said railroad,
" and shall also give to the State before the issue of said bonds,
" as additional security for the faithful application of said State
" bonds, a lien upon the entire railroad from Quincy to Jack" sonville, and from Tallahassee to St. Marks, which lien shall " be canceled as the road is completed in sections of twenty " miles, to wit: That when twenty miles of the road west of " Quincy shall be completed and in running order, twenty " miles of the road east of Quincy shall be released from said
" liens, and so on in like proportion the said lien shall be " released until the completion of the road to the Alabama
" State line, when the said lien shall be fully canceled and " discharged," be, and the said section 12 aforesaid is hereby repealed.

Section to be amended.

SEC. 6. That section 20 of said Act, entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," which reads as follows:

" SEC. 20. That the said railroad shall be completed from " Quincy to the Apalachicola River by the first day of January
" next, and the whole line within this State shall be completed " within three years from the passage of this Act," be so altered and amended as to read as follows:

When shall be completed.

That the said railroad shall be completed from Quincy to the Apalachicola River by the first day of July, 1870, and the whole line within this State shall be completed within five years from the passage of this Act. Otherwise all chartered rights vested in this Act shall be forfeited to the State.

SEC. 7. That all acts and doings of the Corporators, Stockholders and Board of Directors of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, under and by virtue of an act entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June, 24, 1869, in relation to the organization and management of said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, are hereby approved and confirmed and declared to be of full force and effect.

Chapter 1716 of the laws of which this act is an amendment declared a law of the State.

SEC. 8. That the Act published as Chapter 1716 (No. 4), in pamphlet form, under the direction of the Attorney General, by authority of law, as the acts and resolutions adopted by the Legislature of Florida at its extra session, beginning June 8, 1869, under the Constitution of A. D. 1868, wherein from page 29 to page 38 inclusive is found and published an act entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June, 24, 1869, and printed at Tallahassee, Florida, by Edw. M. Cheney, State Printer, is hereby declared to be an act and law of the State of Florida of which this Act is an alteration and amendment.

SEC. 9. That this Act shall be deemed and held to be a public act, and all laws and parts of laws conflicting with this Act be, and they are hereby, repealed.

Approved, January, 28, 1870.

AN ACT to repeal any and all acts creating, recognizing, or continuing in existence the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

The General Assembly of North Carolina do enact:

SECTION 1. That Chapter Twenty-four of the private Laws, Special Sessions of 1868, ratified August 19, 1868; Chapter Twenty of the Laws of 1868-69, ratified 29th day of January, 1869, and Chapter One Hundred and Fifty of the Laws of 1871-72, and any and all other acts and parts of acts creating, recognizing, or continuing in existence the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, are hereby repealed.

SEC. 2. That all the property, rights, credits, rights of action and effects that now exist in favor of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, or which may result from any existing matters, causes, circumstances or contingencies, shall become absolutely the rights and property of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company; and the said Western North Carolina Railroad Company is hereby authorized and empowered to prosecute, defend and manage any and all suits and actions pending in the courts of this State, in the courts of the United States, or the courts of any other State or Territory, in reference to the property, rights, and credits of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company. Provided, the said Western North Carolina Railroad Company shall not be liable or responsible for any debt, contract, obligation, or other liability of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company beyond the sums it shall actually realize and receive from the transfer of property, rights, credits, &c., provided for in this section.

SEC. 3. That all persons who are now or have been acting or assuming to act as officers, directors, agents and attorneys of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, shall, within thirty days after demand upon them by the Governor of the State, turn over and deliver to the Board of Directors of the Western North Carolina Railway Company all books, records, papers, moneys, bonds, property contracts, effects and evidences of debt which may be in their possession or within their control; and upon their failure or refusal to do so shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than five hundred dollars or imprisoned, in the discretion of the court; and the Superior Court of any County on the line of the Western North Carolina Railroad shall have jurisdiction of such offense.

SEC. 4. That this act shall not be construed to relieve any person from any criminal prosecution now pending, or which may hereafter be instituted in any court or courts for any criminal offense heretofore committed in relation to the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, nor shall it so be construed as to abridge or release any rights of action or credits which may now exist or may result from existing circumstances or contingencies in favor of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

SEC. 5. This act shall be in force from and after its ratification.

Ratified the 14th day of March, A. D. 1879.

STATE OF NORTH CAROLINA,
Office of Secretary of State.

RALEIGH, 22d March, 1879.

I certify the above to be a true coyy of the original act on file in this office, Supplemental Record A.

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS, That we, the undersigned Calvin H. Allen, of New York City, State of New York; Robert Walker, of Tallahassee; Hubbard L. Hart, Palatka; James H. Paine, of Jacksonville, State of Florida, and Robert P. Dodge, of the City of Washington, District of Columbia, being desirous of acquiring for themselves and such others as shall become associated with them, all of the powers and immunities of a corporation under and in accordance with the provisions of an act of the Legislature of the State of Florida, approved February nineteenth, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and seventy-four (1874), entitled "An Act to Provide a General Law for the Incorporation of Railroads and Canals," have agreed to the following articles of association, to wit:

ARTICLE I.

The name and style of this corporation shall be The Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company.

ARTICLE II.

The object of said corporation shall be to purchase or lease any line or lines of railroad or railroads, or parts thereof, constructed or partially constructed, between the City of Jacksonville, in the State of Florida, and the City of Mobile, in the State of Alabama, with branch roads from Tallahassee to St. Marks, and at Monticello, in the State of Florida, running or passing through the following named counties in the State of Florida, to wit: Duval, Baker, Columbia, Suwannee, Madison, Jefferson, Leon, Wakulla, Gadsden, Jackson, Washington, Holmes, Walton, Santa Rosa, Escambia, thence to the said City of Mobile, in the State of Alabama, the distance in the State of Florida being about four hundred and forty miles, and in the State of Alabama about forty miles. That in case the said Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company shall purchase or lease any part of any railroad or railroads, already constructed or partially constructed between Jacksonville and Lake City, and between Lake City and Chattahoochee, together with branch roads between Tallahassee and St. Marks, and at Monticello, together with any or all of the rolling stock, depots, franchises and all other property thereto pertaining in the State of Florida, then the said The Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company is hereby fully empowered and authorized to maintain, operate and equip said line or lines of railway. The said The Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company is hereby fully authorized and empowered to construct depots, wharves and warehouses in connection with the business of said Company, and to purchase and own and run steamboats in connection with said railroad. The said The Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company is hereby authorized and empowered to construct a railroad between Jacksonville, in the State of Florida, and Mobile, in the State of Alabama, through the counties hereinbefore named, with branch roads at Tallahassee and Monticello, with full power to maintain, equip and operate the same.

Article III.

The business of said Company shall be managed by a Board of Directors of not more than nine (9) or less than five (5) in number, who shall be annually elected on the first Monday in January in each year, until otherwise ordered by the stockholders, and the persons named in these articles of association shall constitute the first Board of Directors.

Article IV.

The capital stock of the said The Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company shall be three millions of dollars ($3,000,000), divided into thirty thousand (30,000) shares of one hundred dollars ($100) each.

Article V.

The place of business of said Company shall be in the City of Jacksonville, in the State of Florida, until otherwise ordered.

Article VI.

The said The Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company is hereby authorized and empowered to borrow such sum or sums of money, and upon such terms, as said Company or its Board of Directors shall authorize or agree upon and may deem necessary or expedient, and may execute one or more trust deeds or mortgages, or both, if occasion may require, for transferring said railroad, together with the franchises and all the property thereto pertaining or in any manner whatsoever belonging to said Company, or which shall thereafter belong to it as security for any bonds, debts, or sums of money as may be secured by said trust deeds or mortgage as said Company shall deem proper, and said Company shall also be vested with all the powers and privileges contained in the said act of the Legislature of the State of Florida, entitled "An Act to Provide a General Law for the Incorporation of Railroads and Canals," approved February 19th, 1874.

In witness, the parties to these presents aforesaid named, have hereunto set our hands and seal this fifteenth day of October, one thousand eight hundred and seventy-six (1876), and have subscribed for the amount of stock in said Company set opposite our respective names, as follows, to wit:

Secretary of State.

Supplemental Record, B.

To his Excellency, George F. Drew, Governor of the State of Florida:

The memorial of J. Fred. Schutte; Jan Prins, Merchant; Adrianus Prins; M. P. Heinrich Ulrici, Underwriter; Elias Fuld: J. Borzo; H. Van Booren; Edward Isaac Asser, LL.D., and Gideon Maria Boissevain, without profession, and Dr. Nicolaas Jacob den Tex, Director of the Royal Netherland Steam Navigation Company, both of Amsterdam, members of and representing the Committee of Eight per cent. Florida Bondholders in Amsterdam, in their own behalf and in behalf of all other persons, holders of the bonds hereinafter mentioned, who may seek like relief with that hereinafter prayed, all of whom are subjects of the King of the Netherlands, respectfully showeth, that they are the owners and holders of certain bonds, each of the denomination of one thousand dollars ($1,000), signed by Harrison Reed, Governor, and countersigned by S. B. Conover, Treasurer, and sealed with the great seal of the State of Florida, which purport to bind the State of Florida to pay the sum of one thousand dollars ($1,000), and with interest, at the rate of eight (8) per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, the principal to be due and payable in thirty (30) years from the date of said bonds, which is the first day of January, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and seventy (1870); said bonds are payable to bearer, and have attached thereto, coupons for interest, payable semi-annually to bearer on the first days of January and July of each year, at the rate aforesaid. In the body of said bonds it is declared that they were issued under and by virtue of several acts of the Legislature of the State of Florida; said bonds have affixed thereto the seal of the State of Florida, and are signed by said Harrison Reed, as Governor of said State, and are countersigned by S. B. Conover, as Treasurer of the State of Florida

Your memorialists herewith file a copy of one of said bonds, and state that all of those which are held by them, as hereinafter alleged, are of like tenor, date and effect as the copy herewith filed, marked "A."

Your memorialists further show unto your Excellency that there were issued by said Harrison Reed, Governor, four thousand (4,000) of said bonds in all; that they were delivered by him to the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, of said State, to be used in the manner specified in the State laws of the State of Florida, mentioned on the face of said bonds, and were received by said corporation for such use and purpose. Your memorialists further show unto your Excellency, that the said, the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company placed the said four thousand (4,000) bonds in the hands of certain bankers, doing business in the City of London, England, under the name and style of S. W. Hopkins & Company, and gave written authority to said firm to sell them; that said S. W. Hopkins & Co. contracted to sell, and did, in fact, sell and deliver twenty-eight hundred (2800) of said bonds to John Collinson, a banker in the City of London, aforesaid, at the price of one hundred and thirty-eight pounds sterling, one shilling, ten pence (£138 1s. 10d.) per bond, and that said Collinson paid for said bonds, at such rate, to said S. W. Hopkins & Co. from time to time, as said bonds were delivered by said S. W. Hopkins & Co. to him; that immediately upon receipt by said Collinson of such bonds, he re-sold the same, through bankers of good standing and credit in Amsterdam, in Holland, to subjects of the King of the Netherlands, by whom they were purchased in good faith, as an investment; that said S. W. Hopkins & Co., as agents of the said the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, in the year eighteen hundred and seventy-one (1871), contracted with the said John Collinson to sell and deliver to him the remainder of said four thousand (4,000) bonds, being twelve hundred (1200) in number, but that said Hopkins & Co. refused to comply with such contract, and in consequence of such refusal, the said John Collinson brought certain suits at law in the courts of England and in the State of New York against the said the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, and against the said S. W. Hopkins & Co. to compel a performance of such contract; that the said defendants in said suits admitted the claim of said Collinson and consented to decrees which were entered in said suits in said courts, whereby it was agreed that the said bonds should be delivered to said Collinson, and they were so delivered; that the said Collinson should have the right to purchase all of said bonds, except two hundred and twenty-four (224), which were provided to be and which were canceled.

Your memorialists further show unto your Excellency that said Collinson did receive, under such decrees, nine hundred and seventy-four (974) of said bonds, and that of this number, he took and paid for to said the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, four hundred and six (406), which he immediately sold to subjects of the King of the Netherlands in like manner as he dealt with the first bonds which he received from the said S. W. Hopkins & Co.

Your memorialists further show unto your Excellency that when the said bonds were offered for sale in Holland by the bankers who were the agents of said Collinson to make such sale, it was publicly asserted by such bankers that they were legal and bona fide obligations of the State of Florida, and that there was a lien created by the laws of said State on a line of completed railway commencing at Jacksonville, running thence to Quincy, with a branch from Tallahassee to St. Marks, and a branch to Monticello, all in the State of Florida; which lien, it was so asserted and represented, was created to secure to the State of Florida the payment of such sums of money as the State might pay on account of the principal and interest of such bonds; all of which representations were supported by the recitals in said bonds, and were believed by the persons who purchased such bonds to be true.

Your memorialists further show unto your Excellency that said bonds were dealt with as public securities by the bankers and people of Holland, and by persons whose business it was to buy and sell bonds and stocks in the Stock Exchange of Amsterdam; and were quoted in the financial lists as "Florida eight per cents;" that for a long time they sold at high prices, ranging at from 73 to 80 per cent. in gold; and they so continued until default in payment of interest on said bonds took place on the first of July, 1873.

Your memorialists further show unto your Excellency that they made their respective purchases of said bonds under the assurances so given by said bankers, who sold them as agents of said Collinson, and on the faith also of the credit which was accorded to said bonds in Amsterdam, as before set forth; that they made such purchases in good faith, and paid for them at the current market value, without any notice of any illegality or wrong in respect to the issuance of said bonds, and without any suspicion that they were not in law and fact what on their face they purported to be.

Your memorialists further show unto your Excellency that the bonds held by them severally are numbered as is stated below, as follows, viz.:

It was further represented to your memorialists, by the bankers aforesaid, that the proceeds arising from the sale of said bonds were to be solely applied to the construction, equipment and repair of the existing line of completed railway, and to the further construction of a projected line which was to extend from Quincy to the line of the State of Alabama, in the direction of Mobile; and in fact afterwards twenty miles of such construction was completed, whereby the said railway was extended from Quincy to the Apalachicola river; and your memorialists say that they are advised by counsel learned in the law that such latter extension of said line of railway constitutes a part and parcel of the line which was hypothecated in the manner before stated, and is subject to the same lien which is provided to exist by the said several acts of the Legislature of the State of Florida hereinbefore referred to.

Your memorialists further show unto your Excellency that they are advised by counsel learned in the law that they, and all others who are like holders of said bonds, are entitled to the benefit of the security created by the laws passed by the Legislature of the State of Florida, entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June 24, 1869, and by another law of the State of Florida, passed and approved January 28, 1870, entitled "An Act to alter and amend an Act entitled 'An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State,'" approved June 24, 1869, which laws provide that "in " case of failure of the company to pay either principal or " interest of its bonds, or any part thereof, for twelve months " after the same shall become due, it shall be lawful for the " Governor to enter upon and take possession of said property " and franchises and sell the same at public auction, after having first given ninety days' notice by public advertisement in

" at least one newspaper published in each of the following " places: The City of New York, in the State of New York; " the City of Savannah, in the State of Georgia, and the City " of Tallahassee, in the State of Florida;" that your Excellency is empowered and required, by virtue of such laws, and by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the State of Florida, " to enter upon and take possession of said property and " franchise and sell the same at public auction " for payment of the principal and interest due and unpaid on the bonds so held and owned by your memorialists, whenever demand is made for such proceedings by persons who are the legal and bona fide holders of such obligations.

Therefore, your memorialists, acting by their attorney-in-fact, Charles D. Willard, of the City of Washington, District of Columbia, by them duly authorized thereto in writing, respectfully pray that your Excellency will "enter upon and take " possession of" said line of railway, together with all of the property thereto belonging, extending from Jacksonville to Chattahooche, with a branch from Tallahassee to St. Marks, and a branch at Monticello, and sell the same at public auction, after having given the notice required by law; and that your memorialists and such other persons, bona fide holders of said bonds, who may ask to be considered and to have relief such as your memorialists pray, may be permitted to bid at the sale of said railroad, its franchise and all property thereto pertaining, and to make payments in the bonds held by them, so far as the same may be found sufficient to cover the price at which such railroad, franchise and property may be adjudicated to purchasers at such sale.

Your memorialists hereby admit the existence of a lien on that part of the said railroad, franchise and property thereto belonging, which lies between Lake City and Quincy, Tallahassee and St. Marks, and the branch to Monticello, which lien is to the extent of the amount of the purchase money which is due to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund of the State of Florida by the persons who purchased the said last mentioned portion of said railroad at the sale made thereof by the said Trustees on the 20th day of March, A. D. 1869; and your memorialists ask that the said railroad, franchise and all property thereto pertaining may be sold by your Excellency, subject to such lien; and your memorialists file herewith sworn statements made in Amsterdam, Holland, by the said J. Fred. Schutte, Jan Prins, Adrianus Prins, Heinrich Ulrici, Elias Fuld, J. Borzo, H. Van Booren, Edward Isaac Asser, and also the sworn statement of Gideon Maria Boissevain and Dr. Nicolaas Jacob den Tex, members of and representing the said committee of eight per cent. Florida bondholders, sworn to before Charles Mueller, Esq., Consul of the United States, at such city; which sworn statements are marked, respectively, "B^2," "C^2," "D^2," "E^2," "F^2," "G^2," "H^2," "I^2," "K^2," in which are set forth the facts as to the manner in which said bonds were dealt in and bought and sold in said city, and also showing the ownership by your memorialists of certain of said bonds, and the numbers thereof; and your memorialists also file herewith letters of attorney to Charles D. Outline of the Whole Litigation.

The cases involved in these appeals are so connected as to constitute one litigation.

The proximate cause of the litigation was the Governor of Florida's seizure and advertisement for sale of the Florida

Central and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile railroads for the purpose of satisfying certain bonds alleged to have been issued by the companies owning the said roads, and as to which the said companies were alleged to be in default. These bonds were payable to and held by the State of Florida, and, it was claimed, were secured by a first lien on the said roads. The bonds and the lien were held by the State as security against her liability on certain bonds issued by her for the benefit of the J. P. and M. company, which bonds have been negotiated by the last-named company, and, it is alleged, are held by parties in Holland, who are known in these suits as the Dutch bondholders.

The State being in default as to her bonds, and the same having been adjudged null and void by her Supreme Court; the Dutch Bondholders claimed to be entitled to the company bonds held by the State and the lien securing them, and to have said lien on the said bonds enforced by the Governor in the summary manner provided for the benefit of the State by the statute authorizing the issuing of both classes of bonds, and it was at the instance of certain parties claiming to represent these bondholders that the Governor seized the said roads and advertised them for sale.

To arrest these proceedings begun by the Governor two bills were filed in the United States Circuit Court for the Northern District of Florida, by the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

One of these bills was filed on 9th February, 1877, against the Governor, the Florida Central Railroad Company, the Jacksonville, Pa. & Mobile Railroad Company, the Dutch bondholders and others. The object of this bill was to assert the complainant's right to a large amount of stock of the Florida Central Company, and to have the claims and pretentions of the Dutch bondholders to the bonds of the Florida Central Company and the lien securing them decreed to be null and void, and to have as well the said bondholders as the Governor perpetually enjoined from all further proceeding in the premises.

The other bill was filed on 8th March, 1877, against the Governor, the trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, the J. P. & M. Co., the Dutch bondholders and others. The object of this bill was to set up a first lien on, or a right of property in, so much of the J. P. & M. Road as was the property of the Tallahassee Railroad Company at the time of its consolidation with the J. P. & M. Company as prior and paramount to any other lien on, or interest in, said property, excepting a certain vendor's lien, and to have the claims and pretensions of the Dutch bondholders to the said company bonds and lien securing them adjudged to be null and void.

Provisional injunctions staying the Governor's action were issued in both cases.

Other relief was prayed in both bills, but it is not necessary to refer to it.

The two suits of the Western Division Company having abated, as to the complainant, in consequence of the repeal of its charter, the same were revived in the name of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company (R. pp. 223, 548), in which all the property and causes of action of the extinguished company had become vested.

In this state of things—namely, on the 23d of May, 1877, the Dutch bondholders, J. Fred. Schutte and others, filed their bill in the said court against the Western Division Company, the Florida Central Company, the J. P. & M. Company, the Governor, the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund and others. The object of this bill, which is in form an original, but in substance a cross-bill, is to assert, inter alia, a lien on both of the said roads, and the right to have the same enforced summarily by the Governor, as provided in the statute, for the payment of the State bonds held by complainant, and to have the claims and pretensions of the Western Division Company, as to both roads, decreed to be in subordination to those of the complainant. (R., pp. 238–253.)

The relief asked in this bill was granted, substantially, and the Florida Central and the J. P. & M. Companies have both appealed, separately, from the decree.

The two bills of the Western North Carolina Company were dismissed, and that company appealed in both cases.

It is the object of this brief to present the case involved in the appeal of the Florida Central Company from the decree in the case of the Dutch bondholders against the Florida Central Company and others.

Case of the Florida Central Railroad Company.

The bill, as we have seen, was filed by the appellees, Schütte and others, to enforce an alleged lien on the property, rights, franchises, &c., of the appellant, the Florida Central Railroad Company, in favor of the appellees as the holders of certain pretended bonds of the State of Florida.

Statement of the Case.

The Florida Central Railroad Company was incorporated the 29th of July, 1868, (Rec., pp. 36–7,) and owns and operates the railway running fron Jacksonville to Lake City, where it connects with another road called the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, which extends from Lake City to Chattahooche, and is part of the projected road to Pensacola and Mobile.

The road of the Florida Central Company was built by the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Company, which was sold in March, 1868, by the trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund to William E. Jackson and others, who became a body politic under the name, The Florida Central Railroad Company. The validity of that sale is not controverted.

At the time the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company was incorporated, 24th June, 1869, the road from Lake City to Quincy, with its two branches, one from Tallahassee to St. Marks and the other, a short line, from a point in Jefferson County to Monticello, were owned and operated by a corporation styled the Tallahassee Railroad Company.

By its act of incorporation, the J., P. and M. Company was authorized to construct a road from Quincy, the western terminus of the Tallahassee road, to the Alabama State line, in the direction of Mobile, no part of which road was built when the J., P. and M. Company was created.

By the 14th section of the act of 24th June, 1869, incorporating the J., P. and M. Company, entitled "An act to perfect the public works of the State," the companies owning the roads from Quincy to Jacksonville, from Tallahassee to St. Marks, and the branch to Monticello, "or either" of them, might, "by a vote of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest, and with the consent of a majority of the stock in interest of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, "consolidate with the J., P. and M. Company, so as to become one company, on such terms as might be agreed on."

On the 25th of May, 1870, the Tallahassee Railroad Company was consolidated with the J., P. and M. Company, (Littlefield's dep., int. 64, Rec., pp. 739, 740.)

By the 2d section of an act entitled "An act to alter and amend an act entitled 'An act to perfect the public works of the State,' approved June 24, 18~~7~~9," approved 28th 1869 January, 1870, it is provided that "in order to aid the J.,

P. and M. Company to complete, equip, and maintain its road, and to aid in perfecting one of the public works embraced in the internal improvements of the State," the governor shall deliver to the said company "coupon bonds of the State to an amount equal to $16,000 per mile for the whole line of road and length of railroad owned by or belonging to said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in exchange for first-mortgage bonds of said railroad company, of the denomination of $1,000, when the President thereof shall certify upon his oath that the road or parts of road for which he asks for an exchange of bonds is completed, and is in good running order."

The 3d section of this act provides that the State shall have a statutory lien on the company's property, to be as operative as a first mortgage duly registered, "to secure the principal and interest of the said company bonds," that in case of the company's default as to "either principal or interest of its bonds, or any part thereof, for twelve months after the same shall have become due," the Governor may seize and sell the road, &c., for cash on 90 days' notice; the act then makes further provision in case of a sale, which, however, need not be referred to at present.

Section 4 provides "that the Governor shall, for the purpose of further aiding said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in the speedy construction of its road, deliver to the president of said company coupon bonds of this State, of the same character as those above described in this act, to the amount of sixteen thousand dollars per mile, upon receiving from the president of said company first mortgage bonds of like amount on any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville; provided, however, that the State bonds under this section shall not be exchanged for first mortgage bonds for a greater length than one hundred miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville: Provided, The said railroad company or companies shall not issue first mortgage bonds to a greater amount than sixteen thousand dollars per mile."

This section, taken in connection with the part of the 14th section of the act of 24th June, 1869, granting to each of the companies with which the J., P. and M. is authorized to consolidate, "the same privileges as are herein granted to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company," is relied on as authority for charging the property and franchises of the Florida Central Company with the lien set up by the complainants.

In this state of things, the J., P. and M. Company, in June, 1870, (Littlefield's depo. int. 42), delivered to the Governor of Florida the company's bonds to the amount of $3,000,000, payable to the State of Florida, and received in exchange therefor from the Governor 3,000 coupon bonds of the State for $1,000 each, payable to bearer, and numbered respectively from 1 to 3,000 inclusive. About 2,800 of these bonds, it is alleged, were sold in Amsterdam to the complainants, and are now held by them. As the decree adjudges that these bonds are no lien on the property and franchises of the Florida Central Company, it is unnecessary to make any special reference to them in this case. It may be added, however, that these bonds were recklessly sold at a little more than half their nominal value to speculators by dishonest agents of the company, who, after building only about twenty miles of road with a part of the proceeds, applied to their own uses so much of the residue as was not consumed by exorbitant commissions and other charges, which were paid with a prodigality that is of itself proof that those to whom the bonds were delivered by the Governor, intended, when they received them, to misappropriate them.

The J., P. & M. Co. say, in their answer, that of the proceeds of these bonds, they did not receive over $150,000;

the rest "being embezzled and fraudulently appropriated." (Rec., p. 123.)

Having exhausted the credit of the J., P. & M. Co. with the State, the next step taken by these parties was to make a victim of the Florida Central Company after the same manner.

The initial point of this fraud is an agreement between Edward Houstoun and Milton S. Littlefield, dated 13th May, 1870, (Schedule C., Rec., pp. 22, 23,) which purports to be "a full, complete and final settlement of all matters between either George W. Swepson or M. S. Littlefield and Edward Houstoun."

At the date of this agreement the said Swepson was president of the Florida Central Company. He had been president of the Western Division Company, and while president of that company had embezzled the proceeds of $6,000,000 of bonds of the State of North Carolina, which had been placed in his hands for the benefit of the company, and Edward Houstoun was the agent through whom Swepson perpetrated the embezzlement. It was, in great part, to close up all matters relating to that criminal agency that the agreement was entered into. Littlefield was, at the time of the agreement, president of the J., P. & M. Co. He was, also, then president of the Western Division Company, having succeeded Swepson in October, 1869, and, as the agreement indicates, he stood in Swepson's shoes as to all matters involved in Houstoun's agency.

By the agreement Houstoun sells to Littlefield four accepted drafts of Swepson on Littlefield for the aggregate amount of $109,140, and 1,300 shares of stock in the Florida Central Company, and it is recited that Littlefield has paid Houstoun $10,000 in cash and given him his draft on Hopkins & Co. (who, it may be observed, were the financial agents of the J., P. & M. Company for the sale of the bonds) for $163,070.20, at 60 days. As security Houstoun was to hold the four drafts and certain railroad bonds, and Littlefield covenanted to place in the hands of T. H. Porter, 3,110 shares of Florida Central stock.

On the 30th of the same month of May, another agreement was entered into between the same parties. It recites that the draft for $163,070.20 was given for value received "in the various transactions between the parties relative to the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company and the Florida Central Railroad Company, growing out of the late Pensacola & Georgia Railroad Company and said Florida Central Railroad Company and the Tallahassee Railroad Company;" it further recites that "it is to the great interest of parties of the first and second parts that money should be raised to promote the interests of said Florida Central Railroad Company and provide for the business of said company, and to pay said draft when due;" and that the said parties of the first and second parts are owners and proprietors of more than a majority of the capital stock of said Florida Central Railroad."

It is then stipulated that $1,000,000 of first mortgage bonds of the Florida Central Company "of like denomination and effect and condition as the first mortgage bonds of the J., P. & M. R. R. Co." shall be issued and placed in the hands of Edward Houstoun as "additional security" for the payment of said draft. (Schedule D, Rec., pp. 23, 24.)

This last agreement was in turn modified by an agreement between the same parties, dated 7th June, 1870. It provides that in lieu of $1,000,000 of bonds of the Florida Central Company, the same amount of bonds of the State of Florida shall be lodged with Houstoun as additional security for said draft. It further provides that in case Houstoun should sell these bonds for a default touching said draft, the net proceeds, after paying the draft, shall be applied as follows: to John P. Sanderson, $57,560; M. D.

Papy, $16,000; T. M. Brevard, on a certain contingency, $50,000; J. P. Sanderson, president of the Florida Central Company, $340,000, and the balance to Littlefield. It is also provided that on the maturity of the draft Houstoun is to have the privilege of returning the State bonds and getting back the bonds of the company, and in case of this option being used, that Houstoun might demand new company bonds, payable to bearer on surrendering the old ones, and hold the same as security. There is a further provision that in case the draft is paid at or before maturity, the bonds are to be delivered to Hopkins & Co., who are directed to apply the proceeds to the satisfaction of claims above stated, any residuum to be paid to Littlefield. (Schedule E, Rec., pp. 24, 25, 26.)

These agreements remained in force until 11th January, 1871, when they were entirely superseded by another agreement of that date, in the form of a receipt from one T. B Coddington, which was approved by Littlefield and, of course, by Houstoun, to whom it was given. This instrument recites that Coddington had received from Houstoun in trust for the latter's account, 1,000 first mortgage bonds of the Florida Central Company, for $1,000 each, with which he, Coddington, undertakes to arrange with Littlefield and others interested, and collect from him or them the amount which it is admitted is now due to Houstoun, viz: Littlefield's draft on Hopkins & Co. for $163,026.70, with interest, and the additional sum of $5,000 due Houstoun for certain legal expenses incurred by him, &c. Coddington also undertakes to collect and pay the several sums named in the agreement of 7th June, 1870. It concludes with the proviso that the money will be paid from the proceeds of bonds negotiated by S. W. Hopkins & Co., "the remainder of said proceeds to be disposed of as directed by the parties interested." (Schedule F, Rec., pp. 26, 27.)

It having been determined by Littlefield and Houstoun, by the agreement of 30th May, 1870, that the interests of the Florida Central Company and the payment of the said draft required the issue of $1,000,000 of the company's bonds, we now proceed to state the way in which these parties made the company subsidiary to their fraudulent purposes, of which a full account is given in Littlefield's deposition. (Rec., p. 7,268.)

When the bonds were issued, Littlefield was president of the J., P. and M. Company, a position he had held since 1869. (Ans. 2.) He was also at that time a director and stockholder in the Florida Central Company. (Ans. 27.) By his direction the bonds were printed in New York, and signed there in March or April, 1870, by H. H. Thompson, as treasurer of the company, Thompson having been made to believe that he had been appointed to that position, (see his deposition, R., 658,) which was untrue, that office being then and for some time after filled by one Flagg.

Littlefield then took the bonds to Washington City, where they were signed by George W. Swepson, as president of the company. This done, Littlefield proceeded to Tallahassee with the bonds, and delivered them to Edward Houstoun in accordance with the above-recited agreements between himself, Houston, and Swepson. (Ans. 29.)

As yet there had been no attempt to get the company's sanction to what had been done. Having consulted two or three stockholders and found them hostile to the projected bond issue, (ans. 34,) Littlefield resolved on compassing by fraud what he knew he could not accomplish by direct measures. Accordingly, on 2d June, 1870, he and Houstoun came together in a lawyer's office, and, without any previous notice to the stockholders, as the by-laws of the company required, attempted to organize a meeting of stockholders. "To make up a meeting," Houstoun transferred "temporarily" ten shares apiece of his own stock to A. Huling, G. R. Foster, and M. D. Papy. (Ans. 38.) To constitute a valid meeting of stockholders, other than the regular annual meeting, the by-laws of the company required a public notice of ten days "through the newspapers." There was no pretense of a compliance with this requirement.

This so-called meeting of stockholders resolved itself into a meeting of directors.

Littlefield, who had the record of the proceedings of the Florida Central Company before him, says that the "resolutions" passed at both meetings directed that the Swepson-Thompson bonds "shall be placed in the hands of Edward Houstoun for the purposes agreed on by an agreement between himself and M. S. Littlefield," meaning the agreement aforesaid. (Ans. 41.)

It was not so easy, however, to give the bonds the authenticity of the seal of the company. The custodian of the seal was Flagg, the Secretary and Treasurer of the Company. He refused to affix the seal to the bonds on the grounds, (1) that the company had no authority to issue the bonds; (2) that if it had authority, the stockholders had not directed the issuing of bonds; and (3) if they had so directed he would resign before he would obey, unless Houstoun would first purchase his stock in the company. (Ans. 47.) Nothing daunted by this obstacle, Houstoun abstracted the seal from the company's office and took it to Littlefield's room, where it was afixed to the bonds. (Ans. 46.)

As it is not pretended that the bonds of the company have any validity except under the 4th section of the act of 28th January, 1870, it is surprising to find that the emission of these bonds was neither preceded nor followed by any action of the J., P. & M. Company having reference to them. As the law, if it authorized the issue of bonds at all, did so to effect the completion of the J., P. & M. Road, it was to be expected that such issue of bonds would be made only after a request in that behalf from the J. P. & M. Co., or some understanding between the two companies —the Florida Central having the undisputed right—as the learned justice said in the court below—to prescribe the terms on which it would pledge itself for the benefit of the J., P. & M. Co. But there was no action of the kind. Indeed, Littlefield frankly says, that the J., P. & M. Co. never received any bonds from the Florida Central and never quested any. (Ans. 42, 43.)

Although it is recited in Schedule F, the receipt given by Coddington to Houstoun, that Houstoun, for whose benefit, in part, these bonds were issued, had possession of them and delivered them to Coddington, it appears by the latter's deposition, that such was not the case. Coddington received the bonds from R. H. Gamble, the comptroller of the State, who had them in his office. (Rec., p. 1141.)

It is to be remembered that the agreement or receipt, known as Schedule F, necessarily supplanted the previous agreements, Schedules C, D, E.

The action taken under Schedule F was as follows: Coddington and Houstoun obtained the bonds from Gamble, the comptroller, without any difficulty, owing, no doubt, to the fact that he, Gamble, was one of the parties provided for in Schedule F, and took them to Governor Reed, who thereupon delivered to them 1,000 bonds of the State of Florida, for $1,000 each, and numbered from 3,001 to 4,000, inclusive, which Coddington says he understood were issued under the said acts of 1869 and 1870.

When the State bonds were delivered to Coddington, the Governor requested him not to take them out of the State until he had made arrangement with Littlefield for the payment of certain money due the State. (Rec., p. 1142.)

On the next day, 12th January, 1871, Coddington received a letter from Littlefield instructing him to deliver the bonds to the parties in London, who had purchased the whole 4,000 of bonds issued for the benefit of the J., P. and M. Company, "and collect the pay therefor," paying therewith $163,000 to Houstoun, $16,000 to Papy, $5,000 to Westcott, $15,000 to Gamble, the comptroller, and $57,000 to Sanderson, receiving from them "all stock, bonds, coupons, notes, drafts, acceptances, or whatever the said [sic] is to pay for," &c., &c., placing the balance to credit of Governor Reed, to pay indebtedness to the State. (Rec., p. 1142.)

In a postscript, Littlefield says this letter is so far modified as to conform to the letter or receipt given by me [him] to Edward Houstoun, and approved by me [him]." To this letter another postscript was added by Governor Reed in these words: "You will please place to my credit in the National Trust Company of New York City, the amount called for in the above arrangement, either by wire or letter, and oblige Harrison Reed, Governor of Florida."

It is to be noted that at the time Comptroller Gamble permitted the company's bonds to pass out of his hands, they had been ordered to be cancelled by a resolution of the directory of the company, passed on the 21st November, 1870, (Rec., p. 38), which was, no doubt, as well known to him and Governor Reed as it was to the other conspirators against the company.

Feeling now at liberty to depart the State with the bonds, so far, at least, as his promise to the Governor was concerned, Coddington, at Littlefield's instance, left Tallahassee in a private conveyance, instead of by railway, accompanied by Littlefield's secretary, and went to Thomasville, Georgia, where he took the cars. Coddington says that this course was recommended by Littlefield "for the safety of the bonds," but we are not told why it was deemed safer, or whether it was prompted by the fact that there was then in force an injunction granted at the instance of Gamble and Westcott, prohibiting the very use which these parties had just made of the company's bonds. Gamble and Westcott had been bought off, but perhaps others had become parties to the suit.

Why it was that Coddington joined this conspiracy he does not tell us. He then claimed to be a creditor of the J., P. and M. Co. in the sum of $40,000, and the sequel shows that he managed to get possession of 192 of the bonds he carried off from Florida, which he still holds as security for the said debt. In his deposition he says that he had no benefit from the transaction, but incurred loss in consequence of the part he bore in it. (Rec., p. 1146.) His part in this disreputable business was, therefore, not so disinterested as he would have us think.

On arriving in New York, Coddington took the first steamer for England.

Not being able to get the money from the parties in England who had contracted to buy the bonds, he was directed by Littlefield, Houstoun, and Governor Reed to place the bonds in the hands of S. W. Hopkins & Co., of London, the financial agents of the J., P. and M. Company, on their undertaking to apply the proceeds of them in the way he had agreed to do by Schedule F. (Rec., pp. 1143, 4, 5, Coddington's deposition.) This took place in the month of April, 1871.

At the time these bonds were received by Coddington to be put on the market, the prospect for an advantageous sale of them could not have been more unpromising, as we shall soon see; and nothing short of a predetermined purpose to embezzle the fruits of them can account for the recklessness and improvidence of offering them for sale in such a state of things.

When Coddington took these bonds to London, there were already on the market the 3,000 State bonds which, as we have said, the governor had delivered to the J., P. & M. Co., in June, 1870 These latter bonds had scarcely been received by the company when they were assailed with an outbust of indignant protest against their validity, on the grounds of unconstitutionality and a corrupt conspiracy between the governor and Littlefield, the president of the company. One of the channels through which these grave imputations found expression was the New York World. Capitalists were warned in its columns not to touch these bonds, and solemnly told that the people of Florida would never pay them. (Rec., pp. 681, 2, 3.)

The publications in the World produced a profound sensation, and were copied by the papers throughout this country and Europe. They appeared in June, 1870, the month in which the bonds were issued. As a consequence, the bonds were discredited everywhere. Littlefield went about hawking them in London, Brussels, Berlin, Frankfort, Vienna, Paris, and Holland, but in vain, for, as he deposes, "the damaging reports in relation to the said Florida State bonds had preceded me at every place I went." (L.'s dep., p. 740, Ans. 67.)

These "damaging reports" appeared in the Dutch newspapers, and, Littlefield says, were "matters of general notoriety in the bond market of Europe" where he visited." (L.'s dep., p. 741, Ans. 70.)

The result was that Littlefield, who was hungry for the fruits of the bonds, and, at the same time, unable to dispose of them, threw himself unreservedly into the hands of Hopkins & Co. and John Collinson, a London stock operator, making the "necessities" of the company a pretext for his course.

Collinson, who had contracted to take 4,000 bonds, actually bought and paid for 2,800 at £138 1*s*. 10*d*. per bond of $1,000. Of this the company received £100, less a commission of 5 per cent. on the face of the bonds to Hopkins & Co. who, furthermore, received £138 1*s*. 10*d*. to indemnify them "for such extraordinary expenses of such negotiations as we [they] might find it necessary to incur by reason of the attacks that were being continually made upon the character of said bonds." (Collin's dep., p. 1195, Ans. 7.)

Collinson bought to sell again; and as it would have been fatal to his adventure for any of the coupons to be dishonored before he had "floated" the bonds, it was one of the terms of his contract with Hopkins & Co. that about $350,000 of the proceeds of the bonds "should be set aside and appropriated to pay a certain number of the interest coupons to mature thereafter;" (Hopkins' Ans., X-12, p. 1208, and Ex. G., p. 1235,) and this was done.

In less than a month after Collinson contracted to buy the bonds, the J., P. & M. Co., having become aware of Littlefield's intended fraudulent use of the bonds, on the 10th December, 1870, revoked his authority to negotiate said bonds and directed their return to the company, and that notice of this action should be given to Hopkins & Co. and the president of the company and all others having possession of said bonds. (Rec., pp. 72–3.)

Collinson was not alone in this transaction. He was evidently in league with operators in Amsterdam, who, he admits, furnished their proportion of the purchase money. (See his dep., p. 1131, ans. 5; also, Littlefield's dep., p. 741, ans. 69.)

It is clear from the depositions of Chase, Littlefield and others, that this Dutch syndicate, as they call it, did exist.

On the 18th December, 1870, Governor Reed, in reply by letter to a telegram from Boissevain, of Amsterdam, one of this syndicate, asking certain information touching the bonds, said: "Bonds recently recalled by the company; no provision will, therefore, be made for interest." (R. p. 135.)

On 28th December, 1870, the agreement between Collinson and Hopkins & Co. underwent a modification in consequence of Collinson's raising a question as to the constitutionality of the bond issue, and H. & Co. agreed to procure the opinion of the Supreme Court of Florida on the said question. (R., p. 1234.)

In February, 1871, the judges of the Supreme Court of Florida, at the instance of Governor Reed, gave their opinions as to the constitutionality of the legislation under which the bonds were issued, declaring the same valid. But we shall see presently that afterwards, when a case involving this question was presented to this court for decision, the legislation in question was adjudged to be unconstitutional and void.

On the 8th February, 1871, Mr. E. M. L'Engle, as counsel for the Florida Central Company, addressed an elaborate letter to Messrs. Holje Boissevain, bankers, Amsterdam, setting forth the invalidity of the said bonds, on the grounds of fraud and unconstitutionality, (R., pp. 372–375;) and in June, 1871, Mr. T. W. Brevard addressed a letter to the "Chairman States and Corporations Arrears Committee," London, in the interest of certain holders of bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and the Tallahassee Railroads, asserting that said bondholders claimed a lien prior to any that the purchasers of the State bonds issued for the J., P. and M. Company could claim, and also warning capitalists against these latter bonds. (R., pp. 391–395.) It will not be denied that these letters reached their respective destinations. (See S. W. Hopkins' deposition, p. 1205, X-ans. 5.)

Of the 1,000 bonds delivered to Coddington, only 208 were sold. In August, 1872, Hopkins tells us, they were delivered to Collinson by Hopkins & Co., "under an arrangement made with him to pay one or more of the interest coupons of a certain number of said bonds, or of the 2,800 bonds previously delivered to him by our firm." (H.'s dep., p. 1210, X-ans. 21.)

These bonds were "placed" by Collinson and his syndicate in Amsterdam, some time subsequent to August, 1872.

As an evidence of the unscrupulousness of this Dutch syndicate, it is to be noted that some months before this lot of bonds reached Collinson's hands, namely, in February, 1872, Governor Reed was impeached by the Legislature of Florida for malfeasance in office, one of the charges being that he had fraudulently conspired to issue these 1,000 bonds. It is incredible that these shrewd Dutch brokers, who are shown to have had every facility for getting information, should have been in ignorance of the impeachment of Governor Reed at the time they placed the 208 bonds in question.

It is provided by the act 28th January, 1870, that the Governor shall not exchange State bonds for company bonds until the president of the company "shall certify, upon his oath, that the road or parts of road for which he asks for an exchange of bonds is completed, and is in good running order," yet Governor Reed, in defiance of this provision, issued the 4,000 State bonds without any certificate under oath from the president of the J., P. and M. company, after tendering the latter a false certificate, to which he refused to make oath. (Littlefield dep., pp. 738–9, ans. 53, 57, and Ex. L. No. 9, p. 750.)

Of the 1,000 State bonds delivered to Coddington in exchange for Florida Central bonds, 224 were returned to the State for cancellation, there having been an overissue of State bonds in consequence of a misrepresentation as to the number of miles of the J., P. and M. road in good running order at the time application for the State bonds was made.

The return of these bonds left 776 bonds of the lot received by Coddington, and Hopkins tells us that these 776 bonds, if sold at the prices agreed on, would not have brought enough to pay the amounts named in Schedule F, which, as we have seen, Coddington was directed to pay out of the proceeds of the bonds. (Hopkins dep., p. 1209, Ans. X20.)

The interest on 208 of the pretended State bonds which were exchanged for pretended Florida Central bonds being largely behind, the Governor of Florida, at the instance of certain parties pretending to represent the holders of these bonds, who are Dutch subjects, attempted to seize the Florida Central road in December, 1876, and advertised the same for sale in pretended furtherance of the powers conferred on him by the acts of June and January, 1870. (Rec., p. 36.)

But no sale was made, all action in that behalf, on the Governor's part, having been prevented by an injunction granted on 21st May, 1877, by the court below, on the motion of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company. (Rec., pp. 534–5.)

In this state of things the Dutch bondholders, virtually waiving their pretended right to summary proceedings under the statutes, filed their bill on the 23d May, 1877, as well against the Florida Central Company as the J. P. and M. Company, (which had been theretofore seized and advertised for sale by the Governor at the instance of the same persons as had procured like action to be taken against the Florida Central Company), the Western Division Company, the trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund and others. (Rec., p. 180, 193.)

The Pleadings.

THE BILL.

The bill, in so far as it affects the Florida Central Company, avers that the J., P. and M. Company, received from the Governor of the State 4,000 State bonds, for which 3,000 were given in exchange for a like number of J., P. and M. bonds, and 1,000 for a like amount of Florida Central bonds.

That at the time the 1,000 Florida Central bonds were executed, Milton S. Littlefield owned a large majority of the stock in that company, and had contracted to buy more, which, added to his own, constituted all the shares of said company except 400, the whole number of shares of the company being 5,500.

That Littlefield's object in purchasing the additional stock was, as the parties with whom he contracted knew, to enable him to consolidate the J., P. and M. Co. with the Florida Central, and that the issuing of the bonds was the joint act of all the stockholders, and with the understanding that the additional stock should be paid for with the proceeds of the bonds.

That the stockholders who retained their stock had full notice, but remained inactive until long after the State bonds were sold.

That immediately after the issuing of the State bonds the line of road from Jacksonville to Lake City was operated as part of the J., P. and M. road, and in 1871 was, along with the rest of the road, operated by the J., P. and M. Co., conveyed to trustees to pay debts of the latter company, and that the trustees took possession and operated the same, without any interference of the Florida Central stockholders.

That the J., P. and M. Co., through their agents, represented in England, Holland, Germany, and France that the bonds were valid and secured on the whole line of railroad from Jacksonville west; that complainants bought on the faith of these representations, and that said bonds were sold in London at £138 sterling per bond, and, so long as the interest was paid, brought a good price, selling at one time as high as 81 per cent. in U. S. gold.

That complainants hold bonds numbered from 1 to 3,200, inclusive; that the interest since January, 1873, being unpaid, they applied to the governor to seize the road; that the interest up to January, 1873, was paid by a trust company in New York, which was appointed the fiscal agent of the State, of which appointment the governor gave notice to the holders of said bonds; that it was represented to complainants that the money for paying the interest was provided by the State, which greatly strengthened belief in the validity of the bonds.

The bill then refers to the pretensions of certain holders of bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads, which do not, however, in any way concern the Florida Central Company.

The bill avers that certain persons, naming them, had, by means of a fraudulent judicial proceeding, installed themselves as directors of the Florida Central Company, and were about to issue bonds of said company, and asking that they may be enjoined, &c.

That in seizing said line of railway, the governor had committed an error in recognizing part thereof as the property of the Florida Central Company, whereas he should have seized the whole line as the property of the J., P. and M. Company.

That the governor has aggrieved complainants by advertising the line from Lake City to Quincy, with the Monticello branch, and from Tallahassee to St. Marks, as subject to a prior lien in favor of the holders of the Pa. and Ga. and the Tallahassee bonds.

Refers to a proposed plan of adjustment with the holders of the Pa. and Ga. and Tallahassee bonds, looking to a sale and reorganization of the Florida Central and J., P. and M. roads.

Names the only persons who are authorized to represent the Florida Central Company should it appear that said company has not become extinct.

Avers that the Supreme Court of Florida has twice decided that the line of road from Jacksonville to Lake City is charged with a lien in favor of complainants, and all other holders of said bonds, and both railroad companies were parties to said litigation and are concluded by it.

The bill refers to the dilapidated condition of the J., P. and M. road, and asks that measures be taken to put it in order.

It avers that the Western Division, having promoted the issue and negotiation of said bonds and participated in the proceeds of them, is estopped to allege their invalidity.

That Edward M. L'Engle has illegally possessed himself of certain shares of the Florida Central Company which were bought with the proceeds of the bonds held by complainants, as was well known to said L'Engle, and that since said bonds were sold said L'Engle has bought the interests of other persons in the stock of said road, and has brought vexatious suits touching property formerly belonging to said company, and contemplates further litigation with the view of compelling complainants to pay him a large sum of money, and to hinder them from obtaining the relief now sought; and that L'Engle is using the name of one Washington, a non-resident, to enable him to sue in the U. S. court, and to get a decree adjudging the said

Washington to be the owner of stock which he derived from said L'Engle and one Miller.

Refers to a contract between Littlefield and Swepson to purchase the unpaid bonds of the Pa. and Ga. and Tallahassee Railroads, and to a purchase of bonds under the same; that said bonds are claimed by several, all of whom knew they had been paid for with the proceeds of the bonds held by complainants.

That Littlefield has made an invalid assignment of shares in the Florida Central Company which, in truth, belong to the estate of Edward Houstoun, and that said assignee ought not to be allowed to derive any advantage from said assignment.

Prayer.

The bill prays: (1) That complainants may be decreed to be bona fide holders of the bonds of the Florida Central Co.; (2) That the whole line of road be first subjected to payment of complainants' bonds; (3) That it be decreed, as the result of the actings and doings of the two companies, that a trust exists in favor of complainants, entitling them to subject the whole line of road to the payment of their bonds, and that the whole line of road west of Jacksonville is one road; (4) That the Governor be decreed to enforce complainants' rights under the statute; (5) That Trustees of Internal Improvement Fund be decreed to have no lien on any part of said road; (6) That the Western Division Company be decreed to stand like any other stockholder, in subordination to rights of complainants; (7) A decree is then asked as to the status of the officers now representing said Florida Central Co.; (8) And as to the rights of L'Engle & Washington, as stockholders; (9) And that certain bonds issued in the name of the Florida Central Co. be declared null and void; (10) Injunctions to prevent litigation adverse to the interest of complainants are asked, and also the appointment of a receiver, concluding with a prayer for general relief.

The Answers.

The bill was answered by the Western Division Company, (Rec., pp. 263–291,) but the bill was subsequently dismissed as to this company. (Rec., p. 516.)

James M. Baker and others, the directors of the Florida Central Company, also answered, (Rec., pp. 330–332,) but the bill was subsequently dismissed as to these parties. (Rec., p. 516.)

E. M. L'Engle answered (Rec., pp. 345–356,) but being a stockholder he is represented by the company, in so far as the corporate interests are concerned, and no question arrises on this appeal touching the matters imputed to said L'Engle in the bill. It is not necessary, therefore, to refer to this answer with more particularity here, but it is commended to the court as embodying a clear and satisfactory presentation of our defence, and is adopted by the Florida Central Company as part of its answer, in so far as not inconsistent therewith.

The Florida Central Company answered. (Rec., pp. 398–409.) After answering as to several matters relating to the J., P. & M. Co., it denies that 1,000 of its bonds were ever delivered to Governor Reed in exchange for State bonds for the benefit of the J., P. & M. Co., or for any other purpose, and denies that it ever authorized the execution of the 1,000 papers described in the bill and called bonds.

Denies that its charter authorized it to issue such bonds for the benefit of the J., P. & M. Co. or any other purpose, and that no such company as the J., P. & M. Co. existed at the time the respondent was incorporated.

Respondent says its capital stock of 5,550 shares represents a par value of $550,000; that its road extends from Jacksonville to Lake City—about 60 miles; that its road was completed before the incorporation of the J., P. & M. Co., and hence was under no necessity to create a debt of $1,000,000, paying 8 per cent. interest per annum, and about double the amount of its capital stock, which was not only greater than it could pay, but for the benefit of another corporation, over which respondent had no control. Denies that any meeting of stockholders ever authorized the issue of the bonds, or that any one or more of said so-called bonds was ever in respondent's custody or ever exhibited at any meeting of stockholders or directors, or known to, or spread in the records of, respondent, or ever signed by any officer of the company by its authority or with its knowledge.

Respondent says it is informed that George W. Swepson signed such papers fraudulently, for his own purposes, but not at the business office of respondent or in the State of Florida.

Respondent says that the signature to the bonds of H. H. Thompson, Treasurer, was false and fraudulent, and that it was made because Swepson and Littlefield dared not expose their plan by submitting said papers to F. H. Flagg, the Treasurer of the Company, for his signature.

Respondent says its corporate seal was affixed to said so-called bonds without its authority; that the so-called bonds were delivered to Edward Houstoun as part of private transactions between him, Swepson and Littlefield having in no way in view the benefit of respondent or the J., P. and M. Company;

That said pretended bonds were secretly carried to a place near respondent's office, from which respondent's seal was abstracted and taken to said place of concealment and affixed to the so-called bonds; that the bonds were never fully executed, there being unfilled blanks for the name of the place of issue, and for the Governor's certificate that the bonds were issued under the act of 28th January, 1870;

That respondent never consolidated with J., P. and M. Co., and that there was no law to warrant such consolidation;

That respondent never lost its separate corporate existence, and that J., P. and M. Co. never had any right to make or circulate any obligation as a charge on the franchise and property of respondent;

That respondent's president never delivered to the Governor any certificate under oath, or otherwise, asking for an exchange of bonds, for the use of the J., P. and M. Co.

Respondent says, on information and belief, that said pretended bonds were adopted by a stockholder's meeting, which was a mere fraud, and that the object was to use the bonds for the private purposes of the parties practicing the fraud;

That when the fraudulent character of the Swepson-Thompson bonds became known, to wit, on or about the 21st November, 1870, respondent, by a resolution, ordered said bonds to be destroyed, of which due notice was given said Houstoun and the Governor and Comptroller of Florida; and that after this Coddington pretended to have received said bonds from Houstoun in trust to pay private debts named in a receipt signed by Coddington.

Respondent says on information, that afterwards the State of Florida corruptly delivered to Coddington, in exchange for said bonds, 1,000 bonds of the State purporting to have been issued for the benefit of the J., P. and M. Co. under act 28th January, 1870, numbered from 3,001 to 4,000 inclusive, well knowing the false and fraudulent character of said company bonds, and well knowing that the said State bonds were to be used to pay private debts.

Respondent says on information, that Coddington and the State knew that said transaction touching the bonds was in violation of an injunction then in force and, as yet, undissolved, and that in order to avoid another injunction, said Coddington left the State with the bonds secretly, all which was unknown to respondent.

Respondent says on information that Coddington took the bonds to London; that none of them were sold there; 224 were cancelled; that, of the 776 remaining, 208 were pledged to raise money to pay the interest on the rest, although unsold, and 568 were placed in a bank in London, where they still remain subject to the order of the State of Florida.

Respondent was chartered 29th July, 1868; that its charter has never been amended or altered; that its charter gives it no power to issue bonds as a donation to the J., P. and M. Company, or any other purpose; that the act of 28th January, 1870, was never intended to apply to respondent, and that respondent has never accepted or adopted it.

That Legislature had no power to pass said act, and that the void State bonds were no consideration for imposing a debt of $1,000,000 on respondent.

That the fourth seciton of said statute limited the power of the State to exchange its bonds on any finished portion of the J., P. & M. road for a greater distance than 100 miles east of Quincy, which limit of 100 miles is exhausted long before reaching Lake City, which is more than 155 miles east of Quincy, so that if the law were valid it would not affect respondent.

Respondent says there is no relation of debtor and creditor or privity of contract between it and complainant; that the said State bonds were purchased on the credit of the State and not on that of respondent, and that they have no valid claim against respondent.

Respondent denies that any of said bonds numbered above 3,000 were sold for the benefit of the J., P. & M. road, or that the latter ever had possession of them, but that the same were intended to be used in paying private debts, and that in taking said bonds to London said Coddington acted as the agent of the State and not of this respondent, both the State and said Coddington knowing that the whole proceeding was fraudulent, and respondent denies that the said so-called bonds ever brought as much as 81 per cent., and avers, on information, that they sold for less than 60 per cent., and some of them as low as 40 per cent., owing to their fraudulent character; that respondent is not advised how long the interest was paid on the bonds, but charges whenever it was paid it was done by Coddington, Collinson, Boissevain, Mildeus and others, who were speculating in said bonds, so as to force their sale in the market, well knowing their fraudulent character.

Respondent knows not what representations were made by the J., P. & M. Company, and avers that it was the duty of complainants to inquire whether respondent had become extinct by merger in the J., P. & M. Company.

Respondent denies that complainants hold any bonds of the State of Florida issued on the credit of respondent, or that are in any way a charge on the property of this respondent.

Respondent then details the facts of "the memorandum plan" by which respondent's road was to be seized and sold and purchased by the parties to that plan and a new company organized.

Respondent answers so much of the bill as charges fraud in the election of the directors of the respondent.

Respondent denies that the Governor has yet seized its road, but admits that he has attempted to do so, and is ready and willing to do so.

Respondent denies that there has been any decision settling that respondent is under any liability to complainants.

Respondent adopts the answers of L. Engle and the Western Division Company in so far as not inconsistent herewith.

The bill was also answered by James M. Guerrand and others, holders of unpaid bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads (Rec., pp. 467, 469,) and by the trustees of the internal improvement fund. (Rec., pp. 469, 489.)

The J., P. & M. Company filed a plea (Rec., p. 335,) and an answer in support of it (Rec., p. 338).

As these pleadings have no significance in the controversy between the Dutch bondholders and the Florida Central Company, no further reference to them is necessary.

Order Dismissing the Bill as to Certain Parties.

On the 19th of May, 1877, an order was passed dismissing the bill as to various parties, who were in no wise proper parties in so far as this branch of the litigation is concerned. (Rec., p. 516.)

Amended Bill.

On the 10th of January, 1879, the complainants filed an amended bill, but as this bill merely attacks the status of certain parties claiming to have been elected directors of the Florida Central Company, no special reference to the same is deemed proper. (Rec., pp. 1110, 1114.)

Cross-Bill of Florida Central Company.

On the 30th of July, 1877, the Florida Central Company filed its cross-bill in this suit asking affirmative relief as to the matters set up in its answer, namely, that the bonds purporting to be bonds of the company may be held void and ordered to be surrendered for cancellation; that the holders of the State bonds may be decreed to have no claim against the company, and praying injunctions against the Governor and the holders of said State bonds. (Rec., pp. 420, 433.) A more particular reference to this bill is not necessary in the present state of the case.

Replications and Depositions.

Replications were filed by complainants to the various answers (Rec., pp. 511, 513), and the depositions of many witnesses were taken, to which reference has already been made and will hereafter be made.

Decree.

The court decreed, inter alia, that the complainants had a first lien on the road, &c., of the Florida Central Company to the amount of all of the said bonds of the said State of Florida exchanged for the bonds of the said Florida Central Railroad Company, numbered 3001 and upwards, held and owned by them, said complainant, and all interest now matured and to mature thereon. The amount of bonds ascertained to be held by complainants is $197,000, and the amount of interest ascertained as due on said bonds at the date of said decree is $118,515.20, to satisfy which amounts it is ordered that the said road be sold, &c. (Rec., pp. 579, 580.)

Assignment of Errors.

It is respectfully submitted that the decree is erroneous, on the following grounds:

1. Because it adjudges that the statute intended to give the holders of the State bonds a lien.

2. Because it adjudges that the bonds of the Florida Central Company are valid bonds.

3. Because it adjudges that the complainants have any recourse against the Florida Company.

4. Because it adjudges that the complainants have a right to recover the amounts named in the State bonds.

5. Because the court did not dismiss the bill as not presenting a case which falls under any category of equity jurisdiction.

ARGUMENT.

Invalidity of the State Bonds.

The Supreme Court of Florida having decided, several times, that the legislation by virtue of which the State bonds were issued, is null and void, (see 15 Fla. Rep., 456, Holland vs. State of Fla. et al.; ib., p. 691, State of Fla. et al. vs. The Florida Central R. R. Co. et als.; 16 Fla. Rep., 708, Trustees I. I. Fund vs. J., P. & M. R. R. Co. et als.,) it would seem that the question of the validity of these bonds is no longer an open one, and, consequently, that it must be assumed that they are nullities; for this court follows the State courts on all such questions. Besides, the decisions referred to are not assailed by the Dutch bondholders, but are relied on in their bill as settling their right to have the statutory lien of the State enforced for the payment of their bonds.

The Company's Bonds Ultra Vires.

Whatever may be the character of a corporate obligation, it is always admissible to inquire whether the corporation had the power to issue it; for no amount of good faith will make up for the want of authority to contract.

10 Wall., 677 Marsh vs. Fulton Co.

It is not pretended that the bonds of the Florida Central Company have any validity unless authorized by the 4th section of the act of January, 1870, which is in these words:

> SEC. 4. That the Governor shall, for the purpose of further aiding said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in the speedy construction of its road, deliver to the president of said company coupon bonds of this State of the same character as those above described in this act, to the amount of sixteen thousand dollars per mile, upon receiving for and from the president of said company first mortgage bonds of like amount on any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville: Provided, however. The State bonds under this section shall not be exchanged for first mortgage bonds for a greater length than one hundred miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville: Provided, The said railroad company or companies shall not issue first mortgage bonds to a greater amount than sixteen thousand dollars per mile.

The Florida Central Company is not named in this section, but it is contended that the section applies to it by necessary implication The foundation for that implication is said to be furnished by the words "first mortgage bonds of like amount on any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville," and the argument in support of the bonds being that inasmuch as the Florida Central Company owns that part of the line of road between these two points which runs from Lake City to Jacksonville, a grant of power to that company to issue "first mortgage bonds" must be raised by implication, to effectuate the intent of the statute.

But the power given by this 4th section is qualified by the proviso, that "State bonds under this section shall not be exchanged for first mortgage bonds for a greater length than one hundred miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville."

It was, undoubtedly, the purpose of the statute (§ 2) to give the J., P. & M. Co. the right to demand a given number of State bonds for every mile of road it should construct and put in good running order, for the entire length of its line. It was, undoubtedly, not the purpose of the statute that the J., P. & M. Co. should have the right to demand, in any event, State bonds for every mile of the line of completed road from Quincy to Jacksonville, but that no more than one hundred miles of said line of completed road should be available for that purpose.

Now, the truth is, that the whole of said line of road from Quincy to Jacksonville—a distance of over two hundred miles—has been used as a basis for the issuing of State bonds, in the very teeth of the statutory inhibition. The statute is explicit that no more than one hundred miles of the line from Quincy to Jacksonville, shall be used for that purpose. To allow bonds to be issued on the credit of other roads for the benefit of the J., P. & M. Co. was, as the sequel showed, a dangerous departure from the policy of the statute which was to compel the company to earn the State bonds by completing and putting in good running order a mile of road before an instalment of State bonds could be demanded. In this way there was a very considerable check against a misappropriation of the proceeds of the State bonds, whereas there was no check at all as to the State bonds which might be issued on the one hundred miles of road between Quincy and Jacksonville, except such ineffectual ones as might be secured by the companies operating the roads between those points, as the condition of lending their credit. It is submitted that a power so liable to abuse should be taken strictly.

Now, if at the time the 1,000 State bonds were exchanged for the same number of the Florida Central bonds other State bonds, at the rate of $16,000 a mile had been issued on 100 miles of the road between Jacksonville and Quincy, it would seem very clear that the 1,000 bonds were issued without any authority of law.

It is beyond doubt that the said 1,000 State bonds were received for negotiation in January, 1871. At that time the J., P. & M. Company had become consolidated with the Tallahassee Company, which owned the completed road from Quincy to Lake City, with the branch roads to St. Marks and Monticello, and had received from the State $16,000 per mile of the whole of said completed road; and the distance from Quincy to Lake City being 155 miles the J., P. & M. Company had received bonds much in excess of what the statute authorized. It follows, then, that the State bonds delivered to Coddington in January, 1871, could not have had any possible validity, since State bonds had at that time been issued on more than 100 miles of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville.

It may possibly be said in answer to this that when the State bonds were delivered to the J., P. & M. Co. the road between Quincy and Lake City had become the property of the J., P. & M. Co. by the consolidation with the Tallahassee Company, and consequently that the J., P. & M. Co. was entitled to demand State bonds on every mile of road owned by it; but this view has no support in the statute.

At the time the act of 28th of January, 1870, was passed, the Tallahassee Company, which owned the line from Quincy to Lake City, was entirely distinct from the J., P. & M. Co., and the act in its first section grants to the latter company the right to build a road "from the terminus of the late Pensacola and Georgia Railroad, now the Tallahassee Railroad at Quincy, Gadsden County, to, &c." Before its consolidation with the Tallahassee Company, the J., P. & M. Co. did not own a mile of completed railroad, and the right given by the second section of the act of 28th

January, 1870, to demand State bonds on every mile of its road, obviously applies to the then projected road, for the condition on which the State bonds may be demanded is when the President of the company "shall certify upon his oath that the road, or parts of road, for which he asks for an exchange of bonds is COMPLETED and is in good running order." When we turn to the fourth section of the same act, which authorizes an issue of State bonds on 100 miles of the completed road east of Quincy, we find that no certificate is required as to the established fact of a railroad in actual operation, which, if the second section was not of itself enough to show it, makes it beyond doubt that it was the purpose of the second section to authorize the issuing of State bonds on the road from Quincy westward, as it should be built mile by mile or after its completion. And the fourteenth section of the act of 24th of June, 1868, is almost conclusive on this point, for it, after authorizing the J., P. & M. Co. to consolidate with the "several companies owning the roads, or parts of roads, from Quincy to Jacksonville, &c.," provides that as to "the road or roads or parts of roads thus acquired," the J., P. & M. Co. may issue bonds or other evidences of debt, but not to be exchanged for State bonds, a provision which would have been almost useless if the second section of the act had been intended to apply to the completed road of any company that might be consolidated with the J., P. & M. Co.

The Supreme Court of Florida in attempting to show that the 4th Section of the act of 28th January, 1870, must necessarily apply to the Florida Central Company alone, because there was no other company to which it could apply, overlooked the fact that at the time the statute was passed the Tallahassee Company owned and was operating the line between Quincy and Lake City, and, as we have seen, is referred to in the statute as a separate company. (See 15 Fla., R. 704–5.)

The Bondholders have no lien.

Undoubtedly, the State might have secured her own bonds by liens on the railroads. But has she done so? We maintain, with all possible deference to the learned justice who rendered the decree, that she has not.

The words of the statute (act 1870, S. 3) giving the lien, are as follows: "To secure the principal and interest of the said company bonds, the State of Florida shall, by this act, have a statutory lien * * * * ." It cannot be denied that the primary and only expressed object of the lien was "to secure the principal and interest of the said company bonds." The railroad company was to deliver to the State its bonds payable to the State (act 1869, S. 10), as the condition of receiving State bonds, and it is these company bonds payable to the State that the statute says are to be secured by the lien. Not a word is said about the State bonds in connection with this lien, and it is very clear that if the lien was intended for the security of the State bonds also, such intention must be the result of implication. But, we respectfully submit that no such implication can be made without doing violence to the clearly expressed and manifest intention of the statute.

It does not, in the first place, seem probable, aside from the statute, that the State of Florida conceived that a lien on the railroads was necessary to give credit to her own bonds, nor is there anything in the statutes to warrant such a supposition. On the contrary, there is a great deal there to justify the conclusion that the State regarded her faith pledged by the bonds as all sufficient to give them standing and currency, and as fully equivalent to a mortgage on all the taxable property in Florida, let alone that part of it owned by the railroad companies.

The statute, as we have seen, expressly provides for a lien to secure the company bonds payable to the State.

These company bonds were to be exchanged for bonds of the State, and the statute having provided expressly for a lien to secure the company bonds, it would be very remarkable if the legislature had left the alleged additional lien for the security of the State bonds to be gathered by implication. We may be sure that if the promoters of this legislation had entertained such an intention, they would have expressed it—and their omission to do so is very significant.

It was competent for the State to take indemnity from the companies by way of mortgage or otherwise, but the mere fact that she did so, does not seem to be any ground for an inference that she also intended that indemnity for the security of her own bonds. The transaction between the State and the company was to be one thing and that between the State and the holders of her bonds was to be another thing, and there is no reason why anything should be added by implication to one transaction merely because it happens to belong to the other. No doubt the Dutch bond-holders think it very desirable, in the present state of things, to have a hold on the railroads, and that appears to be the best argument they possess for advancing the pretension of a lien; but it is far from being a satisfactory one.

The 13th section of the act of 1869, provides that the J., P. & M. Co. "may, at any time before the maturity of its bonds, discharge its debt to the State, or any part thereof, by payment in National currency or in bonds of the State." Here, the statute speaks of the company's debt to the State. It recognizes no duty to the holders of State bonds, but it does recognize the company's right to a complete discharge by payment to the State. It certainly will not be argued that this section, providing for a discharge of the company's debt, intended that the incident of that debt, the lien, should remain in full force after the debt was extinguished. It cannot be argued that the payment of the company bonds would have been, virtually, payment of the State bonds, because (1) the holders of the latter could not be compelled to accept payment before their bonds had matured; and (2) the statute does not require the State to apply the money received from the companies to the satisfaction of her bonds.

By the 3d section of the act of January, 1870, it is provided that in case of the company's default as to the principal or interest of its bonds, or any part thereof, "for twelve months after the same shall become due," the Governor is authorized to seize the road and sell it after a notice of ninety days.

Now, when we look at the State bonds (see copy of one, Rec., p. 1232,) we do not find that they contain any provision that the State shall have the large measure of indulgence which she concedes to the company. The State, by her bonds, contracts to pay principal and interest at maturity, but the lien which, it is alleged, secures the payment of these bonds is not enforceable until at least fifteen months after the bonds themselves are due and demandable!

But, again, this same section further provides that, in case of sale, the State may buy the road and pay for it with company bonds, thus extinguishing the lien without receiving a dollar in money for the benefit of the bondholders.

The statute also provides that in case the road be sold for money, it shall be held in trust for the holders of the State bonds, and, if not called for, shall be invested, but no right to compel the holders of State bonds to receive payment before the maturity of these bonds, or take the risk of the money set apart or invested for their benefit, is reserved. It is more than probable that the Legislature in making these latter provisions had in view the case of a foreclosure for the non-payment of interest and the unwillingness of some or all of the bondholders to surrender their bonds before maturity.

It is not to be implied that the State intended to be implicated in the administration of a trust for the benefit of private parties, further than the protection of her own treasury might require.

Added to all this, the validity of any sale depends on the ratification of the Legislature (Act 1870, Sec. 3), regardless of the creditor's wishes.

We feel at liberty to maintain, therefore, that the statutes afford the most conclusive evidence that it could not have been the intention to create a lien for the security of the State bonds.

To prevent a possible difficulty in applying the aforegoing argument to the Florida Central Company, from the fact that the J., P. & M. Co. only is mentioned in the provisions commented on, we would add that the contention of the appellees is, that the 4th section of the act of 1870 re-enacts as to the Florida Central Co. all the provisions touching the issuing of State bonds to the J., P. & M. Co.

The inference of a lien for the benefit of the bondholders, deduced by the Supreme Court of Florida, in some dicta which fell from it in the two cases in 15 Fla., Rep., above cited, from the fact that the State is to hold any investments of the proceeds of a sale in trust for the bondholders, to be good for anything, must assume the State's right to pay the bondholders at any time before maturity and hold such investments at their risk, and compel them to take the investments, whether good or bad, for all these consequences must follow, if we once implicate the bondholders in this collateral statutory contract between the State and the company. In our view of the provision in question, it was a mere legislative declaration of the manner in which the proceeds of sale should be held, and was not intended to affect the holders of the State bonds further than to give them the right to demand money which they could not be compelled to take.

The argument of the State Court as to the intention of the act of 1870, based on a constitutional amendment adopted in 1875, does not seem to require particular notice. (See 15 Fla., 534–5, Holland vs. State.

But it is said that the Supreme Court of Florida has decided that the statute gives the bondholders a lien, and that this is conclusive.

The cases relied on for this proposition are—

Holland vs. State, 15 Fla., p. 456; and State vs. Florida Central Co., &c., Ib., p. 690; and Trustees Int. Im. Fund Co. vs. J., P. & M. R. R. Co., &c., 16 Fla., 708.

In answer to this, we maintain—

1. That all that is said in these cases in support of the proposition is purely obiter. In all three of the cases the State was endeavoring to enforce its rights as creditor of the companies and not as trustee for the bondholders; and in none of the cases was there evidence or any averment in the pleadings that any of the State bonds had been negotiated.

The case of the State vs. The Florida Central Company was dismissed, on the ground of a total failure of evidence to show that any of the State bonds exchanged for the company's bonds had been sold.

In the case of the Trustees Int. Im. Fund vs. J., P. & M. R. R. Co., there was a decree in favor of the State adjudging the company to be a debtor of the State. This decree was reversed on the ground that, as the State bonds were void, the State could be entitled to no such decree; and when asked to order that the decree should be so modified by the court below as to apply to the State as trustee for the holders of the void bonds, the appellate court refused to do so, on the ground that there was no proof to show that any of the State bonds had been sold, and so nothing to show that the State was trustee for anybody. (pp. 723–4.)

Holland's case was upon demurrer, and was a contest between the State claiming as creditor solely, and Holland claiming to be the purchaser of a part of the J., P. & M. road under execution. There was nothing before the court to show that the State claimed to hold the position of trustee. In each of the cases what the court said about the statutory lien of the holders of the void bonds was upon a purely hypothetical case, and nothing is better settled than that a decision upon a point not presented by the record is not controlling.

2. But, however this may be, the decisions of the Supreme Court of Florida interpreting this statute are not binding on this court.

No doubt the general rule is that this court will follow the decisions of the State courts interpreting State constitutions and laws; but that rule is subject to exceptions which embrace these cases.

It is to be noted that the decisions relied on were made upon the very matter now in litigation in this court, but not between the same parties, and that the effect of the suits at bar was to transfer the whole subject of litigation from the State courts to the Federal courts, before any practical effect had been given to the decisions of the State court. If, then, this court is concluded by the decisions of the State court in that abortive litigation the result will be that, as to some features of the contract in question, this court will be unable to exercise its judgment at all, while as to others it will be entirely free to do so. The absurd consequences likely to follow upon such an application of the general rule are manifest.

Again, it must be remembered that these statutes of 1869 and 1870 are, in so far as involved here, no more than a contract between the State and a railway company thrown into the form of a law. In dealing with such a contract this court will treat it as any other contract, and interpret it for itself. (3 How., 476; Lane v. Vick.) If the contract here was in any other form than that of a statute, there could be no question as to the power of the court to interpret it as they saw fit. But this court will regard the substance, and not enforce a rule of decision which was intended to apply to general statutes and rules of property in a case involving only the interpretation of a contract.

Bonds Issued Without the Company's Authority.

The Florida Central Company cannot be affected by the bonds issued in its name if they have been issued without its authority.

As we have seen, these bonds were printed in New York by Littlefield's direction, by his direction they were signed by one Thompson as treasurer, when, in fact, he held no such office, nor, indeed, any office under the company. They were then brought to Washington, where George W. Swepson signed them as president of the company, and then Littlefield took them to Tallahassee. The secretary and treasurer of the company having refused to put the seal of the company to the bonds, the seal was abstracted from the company's office and the bonds were sealed in Littlefield's room.

As we have seen, supra, the bonds issued in the company's name were the result of an agreement between Houstoun and Littlefield that $1,000,000 of bonds should be issued by the company, and pledged with Houstoun as additional security for Littlefield's draft for $163,026.70. The bonds were to purport to be issued under the acts of 1869 and 1870, but without the remotest purpose of using them for the benefit of the J., P. and M. Co., for whose aid alone they were authorized, if authorized at all. (See copy of one of the bonds. Rec., p. 21.)

It is claimed that these bonds were ratified and adopted at a meeting of stockholders held on 2d June, 1870. But as we have seen, supra, this meeting was fraudulent and pretenced—a mere conspiracy, entered into after it was ascertained that other stock-holders were against issuing bonds. It lacked the prime essential of a valid meeting,—there being no notice of any kind to the stockholders who were not present—although the by-laws required a notice of ten days "through the newspapers." It had the sure mark of fraud in that it was held at an unusal place (a lawyers office), and not at the office of the company. (Ang. & Ames on Corp., 496).

At such a meeting no corporate act could be done (Brice's Ultra Vires, 2d Ed., pp. 438, 9, by Green). Indeed, no corporate act was contemplated, for the object of the parties was to authorize an issue of the company's bonds to be used as security for a debt of Littlefield's—an object which could not have been attained if the meeting had been never so well constituted.

As if to stamp with illegality the resolution authorizing the bonds, it directs that the bonds or their proceeds are to be applied according to the terms of the "arrangement" between Houstoun and Littlefield.

But this resolution, void and illegal as it was, was not allowed to wear the appearance of being operative. On the 21st November, 1870, it was rescinded by a resolution of the stockholders, and the bonds were ordered to be destroyed. (Rec., p. 38.)

In the face of this latter resolution and of an injunction restraining the use of these bonds for any purpose, the bonds were delivered by Gamble, the Comptroller, to Coddington and Houstoun, who, as we have seen, immediately exchanged them for State bonds in pretended furtherance of the acts of 1869 and 1870.

Afterwards, to wit, on 13th April, 1871, a resolution of the stockholders was passed, authorizing Houstoun to place said company's bonds in the hands of Hopkins & Co., in furtherance of the said agreement between Houstoun and Littlefield. (Rec., p. 1333.) But this resolution was tainted with the same fraud and illegality as infected the resolution of 2d June, 1870, besides being inoperative on the further ground that the bonds had then become the property of the State in consequence of having been exchanged for State bonds in the preceding January.

Again, these so-called resolutions of the stockholders show upon their face that they were the acts of a part of the stockholders only, in that they except from the application of the bonds or their proceeds "the proportion thereof applicable or apportionable to the stock owned by other parties," a provision which is inexplicable upon the theory that the resolutions were corporate acts, and not merely the acts of Littlefield, "who," as is recited, "is the owner of nearly all the stock in the company."

The Question of Estoppel.

It is to be borne in mind that the State bonds numbered from 3001 to 4000, exchanged for so-called Florida Central bonds, were not for the benefit of the latter company, and were not put on the market by that company. If, then any representations were made, it was by the agents of the J., P. and M. Company, which negotiated the bonds and received the proceeds of them.

But as the J., P. and M. Company got the bonds of the Florida Central Company by fraud, and not by the assent of that company, the latter company cannot be estopped, when it was in ignorance of what had been done.

We bear in mind that the instrument purporting to be a settlement between the Florida Central Company, Littlefield, and others (Rec., pp. 317, 318) is referred to as a representation of the Florida Central as to the validity of the State, but it cannot be so considered, for (1) it was plainly ultra vires; (2) it was for the avowed purpose of paying the North Carolina Commissioners, out of the proceeds of the bonds, Swepson's debt for moneys appropriated by him as president of the Western Division Co.; (3) there is no proof that the Florida Central Company was cognizant of this agreement, and there is every presumption it was not; as Swepson swears that he had no authority for using the name of the Florida Central Co. (Rec. p. 632, and 13.) (4) there is no evidence or intimation in the records that the paper was ever used, exhibited, or referred to in the negotiation of the bonds; on the contrary, there is every reason to presume it was not, as it would certainly have rendered the bonds unsaleable wherever exhibited.

That acquiescence in what had been done cannot be attributed to the Florida Central Co. is very clear, for at the time the fraudulent resolution adopting the Swepson-Thompson bonds was adopted, the property and effects of the Company had been taken possession of by Gen. Littlefield, the President of the J., P. and M. Co., who, acting upon the vulgar idea that absolute power is the incident of ownership of a majority of shares, treated the Florida Central road as part and parcel of the J., P. & M. road (see the deposition of complainant's witness, Cheney, R., p. 837), although, as must be conceded, there had been no consolidation of the two roads. It is manifest that to charge the minority stockholders with notice of what went on during this usurpation of Littlefield would be gross injustice. It was, indeed, impossible for them to get access to facts and proceedings which it was to the interest of Littlefield to withhold from them.

Nor is acquiescence to be presumed from the notoriety of the bond issue, inasmuch as the bonds which were before the public were State bonds, 3,000 of which had been on the market for some time, when the lot of 1,000 State bonds were exchanged for Florida Central bonds.

Added to all this 'tis to be borne in mind that at the time the Company bonds were exchanged for State bonds a resolution directing the cancellation of the Company bonds, and revoking the so-called authority to issue them, was in force.

Furthermore, there is no room here for implying acquiescence, from the receipt of the proceeds of the bonds, as not a dollar of them went into the treasury of the Florida Central Co.

But the fact is that no representations were made as to the lien, farther than what appears on the face of the statutes. Just as in the case of the State bonds, no representations were made as to their validity, further than what is contained in the statutes and the provision of the Constitution of Florida under which the bonds were issued.

But whatever representations were made, they were not acted on. The parties who took these bonds—the Dutch syndicate, including John Collinson,—looked into the matter for themselves, took the opinions of eminent counsel in London and New York, and, upon a full view of the subject, determined to buy. It is absurd to say that these wary people trusted to the representations of the agents of the J., P. and M. Company as to the constitutionality of the statutes or the extent of the statutory lien. They formed their own opinions, and, upon the strength of those opinions, put the bonds on the market. It is not pretended that the agents of the J., P. and M. Co. came in contact with or made any representations to anybody outside the Dutch syndicate. Having relied on themselves and not on others, it is not open to these bondholders to say they were deceived.

Barnard vs. Kellogg, 10 Wall., 384;
Slaughter's Adm'r vs. Gerson, 13 Wall., 379.

But if any binding representations as to the statutory lien, beyond what the statutes themselves contain, were made, they were not made with the assent of the Florida Central Company and cannot affect it.

Subrogation.

If the bondholders have any right to enforce the States' lien on the railroads it must be in virtue of some equity outside the contract.

It is undoubtedly true that equity sometimes gives the creditor the right to enforce a lien given by the debtor to his surety. Viewing the State, then, as between herself and the companies, as their surety only, which would seem to be her true relation, we will now consider whether this equitable principle can be applied to the case in hand.

The principle referred to is that known as the right of subrogation or substitution. The creditor takes the place of the surety as against the debtor. It is the surety's rights against the debtor that the creditor seeks to avail himself of. It is perfectly clear, then, that the creditor can occupy no better position as against the debtor than the surety. Any defense against the surety is equally open against the creditor, whose rights cannot rise higher than their source.

These principles are so familiar that we do not deem it necessary to do more than refer to the Leading cases in Equity (vol. 1, pp. 175–8, ed. 1876,) in support of this position.

The object of the statutory lien was to indemnify the State against her liability on her bonds. But those bonds being void, her right to enforce the lien has never existed, and she has, consequently, no right to which the bondholders can be subrogated.

The State, through Governor Reed, being fully aware of, and a party to, the scheme to misappropriate the State bonds to be exchanged for the bonds of the Florida Central Company, could acquire no right to enforce the company's bonds or the lien to secure them. But for the Governor's having lent himself to Littlefield & Houstoun in the execution of their fraudulent scheme, it could not have been carried out, for a demand of evidence of due corporate authority for issuing the company bonds would have frustrated the attempt.

It was obviously the duty of the State to see to it that the bonds of the companies were authorized, for it is impossible to believe that the statute intended that the companies should be bound by any bonds the Governor might choose to accept, whether sanctioned by the companies or not.

Even if the State bonds were valid and enforceable, it would be still open to the Florida Central Company to urge this defence, inasmuch as that company did not receive any part of the proceeds of the State bonds, or have a hand in negotiating them.

Allowance to Bondholders.

The so-called State bonds were sold by the J., P. & M. Co., at little more than half their nominal value; but the learned court decreed that the holders of these bonds were entitled to their nominal value, with interest. Can this be sustained?

What purported to be a sale of bonds had no such effect, because the bonds were void. If it had been contrariwise and bonds had been sold, undoubtedly the holders of them

ACT OF THE LEGISLATURE OF FLORIDA "TO PERFECT THE PUBLIC WORKS OF THE STATE," APPROVED JUNE 24th, 1869,

AND

AN ACT AMENDING THE SAME, APPROVED JANUARY 28th. 1870.

Under Constitution of 1868.

CHAPTER 1,716—[No. 4.]

An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State.

The People of the State of Florida, Represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. In order to secure the speedy completion, equipping, and the maintenance of a connection by railroad between Jacksonville, on the Atlantic coast, and Pensacola, on the Gulf coast, and Mobile in Alabama, running through the State of Florida, the following named persons, viz: George W. Swepson, Milton S. Littlefield, J. P. Sanderson, J. L. ReQua, William H. Hunt, their associates, successors and assigns, are hereby constituted a body politic and corporate, under the name of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and, as such, shall have and use a common seal, may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, may purchase and hold real and personal property, which may be necessary or useful for the purposes of the road, and sell and convey the same in fee, or for a less estate, or by way of mortgage or otherwise, and may make and enforce for the government of the corporation such by-laws and regulations, not contrary to the Constitution and laws, as they may deem best. The said Company is hereby vested with the like powers, franchises and privileges as were and are conferred by the act to incorporate the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company, and the act to amend An Act entitled An Act to incorporate the Florida. Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company.

bearer, and shall be authenticated by the written or engraved signature of the Treasurer.

Sec. 10. In exchange for the bonds of the State above described, the President of the Company shall deliver to the Governor of the State coupon bonds of the Company, bearing a like rate of interest, payable to the State of Florida, signed by the President, sealed with the corporate seal; coupons payable to State of Florida, authenticated by the written or engraved signature of the President. The bonds shall be of such denominations, not less than one thousand dollars, as the said Company may choose, and principal and interest shall be payable at the same time and place as the aforesaid State bonds.

Sec. 11. To secure the principal and interest of the said Company bonds, the State of Florida shall by this act have a statutory lien, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a mortgage duly registered on the part of the road, on the estimated length of which the State bonds were delivered, and on all the property of the Company, real and personal, appertaining to that part of the line which it may now have, or may hereafter acquire, together with all the rights, franchises and powers thereto belonging, and in case of failure of the Company to pay either principal or interest of its bonds, or any part thereof, for sixty days after the same or any instalment thereof shall become due, it shall be lawful for the Governor to enter upon and take possession of said property and franchises, and sell the same at public auction for cash, on such notice as he may prescribe so as to protect the State.

Sec. 12. For the protection and additional security of the State in the issue of the bonds authorized in the preceding section, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall deposit with the State Treasurer good and sufficient security, to be approved by the Treasurer, for the payment of all interest that may become due on the State bonds issued to them, until the completion of the said railroad, and shall also give to the State, before the issue of said bonds, as additional security for the faithful application of said State bonds, a lien upon the entire railroad from Quincy to Jacksonville, and from Tallahassee to St. Marks, which lien shall be cancelled as the road is completed in sections of twenty miles, to-wit: that when twenty miles of the road west of Quincy shall be completed and in running order, twenty miles of the road east of Quincy shall be released from said lien, and so on in like proportion the said lien shall be released until the completion of the road to the Alabama State line, when said lien shall be fully cancelled and discharged.

Sec. 13. The said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company may at any time before maturity of its bonds discharge its debt to the State, or any part thereof, by payment in national currency, or in bonds of the State; Provided, That this shall not be construed to include indebtedness incurred in aid of the rebellion.

SEC. 14. It shall be lawful for the several companies owning the roads or parts of roads from Quincy to Jacksonville, from Tallahassee to St. Marks, and the branch to Monticello, or either of said companies, by a vote of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest, and with the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest, of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, to consolidate with the latter company so as to become one corporation under its name, on such terms as may be agreed on, and said companies are authorized to settle the terms of consolidation by arbitration or otherwise. And with like consent of the owners of a majority of the stock of each company, without such consolidation, they are authorized to make such arrangements with reference to a common management and schedules as may be agreed on, and after consolidation the said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company shall have the privilege to raise money by way of mortgage or assignment, in trust, of the railroad and property, franchise and effects acquired by such consolidation, so as to secure the lenders. The said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, as to the road or roads, or parts of roads thus acquired, may likewise issue coupon bonds, or other evidences of debt, with coupons or otherwise, bearing such rate of interest, and payable at such time and place, on such terms, as the directors may determine, and to each hereby granted the same privileges as are herein granted to the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company.

SEC. 15. The consolidation of any of the companies with the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, under the provisions of this act, shall not operate to relieve the road or roads or parts of roads united by such consolidation with the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad, from their existing liability to pay any debts or obligations of the company owning the same before consolidation, but the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile RailroadCompany shall not be responsible for any such debts or obligations.

SEC. 16. The Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, the Florida Railroad Company, and all companies organized under An Act entitled An Act to Provide for and Encourage a Liberal System of Internal Improvements in the State, shall be bound to transport freight for the State at half the usual rates, except in time of war, when the charge for freights shall not exceed 25 per cent. over actual cost. In consideration of this liability and of the undertaking by the company to build the road herein contemplated, no railroad competing with this road for passengers or freight, which has its terminus west of Quincy, shall be hereafter built or authorized within this State without the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest of this and all other roilroad companies, any part of whose road is now completed or authorized to be completed, nor without such consent shall any railroad be authorized to cross or connect tracks, or continue such connection with said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad; Provided, That it shall be the duty of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad to connect tracks with any roads which may be made from Apalachicola or St. Andrews Bay to the main line of the road of said Company; Provided, further, This shall not be so construed as to prevent the running of a branch from some point on said road to strike Choctawatchie bay between the mouth of Choctawhatchie river and Boggy Bayou.

SEC. 17. The Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, the Florida Railroad Company, and the Pensacola and Louisville Railroad Company shall have power to own and run steamships and other craft to and from any of the ports of Florida, and may enter or depart with or without pilots, and likewise in any of the navigable waters within the jurisdiction of the State.

SEC. 18. That said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company shall in the construction of said railroad have the right to build and construct all bridges necessary to cross any and all rivers, but in crossing navigable rivers suitable draws shall be constructed to admit the passage of all steamboats and other water-craft usually navigating such rivers, which draws shall always be kept in good order and ready to be opened whenever necessary.

SEC. 19. That the gauge of said railroad shall be uniformly five feet, and the iron rail to be used shall weigh not less than fifty-four pounds per lineal yard, and the said railroad shall in all respects be a first-class road.

SEC. 20. That the said railroad shall be completed from Quincy to the Apalachicola river by the first day of January next, and the whole line within this State shall be completed within three years from the passage of this act.

SEC. 21. That said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company and all railroad companies organized under the act of June 16th, 1855, relating to internal improvements, shall provide first and second-class cars for the accommodation of passengers, for each of which fare shall be charged at proportionate rates, and passengers, without distinction, paying fare for first-class cars, shall be entitled to seats in such cars, and passengers paying fare for second-class cars shall be entitled to seats in second-class cars, and any conductor, superintendent, or agent of any railroad train or any company mentioned in this act, who shall refuse a seat in a first-class car to any person holding a first-class ticket, shall be subject to arrest on the warrant of any judge of any county through which said train may pass, and be liable for a fine of not less than $100, or more than $500.

Sec. 22. That the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company and all other corporations existing under the laws and by the authority of this State, shall by public advertisement in a newspaper printed at the seat of the government, declare the place within the State at which their principal office of business shall be considered as located, and such place shall thereafter be taken to be the residence of such corporation, and all contracts made by authority of such corporation shall be considered as made in the place at which such principal office is located.

Sec. 23. The Governor shall appoint a competent engineer to have general supervision of the various roads provided for under this act, and whose duty it shall be to protect the interests of the State, and see that the work is carried on and conducted in all respects in compliance with law, and shall, from time to time, report to the Governor. The salary of such engineer shall be paid by the companies interested, and shall in no case be chargeable to the State.

Sec. 24. That the corporation of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company shall be and continue for the term of thirty-five years from the date of the passage and approval of this act. This act shall be deemed and held a public act.

Sec. 25. That for the further purpose of completing that part of the line of railroad from Amelia Island on the Atlantic to the waters of Tampa Bay, in South Florida, provided for in the act of January 6, 1855, "To provide and encourage a liberal symtem of Internal Improvements in this State," which remains to be constructed, it is hereby provided that it shall be lawful for any corporate company which may have or acquire the right to construct the same, to execute and deliver to the Governor of the State of Florida, for the time being, a Deed of Trust, conveying to said Governor and his successors in office, all the rights, franchises and privileges possessed by such company, or thereafter to be acquired, and all the tracks, lines, and road-beds upon such road owned by such Company, or thereafter to be acquired, in trust and as security for the ultimate payment to the holder or holders thereof, of the principal and interest of the bonds of such Comyany, amounting to the sum of fourteen thousand dollars per mile upon such Company's road; said bonds to be of the denomination of One Thousand Dollars each, the principal sum payable in thirty years, and bear interest at the rate of seven per cent. per annum, payable semi-annually, and have coupons or interest warrants attached, in accordance thereto; said bonds to be executed by such Company under the seal thereof; and the Governor of the State of Florida for the time being is hereby directed to join with the said company in the deed of trust; and he and his successors in office are hereby charged with the execution of the trust contained therein. Said deed of trust shall be recorded in the proper offices for the record of deeds in the several counties through which said Company's railroad is to pass.

Sec. 26. As soon as any of such companies shall have built and completed ten consecutive miles of their said railroad, the iron to be of a weight not less than 54 pounds to the yard, such Company shall present to the Governor of the State of Florida, for the time being, the bonds of the said Company, such as are prescribed in the preceding section of this act, amounting in the aggregate to fourteen thousand dollars per mile upon the road so prepared, and from time to time thereafter, as often as said company shall have completed any additional five miles, said Company may present to said Governor the bonds of such Company, amounting to fourteen thousand dollars per mile, until the whole of such road is completed; and the said Governar, for the time being, shall make an endorsement on the back of each of said bonds, and shall sign the same as Governor of the State of Florida, which endorsement shall be as follows: "I certify that the within is one of a series of bonds issued by the Company, (naming the Company;) and amounting in the aggregate to the sum of fourteen thousand dollars per mile upon said railroad, secured by deed upon Company's railroad, and all the rights, franchises, and real and personal property of the said Company, executed to the Governor of the State of Florida as Trustee, on the day of A. D.

"The payment of the principal and interest of the within bond, according to the terms thereof, is hereby guaranteed by the State of Florida, in pursuance of, and obedience to, an act of the Legislature of said State, approved the day of A. D. 1869," and the Governor shall deliver the bonds so certified and guaranteed to the President of said Company, or other officer authorized by the Board of Directors of such Company to receive the same, and the payment of the principal and interest of said bonds to the holders thereof, according to the terms thereof, is hereby guaranteed by the State of Florida."

Sec. 27. That in case any Company engaged in building the said unconstructed part of the line between Amelia Island and the waters of Tampa, shall prefer to take bonds of the State instead of endorsed bonds as provided for in the two preceeding sections, the Governor of the State is hereby authorized to substitute State bonds similar in character to those issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in virtue of the provisions of this Act, and in such case the Governor shall demand and receive the company bonds for the same amount in exchange for such State bonds, in the same manner as prescribed in the case of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; Provided, however, That such bonds shall only issue in proportion as sections of the road are completed according to the stipulations of the last preceding section.

SEC. 28. If default shall at any time be made by said company in the payment of principal or interest of the bonds of said company when due, for sixty days after the same may fall due, the said Governor shall take possession of said road, and all the property, real and personal, connected therewith, and all the franchises of said company, and may operate the road for the protection of the State, and for the benefit of the trust, or may sell the same, with all the franchises and property of the company, in accordance with the condition of the deed of trust, and according to law, for the benefit of the said trust.

SEC. 29. That in all cases of seizure and sale of the railroad, property, and franchises of any company by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, under the provisions of the Act to Provide for and Encourage a Liberal System of Internal Improvement, the purchaser or purchasers shall be entitled to do whatever acts may be necessary to enable him or them to exercise and enjoy the franchises granted by the charter of incorporation, under the provisions of the said original charter and the amendments thereto. And in order to prevent doubt, it is hereby declared that all the provisions of the internal improvement act above referred to, and which act constituted a contract between the State and the companies, shall continue to apply to the said corporations so newly organized, in the same manner as the same were applicable to the corporations which existed under the same charter prior to the sale: Provided, That this section only applies to roads built under said Internal Improvement act, and shall not authorize the issue of bonds exceeding fourteen thousand dollars per mile, as provided in section twenty-six, nor any other pecuniary aid by endorsement or otherwise, and that nothing in this section herein contained shall in any wise affect any special act relating to the sales of the Atlantic and Gulf Railroad, or the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad, or the rights acquired under said sales.

SEC. 30. That the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and the Florida Railroad Company, shall, at reasonable times and for a reasonable compensation, draw over their respective roads the passengers, merchandise, and cars of each other, and shall give and receive through way-bills for freight, through tickets for passengers, and through checks for baggage, to and from all points on their respective roads, and shall make no unequal discrimination for or against each other in their joint through passenger and freight rates, or in the division of the same; it being the true intent and meaning of this act to require the said railroad corporations to give as good facilities and as favorable rates, terms and conditions to each other as they enjoy themselves. If the corporations cannot agree upon the stated periods at which their cars shall be so drawn, and the compensation to be paid, the Judge of the Circuit Court of the District in which either of the companies reside, upon the petition of either party and notice to the other, shall appoint three disinterested Commissioners who are experienced in such matters, who, after due notice to and hearing the parties interested, shall determine such rates, terms, and conditions, and fix such periods, having reference to the convenience and interest of the corporations, and the public to be accommodated thereby; and the award of the Commissioners, or a major part of them, shall be binding upon the respective corporations interested therein until the same shall have been revised or altered by Commissioners to be so appointed; but no revision or alteration shall be made within one year after the award, without the consent of the companies.

Sec. 31. All the rights, franchises, privileges, and conditions granted and prescribed in this act are hereby granted and applied to any company that is now or hereafter may be organized for the purpose of building a railroad from the waters of Tampa Bay and Charlotte Harbor, on the Gulf, by the way of Ocala, and ending at Gainesville, on the Florida Railroad, and from Marianna, in the county of Jackson, to the Watars of St. Andrews Bay in West Florida, and also to the waters of Apalachicola bay, in West Florida, and to a point on the Choctawhatchie bay, between the mouth of Choctawhatchie river and Boggy Bayou, and from Palatka and Mellonville, on the St. Johns River, to the nearest practicable point on the line of railway from Tampa Bay or Charlotte Harbor to Gainesville, as far as the same can be constitutionally granted. The said railroad company from Palatka is hereby authorized to connect and be entitled to all the benefits of Section 30.

Sec. 32. That the local rates for freight and passengers on the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and the Florida Railroad, shall not exceed at any time the usual rates for similar distances upon the railroads of the adjacent States.

Sec. 33. That all acts or parts of acts inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed.

Approved June 24th, 1869.

CHAPTER 1,731.—[No. 1.]

An Act to Alter and Amend An Act entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June 24, 1869.

The people of the State of Florida, represented in Senate and Assembly, do enact as follows:

SECTION 1. That Section 4 of An Act entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June 24, 1869, * * * * be altered and amended so as to read as follows:

The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall have the exclusive right for twenty years to build a railroad, with one or more tracks, from the terminus of the late Pensacola and Georgia Railroad, now the Tallahassee Railroad, at Quincy, Gadsden County, to the dividing line between the States of Florida and Alabama, in the direction of the city of Mobile, Alabama, running through the counties of Gadsden, Jackson, Holmes, Washington, Walton, Santa Rosa, and Escambia, crossing the Pensacola and Louisville Railroad, with the privilege of continuing the same to Mobile, and of connecting with any railroad running to Mobile. Provided, however, That in the construction of said railroad the line west of the Chattahoochee river shall not, in any instance, be run, or the road built, nearer than fifteen miles of the north line of the State of Florida.

SEC. 2. That Section 9 of said Act, entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," * * * * be altered and amended so as to read as follows:

In order to aid the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to complete, equip, and maintain its road, and to aid in perfecting one of the Public Works embraced in the internal improvements of the State, the Governor of the State is hereby directed to deliver to the President of the said Company coupon bonds of the State to an amount equal to sixteen thousand dollars per mile for the whole line of road and length of railroad owned by or belonging to said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in exchange for first mortgage bonds of said Railroad Company, of the denomination of one thousand dollars, when the President thereof shall certify upon his oath that the road or parts of road for which he asks for an exchange of bonds is completed, and is in good running order. The said bonds shall be of the denomination of one thousand dollars, signed by the Governor, countersigned by the Treasurer, sealed with the great seal of the State; shall bear eight per cent. interest, payable semi-annually, and shall be payable to bearer. They shall be dated on the first day of January, A. D. 1870, and shall be due thirty years thereafter, and principal and interest shall be payable at such place in the city of New York as the Governor shall designate. The coupons for interest shall be payable to bearer, and shall be authenticated by the written or engraved signature of the Treasurer; Provided, however, That whenever the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall or may determine to pay the interest in gold for or upon their bonds or the bonds designated in the tenth section of An Act entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June 24, 1869, upon giving notice to the Governor of such intention then the State bonds aforesaid and the coupons for interest on said bonds shall be payable in gold, notice of which shall be given by the Governor in some paper published in the City of New York, and at the capital of this State, to be designated by the Governor.

Sec. 3. That section 11 of said act, entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June 24, 1869, * * * * be altered and amended so as to read as follows:

To secure the principal and interest of the said Company bonds, the State of Florida shall, by this act, have a statutory lien, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a first mortgage duly registered, on the part of the road for which the State bonds were delivered, and on all the property of the Company, real and personal, appertaining to that part of the line which it may now have or may hereafter acquire, together with all the rights, franchises and powers thereto belonging, and in case of a failure of the Company to pay either principal or interest of its bonds or any part thereof for twelve months after the same shall become due, it shall be lawful for the Governor to enter upon and take possession of said property and franchises, and sell the same at public auction, after having first given ninety days' notice by public advertisement in at least one newspaper published in each of the following places: the city of New York, in the State of New York, the city of Savannah, in the State of Georgia, and the city of Tallahassee, in the State of Florida, for lawful money of the United States, and for nothing else, except that the State, for its own protection, may become the purchaser at said sale, and may pay on said purchase any evidences of indebtedness the State may hold against said roads, which purchase money, or said evidences of indebtedness, shall be paid on the day of sale into the Treasury of this State, or within ten days thereafter; and all moneys arising from said sale and paid into the Treasury of this State, as heretofore prescribed, shall be promptly and exclusively applied to the payment and satisfaction of the bonds issued by the State of Florida under this act, and in case the holders of said bonds do not present them for redemption within ninety days after said sale, the Treasurer shall invest the same, or any part thereof which may be remaining in his hands, in the securities of the United States, to be held by the State of Florida, as trustee for the bondholders, until said bondholders shall demand the same, upon which demand the Treasurer shall immediately turn over or pay said securities to the bondholders. The purchaser or purchasers of said road shall be by said sale possessed of all the rights, privileges and franchises of said defaulting Company, together with the franchise of use and being a body politic, and the Governor shall, upon the payment of the said purchase money into the Treasury of this State as above provided, immediately cause the purchaser or purchasers of said road at said sale, to be placed in the actual possession, use and enjoyment thereof, and cause all the books, papers, and real and personal property of said company, of every description, together with its franchise of use and being a body politic and corporate, to be turned over to said purchaser or purchasers, and the purchaser or purchasers of said road shall be by said sale possessed of all the rights, privileges and franchises of said defaulting Company, together with the franchise of use and being a body politic and corporate, and may use any new corporate name they see fit, and make and use a new seal upon signifying their action in writing to the Governor, and thereafter may exercise all the rights of a body corporate and privileges thereof, and of said defaulting Company, under said new name, for the term of thirty-five years, to date from the time of purchase as aforesaid. That any such sale shall be ratified by the Legislature before the same shall become effective.

SEC. 4. That the Governor shall, for the purpose of further aiding said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in the speedy construction of its road, deliver to the President of said company coupon bonds of this State, of the same character as those above described in this Act, to the amount of sixteen thousand dollars per mile, upon receiving for and from the President of said company first mortgage bonds of like amount on any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville; Provided, however, The State bonds under this section shall not be exchanged for first mortgage bonds for a greater length than one hundred miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville. Provided, The said railroad company or companies shall not issue first mortgage bonds to a greater amount than sixteen thousand dollars per mile.

SEC. 5. That Section 12 of said act, entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," * * * * be, and the said section 12 aforesaid, is hereby repealed.

SEC. 6. That section 20 of said Act, entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," * * * * be so altered and amended as to read as follows:

That the said railroad shall be completed from Quincy to the Apalachicola river by the first day of July, A. D. 1870, and the whole line within this State shall be completed within five years from the passage of this Act. Otherwise all chartered rights vested in this Act shall be forfeited to the State.

SEC. 7. That all acts and doings of the Corporators, Stockholders and Board of Directors of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, under and by virtue of An Act entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June 24, 1869, in relation to the organization and management of said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, are hereby approved and confirmed and declared to be of full force and effect.

SEC. 8. That the Act published as Chapter 1,716—[No. 4] in pamphlet form, under the direction of the Attorney-General, by authority of law, as the acts and resolutions adopted by the Legislature of Florida at its extra session, beginning June 8, 1869, under the Constitution of A. D. 1868, wherein from page 29 to page 38 inclusive is found and published An Act entitled "An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State," approved June 24, 1869, and printed at Tallahassee, Florida, by Edw. M. Cheney, State Printer, is hereby declared to be an act and law of the State of Florida of which this Act is an alteration and amendment.

SEC. 9. That this Act shall be deemed and held to be a public act, and all laws and parts of laws conflicting with this Act be, and they are hereby, repealed.

Approved January 28, 1870.

No. 669.

On the 22d day of May, 1879, the court below made an order consolidating the above named cases, and thereafter they became and were treated as one suit. [Record, folio 1,172, p. 544.]

THE BRIEF OF THE

JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA & MOBILE RAILROAD COMPANY,

IN SUPPORT OF ITS APPEAL FROM THE JUDGMENT AND DECREE AGAINST IT, IN FAVOR OF THE RESPONDENTS, J. FRED. SCHUTTEE et al.

STATEMENT OF FACTS.

I.

A suit was instituted in the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida, on the 9th day of February, 1877, by the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, against George F. Drew, Governor, &c., &c., the Florida Central Railroad Company, the Jacksonville Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company et al., to compel the cancellation of certain bonds, of the Florida Central Railroad Company, amounting to one million dollars, in the treasury of the State of Florida.

II.

On the 8th day of March, 1877, the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company filed another bill in said court against George F. Drew, Governor, &c., &c., the Jacksonville Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company et al. The object and purpose of this bill, is to establish a first lien to secure certain moneys claimed to be wrongfully appropriated by one George W. Swepson, in the purchase of the property of this appellant, prior to its organization, and prior to its becoming the owner of the same.

III.

1. On the 23d day of May, 1877, J. Fred Schuttee et al. filed their bill, against the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, the Florida Central Railroad Company and the Jacksonville Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company et al. (record, folio 536; page 238), which is the real foundation of this suit, in which they state substantially, that in the year, 1870, the Jacksonville Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company had become the owner of certain railroads, in the State of Florida, which extends from Lake City to Quincy, with a branch to Monticello, and from Tallahassee to St. Marks. Complainant's bill, folios 537 and 539; page 240.

2. That in the year 1870, this appellant obtained from the Governor of Florida four thousand (4,000) bonds, of one thousand dollars ($1,000) each, which were issued in accordance with the law incorporating said company, each obligating the State of Florida to pay one thousand dollars ($1,000) with eight per cent. interest. That this appellant delivered to the Governor of said State, in exchange for said bonds, three thousand (3,000) bonds, executed by it, and one thousand (1,000) bonds executed by the Florida Central Railroad Company, each of which were for the sum of one thousand dollars ($1,000), bearing eight per cent. interest, and were payable to the State of Florida. Record, folio 539; page 240.

3. That Milton S. Littlefield owned a large majority of the stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and that said Littlefield and others, who were managing the railroad of this appellant, after the issuing of the said Florida bonds, took possession of and operated the Florida Central Railroad, and treated it as a part of the line of railroad owned by this appellant. Record, folio 540; page 241.

4. That this appellant sold the bonds it obtained from the State of Florida, to a banker in the City of London, England, at about one hundred and thirty-eight pounds sterling per bond; that the purchaser afterwards resold said bonds in Amsterdam, Holland. Record, folio 541; page 241.

5. That the complainants are owners of a large number of said bonds, which are numbered from 1 to 3,200; that interest from the first day of January, 1873, is due and unpaid on said bonds. Record, folio 542; page 242.

6. That the bill, without directly charging the fact, assumes that the Florida Central Railroad Company became consolidated with the railroad of this appellant prior to the issuing of the bonds of the first named company.

7. That this appellant, through its agent in London, represented to the public, in England, Holland, Germany and France, that the said bonds were veritable and lawful obligations of the State of Florida, that the interest thereon would be punctually paid by said State, that the State by law held a lien on its whole line of railroad, from Jacksonville west, as security for said bonds, and that said road was owned by this appellant. Record, folio 541; page 242.

8. That the Supreme Court of the State of Florida, by its judgment, determined that the acts incorporporating this appellant, the issuance of said bonds by the Governor to it the sale thereof, by this appellant, to the respondents and others, created a trust in favor of the bona fide holders of said bonds. In the prayer the respondents ask the court to decree that they are bona fide holders of the bonds of the State of Florida, and, as such, have a lien upon the railroad of this appellant, and that the Governor of Florida shall execute the power of sale invested in him by said act.

IV.

This appellant, on the 2d day of August, 1877, filed its plea in bar, supported by an answer, to the bill of the respondents, J. Fred. Schutte et al., and by its plea set up that the statutes under which said State bonds were issued were declared by the highest judicial court of the State of Florida to be unconstitutional and void; hence, no lawful contract or agreement was or could be made between this appellant and the State of Florida, and is a bar to so much of the respondent's bill as seeks to enforce a lien upon its property. Record, folio 691; page 337.

V.

In the answer of this appellant, it admitted that it received from the State of Florida three thousand bonds, in exchange for its bonds, but denied that it ever had in its possession one thousand bonds of the Florida Central Railroad Company, or had any right, title or interest in them. Record, folio 695; page 339.

2. That it ever was consolidated with the Florida Central Railroad Company, or that it ever owned a continuous line of railroad from Jacksonville to Quincy, or that it ever conveyed the railroad of the Florida Central Company, by deed of trust or otherwise, Record, folio 696; page 340.

3. It admitted that it sent three thousand bonds to England, and that they were sold, but denied they were sold for eighty-one cents. Record, folio 696; page 340.

VI.

There are many other allegations in the bill of J. Fred. Schuttee et al., and in the answer of this appellant, therein referred to, principally in reference to the numerous other parties to this suit, and not material to the points involved in this cause.

VII.

The respondents, J. Fred. Schuttee et al., on the 1st day of October, 1877, filed a general replication to the answer of this appellant denying the allegations therein. Record, folio 1039; page 512.

VIII.

On the 6th day of April, 1878, an order was entered in this cause adjudging the plea in bar of this appellant to be true, and dismissing respondent's bill as against this appellant. Record, folio 1067; page 513.

2. On the 11th day of June, 1878, without revoking the judgment, dismissing respondent's bill, and while said judgment was still in force, court ordered that "the plea in bar, filed on the part of the defendant the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in this cause, having been set down for argument and called for hearing. It is ordered that the same be continued and reserved to the final hearing of this cause, and that the defendants then have the same benefit as separately heard, argued and determined." Record, folio 1074; page 515.

IX.

The averments in the bill, that there was a consolidation between the Jacksonville Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and the Florida Central Railroad Company, or any contract or agreement in relation thereto, are denied by the answer.

X.

The averments in the bill admitted by the answer are: that this appellant exchanged with the Governor of the State of Florida, three thousand bonds of one thousand ($1,000) dollars each, and received therefor a like number of State bonds, which were sent to London, England, and sold.

2. It is not averred in the bill that the bonds of this appellant are the property of the respondent, or that they are in circulation, or ever were intended for circulation; on the contrary, it is avered in the answer, that the bonds are in the treasury of the State, and are made payable to the State of Florida.

XI.

On the 20th day of May, 1879, on motion of complainants, their bill was dismissed as to all the defendants therein, except the Florida Central Railroad Company, the Jacksonville Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and George F. Drew, Governor of the State of Florida, Walter Gwynn, treasurer of said State, Hugh A. Corley, commissioner of lands and emigration, and George T. Rainey, Attorney-General, which officers are trustees of the internal improvement funds and herein sued as such. Record, folio 1079; page 516.

XII.

On the 31st day of May, 1879, this cause came on for hearing, and the court rendered a judgment and decree in favor of the trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund for the sum of four hundred and sixty-three thousand one hundred and seventy-five dollars and thirty-seven cents, as a first lien on the railroad and property of this appellant, and also rendered a judgment and decree in favor of the respondents, J. Fred. Schuttee et al., for two millions seven hundred and fifty-one thousand dollars, principal, and one million six hundred and fifty-five thousand dollars and sixty cents, interest, as a second lien on all the railroad property and franchise of this appellant, and ordered the same to be sold.

XIII.

The questions involved in this appeal are exclusively between this appellant and J. Fred. Schuttee et al.; hence the bills and answers in the other cases are not further referred to herein.

XIV.

The legislature of the State of Florida, on the 24th day of June, 1869, passed an act, the general scope and purpose of which was to secure a line of railroad from Jacksonville, Florida, to Mobile, Alabama. Said act incorporated this appellannt, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. This corporation shortly thereafter became the owner of the line of completed railroad from Lake City to Quincy, with a branch from Tallahasse to St. Marks, and one from the main line to Monticello.

2. The number of miles of completed road thus acquired was one hundred and fifty-five. Then and now the Florida Central Railroad Company owned a railroad extending from Lake City to Jacksonville, a distance of sixty miles. Since its organization the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company have extended its road westward from Quincy twenty-one miles towards Mobile.

XV.

The legislature of Florida on the 28th day of January, 1870, amended the ninth and eleventh section of said "act." The act of 1869, as amended by the act of 1870, is as follows:

Section 1. In order to secure the speedy completion equipping and the maintenance of a connection by railroad between Jacksonville, on the Atlantic coast, and Pensacola, on the Gulf coast, and Mobile, in Alabama, running through the State of Florida, the following named persons, viz.: Geo. W. Swepson, Milton S. Littlefield, J. P. Sanderson, J. L. Requa, William H. Hunt, their associates, successors and assigns, are hereby constituted a body politic and corporate, under the name of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and, as such, shall have and use a common seal, may sue and be sued, plead and be impleaded, may purchase and hold real and personal property, which may be necessary or useful for the purpose of the road, and sell and convey the same in fee, or for a less estate, or by way of mortgage or otherwise, and may make and enforce for the government of the corporation, such by-laws and regulations not contrary to the constitution and laws, as they may deem best. The said company is hereby vested with the like powers, franchises and privileges as were and are conferred by the act to incorporate the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company, and the act to amend an act entitled an act to incorporate the Florida, Atlantic and Gulf Central Railroad Company. Act 1869.

Section 2. The said corporators, associates, successors and assigns shall have power to fix the capital stock of the company, the shares of which shall be one hundred ($100) dollars each, and shall designate the times and places of holding the meetings of the company. The first meeting shall be called within thirty days after this act goes in operation by notice signed by either of the following named corporators, viz.: George W. Swepson, Milton S. Littlefield, J. P. Sanderson. The said corporators, their associates, successors and assigns, shall prescribe the number of directors of this company and their term of service, and likewise the term of office, compensation and duties of the president and all other officers. A majority of the corporators shall be a quorum to do business. Act 1869.

Section 3. The directors, or a majority of them, shall have power to transact all business of the company, unless otherwise ordered by the stockholders, may declare dividends of profits, if any, and in general, make and enforce all such rules and regulations, consistent with the by-laws of the company, as they may deem fit. Act 1869.

Section 4. "The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall have the exclusive right for twenty years to build a railroad with one or more tracks, from the terminus of the late Pensacola and Georgia Railroad, now the Tallahassee Railroad, at Quincy, Gadsden county, to the dividing line between the States of Florida and Alabama, in the direction of the city of Mobile, Alabama, running through the counties of Gadsden, Jackson, Holmes, Washington, Walton, Santa Rosa and Escambia, crossing the Pensacola and Louisville Railroad, with the privilege of continuing the same to Mobile, and of connecting with any railroad running to Mobile; provided, however, that in the construction of said railroad the line west of the Chattahoochee river shall not, in any instance be run, or the road built nearer than fifteen miles of the north line of the State of Florida." Act 1870.

Section 5. The said company shall have the right and privilege to construct said railroad for the transportation of passengers, produce, goods, wares and merchandise, and all other articles, whatsoever, through any land in the State of Florida; and the right of way is hereby granted for the same, two hundred feet in width, with the right to take stone, timber, earth and material from any land belonging to the State to be used in the construction, maintenance and repairs of said railroad. Act 1869.

Section 6. The said company is hereby authorized to contract for and receive conveyances of land, timber and other materials which may be required by the directors in the construction, operation, maintenance and repairs of said railroad; and when the owner and company cannot agree upon the price, or when the owner is an infant, non-resident, or non compos mentis, then it shall be lawful for the said company to apply to the sheriff of the county in which said lands or property are located, who shall summon a jury of seven disinterested freeholders, a majority of whom shall be authorized to assess the damages and return their reward or judgment to the first Circuit Court of the county in which the said land or other property may be located, which shall be entered by the clerk as the judgment of the court, and execution may issue thereon for the amount of said judgment and cost. Either party dissatisfied with the assessment may appeal to the next term of the Circuit Court on giving security for the prosecution of the appeal. Before proceeding to the discharge of the duties herein required, the jurors summoned as aforesaid shall take an oath or affirmation to be administered by the sheriff, that they will well and truly inquire in, and to the best of their judgment, assess the damages accruing to the owner or owners of said land or materials by means of the proposed construction; provided, that said work and the progress of construction of said road shall in nowise be delayed on account of the proceedings had or to be had as aforesaid. Act 1869.

Section 7. The property so assessed and paid for by said railroad company in conformity with the provision of this act, and all donations from any source for the same, shall forever afterwards belong to and become the property of said railroad company, its successors in fee simple. Subscriptions to the capital stock of said railroad company may be made in lands, labor and material upon such terms as may be agreed upon by the directors and the owner or owners thereof. Act 1869.

Section 8. The directors of said company shall have the right to demand and receive such prices and sums for fare and the transportation of freight, produce and merchandise as may be authorized and fixed by the by-laws of said company. Act 1869.

Section 2. "In order to aid the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad to complete, equip and maintain its road, and to aid in perfecting one of the public works embraced in the internal improvements of the State, the Governor of the State is hereby directed to deliver to the president of the said company coupon bonds of the State to an amount equal to sixteen thousand dollars per mile for the whole line of road and length of railroad owned by or belonging to said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in exchange for first mortgage bonds of said railroad company of the denomination of one thousand dollars, when the president thereby shall certify upon his oath that the road or parts of road for which he asks for an exchange of bonds is completed, and is in good running order. The bonds shall be of the denomination of one thousand dollars, signed by the Governor, countersigned by the treasurer, sealed with the great seal of the State; shall bear eight per cent. interest, payable semi-annually and shall be payable to bearer. They shall be dated on the first day of January, A. D., 1870, and shall be due thirty years thereafter; principal and interest shall be payable at such place in the City of New York as the Governor shall designate. The coupons for interest shall be payable to bearer, and shall be authenticated by the written or engraved signature of the treasurer; provided, however, that whenever the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall or may determine to pay the interest in gold for or upon their bonds or the bonds designated in the tenth section of an act entitled "An act to perfect the public works of the State," approved June 24, 1869, upon giving notice to the Governor of such intention, then the State bonds aforesaid and the coupons for interest on said bonds shall be payable in gold, notice of which shall be given by the Governor in some paper published in the City of New York, and at the capital of this State, to be designated by the Governor." Act 1870.

Section 10. In exchange for the bonds of the State above described, the president of the company shall deliver to the Governor of the State coupon bonds of the company, bearing a like rate of interest, payable to the State of Florida, signed by the president, sealed with the corporate seal; coupons payable to the State of Florida, authenticated by the written or engraved signature of the president. The bonds shall be of such denomination, not less than one thousand dollars ($1,000), as the said company may choose, and principal and interest shall be payable at the same time and place as the aforesaid State bonds. Act 1869.

Section 3. "To secure the principal and interest of the said company's bonds, the State of Florida shall by this act have a statutory lien, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a first mortgage duly registered on the part of the road for which the State bonds were delivered, and on all the property of the company, real and personal appertaining to that part of the line which it may now have, or may hereafter acquire, together with all the rights, franchises, and powers thereto belonging, and in case of failure of the company to pay either principal or interest of its bonds or any part thereof for twelve months after the same shall become due, it shall be lawful for the Governor to enter upon and take possession of said property and franchises, and sell the same at public auction, after having first given ninety days notice by public advertisement in at least one newspaper published in each of the following places: The City of New York, in the State of New York; the City of Savannah, in the State of Georgia; and the City of Tallahassee, in the State of Florida, for lawful money of the United States, and for nothing else except that the State for its own protection may become the purchaser at said sale, and may pay on said purchase any evidence of indebtedness the State may hold against said roads, which purchase money or said evidence of indebtedness shall be paid on the day of sale into the treasury of the State, or within ten days thereafter; and all money arising from said sale and paid into the treasury of this State as heretofore prescribed, shall be promptly and exclusively applied to the payment and satisfaction of the bonds. Act 1870.

Section 13. The said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company may, at any time before maturity of its bonds, discharge its debts to the State or any part thereof, by payment in national currency, or in bonds of the State; provided, that this shall not be construed to include indebtedness incurred in aid of the rebellion. Act 1869.

Section 14. It shall be lawful for the several companies owning the roads or parts of road from Quincy to Jacksonville, from Tallahassee to St. Marks, and the branch to Monticello, or either of said companies, by a vote of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest, and with the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest of the Jacksonville, Pensacala and Mobile Railroad Company, to consolidate with the latter company so as to become one corporation, under its name, on such terms as may be agreed on, and said companies are authorized to settle the terms of consolidation by arbitration or otherwise. And with like consent of the owners of a majority of the stock of each company, without such consolidation, they are authorized to make such arrangements with reference to a common management and schedules as may be agreed on, and after consolidation the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall have the privilege to raise money by way of mortgage or assignment in trust of the railroad and property, franchise and effects acquired by such consolidation, so as to secure the lenders. The said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, as to the road or roads, or parts of roads thus acquired, may likewise issue coupon bonds or other evidence of debt with coupons or otherwise, bearing such rate of interest and payable at such time and place, and on such terms as the directors may determine, and to each are hereby granted the same privileges as are herein granted to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. Act 1869.

Section 15. The consolidation of any of the companies with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, under the provisions of this act, shall not operate to relieve the road or roads or parts of roads united by such consolidations with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, from their existing liability to pay any debts or obligations of the company owning the same before consolidation, but the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall not be responsible for any such debts or obligations. Act 1869.

Section 16. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, the Florida Central Railroad Company, and all companies organized under an act entitled an act to provide for and encourage a liberal system of internal improvements in the State, shall be bound to transport freight for the State at half the usual rates, except in time of war, when the charge for freights shall not exceed twenty-five per cent. over actual cost. In consideration of this liability and of the undertaking by the company to build the road herein contemplated, no railroad competing with this road for passengers or freight, which has its terminus west of Quincy, shall be hereafter built or authorized within this State without the consent of the owners of the majority of the stock in interest of this and all other railroad companies, any part of whose road is now completed or authorized to be completed, nor without such consent shall any railroad be authorized to cross or connect tracks, or continue such connections with said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad; provided that it shall be the duty of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad to connect tracks with any roads, which may be made from Apalachicola or St. Andrew's Bay to the main line of the road of said company; provided further, this shall not be so construed as to prevent the running of a branch from some point on said road to strike Choctawhatchie Bay between the mouth of Choctawhatchie River and Boggy Bayou. Act 1869.

Section 17. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, the Florida Central Railroad Company and the Pensacola and Louisville Railroad Company shall have power to own and run steamships and other craft to and from any of the ports of Florida, and may enter or depart, with or without pilots, and likewise in any of the navigable waters within the jurisdiction of the State. Act 1869.

Section 18. That said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall, in the construction of said railroad, have the right to build and construct all bridges necessary to cross any and all rivers, but in crossing navigable rivers, suitable draws shall be constructed to admit the passage of all steamboats and other water craft usually navigating such rivers, which draws shall always be kept in good order and ready to be opened whenever necessary. Act 1869.

Section 19. That the gauge of said railroad shall be uniformly five feet, and the iron rail to be used shall weigh not less than fifty-four pounds per lineal yard, and the said railroad shall in all respect be a first-class road. Act 1869.

Section 20. "That the said railroad shall be completed from Quincy to the Apalachicola River by the first day of January next, and the whole line within the State shall be completed within three years from the passage of this act," be so altered and amended as to read as follows: "That the said railroad shall be completed from Quincy to the Apalachicola River by the first day of July, A. D. 1870, and the whole line within this State shall be completed within five years from the passage of this act, otherwise all chartered rights vested in this act shall be forfeited to the State." Act 1870.

Section 21. That said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and all railroad companies organized, under the act of June 16, 1855, relating to internal improvement, shall provide first and second-class cars for the accommodation of passengers, for each of which fare shall be charged at proportionate rates, and passengers, without distinction, paying fare for first-class cars, shall be entitled to seats in said cars, and passengers paying fare for second-class cars shall be entitled to seats in second-class cars, and any conductor, superintendent, or agent of any railroad train of any company mentioned in this act, who shall refuse a seat in a first-class car to any person holding a first-class ticket, shall be subject to arrest on the warrant of any judge of any county through which said train may pass, and be liable for a fine of not less than $100 or more than $500. Act 1869.

Section 22. That the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and all other corporations existing under the laws and by authority of this State, shall, by public advertisement in a newspaper printed at the seat of government, declare the place within the State at which their principal office of business shall be considered as located, and such place shall thereafter be taken to be the residence of such corporation, and all contracts made by authority of such corporation shall be considered as made in the place at which such principal office is located. Act 1869.

Section 23. The Governor shall appoint a competent engineer to have general supervision of the various roads provided for under this act, and whose duty it shall be to protect the interest of the State, and see that the work is carried on and conducted in all respects in compliance with law, and shall, from time to time, report to the Governor. The salary of such engineers shall be paid by the companies interested, and shall in no case be chargeable to the State. Act 1869.

Section 24. That the corporation of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company shall be and continue for the term of thirty-five years from the date of the passage and approval of this act. This act shall be deemed and held a public act. Act 1869. Section 4, act 1870.

"Section 4: That the Governor shall, for the purpose of further aiding said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in the speedy construction of its road, deliver to the president of said company coupon bonds of this State of the same character as those above described in this act, to the amount of sixteen thousand dollars per mile, upon receiving for and from the president of said company, first mortgage bonds of like amount on any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville; provided, however, the State bonds under this section shall not be exchanged for first mortgage bonds for a greater length than one hundred miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville; provided, the said railroad company or companies shall not issue first mortgage bonds to a greater amount than sixteen thousand dollars per mile." Act 1870.

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS.

As, and for, an assignment of errors, this appellant says:

First. The court erred in rendering said judgment and decree.

Second. There is no sufficient cause of action stated, nor is there any equity, in respondents' bill.

Third. If respondents are entitled to recover at all, it is at law, for money had and received, and not in this action.

Fourth. The bonds of appellant in question were void for lack of power on the part of this appellant to issue the same.

Fifth. That said bonds are void, because there was no consideration for the same.

Sixth. The respondents are not parties to the bonds of this appellant, have no interest therein and no right to maintain a suit thereon.

Seventh. The bonds of this appellant in question, have never been in the hands, or under the control of the respondents; were made payable to the State of Florida alone to indemnify it, and for no other purpose. They are not negotiable. Have never been in circulation, were never intended for circulation, and are now in the possession of the treasurer of the State of Florida.

Eighth. The respondents being the holders of the State bonds only, had no lien on the property of this appellant for the payment of the same or any part thereof.

Ninth. The judgment and decree of the court is not in response to the prayer of respondent's bill.

Tenth. There is no proof that the respondents are bona fide holders of the State bonds.

Eleventh. The bonds of the State being void, no suit can be maintained based thereon.

Twelfth. There is no averment in respondent's bill, that they paid anything for the State bonds held by them, nor is there any evidence tending to prove that they did pay anything for the same, therefore the court erred in rendering a decree for the amount thereof.

Thirteenth. The statute of 1870 did not create any trust in respect to the bonds or property of this appellant.

Fourteenth. The respondent's bill was dismissed as to this appellant prior to the trial by the court below, therefore no suit was pending at the time of the trial.

POINTS.

Firstly. No decree should have been rendered against this appellant in favor of the respondent herein, for the reason there is no cause of action stated in respondent's bill against this appellant.

The relief must be agreeable to the case made by the bill. English vs. Foxall, 2 Peters, 612.

A court of equity cannot act upon a case which is not fairly made by the bill and answer. Walden vs. Bodly, 14 Peters, 164; Hobson vs. McArthur, 16 Peters, 195.

The court cannot decree to any plaintiff, whatever he may prove, more than he claims in his bill. Nothing further is in issue between the parties. Sims vs. Guthrie, 9 Cranch, 25; Watts vs. Waddle, 6 Peters, 402.

A party must recover in chancery according to the case made by his bill or not at all. Bailey vs. Ryder, 10 N. Y., p. 370; Cowenhoven vs. City of Brooklyn, 38 Barb., 9; Warner vs. Wittaker, 6 Mich., 136.

Secondly. The State bonds being unconstitutional and void, there was no consideration for the bonds of the company delivered to the State. As the act conferred no authority to issue its bonds, the appellant had no power to issue the bonds of the company in question; hence, the State could maintain no action thereon. They are payable to the State alone, are not negotiable, have in no manner been transferred to the respondent; hence, they cannot maintain a suit thereon.

Thirdly. The purchase of the State bonds by the respondents did not, in any manner, constitute a legal or equitable assignment or transfer of this appellant's bonds.

Fourthly. The holders of the State bonds are no party to the original transaction between this appellant and the State. If this appellant is liable at all in this suit, it is on its own bonds, and not on the bonds of the State, which are void for any purpose.

Jones on R. R. Securities, sec. 24, 390, 394; Stewart vs. James River & Kno. C. Co., 24; Gratt. (Va.) 294; 92 U. S. 299; Otis et al. vs. Cullum, Receiver, 92 U. S. 449; Chamberlaine, vs. St. Paul etc. R. R. Co., 92 U. S. 306; Thomas vs. City of Richmond, 12 Wallace, 349.

Fifthly. If this appellant became indebted to John Collinson for the money it obtained from him by the sale of the void State bonds, as money had and received, that indebtedness still exists, and the present decree in favor of the respondents will be no bar to his recovery. That indebtedness to Collinson was not transferred to these respondents by their purchase of the bonds in Holland.

Sixthly. The State bonds, of themselves, create no liability, and therefore their transfer created none. If any holder of the bonds obtained money, by transferring the same, he is liable to the party from whom he obtained the money for the amount thereof and interest thereon.

Seventhly. The bonds of the appellant are payable to the State of Florida, are not negotiable, and if they were, they have not been transferred to the respondents. Hence in this suit they cannot maintain an action thereon.

Jones on R. R. Securities, sec. 323; Evertson vs. National Bank of Newport, 66 N. Y. 14; Meyers vs. York & Cumberland R. R. Co., 43 Me., 232; Jackson vs. York & Cumberland R. R. Co., 48 Me., 147; Crosby vs. New London R. R.

Jones on R. R. Securities, sec. 201; Athenæum Life Assurance Society vs. Pooley, 3 De G., 294; Story on Con., sec. 427, pp. 526–7–8.

Eighthly. If this appellant's bonds had been transferred, not being negotiable, they are subject to all defenses that could be set up if the State had sued—such as the want of consideration.

Ninthly The obtaining money by the sale or delivery of void bonds leaves the transaction just as if no bonds had been sold or delivered. That is, the law raised by implication, an agreement to repay the money with interest.

Tenthly. The bonds in question were issued without consideration, and are, therefore, nudum pactum and void. They were made payable to the State of Florida alone, are not negotiable, were never intended for circulation, have never been put in circulation; are now in the possession of the treasurer of the State of Florida, put there for the sole purpose of indemnifying the said State, and if the complainants have any interest in said bonds, they hold said interest subject to all legal and equitable defense that could be set up against the party first receiving them.

Eleventhly. The bonds of the State having been declared unconstitutional and void, have no legal existence, therefore there are no such persons as bondholders of the said State bonds; but, even if the respondents herein are to be regarded as the holders of the bonds of the State of Florida, they have no interest, as such, in the bonds of this appellant, either as party or privy thereto, and cannot maintain a suit thereon.

"When the parts of a statute are so connected and dependant as to conditions, considerations or compensations for each other as to warrant the belief that they were intended as a whole, and if all cannot be carried into effect, the legislature would not have passed the residue; the whole are void. 2 Gray, 84; 5 Gray, 97; 13 Wisconsin, 398; 14 Michigan, 276; Township East Oakland vs. Skinner, 94 U. S., 258; Town South Ottawa vs. Perkins, 94 U. S., 269.

Twelfthly. The respondents are conclusively presumed to know the constitution and laws of Florida, and to understand what powers were and what were not conferred upon this appellant, and to know that the constitution prohibited the issuing of such State bonds.

Silliman vs. F. O. & C. R. R. Co., 27 Gratt. Va., 119-130, 7 Wall., 69; Cooley Con. Limitation, 195; Swift vs. Williamsburg, 24 Barb., 427, 32 Cal., 241.

"Every man is chargeable with notice of that which the law requires him to know." McClure vs. Township of Oxford, 94 U. S., 432.

Thirteenthly. If this appellant is liable to any body, on account of the sale of the bonds of the State of Florida, which were exchanged for its bonds, such liability can only be for the amount of money obtained for said bonds, and that only to the person who first purchased the same.

Jones on R. R. Securities, sec. 218.

Fourteenthly. This court is not bound in this case by the decision of the Supreme Court of Florida, for the following reasons: 1. The statute which it attempts to construe is plain, explicit and unambiguous. 2. The statute purports to create a contract, to which the State itself is a party. 3. A contract created by a statute must be interpreted by this court, as a contract and not as a statute, and the decision of the State court in respect thereto are not conclusive upon this court. 4. If a State court puts a construction on an ambiguous statute of the State, so as to overrule all established principles of general or commercial law, such decision is not obligatory on this court.

"This court will follow, as of obligation, the decisions of the State court only on local questions peculiar to themselves or on questions respecting the constructions of their own constitution and laws." Olcott vs. The Supervisor, 16 Wallace, 678.

This court will not "follow any adjudication to such an extent as to make a sacrifice of truth, justice and law." Gelpcke vs. City of Dubuke, 1 Wallace, 206.

Fifteenthly. The statute of 1870 did not create a trust in respect to the bonds and property of this appellant.

Sixteenthly. The respondents' bill was dismissed as to this appellant, prior to the trial by the court below; therefore, no suit was pending at the time of the trial.

Clearwater vs. Meredeth, 1 Wall, p. 43.

ARGUMENT.

I.

The bill of the respondents in whose favor the decree in this case was rendered, must be considered the foundation of this action; no relief will be granted in pursuance thereof, not warranted by the facts therein stated and the prayer thereof.

II.

It is not averred in the respondent's bill that this appellant had power to issue the bonds in question under any circumstance, nor is it alleged that the legislature of the State of Florida, ever conferred such power.

III.

The acts of the legislature above quoted authorized the Governor of Florida to exchange the bonds of the State, for the bonds of this appellant, under the circumstances, in the manner, and for the amount, therein provided.

The bonds which the State was authorized to receive were to be made payable to the State of Florida. They were to be of the denomination of one thousand dollars, and to bear seven per cent. interest, payable semi-an-annually, to be dated on the first day of July, 1869, due thirty years thereafter, and were to be secured by a statutory mortgage "on the part of the road, for which the State bonds were delivered, and on all the property of the company, real and personal, appertaining to that part of the line which it may now have, or may hereafter acquire, together with all the rights, franchises and powers thereto belonging."

IV.

It is not averred in the bill that this appellant ever received any consideration for said bonds, except the State bonds, and the proof clearly shows that it did not receive any; they are, therefore, as between it and the State—the payee therein—void, for the want of consideration.

The State bonds given in consideration therefor having been declared by the highest judicial tribunal in the State unconstitutional and void, did not and could not constitute any consideration therefor.

They are payable to the State alone, without words of negotiability, were never intended for circulation, never have been in circulation, and are now in the treasury of the State, the original party thereto, and are subject to such legal and equitable defences as this appellant may have.

A party to whom non-negotiable paper was given has no power, by an endorsement or assignment thereof, to change its character so as to make it negotiable; and especially is this true if there is a stipulation that it shall not be negotiable. In this case the spirit and purpose of the act requires that the bonds, to be delivered to the State in exchange for its bonds, shall be payable to the State alone, and remain in the treasury of the State. They were placed in the State treasury, and still remain there. The payee has never transfeared, or attempted to transfer, the same by assignment or otherwise. Can the State, by issuing bonds payable to bearer, change the character of the bonds which it received, and which were not negotiable—so as to make them negotiable?

If, then, the respondents have no title to or interest in the bonds of this appellant, and have no control over them, how can they claim a lien for their payment? A lien does not create a debt. It is a mere incident to an existing debt. There being no indebtedness from this appellant to the respondents, there can be no lien in their favor whether a lien exists for the payment of the bonds or not. If there is a lien, it must be in favor of the party who has a right to enforce the collection of the bonds, and not in favor of the party who has no such right.

V.

The bonds of the State, having been declared unconstitutional and void, have no legal existence; therefore there are no such persons as holders of the said State bonds.

A statute may be unconstitutional in part and constitutional as to the rest, but this is never true, when it creates an obligation upon one party which is void by the constitution, in consideration of an obligation upon another party; in all such cases, if it is void as to one, it is void as to the other.

In this case the only consideration and inducement for the delivery of railroad bonds to the State, were the State bonds. They being void, the railroad bonds were void. It is nonsense to speak of the railroad bonds being a binding obligation, when it is conceded that the State bonds, for which they were given, are void.

Even if the respondents herein are to be regarded as the holders of the bonds of the State of Florida, they have no interest as such, in the bonds of this appellant, either as party or privy thereto, and cannot maintain a suit thereon. The bonds which were issued by the State, and payable to bearer, this appellant was no party to; was not the payee of any of them; never endorsed or guaranteed any of them; never received any money from the respondents on account thereof; and there never was any agreement or understanding that it should receive any from them, and is therefore a totals tranger to said bondholders, and especially is this true, as the bonds of this appellant are non-negotiable.

Its obligations, being non-negotiable, could have misled no one, and has reserved to it the right to set up this defense against anybody. There can be no innocent holder of State bonds as to it.

The duty of ascertaining the powers ot the legislature of Florida, under the constitution of that State, and the character of the obligations issued by the State, devolved upon every body who dealt in its bonds, and they are conclusively presumed to know the constitution and laws of that State.

This appellant made all necessary provisions, in its bonds, to protect itself, while the holders of the State bonds did not take the necessary precaution to protect themselves. If they relied on the bonds of this appellant, as additional security, they should have examined them; hence if there is any neglect, it was the result of their own acts and not of this appellant.

They are presumed to have known that the constitution of Florida prohibited the issuance of the bonds, and therefore, the transaction, of which the bonds constituted a chief part, was unconstitutional how then can they claim to hold this appellant liable in this action?

Under and by virtue of section three of the act of 1870, it is provided that "all moneys arising from said sale and paid into the treasury of this State, as hereinbefore prescribed, shall be promptly and exclusively applied to the payment and satisfaction of the bonds issued by the State of Florida under this act; and in case the holders of said bonds do not present them for redemption within ninety days, after said sale, the treasurer shall invest the same or any part thereof, which may be remaining in his hands in the securities of the United States to be held by the State of Florida as trustee for the bondholders."

This section has reference only to the sale of the property of this appellant, and pledges the State to hold in trust the proceeds of such sale, and does not create a trust or lien upon the property of this appellant.

It is preposterous to claim that the trust therein created has reference to the property of the corporation covered by the mortgage. It is most clearly confined to the proceeds of the sale of the property under the mortgage after default and only to a part of the proceeds; that is, that part which has not been called for by the creditors of the State within ninety days after said sale, and then only after the same has been invested in the securities of the United States. The trust is explicitly limited to such securities, after the investment has been made, and not before.

If this appellant is liable to anybody on account of the sale of the bonds of the State of Florida, which were exchanged for its bonds, such liability can only be for the amount of money obtained for said bonds, and only to the person who first purchased the same.

If the bonds of this appellant, and the circumstances connected with their issue, created any liabity on its part, such liability could not exceed the amount of money received, and exists only in favor of the party from whom it received the money. Such liability does not and could not arise out of the State bonds, to which this appellant is no party, or out of anything else the State did or could have done; it could only come from its own bonds and the sale thereof; they never were sold, and certainly the respondents did not purchase and have no interest in any of them.

VI.

The Supreme Court of Florida, in the case of Holland vs. State of Florida et al., 15th Florida, page 455, and State of Florida et al. vs. the Florida Central Railroad Company et al., and trustees I. I. Fund vs. Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company et al., 16th Florida, page 708, assume to construe a statute. It will be seen, by reference to the act in question, that this is a mere pretence. The provisions of the act, which that court attempts to construe, is as definite, certain and unambiguous, as it could be written. The language is this: "And all moneys arising from said sale and paid into the treasury of this State, as hereinbefore prescribed, shall be promptly and exclusively applied to the payment and satisfaction of the bonds issued by the State of Florida, under this act. and in case the holders of said bonds do not present them for redemption, within ninety days, the treasurer shall invest the same, or any part thereof, which may be remaining in his hands, in the securities of the United States, to be held by the State of Florida, as trustee for the bondholders."

This is simply and plainly a pledge made by the State to its creditors, which does not, in any manner, effect this appellant.

The trust thus created is clearly confined to the money arising from the sale of the property, after the same has been paid into the State Treasury. It has first to become the money of the State, after it has collected the same from its debtors. It certainly cannot, by any kind of twisting or distortion of language, be asserted that the mortgage to the State was transferred to the holders of the State bonds, or that they acquired any interest in the mortgage or the property on which it rested.

The plain and explicit language of this provision of the statute is in harmony with all the other provision of the acts, while the perversion, made by the Florida court, nullifies several of its essential provisions.

In the section quoted from, it is provided, "That the State, for its own protection, may become the purchaser at said sale, and may pay on said purchase any evidence of indebtedness the State may hold against said road." Under this provision the State may pay the purchase money in the non-negotiable bonds of the company, now held by the treasurer, or in any other indebtedness of the company it might thereafter acquire.

The thirteenth section of the act of 1879, is as follows: "The said Jacksonville Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company may, at any time before maturity of its bonds, discharge its debt to the State, or any part thereof, by payment in national currency, or in bonds of the State; provided, that this shall not be construed to include indebtedness incurred in the aid of the rebellion." Here is direct authority to pay the State in its own bonds, which are very cheap. It may be even in these unconstitutional bonds. Can it be said that after the company has paid its liabilities to the State, in State bonds, it and its property is still liable to the holders of these State bonds? The Florida Court admits that if the State bonds were legal and binding on the State, as they were intended to be, the holders of them would have no claim whatever against this appellant or its property. Having declared them to be unconstitutional and void, it attempts to make a contract between the holders of the State bonds and this appellant, and to transfer the lien or mortgage created in favor of the State, and for its securities, alone, to said bondholders.

Who, but a Florida Court, would repudiate the solemn pledge of the public faith of a State, of which it constited one of the departments of government, and at the same time enforce the obligation of a corporation, given in consideration therefor. It cannot be possible that this court is bound by a mere purvertion of a plain act of the legislature of a State, because the highest court of that State sees proper to call such purvertion a construction of such act. The expressed motive of the Florida Court, for this perversion, is its desire to hold this appellant to the obligations of common honesty.

In this respect, that court, as well as the court from which this appeal was taken, have mistaken the facts. This appellant never received a cent of money from the respondent herein, or ever had any transaction with them. It is not averred in the bill, nor is there any proof, that they ever paid anything to any person for the State bonds held by them. The truth is that they became possessed of the bonds at a mere nominal figure, after the State had repudiated them.

This appellant sold the State bonds, to which it is not a party, they being payable to bearer alone, in London, to one John Collinson, and never had anything to do with them afterwards.

These bonds, of themselves, certainly do not create a liability, on the part of the company, in favor of any person. It was not a party to them as payee or otherwise, it did not guarantee or indorse them. Its liabilities, if any exist, are on its own bonds payable to the State, and they are without consideration, and hence, void.

The only money this appellant ever received, for or on account of the State bonds, was from said Collinson. It may be liable to him for the amount thereof as money had and received. This it is ready and willing to pay to him, and would have done so long since, if the State, after repudiating its bonds, had not have seized its road and other property and deprived it of its use.

If respondents have any claim, on account of bonds held by them, it must be against the parties from whom they obtained them.

There are a large number of stockholders in, as well as unsecured creditors of, these corporations, whose rights are to be considered here, and the property of these corporations should be applied to their use, and not be sequestered in favor of respondents, who are strangers to the corporations, never gave them credit or trusted them, but who relied on the State alone.

If these respondents recover in this case it will be no bar to the recovery by Collinson, nor will it protect him from a recovery by those to whom he sold the bonds.

If the Florida court was as anxious to hold parties to the principles of moral honesty, as it professed to be, it should have required the State to redeem its solemn pledges of public faith. By so doing it would have secured the construction of the contemplated road, saved hundreds of its citizens from bankruptcy, and given to the holders of its bonds full protection. In fact, the ten years of litigation through which these roads have passed, the disaster to these bondholders, to the creditors of this appellant and to its stockholders, all resulted from the shameful act of the State in disregarding its solemn obligations.

IN UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

The Florida Central Railroad Company Appellant,
vs.
J. Fred Schutle, et. al.
No. 667.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, Appellant,
vs.
J. Fred Schutle, et. al.
No. 668.

The Western, North Carolina Railroad Company, Appellant,
vs.
George F. Drew, Governor, The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, et. al.
No. 669.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE NO. 667.

The above stated cases were heard in the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Florida. The appellant, the Florida Central Railroad Company, was defendant in the cases wherein the Western North Carolina Railroad Company was complainant, and in the case where J. Fred Schutle, et. al. were complainants, and filed answers and cross bills in both cases.

The questions involved in the case of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, were the claim of the complainant to hold and control certain stock in the Florida Central Company purchased by M. S. Littlefied; and also the right of the Governor of the State of Florida to seize and sell said railroad on behalf of, or as a trustee for, the holders of certain bonds of the State of Florida, alleged to have been exchanged for the bonds of said company, also the question of the rights of said bondholders raised by the cross bill filed in said cause, to recover against the Florida Central Company.

The questions involved in the case, wherein J. Fred Schutle, et. al., were complainants, were the liability of the appellant company upon bonds alleged to have been issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; whether any such bonds had actually been issued and delivered for that purpose, and exchanged for the bonds of the State of Florida, whether any of said State bonds, claimed to have been so exchanged, were ever put in circulation and sold by said company, and whether such bonds, if any, constituted a statutory lien upon the company's railroad.

At the final hearing the said causes were consolidated, by order of court, and heard together.

The decree rendered by the court was adverse to the Florida Central Company, wherein among other things it was decreed as follows: "That the complainants have a first lien upon the railroad running from Lake City to Jacksonville, in said State, and all property rights and franchises thereto appertaining, to the amount of all said bonds of the said State of Florida, exchanged for the bonds of the said Florida Central Railroad Company, numbered 3001, and upwards, held and owned by them the said complainants, and all interest now matured and to mature thereon. The amount of said last numbered bonds held and owned by complainants is one hundred and ninety-seven thousand dollars, and the amount of interest, now matured thereon, is one-hundred and eighteen thousand five hundred and fifty dollars and twenty cents."

Said decree further ordered that the Florida Central Railroad be sold by the special masters, therein appointed by the court, at public sale after ninety days notice of the time and place of such sale.

The appellant, the Florida Central Railroad Company, feeling agrieved by said decree, so far as it effects its interests, alleges the same to be erroneous.

Because said decree gives complainants a first lien upon the Florida Central Railroad for bonds that were executed and exchanged without authority of law.

Because the testimony does not show that said bonds were executed and delivered by the Florida Central Company for the purpose of aiding the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, or that any such contract was ever made.

Because the State bonds mentioned in said decree were decided to be unconstitutional and void by the Supreme Court of the State of Florida, and was no consideration for the company bonds.

Because the testimony shows that before any of said bonds, numbered above 3,000, went into the possession of the alleged holders, they had notice that they were illegally issued.

Because the evidence shows that none of said State bonds, numbered above 3,000, were sold by any person or agent authorized to sell the same, and the alleged holders have failed to account for their possession.

Because said decree gives a first lien on the railroad for the full amount of all said void bonds claimed to be in possession of the complainants, whereas the decree—if the complainants were entitled to any—should have been rendered against the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, for whatever equitable claim such holders might have for the purchase money they may have paid for the void State bonds, which would not constitute a statutory lien on the railroad.

Because the court did not give the Florida Central Company the relief to which it was entitled under the Cross Bill.

THE ARGUMENT.

Bonds Issued and Exchanged Without Authority.

The bonds executed by the Florida Central Railroad Company, and in possession of the State of Florida, and upon which the decree against said company, in this case, was based, were not issued by authority of law.

It is claimed that such statutory authority was given by the Act of the Legislature of Florida, entitled An Act to Perfect the Public Works of the State, approved June 24, 1869, and amended January 28, 1870. The act was passed for the benefit of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, to aid in the building of said road from Quincy to Mobile.

The Ninth Section of the act, as amended by the Second Section of the Act of 1870, provides: "In order to aid the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company to complete, equip and maintain its road, and to aid in the perfecting one of the public works embraced in the internal improvements of the State, the Governor of the State is hereby directed to deliver to the President of the said company coupon bonds of the State to an amount equal to sixteen thousand dollars per mile for the whole line of road and length of railroad owned by or belonging to said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in exchange for first mortgage bonds of said railroad company, of the denomination of one thousand dollars, when the President thereof shall certify, upon his oath, that the road or parts of the road for which he asks for an exchange of bonds is completed and in good running order." (Laws of Florida, A. D. 1870, Chap. 1,731.)

The Tenth Section of the Act provides: "In exchange for the bonds of the State above described, the President of the Company shall deliver to the Governor of the State coupon bonds of the Company, bearing a like rate of interest, payable to the State of Florida, signed by the President, sealed with the corporate seal, coupons payable to State of Florida, authenticated by the written or engraved signature of the President. The bonds shall be of such denominations, not less than one thousand dollars, as the said Company may choose, and principal and interest shall be payable at the same time and place as the aforesaid State bonds." (Laws of Florida A. D. 1869, chap. 1,716.)

The Eleventh Section of the act, as amended by the Third Section of the Act of 1870, provides as follows: "To secure the principal and interest of the said company bonds, the state of Florida, shall, by this act, have a statutory lien, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a first mortgage duly registered, on the part of the road for which the State bonds were delivered, and on all the property of the company, real and personal, appertaining to that part of the line which it may now have or may hereafter acquire, together with all the rights, franchises and powers thereto belonging, and in case of failure of the company to pay either principal or interest of its bonds, or any part thereof, for twelve months after same shall become due, it shall be lawful for the Governor to enter upon and take possession of said property and franchises, and sell the same at public auction, after having first given ninety days' notice by public advertisement in at least one newspaper published in each of the following places: the city of New York in the state of New York, the city of Savannah in the state of Georgia, and the city of Tallahassee in the state of Florida, for lawful money of the United States, and for nothing else, except that the State, for its own protection, may become the purchaser at said sale, and may pay on said purchase any evidences of indebtedness the State may hold against said roads, which purchase money, or said evidence of indebtedness, shall be paid on the day of sale into the Treasury of this State, or within ten days thereafter; and all moneys arising from said sale and paid into the Treasury of this State, as heretofore proscribed, shall be promptly and exclusively applied to the payment and satisfaction of the bonds issued by the state of Florida under this act, and in case the holders of said bonds do not present them for redemption within ninety days after said sale, the Treasurer shall invest the same, or any part thereof which may be remaining in his hands, in the securities of the United States, to be held by the state of Florida, as trustee for the bondholders, until said bondholders shall demand the same, upon which demand the Treasurer shall immediately turn over and pay said securities to the bondholders." (Laws of Florida, A. D. 1870, chap. 1,731.)

So far the act applies exclusively to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Company, and it is not claimed that the privileges and powers granted extend to any other company.

At the time said acts were passed and approved, no part of the railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville was owned by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company. The line of road between Quincy and Lake City, and the extensions to Monticello and St. Marks, belonged to the Tallahassee Railroad Company, and the line between Lake City and Jacksonville to the Florida Central.

It is claimed that the powers granted to the Jackson-Pensacola and Mobile Company, by the sections of the act above quoted, were made applicable, by the Fourth Section of the amended act, to the Tallahassee and the Florida Central Companies. Section 4. "That the Governor shall, for the purpose of further aiding said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in the speedy construction of its road, deliver to the President of said company, coupon bonds of this State of the same character as the above described in this act, to the amount of sixteen thousand dollars per mile; upon receiving for and from the President of said company first mortgage bonds of like amount on any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville; provided however, The state bonds under this section shall not be exchanged for first mortgage bonds for a greater length than one hundred miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville. Provided, the said railroad company or companies shall not issue first mortgage bonds to a greater amount than sixteen thousand dollars per mile." (Laws of Florida, A. D. 1870, chap. 1, 731.)

It appears from the Record, (pp. 1,329-30,) that the Tallahassee Railroad Company was consolidated with the Jacksonville Pensacola and Mobile Company on the 25th day of May, 1870, under authority granted by the Fourteenth Section of the said act of 1869.

The proviso of the said Fourth Section limited the power thus granted. It provides that "The State bonds under this Section shall not be exchanged for a greater length than one hundred miles of any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville." This seems to be a plain limitation of power, and yet, by the ingenuity of lawyers, it has been construed to be no limitation. That "by necessary implication," the Statute did not limit the issue to a part or portion of the line, (not to exceed one hundred miles), but conferred the power to issue for the whole line.

The Florida Central is not mentioned in said section as owning any part or portion of the line between Quincy and Jacksonville, nor is it named in any part of the Act, as having authority to exchange its bonds for State bonds, and there is nothing to show that this limitation in the proviso was intended, to be applied to or include the said Company.

Mr. Justice Bradley who rendered the decree in this case, in his able opinion, did not give his own construction to those sections, nor examine into the powers granted to the Florida Central Company under said act, but accepted the construction given by the Supreme Court of the State of Florida, in the case of the State of Florida vs. The Florida Central Railroad Company, et al., in XV. Fla. Reports, pp. 704–5, and gave that construction his assent. Doubtless, on account of the great respect which the United States Courts have for the decisions of the State Courts in the construction of State Statutes, and from the fact that he was allowed so little time to examine this case, with its enormous record, therefore, we, with greater confidence, ask this court to review that opinion, which was a mere obiter dictum, and ought not to be considered a rule of decision in this court. No decree was rendered against the Florida Central Railroad Company upon that opinion. The bill filed against it was dismissed without prejudice.

There was no decision in the case upon the constitutionality of the act, and no rule of property prescribed. The opinion was merely a voluntary construction of a statutory contrast, involving general principles of law applicable to the construction of statutes. The opinion was based upon facts before that court, which appear to be materially different from the facts presented in this record. That case having been dismissed without prejudice to the interests of the complainants, ought not to be used to prejudice the rights of the defendant.

In the case of Gelpecke vs. The City of Dubuque, 1 Wal., 206, this court held that "it is a settled rule of this court in such cases to follow the decisions of the State courts, but there have been heretofore and doubtless there will be hereafter many exceptional cases. We will never immolate truth, justice and law, because a State tribunal has erected the altar and decreed the sacrifice."

Mr. Justice Wescott, who delivered the opinion in the Supreme Court of Florida, in the case above stated, says: "It is plain and clear from the letter of this act, as amended, that unless the exchange provided for under this section is an exchange of bonds on a line of road other than that owned by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, that it is mere surplusage, unless, unnecessary and of no effect.

The Ninth Section of the Act, as amended, directed the Governor to exchange bonds with the President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company for the whole line of road and length of railroad owned by or belonging to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. Now the exchange thus authorized with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company embraced, as is shown by the pleadings, the line of road extending from Quincy to Lake City; and the other part of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville, to wit, from Lake City to Jacksonville was all of this line of road that was left upon which an exchange could be had. This was all owned by the Florida Central Railroad Company, and hence the section was of no effect, unless it applied to this company. This construction not only makes the section of no effect, but such construction is inconsistent with a proper view of the other part of the section itself. The first proviso, limiting the amount of bonds to be issued under this section, shows that it was to be an additional issue to that authorized by the Ninth Section; and the second proviso, using the words 'company or companies' in the connection in which they occur, construed with reference to the fact that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company had been given, under another section, full authority to exchange for its whole line of road, shows clearly that some company, other than it, was granted authority under this section. This being so, the only company to which said section could apply was the Florida Central Railroad Company. It is not necessary that the statute should use in express terms the name of the Florida Central Railroad Company in conferring this power to issue first Mortgage bonds. It is enough, if, by necessary implication, it has the power." XV Fla. R., pp. 704–5.

The able judge who delivered this opinion, notwithstanding his usual care in preparing his opinions, seems to have been misled as to the actual facts and circumstances existing at the time the act which he was construing was passed, and his opinion in the case before him, "as shown by the pleadings" therein, may have been correct, but the pleadings and the testimony in this case, present a different state of facts.

It is shown by the testimony in this case, that, at the time this act and the amendments were passed, the railroad between Quincy and Lake City was not the property of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, as assumed in said opinion, and could not have been so contemplated by the Legislature. The statute must be construed according to its spirit and intent, viewed in the light of the facts known to exist at the time, and not in the light of subsequent events.

The Tallahassee Railroad Company, then owning the road between Quincy and Lake City, was not consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company until May 25, 1870, (Record, p. 1,330), four months after the amended act was passed, which clearly shows that there was a line of railroad, at that time, existing in legislative contemplation, other than the one owned by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company and the Florida Central Company, to which the fourth section of the act could apply, and did apply, and to which reference was made in the second proviso in the use of the words "company or companies."

Whatever power may have been granted to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, under the Ninth Section, or amendments thereto, to issue bonds "for the whole line of road and length of railroad owned by or belonging to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company," could not change the clear and express language of the Fourth Section, which authorized the "roads between Quincy and Jacksonville" to issue bonds to the extent of one hundred miles "for the purpose of further aiding the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company." This was an aid given outside of and in addition to what was authorized in Section Ninth, and from a line of road not belonging to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company. The section specifically described the line of road from which such aid was to be given, and by the use of the word "further," shows conclusively that the Legislature understood that the road between Quincy and Jacksonville was not owned by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company. It appears, from an examination of the said opinion, that the whole reasoning of the learned Judge was based upon the mistake as to the ownership of that part of the railroad line between Quincy and Lake City, as doubtless "appeared from the pleadings" in the case before him. It is in this way he reaches the conclusion that "the only company to which the Fourth Section could apply, was the Florida Central," and "although no express authority was given to said Company to issue first mortgage bonds," that "by necessary implication it has that power." A most extraordinary power. The power to issue bonds upon its road for a greater amount than the value of its property, and in aid of a company in which it owned no stock, and in which it had no direct interest.

In the same opinion, (p. 707,) Judge Westcott says: "The section authorizing the Governor to enter upon, take possession of and sell the property to which the lien attaches, provides that the State, at such sale, 'for its own protection,' may become the purchaser at such sale, and may pay on said purchase any evidences of indebtedness the State may hold against said roads. If it was to have this lien only as to one road, the use of the term roads, instead of road, can not be explained. If it has as to two, it is all consistent, and if there is more than one, the other must be the Florida Central Railroad, as it and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, are the only two to which the term can apply, as they are the only roads which are authorized, under the Act as altered and amended, to issue 'first mortgage bonds.'"

This reasoning is based upon the same fallacy above suggested—namely, that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company owned the road between Quincy and Lake City, when the act was passed, and that the act must be so construed.

It will be seen in the opinion above quoted, that the learned judge attaches great importance to the "use of the term roads, instead of road," when he says it "cannot be explained" unless there is a lien on more than one road, and that "if there is more than one, the other must be the Florida Central, as it and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile are the only two to which the term (roads) can apply." Here again the court ignores the existence of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, to which the "term could apply," and which at the time had an existence independent of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company.

It is true that the Fourth Section alludes to an additional issue to that authorized by the Ninth Section, but it expressly describes the line upon which the issue is to be made, and as expressly limits the power to a part of that entire line "not to exceed one hundred miles." The proviso designates the particular line of railroad upon which the limitation is to operate, or be applied, without reference to the company to which it belonged, and the restriction would apply, even if the whole line had belonged to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company. This is a limitation in favor of the State, as to the number of State bonds to be issued, and must be strictly construed in its favor. Potter's Dwarris, page 255.

It was not in the power of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, to defeat that limitation by consolidation with the Tallahassee Company, by claiming, under the Ninth Section, bonds to be exchanged for all the road from Quincy to Lake City, and under the proviso to the Fourth Section, claim bonds for the balance of the line, thus by a trick, defeat the express intention of the Legislature, and secure bonds to be issued for the whole line from Quincy to Jacksonville, a distance of about two hundred miles, in the face of the proviso which forbids the exchange for more than one hundred miles of the line.

To sustain the reasoning in favor of this construction, would be to demonstrate that a "part or portion" may be equal to or greater than the whole. Notwithstanding the Tallahassee road was consolidated May 25, 1870, it still remained a part of the line of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville, and was not thereby taken from under the terms of the proviso. Bonds were issued on that part of the line, and exchanged with the State to a greater length than one hundred miles, whereby it became unlawful to issue and exchange bonds on any other part of the line specified in the proviso.

The limitation in the proviso could not have been passed by the Legislature with any reference to the Florida Central Railroad. It appears from the Record, (p. 3,) that the Florida Central Railroad is only sixty miles long, a fact which was certainly known to the Legislature which passed the act. The court will not presume that a Legislative body would stultify itself by limiting a road sixty miles long to the issue of bonds for a part or portion of its line, not to exceed one hundred miles.

If the Florida Central is the road to which the Fourth Section, by "necessary implication," must apply, the first proviso would have been unnecessary and absurd. The second proviso would have been a sufficient limitation.

The only construction consistent with the letter and reason of the act, viewed in connection with known existing facts, is that the State agreed to give its bonds in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in exchange for the bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company at the rate of sixteen thousand dollars per mile on so much of that company's line (all being west of Quincy,) as might be completed and in good running order at the time the application for the exchange should be made, and as a further aid to said company, to exchange State bonds at the same rate, with the company or companies owning the completed line of road between Quincy and Jacksonville, fixing a limit to the issue and exchange of State bonds on said completed line, not to exceed one hundred miles. Such construction of the act is easy and reasonable, founded on the plain and simple words of the act, and not arrived at by forced construction or "implication."

No Contract and no Delivery of Bond.

Should the court find that the power to issue and exchange bonds was conferred by the act, it is denied that the bonds of this company were issued and delivered to the President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company for the aid of said company under said act.

Mr. Justice Bradley, in his opinion delivered in this case, (page 572,) says: "Of course it would be for the Florida Central Railroad Company to prescribe the conditions or consideration on or for which it would issue such bonds."

There is no evidence to be found in the record in this case, which shows any contract between the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company and the Florida Central Company, for the issue or exchange of its bonds. There is no evidence of any consideration agreed upon, paid, offered or promised to be paid by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company. (Barnett's Testimony, page 767; Reed's Testimony, page .)

Even the presumption of such contract is rebutted by the fact that the resolutions of the Florida Central Company, adopted June 2, 1870, authorizing the issue of said bonds of the company, did not allude to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, but, on the contrary, it was then resolved "that said bonds shall be placed in the hands of Edward Houston, for the purposes agreed upon by an arrangement between him and Milton S. Littlefield." (Record, page 1,335.) Also the contract made between Houston and Littlefield, pages 24 and 25.

It is true that certain bonds signed by Sweepson and Thompson, prior to that time, were adopted, but the resolution adopting them provided for a use of its bonds inconsistent with the recital in said bonds, which raises the presumption that the company did not know that such recital was made in the Sweepson bonds, and every act of the company confirm such presumption. Foster, one of the directors of the Florida Central, who was present at the meeting, which adopted the Sweepson bonds, states, in answer to question ten, "none of the said bonds were present or exhibited at said meeting." Record, page 592.)

The arrangement entered into by Houston with Littlefield, (found on pages 25, 307 and 8, of record), was not as President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, but as a stockholder of the Florida Central Company, and was an agreement to pay some stock account between the parties, and some liabilities of the company. The balance to be paid to the President of the Florida Central. The delivery of the bonds was to Houston, and not to Littlefield, and no authority was given to Houston to deliver the bonds to the President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, or to exchange them with the State. The mere execution of the bonds fixed no liability upon the company.

The resolution of the meeting of the Florida Central Company, April 13, 1871, (p. 1,333), which authorized Houston to place its bonds, issued under resolution of June 2, 1870, "in the hands of S. W. Hopkins & Co., for the purposes mentioned in said resolution," further shows that the company had no purpose in 1871, of exchanging its bonds with the State, or of aiding the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company.

(Prior to said resolution, on the 11th of January, 1871, Houston had delivered these bonds to Coddington, to be held in trust for him and others, creditors of said company, the moneys to be derived from sale of bonds (not exchanged) by S. W. Hopkins & Co., of New York, to be paid according to said arrangement. "The remainder of the proceeds to be disposed of as directed by the parties interested," (page 26.)

These bonds were to be delivered to the house of S. W. Hopkins & Co., of New York, for sale—not to the London branch. The contract, between Houston and Littlefield, relating to the disposition of the bonds, was signed as above stated by Littlefield, as stockholder in the Florida Central Company. The contract between Houston and Coddington was approved by Littlefield, as President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, (page 27), an official admission on his part that he did not claim that said bonds were to be used in aid of his company, and also that the party in possesion had the right to use them for other purposes. Littlefield, in his testimony, denies that any verbal or written contract was entered into between the Florida Central and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Companies, whereby the Florida Central Company agreed to issue one thousand, or any other number of its bonds, to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, or either of them (page 735, question 43.)

Coddington was not the agent of the Florida Central Company, and there is no evidence that he was either the agent of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company or of S. W. Hopkins & Co.—he was merely the agent and trustee of Houston. Houston, being merely a special agent, could not constitute Coddington agent for the Florida Central Company, or enable him to bind that company by any of his acts. Story on Contracts, Section 284.

It appears, from the Record, that Coddington, after he had procured the company's bonds, in utter disregard of the authority he had received from Houston, as well as the terms of his own receipt, and without any authority from the company, by fraud and collusion managed to get State bonds from the Governor, in exchange for the Florida Central Company's bonds.

Governor Reed, in his testimony, admits that he made the exchange of State bonds with Coddington (page 582, answer to question 7), and that it was for the purpose of raising money to pay Edward Houston and others, and that "the balance of the proceeds was to be placed to the credit of the State of Florida," for the purpose of paying a claim held by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, for the purchase of the Tallahassee Railroad. (Question 9, page 582.)

In answer to question 13, Governor Reed says: "At the time of the exchange I had heard of objections being made on the part of some of the members of the Florida Central Railroad Company;" "I may have had official notice; I don't know; I can't recollect," (p. 583).

This testimony shows that there was some improper collusion with the Governor, with which the Florida Central had no connection. The exchange was made not only without its authority, but, so far as appears from the testimony, against its wishes, and was understood by both the Governor and Coddington to be for purposes not authorized by statute, but in direct violation thereof.

The company, after its bonds were executed, not only declined to make any contract for delivery, in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, but expressed dissatisfaction at the issue. At a meeting of the directors of the Florida Central, November 21, 1870, "Mr. Papy presented the following report:" "The committee, finding that the bonds signed by G. W. Sweepson, President, and H. H. Thompson, as Treasurer, are in such form that they cannot be used to carry out the intention of their issue when they were adopted, report the following resolution:

"'Resolved, That the resolution adopting the bonds to be issued by the company, signed by George W. Sweepson, President, and H. H. Thompson, at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the second day of June, 1870, be and the same are hereby rescinded, and that the said bonds be destroyed.'

"On motion, the report was received and adopted." (Record, page 38.)

The preamble and resolution of November 21, 1870, show that the Sweepson and Thompson bonds were adopted without knowledge of the form and recitals thereof. This can be accounted for by the fact that the bonds were prepared and signed without authority from the company, and in the city of New York, under very peculiar circumstances. Thompson's Testimony, page 658.)

The resolution of the company, adopted April 13, 1871, did not recognize the form or character of said bonds. It mentioned nothing about a proposed exchange with the State, but authorized Houston to place the company bonds, issued under resolution of June 2, 1870, in the hands of Hopkins & Co. for sale, but not exchange.

Littlefield, President of the company, in answer to question 43 (page 735), says: "No such bonds were ever issued by the Florida Central Railroad Company for the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. The latter company never received any bonds of any description from the Florida Central Railroad Company."

The record shows no contract, either express or implied, wherein the Florida Central agreed to deliver its bonds to aid the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company; it shows no delivery of its bonds, by agent or otherwise, to the President or any other other officer of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company; shows no authority given by said company to any one to exchange bonds with the State, or to sell State bonds after the exchange was fraudulently made by others.

THE DOCTRINE OF ESTOPPEL DOES NOT APPLY.

Admitting that the bonds were authorized to be issued by the Florida Central Railroad Company, and it appearing that they were not exchanged for State bonds, nor delivered to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company by the Florida Central Company, or its authorized agent, the company would not be estopped from denying its liability under such exchange fraudulently made.

The doctrine of estoppels will not be binding on a corporation, unless its bonds are in the hands of bona fide holders for value without notice of defects and irregularities in their issue. Such defects are available against a holder who has paid nothing, or who had notice of them: 2 Daniel on Negotiable Instruments, page 460.

The bonds of the Florida Central Company are not negotiable. They are made payable to the State of Florida, and not to bearer, (Record, page 21).

These bonds never went into the hands of "innocent purchasers without notice," and the principles applied to negotiable paper do not apply to them. They went into the hands of the State through a collusion between the Governor and Coddington, upon an arrangement between them, not authorized by law, namely, for the payment of about three hundred thousand dollars to certain individuals named in the agreement, and the balance to be placed to "the credit of the State" to secure "the balance due the Internal Improvement Fund," and not to be applied to aid in the building of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, in the manner provided by the statute. (Reed's Testimony answers to questions 7, 9 and 19, pages 582, 3 and 5.)

The tendency of estoppels is to prevent the investigation of truth, and should not be favored, or extended by construction, unless "certain to every intent." 11 Wend., 118; Jones vs. Sasser, 1 Dev. & Bat., 452.

PREVIOUS NOTICE TO PURCHASERS.

Railroad and State bonds are regarded in law as commercial paper, except that persons dealing with the agent, knowing that he acts only by a delegated power, must, at their peril, see that the paper on which they rely comes within the power under which the agent acts. And this applies to every person who takes the paper afterwards. The purchasers of bonds must exercise reasonable caution, and whoever takes them, must see that there was authority to issue them. This principle applies even to innocent holders. Marsh vs. Fulton County, page 683; 10 Wallace.

The purchasers of these State bonds had notice that they were not free from taint and suspicion.

The impeachment of Governor Reed, in which it was charged that "he did, without authority of law, fraudulently conspire to issue the State bonds to the amount of one million dollars. (Record, page 850.)

The reply of Governor Reed to the dispatch of Holje Boissevain, Amsterdam, December, 1870, namely, "Bonds recently recalled by the company. No provision will therefore be made for interest." (Record, pages 127 and 843.)

The letter of E. M. L'Engle, as counsel of the Florida Central, to said Boissevain, February 8, 1871, warning him and all interested, that the taint of fraud attached to said bonds. (Record, pages 582–3–4.)

T. W. Brevard's letter to the State's and Corporation's Committee in London, (page 395).

E. M. L'Engle, in his answer to the bill of Schutte, et al., charges that the purchasers of the State bonds had notice that they were illegal before they purchased (page 395), which answer was adopted in the answer of the Florida Central Company, so far as consistent, (page 409).

The resolution of the Board of Directors of the Florida Central Company, November 21, 1870, rescinding the company's bonds, and ordering them to be destroyed, (pages 855 and 106).

All of these facts and circumstances were made known to the public in Holland long before any of the bonds of the State over No. 3,000 could possibly have reached that country, inasmuch as they were held in the Chancery Court in England as late as August 29, 1872 (Record, page 28).

Barnett testifies that in the summer of 1872 he "saw papers, published in Hollend, attacking the validity of the State bonds." (Record, page 768.)

Frank Collins, complainants' witness, in his answer to the third fifth and sixth cross interrogatories, admits that the telegram to Boissevain from Governor Reed, and the letters of L'Engle and Brevard, were all received in Holland, and copies shown to his firm in London. (See Testimony, page 1,193.)

If the purchasers did not have actual notice they had constructive notice, and "ought to have acquired" knowledge of the facts, and in not obtaining it they were guilty of "gross and culpable negligence." Wilson vs. Wall, 6 Wallace, 91.

The Cross Bill of the Florida Central Company, to which said bondholders were defendants, charges "that Harrison Reed, Governor, unlawfully and fraudulently issued one million dollars of the bonds of the State for one million dollars of the bonds of this company (the Florida Central Company), so illegally issued, and so revoked and ordered to be destroyed, and delivered said State bonds to the said T. B. Coddington, not as agent, or in any way representing or pretending to represent the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, but as agent and trustee of Houston" (page 131); and further charges that "the defendants had notice of the illegality of said bonds, and of the fraudulent means used to secure them," (page 131).

Service in said cross-suit was duly perfected on the defendants therein, and a decree pro confesso, entered on proof of service, April 7, 1879, (page 544.)

The defendants, the bondholders, stand on the record as confessing the charges of the illegal and fraudulent issue of the bonds, as well as due notice of the illegality and fraud charged.

See order making parties (page 541), order of service (page 542), order of publication and proof of same (page 543), served upon Governor Drew, Walter Gwynn, treasurer, and Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, (page 262.)

In the case of Masterdon vs. Howard, 18 Wallace, 99, this court sustained a final decree entered upon an order taking a bill in equity as confessed, when the allegations of the bill were found sufficient to sustain the decree.

The charges made in said cross bill should be taken by the court as true; and if so, the decree rendered against the Florida Central Company ought not to be sustained.

This railroad company is not responsible for any false representations made in Holland, as to its liability, and its interests ought not to be prejudiced thereby.

If any false representations were made, they were not made by any officer or agent of this company, but by the Dutch syndicate, who purchased these bonds from Collinson, and who were speculating in them. The bondholders who, like Dr. Wertheim, were "so stupid as to invest their money" in the bonds, ought to hold Messrs. Boissevain and Milders responsible, who purchased the bonds at the low price of fifty cents on the dollar (Testimony of Chase, Question 41, Record, page 702), and, by concealment of their true character, and by misrepresentation, sold them at an immense profit.

No Bonds Numbered Over 3,000 Sold.

It is conceded that if the State bonds, for which the Florida Central Company's bonds are claimed to have been exchanged, have not been sold by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, or its agents, to some innocent purchaser without notice, then the company is not liable for payment of the bonds. Does the testimony show that any of the said bonds have been sold?

Three millions of the State bonds were delivered by the State to the President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, in exchange for the bonds of said company, on or about the day of 1870, and one million were delivered to F. B. Coddington in exchange for the Florida Central Company's bonds, about the eleventh day of January, 1871. (Pages 1,189 and 1,200.)

Hopkins testifies that 2,800 of said bonds were sold and delivered to Collinson at various periods between November 19, 1870, and July 21, 1871. (Page 1,204.)

The Bonds numbered above 3,000 were in the Chancery Court in England until August, 1872. (Record, page 24.)

Coddington, complainant's witness, says in his deposition: "This chancery suit in England was brought by Collinson vs. Collins and Hopkins, to compel them to deliver under a contract previously made, these 1,000 bonds and two hundred more of like bonds of previous issue," (Record, page 1,132,) showing that the 1,000 bonds carried to London by him, were held in litigation in August, 1872, upon which he claimed a lien for $4,000 for his success in procuring and taking them to England.

Hopkins, in answer to the ninth interrogatory, says: "The 2,800 bonds so sold and delivered to Collinson were the only bonds sold by our firm. (Question 9, page 1,200, and Collin's testimony, question 9, page 1,189.)

Thus it appears that the agents of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, in London, did not sell to Collinson, or any other person, any of the bonds, numbered above three thousand, exchanged for the Florida Central Company's bonds, and that suit was brought to compel them to do so. Collinson testifies that he did not receive any bonds from Calvin L. Chase. (Answer to tenth interrogatory, page 1,131.)

C. L. Chase was trustee for the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company. He went to Europe in 1872, and became party to a consent decree, in the English Court of Chancery, dated August 2, 1872, relating to the said 1,200 State bonds then not disposed of by Hopkins & Co. (page 28), and, on the 29th day of August, entered into an agreement with Collinson for the sale of said State bonds to Collinson, according to the terms of said decree. (Pages 706 and 724, and questions 63 and page 64, 707.)

Chase states, in his testimony, that "the terms of said decree and agreement were never complied with," and that the State bonds numbered above 2,800 were never disposed of otherwise, within his knowlegde. (Page 706.)

S. M. Chapman, former clerk of S. W. Hopkins & Co., testifies that said firm sold two thousand eight hundred of the bonds of the State of Florida, and that they did not sell any more than 2,800. (Page 684.)

The testimony above quoted shows that neither S. W Hopkins & Co., nor C. L. Chase, the only agents of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company in Europe, sold any of the State bonds numbered above 2,800, and that no bonds numbered over 3,000 were sold or disposed of under the terms of the English Decree in Ckancery, or otherwise.

If they were sold, who sold them? What did they sell for? To whom were they sold, and what disposition was made of the purchase money? The record fails to give any satisfactory answer to these questions. Possession may be urged as prima facie evidence of ownership, but the proof shows that the bonds so held were never put upon the market, or sold by any person authorized to sell them, which raises the presumption that such bonds, if held as claimed, are improperly and fraudulently in the possession of the claimants, and throws upon them the burden of proving their right of ownership. There is no evidence of bona fide ownership in the record. Engler, the trustee of the bondholders, refuses, in his testimony, to vouch for the bona fides of the bondholders whom he represents, and does not claim that they hold any bonds above No. 2,800. (Question 12, page 770; question 47, page 773, and question 87, page 778.)

NO PROOF OF POSSESSION OR OWNERSHIP.

The record does not show that the proof of possession or ownership was made before the court, by the alleged holders of the State bonds.

It is true that there was a list of bonds, without date, filed, purporting to be a "list of Florida eight per cent. State coupon bonds sold in Holland, now held by Adolph Engler, as custodian for owners, May, 1879," (page 1,317). Then, after a long statement of numbers, the following memorandum occurs: "List of Florida eight per cent. bonds, issued to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, held by Adolph Engler, as custodian for the owners, and numbered above 3,000," (page 1,325). Then follows another statement of numbers, making 197. The paper is endorsed "list of the Florida eight per cent. bonds presented in the United States Court, May, 1879, in Jacksonville, Florida, by Adolph Engler, of New York City, in the case of J. Fred. Schutle et al., vs. the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company and Florida Central Railroad Company et al., filed P. Walter, clerk," (page 1,326). It does not appear from this paper that any one is responsible for it, or for its accuracy. It is not even verified by oath. There appears to be no attorney's name attached to it. The date of making out the "list" is not given, neither is any date of filing. It does not purport to have been filed by any order of court, or by any master or examiner appointed in the case. Its correctness is vouched for by no one.

If bonds of the State were produced in court, it is not shown by the record in the cause. If they were compared with the "list," who did it? Does the testimony show anywhere that the bonds specified were all in court, and that they corresponded with the numbers in the paper presented? The decree was based upon bonds which were not offered in evidence through an examiner appointed for taking testimony under the rules of chancery practice, nor is it shown that they were admitted in testimony by special order of the court, nor by consent of parties, and they could not, consistently with the rules of practice, be introduced in any other way.

This "list" does not come within rule thirteen. It is neither a "deposition, deed, grant or other exhibit," and is improperly in the record, no one being responsible for its existence. There was no opportunity in the court below to take objection to a paper not presented.

Under the pleadings in the case, the sale and delivery of the bonds, numbered above 3,000, have been impeached and contested, (Record, answer of Florida Central, paragraph 13, page 403), and the date of sale, as well as the authority to sell, became material, and the defendant was entitled to cross-examine and to take proof on such material points. When a document or exhibit is so impeached in the answer it cannot be admitted in evidence or proved at the heairing of the case. 1 Daniel's, ch. 5, ed. 884.

The evidence of ownership is not sufficient to sustain the decree in said cause against the Florida Central Railroad Company.

There was no attempt made to introduce or prove the bonds of the Florida Central Company's bonds.

DEPOSITIONS TAKEN IN HOLLAND.

The motion to suppress depositions taken in Holland was heard, and the depositions were suppressed, by order of Judge Bradly, on May 22, 1879, prior to the final hearing. The question of the suppression of depositions is a matter in the discretion of the court. Underhill vs. Van Courtland, 2 John, ch. 345.

No exceptions were taken, and no application made for time to retake the testimony, which was the privilege of the complainants, if they deemed the testimony material to their cause. They waived that right, and went into the final hearing. If they now think the testimony important to their case, this court will not relieve them from the consequence of their mistake, by reviewing said interlocutory order.

These depositions are improperly in the record, upon the special application of the appellees, under order of December 18, 1879, and a motion to strike out postponed to the final hearing of appeal.

If the Florida Central Railroad Company had issued and delivered said bonds in exchange for the State bonds, it would not be liable on the bonds so delivered. The State bonds having been declared by the Supreme Court, to be unconstitutional and void, the State gave no consideration for the railroad bonds in its possession. Holland vs. The State of Fla., et al., XV Fla. R., 533.

The State bonds being unconstitutional, and issued and exchanged in violation of law, the railroad bonds given in exchange therefor are void. Craig vs. State of Missouri, 4 Peters, 425.

THE STATE NOT A TRUSTEE FOR BONDHOLDERS.

It is however claimed that the State does not simply occupy the position of creditor to the companies, but that it is a statutory trustee, and holds these railroad bonds in trust for the bondholders, and not as creditor of the railroad companies.

To sustain this position, they rely upon the provisions of the third section of the Act of January, 1870, above quoted.

The lien given the State in this act, against the companies exchanging bonds, is "for its own protection." The relation of creditor and debtor is clearly created. The act nowhere says that these railroad bonds are to be held by the State in trust.

The Governor is authorized to seize and sell any railroad making default in payment of interest for twelve months, and the State is authorized to become the purchaser at such sale, "for its own protection." If a railroad had been sold by the Governor under the act, and purchased by the State, would the road have become trust property in the hands of the State as trustee for the bondholders? Certainly not. It is not so claimed in the opinion of the Supreme Court of Florida.

The statute provides that if the State becomes purchaser, "it may pay on said purchase ANY evidence of indebtedness the State may hold against said roads." This would be inconsistent with the duties of a trustee, thus to absorb by its claims the trust property in its control. If the relation of trustee existed, a statute giving such power, would be authorizing the State to commit a fraud.

If the State should not become purchaser at such sale, the statute requires the State to collect the purchase-money, and to take up its own bonds exchanged under the statute. If the bondholders do not present their bonds for redemption within ninety days after said sale, it is made the duty of the State Treasurer to invest the funds "in securities of the United States, to be held by the State as trustee for the bondholders."

This is the first mention of any trust in the statute, and here the object and the subject matter of the trust are clearly defined, namely: the holding of the "securities of the United States, as trustees for the bondholders."

The provision of the statute that "all moneys" arising from the sale, shall be applied to the payment of the bonds issued by the State, was intended for the protection of the people of the State, to prevent the moneys arising from such sales from being absorbed in the general funds of the State, leaving the State bonds to be paid by taxation. If the bondholders declined to present their bonds for redemption, and to receive their money, as under the statute they had a right to do, it was provided that the State, for the reasons above given, should invest and hold the money until demanded. If the bonds of the railroad companies had been held in trust by the State, the bondholders could not refuse to take the money arising from the sale of property in the hands of their trustee. If the roads had been sold for more than the amount of the State bonds, according to the construction given to the term "all moneys," in the opinion of the Supreme Court of Florida, the bondholders would have been entitled to all, and not a part, of the purchase-money.

This construction of the act would be derogatory to the State. The State would be presumed to have issued its promise to pay, and then to have humiliated itself, by pledging security for the payment of its debt.

The construction given to this entire statute, seems to be contrary to the spirit and intent, as well as to the plainly expressed language of the act, whereas, upon every fair principle of construction, it "should be interpreted according to the natural and most obvious import of the language, without resorting to subtle and forced construction for the purpose of either limiting or extending its operations."

McClusk vs. Cromwell, 11 N. Y. 601.

Waller vs. Harris, 20 Wend. 561 and 562.

It is not denied that these bondholders may have equities. They hold certain State bonds, which have been declared unconstitutional and void, for which they paid money. They do not allege any right to recover upon these bonds as an evidence of indebtedness, but merely as an evidence of their equitable claim against the parties from whom the worthless paper was purchased.

The State occupied the position of creditor of the railroad company, and did not hold the bonds, received in exchange for its bonds, as a trustee for the bondholders, but "for its own protection." It then follows that the right of the State to enforce its lien against the company by seizure, ceased and was destroyed by failure of its contract. The complainants lost their confidence in the Governor's power to seize and sell the railroads, and, no longer relying upon any statutory remedy, abandoned it, and came into a court of equity for relief. If they had a remedy under the statute, the Court of Chancery improperly assumed jurisdiction; for the complainants did not allege in their bill that the Governor of the State refused to act under the statute, but, on the contrary, it appears that he was attempting to seize and sell the roads, under the provisions of the act.

The only standing of the complainants in a court of chancery is upon the ground of mere equity (but not by virtue of any lien) for the recovery of the amount paid by them for the worthless State bonds, from the party or parties who sold them, and who received the purchase money. In equity they may have the right to recover that much, but nothing more. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, whose bonds were exchanged, received the State bonds as innocently as did the Dutch bondholders. Whatever was received from the purchasers for these worthless bonds, may be required, in equity, to be repaid. To compel the payment of more would be inequitable, because the bondholder is not entitled to more than he paid; to give him more, would be to enable him to speculate upon the misfortunes of the company, and because it would be implied, from such decree, that the company, in the sale of the State bonds, was a wrong-doer, and should suffer for its fault. It is not in evidence in this case that any of the State bonds were sold by the Florida Central Company, or that it received any of the money for which they were sold. In this view of the case, the decree should not be sustained against that company.

JAMES M. BAKER,
Solicitor for Florida Central Railroad Company.

STATEMENT OF CASE NO. 668.

In this case the complainants, J. Fred Schutle, et al., filed their bill against the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, to enforce their claims for certain bonds of the State of Florida held by them, alleged to have been exchanged for the bonds of said company, praying for a decree against the company for the full amount of the bonds so held.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company filed its plea, setting forth in bar of recovery, that the statute under which said bonds were issued and exchanged were unconstitutional, and the bonds issued under it void, and could constitute no lawful agreement between the State of Florida and said company, and no sufficient consideration to sustain the contract. The company also filed an answer setting up the same and other grounds of defence.

The court, at the hearing, gave a decree against said company for $2,751,000 and interest $1,655,000.

The said company alleges the following errors in said decree:

1. In that the decree declared the said bonds held by the claimants constituted a statutory lien on the company's railroad.

2. In that the decree was rendered for more than sixteen hundred bonds. The amount authorized to be issued on the completed line of railroad between Jacksonville and Quincy.

3. In that the court held that the State of Florida was under the statute, the trustee of the holders of the State bonds.

4. In that the decree was rendered for the full amount of the bonds claimed to have been held by the complainants, whereas the decree, if any, should have been for the amount of purchase money received by the company for said State bonds.

5. In that the defendant's plea ought to have been sustained and the relief prayed by complainants refused.

THE ARGUMENT.

The evidence shows that the three thousand State bonds first issued and exchanged, were for the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company's bonds, issued upon the line of railroad between Quincy and Lake City, and the extensions to St. Mark's and to Monticello, and that said bonds were issued and exchanged after the consolidation with the Tallahassee Company, in May, 1870.

The fourth section of the amended act which authorizes the issue of bonds on that line of completed railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville, contains a proviso limiting the issue upon that entire line to one hundred miles.

The argument and authorities quoted in the foregoing brief in the case of the Florida Central Company, are respectfully referred to as applicable to this case in the construction of the Fourth Section of said act, and also in sustaining the following points taken in this case:

The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company issued its bonds payable to the State of Florida. They were not negotiable, and have not passed into the hands of innocent purchasers without notice, so that the principles applicable to negotiable paper do not apply to these bonds. Neither does the doctrine of estoppel apply. (See authorities in above brief.)

The company received these bonds in good faith, and it was no fault of the company that they were afterwards declared unconstitutional and void. The part of said bonds sold by the company were sold in good faith, but were not guaranteed by it.

Whatever liability the company may have incurred by selling said bonds, it ought not to be decreed to pay said void bonds, or the amount of its own bonds for which the State gave no consideration.

There was no sufficient evidence before the court at the hearing to show the possession and ownership of the state bonds alleged to be held by the complainants. It is not claimed that there was any of the bonds of the company offered or introduced in evidence in this case.

The deposition taken by the complainants in Holland, and suppressed by order of court, improperly appears in the record, and should be stricken out.

That the statutes of 1879 and 1870, authorized a contract between the Railroad Company and the State as debtor and creditor, but did not constitute the State a trustee for the holders of the State bonds exchanged under said statute.

That when the State bonds were declared unconstitutional, the company was no longer liable to the State upon its bonds so exchanged, and the right given to the State by the statute to seize and sell the company's railroad in default of payment of interest, ceased.

The only standing of the complainants in a court of chancery, is upon the ground of mere equity. They are not entitled to any lien on company's railroad. And if they have any claim against said company, it would be for the purchase-money paid said company for the State bonds.

Such relief, however, is not sought in this case.

vs.

SCHUTTE AND OTHERS, &c., &c.

Brief for the Florida Central Railroad Company, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Co.

The Western Division Company, (above,) claims in general that by virtue of certain transactions in the course of which persons who occupied fiduciary relations to it, appropriated its funds, &c., it is virtually a stockholder in the Florida Central Company, (above,) and also in another Florida company, known as the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, which also is a party to the above suits. In this character it participates with those companies in contesting the claims of certain parties—Schutte and others—who allege that they are holders of bonds issued by such companies.

A brief statement of the substantial facts of the transactions above alluded to, which occupied several years, is as follows:

The Western Division is a North Carolina Company, which in 1868–9 received (Record, p. 607) of that State, through the hands of Swepson, then its President, some $6,600,000 in State bonds. Swepson embezzled the proceeds of those bonds, and in the spring of 1869, through one Houston, applied a part of these, about $130,000, to the purchase of more than 4,000 shares in the stock, (capital, 5,500 shares) of the Florida Central, and another part, about $500,000, (Record, p. 727,) to the purchase of about $960,300 in State bonds issued in behalf of the "Pensacola and Georgia" and "Tallahassee" Railroad Companies, at that time also corporations in Florida.

As regards the investment in the stock of the Florida Central.

In October, 1869, Swepson was succeeded as President of the Western Division by Littlefield, (p. 726,) and thereupon (p. 317) transferred the stock in the Florida Central to him—the latter being privy to the original embezzlement and the rights of the Western Division. In May, 1870, Littlefield transferred it to Houston, (p. 146, &c., and p. 733,) to secure to the latter a private debt, part of which arose out of a claim for commissions, &c., in making the above purchases for Swepson. This debt was paid in April, 1871, but the stock remained in Houston's hands, and after his death (in 1875) went into those of his personal representatives. At present it is still in their hands, or in that of one or two of certain receivers appointed by courts. This circumstance is not important in the present litigation, as in any event the stock is not in the hands of a bona fide purchaser without notice.

In May, 1870, Swepson being then also President of the Florida Central, caused to be prepared $1,000,000 of bonds of that company, (pp. 592, 658.) These were signed by himself as President, and by "H. H. Thompson" as Secretary. Thompson was appointed Secretary pro hac vice by Swepson, one Flagg being at that time the regular secretary of the company. These bonds were exchanged, under color of certain legislation of that State, (Stats. June 24, 1869, and Jan. 28, 1870,) for Florida bonds to the same amount. After their issue, and before and after such exchange, they became the subject of various resolutions by the directors and the stockholders of the company, (pp. 1333, 1334, and 37;) one such resolution ratifying the appointment of Thompson, another ordering the bonds to be withdrawn, and a third ordering the State bonds obtained in exchange for them, to be delivered to an agent for sale. The exchange occurred in January, 1871, (pp. 787, 783,) the State bonds were carried to London in April, 1871; subsequently they were transferred to New York. For eighteen months they were the subject of negotiation, litigation, and arrangement, to some of which the Western Division was a party. At last 224 of them were returned to the State for cancellation, 2 were lost, 206 were sold, (in January, 1873,) and the remainder (568) are still in the hands of persons who hold them subject to the orders of the company, &c., (p. 1133.)

These bonds were declared by the Supreme Court of Florida, at the January Term, 1870, to be unconstitutional. (15 Florida, 455.)

The holders of the 206 bonds sold as above, allege themselves to be bona fide holders thereof for value, without notice, and claim that they have a right to resort, for satisfaction of their debt, to the property of the company for whose benefit they were sold; and, to that end, can avail themselves of the statutory lien upon such property given to the State in consequence of the exchange of bonds (above.)

The Florida and Western Division Companies deny each of these allegations, and assert besides that, even if they were true, the claim of the bondholders extends at most to a repayment of the money paid by them for such bonds to the agents for sale of the Florida Company.

B.

As regards the investment in the State bonds issued for the " Pensacola and Georgia" and the " Tallahassee" Companies.

These bonds had been exchanged by the State for bonds of the companies respectively, upon conditions required in all such cases by a general statute, that the companies should regularly take up their coupons and should besides create a sinking fund for the redemption of the principal, or upon default their property might be seized and sold. The companies in question had made default, and on the 20th of March, 1869, their roads, &c., accordingly were sold. " F. Dibble and associates " became the purchasers of these roads. Six days afterwards the purchasers agreed with Swepson that for certain considerations he should pay the purchase money. Accordingly, he paid to the State officers the $960,300 mentioned above, and accepted a draft by " Dibble and associates " for the balance, some $472,000. By arrangement with the State officers, this draft was received as cash, and thereupon, (April 8, 1869,) a title to the two roads was made to " F. Dibble and associates." Upon the 22d of the same month, these persons conveyed the same property to Swepson, to secure him for his advances and certain other claims. Afterwards the same parties conveyed it again to the [2d] Tallahassee Company. (P. 303.)

[It may be as well to say here that the $472,000 never was paid, and that it has been decided in the courts of Florida, that upon that account, the conveyance by the State officers to " Dibble and associates " was unauthorized, and thereupon that the holders of such of the State bonds exchanged with the two companies as were not taken up by Swepson, (amounting to the $472,000 and interest,) still have a lien upon the property so conveyed, a lien superior superior to all subsequent encumbrances.

This decision is, of course, a matter of no interest to the Florida Central Company; and it is acquiesced in by the Western Division.]

Upon the 24th of June, 1869, a statute was enacted incorporating "F. Dibble and associates" as the [2d] Tallahassee Railroad Company. Upon the same day another statute incorporated a company, (Swepson, Littlefield, &c.,) by the name of "the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company." This company was authorized to consolidate with the Florida Central and the [2d] Tallahassee Companies. Swepson was President of the [2d] Tallahassee Company, and upon its organization Littlefield became President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company. The capital stock of the [2d] Tallahassee Company was $3,000,000, and of this Swepson, on account of his payment as above, owned $1,799,800. Upon the 23d day of May, 1870, a consolidation of the [2d] Tallahassee and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Companies took place, and thereupon Littlefield, (who was still President of the Western Division,) was declared to be entitled, as assignee of Swepson, (p. 476,) to 38,433 shares in the latter Company, the capital stock therein being $60,000 of $100 each. (P. 1328.)

In June, 1870, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Companies exchanged with the State of Florida $3,000,000 in bonds. In November, 1870, these were placed in the hands of Hopkins & Co., for sale, and between then and July, 1871, (p. 685,) they were sold, in Holland, the purchasers paying more than 76, (p. 1409,) but the terms of agreement with its various brokers being such that the Company was to receive about 45. (P. 1195.)

The propriety of the issue of these bonds by the State was violently attacked in the public press in Florida, New York city, and Holland during the year 1870; and communications to like effect were made by the Governor of the State and others to bankers in Holland who held them for sale. In February, 1871, the opinion of the Supreme Court of Florida was taken by the Governor as to their constitutionality, and the result of such opinion was telegraphed abroad as having established that point. (P. 1440.) The Governor also (pp. 33 and 1441) issued proclamations that they were valid.

In March, 1870, the Legislature of North Carolina, with the consent of the Western Division, appointed Commissioners on behalf of that company, to bring Swepson and Littlefield to a settlement on account of the funds received from the State. Upon the 16th of April, 1870, these Commissioners, Woodpin, &c., made an agreement, in writing, with Swepson and Littlefield, by which the latter were to apply the proceeds of the State bonds, which they were to receive on account of the Florida Central and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Companies, in satisfaction of the $1,287,000 of the funds of the Western Division, which the latter admitted had been used by Swepson in his transactions (above) in Florida. This agreement subsequently was modified, but in no form was it ever executed. In the meantime, and for more than a year, the Commissioners were engaged in negotiation thereabouts, and in litigation, in which they demanded, sometimes, a share of the State bonds specifically, and, sometimes, proceeds thereof. All that was received by them upon this account (not taking into account money paid or otherwise secured to them by Swepson, in April, 1870) was £10,000, paid by Hopkins upon a draft by Littlefield, and an advance upon an expected sale of certain of the bonds issued to the Florida Central, such sale, however, in the end not having been made, (p. 1203.)

No interest was paid upon the State bonds in question in this suit after January, 1873, and the last bonds sold (those above No. 2,800) were sold in that month for the purpose of taking up the coupons then due, (pp. 794, 1133.) They were sold at 65 cents, (pp. 1408, 1410.)

In 1877 application was made to the Governor of Florida by the bondholders to sell the property of the Florida Central and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Companies for satisfaction of their claims, based upon the circumstance that the State bonds in question had been sold, and that their proceeds had gone into the hands of the agents of such companies.

The present litigation, which has been consolidated, and by order below, is to be heard here only upon the merits, (pp. 547, 553,) represents an attempt by the Dutch bondholders to enforce their alleged lien upon such property, together with an application by the Florida Central, the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile, and also the Western Division, to defeat such alleged lien and debt; or, that endeavor failing, to reduce the amount to be recovered.

The questions as to, (1) the validity of the bonds deposited with the State by the Florida Central and the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Companies, (2) the equity of the holders of unconstitutional State bonds to resort either to the statutory, or any other remedy against the companies, and (3) the superiority of the equity of the bondholders to that of the Western Division, has been fully presented in the briefs of my learned associates. I propose, therefore, to ask attention only, (1) to the question of the amount properly recoverable by the bondholders—supposing the court to hold them entitled to recover at all;—and (2) to the respective rights of the Western Division Company; and the Western North Carolina Company, under the North Carolina legislation of March, 1879, and the action of the Western North Carolina Company, dismissing their appeal in September, 1879.

1. The bondholders are entitled to recover only so much as they paid to the agents of the companies.

Admitting, for this argument's sake, that under the circumstances a lien upon the property of the company exists in favor of the State, and that the bondholders have an equity to avail themselves of this lien, still the trust is not an express one, but has to be worked out through the State, upon the theory that if the bondholders were technically in the position of the State, they would not be required to surrender their lien without satisfaction. The case, therefore, is, Suppose that the State had taken up its bonds issued on behalf of the companies (say) at 65 cents, would equity allow it to exact more than this from the companies? The case put of course requires the assumption that the State were in a situation in which it would be amenable to the rules of equity in asserting its claims; which is the case of the bondholders here. What is asserted is, that whatever different result might be arrived at by spelling out the Florida statute by syllables—the true relation by the companies to the State is that of indemnity against loss, and that a court of equity will not assist the State in making a profit by compelling the companies to pay it more than it is out by the transaction.

The companies are not parties to the paper held by the bondholders. Their liability is by reason of the claim which the State has upon them. The case is not one in which holders of valid obligations upon the State have filed a bill to subject a fund appropriated to their use by the original contract. There is in law no connection of contract between the State and the supposed bondholders. The only equity arises from the advance of certain money, and it is measured by the amount so advanced.

It would probably occur to most persons that, as the State has really advanced nothing here, there is no ground upon which an equity worked out through it can result in anything. That point has been maintained in the other briefs. But if it be admitted that there is upon the State a moral obligation, of that class of such obligations as is recognized and enforced by courts, the obligation is to see that the parties are placed in statu quo; or, the moral obligation being sufficient in this case to set the State in motion—upon a survey of the equities which it possesses and can marshal in behalf of the bondholders these are seen to be only for indemnity, indemnity of itself, or, at furthest, of any one who has a moral right to stand in its shoes.

This is a point somewhat considered, I admit, by the Supreme Court of Florida in the case of The State vs. The Florida Central Railroad Company, 15 Fla., p. 724. No decision is arrived at however. It is true that the learned judge who delivered the opinion announced an inclination—contrary to the above suggestions. It may be proper to remark in this connection that it is to be lamented that the cases in the Florida courts involving the questions now being argued here have, of necessity, been decided by a court constituted pro hac vice alone, and that the only member of the regular supreme court who sat therein had, previously to his going upon the bench, been, upon the record, so much concerned with these matters. No doubt no one has regretted the necessity under which he has been placed more than himself. It might, however, somewhat affect the value of his decisions, and à fortiori, inclinations, herein, so far as those depend upon personal and notmerely official authority. A mere judicial inclination, it is submitted, has no official authority.

It is submitted that the doctrine of indemnity is especially proper as regards the claims of the Western Division. That company is a great loser by the general transaction developed in this record. Admitting, for the purpose of this argument, that it is implicated in all that was done by its Commissioners, &c., in the way of putting these bonds upon the market—it seems that such involvement is only to the extent of indemnity. Having so acted (say) as to induce another to change his position in respect to certain property, (i. e., under the above concession, that of the Florida Companies,) it cannot reverse such action without placing that other in statu quo.

[It will be borne in mind that this argument is of practical importance, probably, only as regards the holders of bonds sold for the Florida Central; inasmuch as the property of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile, after being applied in part to pay the money due to the holders of these $572,000 bonds and interest not paid by Swepson, will not extend to satisfy the Dutch bondholders, whether upon the theory of indemnity or any other. Practically, the question touches only the 206 bonds sold for the Florida Central in January 1873, at 65 cents.]

2. As regards the respective rights upon this record of the Western Division, and the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, or those who are interested under its dismissal of the bill in September last:

In this connection it appears that, by the constitution of North Carolina, adopted in April, 1868, all laws thereafter passed creating corporations might be "altered or repealed," (Art. 8, Sec. 1;) that, by general statute (Rev. Code, p. 134, Section 4) then in force, all corporations whose charters should be annulled, should have three years thereafter in which to wind up; that the Western Division was created by act of August 19th, 1868, (p. 954;) and that the repealing act of March 19th, 1879, transferred, absolutely and at once, all the property, rights, credits, &c., of the Western Division to the Western North Carolina Company, with the express condition that the latter should not be responsible for any debt, &c., of the former beyond the sums it should actually realize and receive from the transfer, &c., (p. 953.)

It is well settled that such statutory alterations and repeals of charters have no power to impair the obligation of contracts theretofore entered into by the corporation either as creditor or debtor.

Admitting, then, that the Legislature of North Carolina could repeal the charter of the Western Division, and that it could also, as regards that company, modify the general statute giving to corporations upon their dissolution three years in which to wind up their affairs, and itself provide a receiver to effect such settlement, I submit that upon its face the statute in question was not a statute for dissolving a corporation, but for transferring one corporation to another: for merging one corporation in another; and that the difference between merger and dissolution is material; and is, in consideration of the provisions of the constitution of North Carolina, amongst other things, the difference between the impairing and not impairing of a contract. The Western Division, and those who dealt in its shares and its contracts, knew that it might be dissolved—but had no reason to anticipate its being merged. If dissolved, the courts would give them redress for their claims against the assets of the company—no matter where or in whose hands. Somebody would be bound to administer these assets, and in the course of administration would be bound for due diligence in collecting and turning over. That diligence is of the essence in any case of attorneyship; but the agent shall be liable not only for what he does, but for what he might collect. I submit that, amongst other things not so distinctly to the same purpose, the provision that the Western North Carolina Company shall be liable for only so much of the assets of the Western Division as it shall actually receive, is an ear-mark to show that the transfer was not upon the footing of a receivership or administration, and that it imposed upon the shareholders and creditors of the latter a material risk that was not incident to their original contract, and which therefore impairs it.

A railroad company would hardly be the best sort of receiver; nevertheless, the impolicy of such an appointment might not warrant a charge of unconstitutionality. If the supposed receiver were, however, by express statutory provisions, to be chargeable only with what he actually received, without imposing upon him the ordinary duty of diligence, it seems that the importance of the principle so asserted would go to the root of the contract.

If so, the only time for successfully resisting its application, is when the transfer is demanded; for, if that be allowed, the parties interested will be bound to treat the receiver according to the law under which he accepted the office, i. e., as bound only for what he actually receives.

The result of this argument is that, however it may be that for any purposes of further active railroad life, either of construction or transportation, &c., the Western Division is no longer in existence, yet it exists for the purpose of winding up its connection with debtors and creditors, and so for carrying on the present suit. The obligation of its contracts with creditors has not in its essence been transferred to any representative, and therefore remains upon it.

It is of course only in case the Court shall consider that the Western Division is entitled to recover something in this suit, that it is important to decide the point now suggested. Upon the present state of the record, in which the Western North Carolina Company only is party, and not the Western Division, the only practical question is whether the former shall be allowed to dismiss the bill in character of sole dominus litis. Probably its action in dismissing, heretofore, was upon the ground that it owed no account of its doings in that regard to any one, cestui que trust or other; but inasmuch as that cannot be true, a court of equity will not permit it to dismiss a bill which virtually is that of its cestui que trust, especially when the cause has come to hearing, and when, by the only hypothesis in which the question is interesting, the cestui que trust is about to obtain a decree; [including in the term cestui que trust those stockholders, creditors, &c., of the Western Division that are interested in the recovery.]

FLORIDA RAILROAD CASES,

Nos. 667, 668 and 669.

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS AND POINTS SUBMITTED BY MR. EDMUNDS, COUNSEL FOR THE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, AND THE WESTERN DIVISION OF THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY, APPELLANTS.

FLORIDA CASES.

I.

Errors alleged by the Florida Central Company.

1. It was error to render the decree entered in favor of the complainants in the Schutte case, and to hold them entitled to any relief against the Florida Central Company or its property, and not to pronounce a decree dismissing this company with costs.

2. It was error, if any relief was proper, to decree that the holders of the bonds claimed in the Schutte bill had any lien or security on the roads purchased by Dibble, etc., paramount to that of the old bonds of the roads turned in on the sale, and which, under the circumstances, ought to have been decreed as subsisting for the benefit either of this company or of the North Carolina company.

3. It was error to decree any relief to the complainants beyond the sum actually paid by them for their bonds, and interest if allowable.

4. It was error to dismiss the cross-bill of this company, if the same was dismissed.

5. It was error not to grant a decree on the cross-bill, either declaring this company and its road and property entirely free from any claim of the holders of the State bonds or the alleged bonds of this company, or else declaring that only the holders of those numbered from 3001 to 4000 were entitled to any such claim, and that only to the extent of the money paid and interest, if allowable; or else that, if the holders of all the bonds were entitled, their claim must be limited in the same way.

7. It was error not to decree that, if the holders of the bonds claimed in the Schutte bill, or any of them, were entitled to relief as against this company or its property, this company was entitled to be substituted or subrogated to their place and have security and relief over against the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company, and the property, etc., purchased by Dibble, etc.

II.

In addition to the errors assigned by Mr. Stewart on behalf of the North Carolina Company, the following are stated:

1. It was error to dismiss the bills of the Western Division Company and the Western North Carolina Company as its successor.

2. It was error to refuse a decree allowing these complainants to follow their money, which had been invested in the stock of the Florida Central Company and bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Companies, as a lien on the property of the F. C. Co., and the P. and Ga. and T. Companies respectively, paramount, under the circumstances, to any lien of the holders of the bonds claimed in the Schutte bill; or else in not decreeing the same in respect of the said P. and Ga. and T. Companies' bonds; or else in not decreeing that the complainants were entitled to a lien in respect of said stock and bonds, or in respect of the bonds if not of the stock, in common with the holders of the bonds claimed in the Schutte bill; or else in not decreeing that the holders of the last named bonds were not entitled to any lien on the property beyond the sums they had actually paid for them, with interest, if in such a case interest is to be computed; or else in not decreeing, if the holders of the bonds claimed in the Schutte bill were entitled to any relief, that the complainants were entitled to be substituted or subrogated to their rights against the property.

POINTS.

The facts to which the following points apply are condensed in a digest of the record, submitted herewith, and which, for convenience, is referred to.

AS TO THE FLORIDA CENTRAL COMPANY.

I.

The charter of the company of 29 July, 1868 (Rec. p. 36), did not authorize the issue of the bonds claimed, or the making of any mortgage securing the same. It did authorize a mortgage of property other than its road, etc., that it might acquire (Sec. 1); and expressly authorized a lease of the road (Sec. 4). Any implied power of mortgage is, therefore, conclusively excluded.

II.

The act of June 24th, 1869 (Rec. p. 69), incorporating Dibble, etc., as the purchasers of the P. and G. and T. roads by the name of the Tallahassee Company did not have any relation to the F. C. Co.

The act of 24th June, 1869, entitled "An act to perfect the Public Works of the State," relied upon as conferring authority on this company to issue these mortgage bonds, it is submitted, does not do so, either expressly or by implication.

The 1st section creates a new and independent corporation, successor to nobody, under the name of the J. P. & M. Co., and invests it with power of mortgage, etc.

The 2d section provides for the meeting and organization of the stockholders, etc.

The 3d section provides for the management of the business of the company.

The 4th section grants the right to build a railway from Quincy, which was then the western terminus of the road sold to Dibble and imputed to the Tallahassee Company, westward to the Alabama State line.

The 5th, 6th and 7th sections provide for right of way, etc.

The 8th section provides for fares.

The 9th section provides that the Governor, to aid the company to complete its road, etc., shall deliver to the president of the company, bonds of the State to an amount equal to $14000, per mile of estimated length, under certain limitations and restrictions.

The 10th section provides that in exchange for the State bonds, the president of the company shall deliver to the Governor its bonds, payable to the State of Florida, to an equal amount.

The 11th section provides that "to secure the principal and interest of the said company bonds," the State shall have a statutory lien on the part of the road on the estimated length of which the State bonds were delivered, and on all the property of the company appertaining to that part of the line which it may now have or may hereafter acquire, etc.; and in case of failure of the company to pay either principal or interest on its bonds, the Governor may enter and sell.

The 12th section requires the company, as additional security to the State, to deposit with the treasurer security for the payment of the interest, until the completion of the road, etc.; and as additional security for the faithful application of the State bonds, the company shall also give, before the issue of the bonds, a lien upon the entire railroad from Quincy to Jacksonville. But at the time of the passage of the Act there was not the slightest claim that the company had any title to or control over the F. C. road, running from Jacksonville to Lake City, or the Tallahassee road from Lake City to Quincy.

The 13th section provided for discharging the company's "debt to the State" before maturity.

The 14th section provided that it should be "lawful" for the several companies owning the roads, or parts of roads, from Quincy to Jacksonville, from Tallahassee to St. Marks and the branch to Monticello, or either of said companies, by a vote of the owners of a majority of the stock, and with the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock of the J. P. & M. Co., to consolidate with the latter so as to become one corporation under its name, etc.; and with like consent of the owners of a majority of the stock of each company, without such consolidation, they were authorized to make arrangements for a common management of the property. And "after" the consolidation the J. P. & M. Co. was authorized to raise money by mortgage of the property acquired by such consolidation. The same section then proceeds thus: "The said Jackson-"ville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, as to the road, or "roads or parts of roads thus acquired, may likewise issue coupon "bonds, or other evidences of debt, with coupons or otherwise, "bearing such rate of interest, and payable at such time and place, "and on such terms, as the directors may determine, and to each are "hereby granted the same privileges as are herein granted to the "Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company."

It is submitted that it is a misconstruction to hold that the clause just quoted conferred any power on the F. C. Co. either to issue bonds or to make a mortgage, even for its own purposes, much less for the purpose claimed. The "privileges herein granted" were evidently only the privileges mentioned in the same section 14, and they are the privilege, First, to consolidate; Second, "after consolidation," to raise money on mortgage of the property acquired by the consolidation as a whole and not at all to exchange bonds with the State; Third, the privilege of the J. P. & M. Co. to issue coupon bonds "as the road, or roads, or parts of roads thus acquired" (i. e., by consolidation on such terms as the companies might determine). There was no privilege to raise money on mortgage or other bonds under this section until after consolidation, or to exchange bonds with the State in any case. It might happen that neither the F. C. or the Tallahassee Company would be willing to consolidate with the company created by the act, and which had neither capital or constructed road, while they might be willing to consolidate with each other, and it is submitted with confidence that the words used at the end of the quoted paragraph refer to that state of things, and not to an entirely independent and separate subject, not at all within the general scope or purpose of the act. If it were held that the words in the clause in question, "herein granted," applied to the whole act, it would lead to the absurd result that the other companies were authorized to incorporate themselves separately under the new name, with new capital, and were authorized to build a new road to the Alabama line, which the act itself in terms gives exclusively to the J. P. & M. Co. It is manifest, therefore, that the substantial intent of these words in section 14 was what the section expresses plainly, and that was a right of all or any two of the three companies to consolidate, and after consolidation to issue bonds on the road or roads "thus acquired," i. e., by consolidation, for legitimate purposes.

Again, the authority conferred by this section to raise money by mortgage has no reference to the issuing of the bonds to be exchanged for State bonds; all that had already been explicitly provided for. Whatever power was conferred by this section was a power to raise money for the legitimate use of the road of the company raising it. and not in any sense a power to loan credit to other companies or enterprises. If a distinct statute had authorized the F. C. Co. to raise money on mortgage it would furnish no authority for the transaction in question here. And if, in such a case, the officers of the F. C. Co. had put out these identical bonds, payable to the State of Florida alone, and so not negotiable, and the Dutch had bought the identical bonds and relied directly and exclusively upon them, their good faith and want of knowledge would not help their case, unless it is held that paper which an agent has no right to issue and which the payer has no right to receive, and which is not negotiable, is negotiable paper and entitles the holder to all the immunities of commercial law.

The act of the 28th of January, 1870, conferred no authority on the company to make a mortgage for this purpose or for any other.

This act provides, 1st, a change as to the course of the line to be built by the J, P. & M. Co.

2nd. It amends the 9th section so as to provide for exchanging with the company the bonds of the State to an amount equal to $16,000 per mile, "for the whole line of road and length of rail-"road owned by or belonging to said Jacksonville, Pensacola & "Mobile Company in exchange for first mortgage bonds of said "railroad company of the denomination of $1000, when the president "thereof shall certify upon his oath that the road or parts of road "for which he asks an exchange of bonds, is completed and is in "good running order."

3rd. It amends or supersedes the 11th section by providing that "to secure the principal and interest of the said company bonds, the "State of Florida shall by this act have a statutory lien which shall "be valid to all intents and purposes as a first mortgage duly regis-"tered, on the part of the road for which the State bonds were de-"livered and on all the property of the company, real and personal, "appertaining to that part of the line which it may now have or "may hereafter acquire, together with all the rights franchises, and "powers thereto belonging," etc.

4th. It provides as section 4, "that the Governor shall, for the "purpose of further aiding said Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile "Railroad Company in the speedy construction of its road, deliver "to the president of said company coupon bonds of this State, of the "same character as those above described in this act, to the amount "of sixteen thousand dollars per mile, upon receiving for and from "the president of said company first mortgage bonds of like amount "on any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jackson-"ville; provided, however, that the State bonds under this section "shall not be exchanged for first mortgage bonds for a greater "length than one hundred miles of any part of railroad between "Quincy and Jacksonville. Provided the said railroad company or "companies shall not issue first mortgage bonds to a greater amount "than sixteen thousand dollars per mile."

5th. It repeals the sec. 12th of the original act which required the company, as additional security, to give a lien on the entire line of railroad from Quincy to Jacksonville and from Tallahassee to St. Marks.

When this act was passed, on the 28th of January, 1870, the J. P. & M. Co. had no right whatever to any road east of Quincy —the consolidation of the Tallahassee Company not having occurred until May following. The act, then, left the company authorized to consolidate with the Tallahassee Company, and also with the F. C. Co.; that authority existing, the first provision as to bonds was for an issue by the State in respect of what the J. P. & M. Co. then had or might have, independent of any consolidation or purchase. This provision is in sec. 2, and it can have no possible application to any part of the lines then existing east of Quincy, unless it should be held that in connection with the 4th sec. above quoted, it was the intention of the act to allow a double issue of State bonds as to some part of those roads east of Quincy.

The statutory lien created by the third section was in terms a lien upon the property of the J. P. & M. Co. and no other, and referred to bonds mentioned in the 2nd section.

It was then necessary to provide for the contingency of the J. P. & M. Co. acquiring, by consolidation or otherwise, a title to one or both of the roads existing between Jacksonville and Quincy, in which case, to give further aid to the J. P. & M. Co. "in the " speedy construction of its road the Governor might exchange with " the company, State bonds, upon receiving for and from the presi " dent of said company first mortgage bonds of like amount on any " part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville," limited to not more than 100 miles in length. The Tallahassee road between Quincy and Lake City was about 120 miles in length, and the F. C. road between Lako City and Jacksonville was about 60 miles in length, The 12th section of the previous act did not allow the J. P. & M. Co. to have any State bonds until it should give a lien upon the entire line between Quincy and Jacksonville, no part of which it owned. That condition was repealed, and the provisions above named took its place, allowing, first, the issue of State bonds to the company on its then basis and property; Second, allowing the company to take further State bonds when it could give a first mortgage on any part of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville. The use of the singular number proves nothing. It was used in a previous act as describing a thing, and not a corporation. Neither, it is submitted, did the words "between Quincy and Jacksonville" imply that the mortgage bonds were to touch either.

The property owned by each corporation was between the two places. The meaning of between is, in the intermediate space of, without regard to distance—as New York is between Boston and Philadelphia. It is insisted, therefore, in the light of the two acts and of the situation of the property, that this 4th section dealt exclusively with the J. P. & M. Co. and provided for giving it further aid to a limited extent, if it should, as was expected, acquire the property on which it could give security. If the Legislature had desired to authorize the F. C. or any other company to loan its credit in aid of another corporation, it would have been perfectly easy to say so in plain terms; and no forced construction or ingenious implication ought to be brought to bear to produce such an unusual and generally improper result. The proviso limiting the issue of any first mortgage bonds by "said railroad company or companies" to sixteen thousand dollars per mile, cannot be construed to enlarge the statute.

III.

If the act of 28th January, 1870, could be tortured into an authority to the Central Company to issue bonds secured by mortgage in aid of another company, it would be entirely invalid without the consent of all the stockholders of the company. The charter of the company fixed the rights of each stockholder independently of the others, to the operations of that one road, and did not authorize it to loan its credit to any other corporation. The legislature, therefore, could not involve any stockholder in such a scheme without his consent There is no evidence that all the stockholders consented to what was done, but the evidence shows that some of the stockholders never did consent, but resisted, and that the bonds were executed falsely, and that the pretended meeting of January 2, 1870, was a sham, and that the alleged meeting of April 13, 1871 (Rec. p. 1333), was never held, and the entry in the book was fictitious, (Rec. p. 734.)

incorrect as a . fact

IV.

The thousand bonds were made up by Swepson and signed by him and Thompson, falsely assuming to be treasurer, in New York, on the 17th of April, 1870. (Dig. p. 42-46.)

The books of the company contain an entry of a so-called stockholders' meeting of the 2nd of June, 1870, relied upon as purporting to recognize the bonds and authorize their issue as a first lien on the road, and directed them to be placed in the hands of Houstoun for the purpose agreed upon between himself and Littlefield, and not for the purposes claimed to be authorized by any act of the legislature of Florida (Rec. p. 1334). Littlefield swears that no notice was given for the stockholders' meeting, as required by the by-laws, and that only two stockholders, himself and Houstoun, were present; that they transferred stock temporarily to two other persons to make a meeting; that the directors' meeting was not called by the president, but that the persons then present converted themselves from a stockholders' meeting into a directors' meeting, at the office of one of them (Rec. p. 734-5).

On the 21st November, 1870, at a regular meeting of the directors, it was resolved that the resolution of the 2d June, be rescinded and the bonds be destroyed (Rec. p. 37-8). At this time these bonds were in the hands of Houstoun or some officer of the company, the State bonds having been recalled and the railroad bonds delivered up (Reed, Rec. p. 833). On the 11th January, 1871, the bonds were, without even color of authority, taken by Houstoun and Coddington to the Governor's office and deposited, and the one thousand State bonds received for the special purposes named in the arrangements of the parties, as to the private debts etc. (Rec. p. 783-4). On the 18th April, 1871, Coddington delivered the bonds to Hopkins, the agent of the J. P. & M. Co., in London (Rec. p. 785). The certificate required by law to justify the issuing of the State bonds was not supplied when the bonds were delivered, or at any other time (Rec. p. 738). Before the State bonds were delivered to Hopkins and on the 8th February, 1871, L'Engle, counsel for the F. C. Co., addressed a letter of notice to Boissevain, the Dutch banker engaged in disposing of other State bonds previously issued to the J. P. & M. Co., stating that the F. C. Co. was 60 miles long; had not consolidated with the J. P. & M. Co.; that it had discovered that bonds previously issued and those to be issued, were to be diverted from their proper purposes, and that the action of the companies had been rescinded, and the F. C. Co. bonds had been returned, but they had again been fraudulently deposited and State bonds fraudulently issued, and charging the whole transaction with fraud and illegality (Rec. p. 135-839). The receipt of this letter is not denied by Boissevain.

The State bonds which Boissevain afterwards proceeded to obtain and which the Court below held to be the basis of a lien on the F. C. road, were on their faces and by legal effect, the bonds of the State as a principal and only debtor, and were signed by Reed, as Governor, and Conover, as treasurer, below whose signatures was a reference to the act of January 28th, 1870, as authority for their issue. Each bond contained an endorsement signed by Reed as Governor, stating that it was "one of a series issued in aid of the "Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, to "the extent of $16,000 per mile upon completed road. The "State of Florida holding the first mortgage bonds of said "railroad company for a like amount, as further security to 'the holders thereof" (Rec. p. 1354-1383).

The purchasers of the bonds were bound to inquire into the authority for their issue. (Floyd, acceptances, 7 Wal. p. 666.) If the paper was illegal and void, as now appears to be clear, the purchasers, however good their faith, can have no standing as the holders of commercial paper without notice of its history. For whatever they may be entitled to, they must stand upon the actual history of the transaction.

But the endorsement of the Governor himself upon each of the bonds distinctly declared that the "further security to "the holders thereof" was that the bonds were issued" in aid " of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company," and that the State held "first mortgage bonds of said rail-" road company for a like amount;" (Rec. p. 1354); and the letter of the Governor of June 1870, (Rec. p. 1428) and the proclamation of February 24th, 1871, (Rec. p. 1441) state the same explicitly. If, then, the purchasers relied upon the professed or asserted security, they relied upon the bonds and mortgage of the J. P. & M. Co., and not at all upon any security of the F. C. Co. If the original facts create a lien in favor of the purchasers of the State bonds upon the road of the F. C. Co., they, if honest purchasers, are entitled to the benefit of it, whether they knew of the security at the time they purchased or not; but if otherwise, they can have no standing in court. They never knew or heard of any vote or bonds, real or apparent, of the F. C. Co.

V.

There is no evidence of any paper or document showing either that the F. C. Co was consolidated with the J. P. & M. Co., or that the latter in any manner acquired title or color of title to the road of the former, in any manner whatever. The witness Cheney states that there was what amounted to a "practical consolidation" in 1870, after the J. P. & M. trustees possessed the road. (Dig. p. 54,); but his testimony is contradicted by that of the other witnesses and by the records of the proceedings of both companies. (Dig pp. 37, 46, 48, 50, 55, 56). The purchasers of the bonds did not rely upon any apparent title to the property they now claim. They rely, as they say, upon the certificate of the Governor, on the State bonds and his letter and proclamation, the statutes of Florida, and the declarations of the brokers.

The Dutch bill itself explicitly states that the F. C. Co. bonds were executed for the purpose of paying private debts. (Rec. Folio 420) That after the issuance of the State bonds, the management of the J. P. & M. Co. took possession of the F. C. Co. road and treated it as a part of its line; it does not pretend that any title was acquired. It does allege that the J. P. &. M. Co. conveyed it to trustees in the year 1871, by deed, but this is disproved by the deed itself. (Rec. Folio 3991). The bill itself, then, rests solely upon the claim that the J. P. & M. Co. acquired the F. C. road as a part of its line and that, by force of that circumstance, the equity of the holders of the State bonds attaches to it. It is clear that such a claim has not the slightest foundation.

If it is of any consequence, it is insisted that the proof demonstrates such a state of public notoriety, even in Holland, of the questionable character of the transactions, that every purchaser of a bond, even legally valid upon its face, as these are not, would be bound to make inquiry concerning it.

VI.

The testimony of Schutte and his associates taken in Holland was suppressed (Record p. 517), so that we are left in ignorance of what they personally knew; but in cases even of purely commercial paper the rule of law is that, if it be shown to be not valid in fact, according to its tenor, the holder must prove affirmatively that he took it under due, for value, and without notice or fair means of notice of its infirmity. There is no such evidence. Certainly in cases of this character they were bound to know all that was notorious in Florida;—ignorance and good faith in Holland or Siberia will not avail: and in Florida the fraudulent character tainted the whole atmosphere and filled the courts with injunctions and other proceedings.

VII.

The State bonds, void as they were, and all their endorsements referring exclusively to the mortgage bonds of the J. P. & M. Co. and not to those of the F. C. Co., the claimants must at best rest upon the fundamental circumstances of the transactions, in the same way as if they had notice of everything. Their want of knowledge, if such was the fact, cannot create an equity. Going back to the only railroad bond mentioned on the State bonds (Record p. 255), we find it to be the bond of the J. P. & M. Co., payable to the State of Florida only and, of course, not negotiable. It purports to be issued under the act of the 28th of January, 1870, in exchange for bonds of the State issued to the J. P. & M. Co. for an equal amount. There is no statement of or reference to any mortgage, or particular distance of road. They, therefore, who rely upon such paper must rest their rights upon the actual state of things, in the same way as if they had been parties to them all.

The F. C. Co. bonds (Record p. 254) are also non-negotiable, payable to the State alone, and purport on their face to be issued under the act of the 28th of January, 1870, and to be given in exchange for bonds issued by the State to aid the J. P. & M. Co. to complete, equip and maintain its road; but the State bonds delivered by the Governor to Coddington and Houstoun numbered from 3000 to 4000, did not purport and were not certified to have been issued in exchange for them, but they all purported, and were certified to be, in aid of the other company, and secured by its bonds (see the bonds on file). Any one, therefore, claiming an equity in the F. C. Co. bonds and the property of the company, must show that they were lawfully issued for the purpose to which they were applied. But the Dutch bill alleges and the evidence conclusively proves that they were not in fact created or issued for such a purpose, and that they were not devoted to it, but were made the pretence for putting out 1000 of the State bonds that did not purport to be issued on the faith of them, or to have any reference to the transactions of the F. C. Co. If, in such a case, the F. C. Co. had been a corporation sole, and had itself sold the State bonds, how could the transaction create an equitable mortgage or other lien upon the real estate of the company? Obtaining money on void paper or on false representations does not create a lien upon real estate. The injured party may cause the guilty to be punished, but, as a creditor, he stands like every other creditor, and may be entitled to recover back his money. How much more is this true when it was an entirely different corporation that obtained the State bonds, and whose agents disposed of them.

VIII.

This a case of general equity jurisprudence and it is not, therefore, controlled by State adjudications if any such have been had; Pine Grove vs. Talcot, 18 Wall. p, 666. But the Florida court, whose opinion of the law is relied upon to sustain the claim of the bondholder, found that the facts did not exist to which its law would apply, and its assumption of facts is in important respects entirely unfounded. Its opinion, therefore, was a mere abstraction and on no principle controlling in this court.

IX.

The State (even if all the transactions had been legal and fair) did not, and could not under its law, occupy the position of a trustee or a surety in respect of the property. Its bonds were issued in its sovereign character, and it rested in its own political discretion whether it would avail itself of the security or "debt," as it is called in the act of 1869, it had chosen to take from the company. The State might have refused to pay its valid obligations and at the same time refused to appropriate its security for that purpose, or have released it altogether, without there being any judicial redress open to its bondholders. The endorsement of the Governor that a mortgage to the State by the company was a further security to the bondholder, was entirely unauthorized. The statute made no such declaration. As the transaction, if valid, would have been purely an exchange of bonds merely, each importing a separate and distinct obligation, so the issue of State obligations being void, the bond and mortgage transaction, as the essential part of it, was also void, the State officers having no authority to receive such a mortgage for such a purpose, and clearly none to receive it without issuing State bonds. Even between private parties, the raising money upon a void mortgage cannot give the lender a lien upon the mortgaged property. To hold this would be to say that, for all practical purposes, a void mortgage is just as effectual as a valid one. It is true the act provided that it should be "lawful" for the Governor to enter for default and sell; and, if he sold for cash, the money should be held in trust for the bondholders, but this was declaring a trust after a valid transaction should be wound up in a certain way. Can it be denied that any stockholder or taxpayer could have enjoined the exchange of bonds as illegal, or the deposit of railroad bonds without exchange?

There was no action between the companies providing for the issue of the bonds of the F. C. Co., for the benefit of the other. The pretended vote of the 2d June, 2870, (Rec. p. 1334), provided for a transaction entirely outside of any statute, and made no reference whatever to their being deposited with the Governor, or to their being used in aid of the J. P. & M. Co., or to their being a basis for the issue of State bonds. It is true the papers themselves did so purport, but there is no pretence that they were ever seen or heard of by any State bondholder. The meeting itself was a sham. (Dig. p. 46).

XI.

The F. C. Co. had no power to issue bonds in any form to aid other roads. We have already shown that its charter did not authorize it to mortgage its road at all, and that the acts of June 24, 1869, and January, 1870, cannot be construed as conferring any such powers upon this company. But, if the statute had expressly authorized it, such action would have been invalid, without the consent of every stockholder, it being entirely beyond and different from the enterprise into which the stockholders had entered. Some stockholders did object (Dig. p. 36-46) and suits and injunctions were resorted to. (Rec. p. 859-871.)

XII.

There was no instrument of mortgage by the F. C. Co., or attempt at any. The statutory mortgage in the act of 1869 (Sec. 11) was exclusively of the property of the J. P. & M. Co. and for the bonds of that company only; and the amended act of 1870 (Sec. 3) is in this respect precisely the same, and refers to the bonds mentioned in section 2 of that act, and not to any other, while section 4, above quoted, only calls for a deposit of "first mortgage bonds," and does not profess to create any lien upon any property. It only provides by the use of the words "first mortgage," that such a mortgage must be made in order to authorize the issue of the bonds in that section named. The bonds of the F. C. Co. (Rec p. 1105) do not profess to create or promise any mortgage or lien, but refer to the law. Therefore, if these provisions authorize the F. C. Co. to do anything, whatever it has done, it has certainly not made or undertaken to make any mortgage ; and the 1,000 State bonds were issued on bonds that if they were the bonds of the company, were not and did not purport to be mortgage bonds.

The property of the F. C. Co. is real estate, and on any principle yet known to equity law, it can only be charged with a lien, either in favor of the vendor, or an equitable mortgagee, by the authorized deposit of the title deeds, or by an authorized conveyance in writing by the agents of the company, or by the provisions of the statute. None of these conditions existed. Even the making of an illegal mortgage by a party borrowing money, does not give the lender any special equity against the property.

It follows that if the Dutch holders are entitled to any interest in these company bonds, it is simply the interest of an unsecured creditor.

XIII.

The claim that the F. C.Co. is estopped to deny that its road is charged with a mortgage or lien for the payment of these bonds, is unfounded. Estoppels by record and by deed may be laid out of view, for there is no pretence that any such record or deed exists. An estoppel in pais must be relied upon. This estoppel exists only when the speech or conduct of one person has led another, who knowing it, relied upon it, to do something which he otherwise would not have done. The bill, so far as it relates to the F. C. Co., makes no such allegation, and it is demonstrated that the bondholders, when they took their bonds, did not know and had never heard of any action whatever of the F. C. Co. or its officers.

(a.) The agreement between Swepson and Littlefield, and the commissioners, of 16th April, 1870 (Rec.p.p317 and 566) is disposed of by the fact that Swepson had no authority from the directors to make it, and his mere office of president, if he then held it, does not include such power.

(b.) Before the bonds were used, all action of the company about then had been rescinded by the resolution of 21st November, 1870, and the bonds ordered to be destroyed and they had been returned and the State bonds restored.

(c.) The pretended resolution of 13th April, 1871, did not exist in fact and, if any stockholders at all were present, the meeting was entirely illegal, there having been no adjournment of a previous meeting to that time.

(d.) The bond-takers never relied upon or heard of any such action.

(e.) If they had, they would have seen that such an exchange and disposition of bonds was illegal and fraudulent.

(f.) A mortgage cannot be created out of whole cloth by estoppel.

(g.) Had the settlement been entirely fair and true, it was entered into under a mistake of facts, rights and duties, and not having led any one into an investment, it concludes no one.

(h.) If the F. C. Co. itself had put out the State bonds in the form they were, and received the cash on them, there could be no estoppel to deny that its road was mortgaged, for the State bonds did not so purport, but the reverse, and it was never alleged to anybody that it was. It was not even stated in any paper or document of the companies or State sent abroad that the J. P. & M. statutory mortgage covered the road from Jacksonville to Lake City.

As to the North Carolina Company.

In addition to the points submitted by Mr. Stewart, it is insisted:

I.

The money of the company was, by its agent, invested in the bonds of the P. and G. and T. companies that were turned in as payment on the sale of those roads. On admitted principles of jurisprudence the company was the owner of those bonds and, as such, had a mortgage interest in the property, which could not be divested without its consent. There is no pretence that it consented, unless the subsequent action of the N. C. commissioners had that effect.

II.

The North Carolina act (Rec. p. 955) was not to take effect until assented to by the company (sec. 3). There is no evidence of any action of the company assenting thereto.

III.

The act appointed Woodfin, etc., "a commission to examine "and fully investigate the condition and affairs of the Western "Division, North Carolina Railroad Company, as far as concerns "the administration of G. W. Swepson, late president thereof, and "to make a full and final settlement of all accounts and liabilities "of said president, G. W. Swepson, in connection with said company." It made it the duty of the commission "to collect and "receive the funds and other assets belonging to said company and "due from said G. W. Swepson and all other officers of said company elected or appointed since its organization, and to place the "same in some safe bank," etc. This was their whole authority, and it is insisted that it conferred no power to enter into any arrangement for the disposition of any State bonds in any form. The duties of the commission were, First, to make a settlement of the accounts and liabilities of the president. That duty only involved the definite ascertainment of a balance. The next duty was to collect and receive the funds and other assets belonging to the company and due from Swepson. Such a duty could not involve the entering into executory contracts for putting securities of any kind upon the market. The funds and assets of the company which they were to collect were neither the Florida State bonds nor the bonds of the Florida Central Co. They were embezzeled money and the thing for which the money had been paid out, viz: shares of stock in the Florida Central, and the first mortgage bonds of the P. & G. and T. companies, and nothing else. Any contract, therefore, with Swepson and Hopkins, or any one else, looking to the raising of money by a sale of the Florida State bonds was entirely outside of their powers, and cannot bind the State of North Carolina, or the N. C. corporation.

IV.

The arrangement, such as it was, appears first in a paper without date. verified 15th August, 1870 (Rec. p. 317). It recited that Swepson had conveyed the roads to Littlefield, subject to the payment of the N. C. claim, and that Littlefield had received authority from the legislature of Florida and the railroad companies, to receive State bonds, and had made a contract with Hopkins for their disposition, for the purpose of paying existing liabilities, etc. It then provided that out of the proceeds of the sale certain sums should be paid to the commissioners. This certainly did not involve the commissioners in any responsibility concerning the bonds. As to them, it was simply an agreement to receive money.

The next paper is of the 16th April, 1870 (Rec p. 319), which recites, apparently, the last named paper, and in it the commissioners agree to release Swepson when he shall have given certain further securities named.

The next paper is an order by Littlefield on Hopkins, New York, August, 1870 (Rec. p. 1008), directing him to pay the money which may come into his hands from the sale of any bonds, over to the treasurer of the N. C. Co., according to the contract of April.

The next paper is a letter from Woodfin, to Hopkins, New York, 11th August, 1870 (Rec. p. 1009), stating he had handed Hopkins a copy of the contract of April 16th, by which it was stipulated that the N. C. Co should receive one-half of the proceeds of the sale of certain State bonds, etc., and asking an acknowledgment.

The next paper is a letter from Hopkins to Woodfin of the same, date (Record p. 1009), acknowledging the receipt of the previous letter and contract, and saying they shall have the attention to which they are entitled.

The next paper is dated at London, 10th November, 1870, (Record p. 324). It refers to the agreement of the 16th of April, and recites that the J. P. & M. have received certain bonds of the State of Florida under sundry acts of the Legislature. That the commission is pressing immediate payment from the J. P. & M. Co. of $1,287,436.03. It then purports to stipulate that, in order to avoid a hasty sale by the J. P. & M. Co. of the bonds and to satisfy the claim of the commissioners, a certain quantity of iron shall be delivered, and in addition, that the J. P. & M. Co. does "sell and deliver" to the commissioners 800 bonds of the State of Florida, the numbers to be designated by the J. P. & M. Co., but that the bonds shall be left with Hopkins for sale at such price as the commissioners may direct. That when the foregoing undertaking shall be performed, it shall be a final discharge. This paper is endorsed by Hopkins on the same day, agreeing to perform the stipulations as to the iron. This was an executory agreement respecting iron and for the sale of certain bonds thereafter to be designated by numbers by the J. P. & M. Co. This argreement was entirely beyond the powers of the commission. If valid, it imported no warranty and operated no estoppel on their part. No particular bonds were agreed upon, and if any of the bonds issued were legal, it could not be construed as affirming the legality of others not legal. The 1000 bonds in question were not then in the hands of Hopkins. They were in the possession of the State Treasurer in Florida, unissued, and there remained until the 11th of January, 1871. They did not come into the hands of Hopkins until the 18th of April, 1871. (Dig. p. 49.)

The next paper is a letter from Littlefield to Hopkins of the 16th of November, 1870 (Record p. 747), referring to the argreement of the 10th of November, and directing Hopkins to place 800 State bonds to the order of the N. C. Co., etc., but without designating the numbers.

The next paper is a letter dated the 16th of November, 1870, (Record p. 1014), from Woodfin to Hopkins, instructing Hopkins to sell the 800 bonds of the State of Florida, given in aid of the J. P. & M. Co., "now lodged with you," at a certain price.

The next paper is a letter dated the 16th of November, 1870, from Hopkins to Woodfin (Record p. 1014), acknowledging the receipt of the preceding letter and the order of Littlefield, and agreeing to hold the bonds, without giving any numbers, as agents for the N. C. Co.

The next paper is a letter from Woodfin, etc., to Hopkins, London, the 3rd of April, 1871 (Record p. 1015), advising draft £10,000 as an advance against 800 Florida State bonds, held by him for negotiation, etc.

The next paper is an agreement between the commissioners and the J. P. & M. Co., dated 15th of June 1872, (Record p. 988), by which it was agreed that all claim of the commissioners upon any of the State bonds should be released on payment of $200,000, but saving and reserving all equities, liens, etc., whatever they might be, against the property. This was followed by an order of the New York Supreme Court of the 27th of December, 1872 (Record p. 987), referring to the last mentioned paper and, by consent, directing that the New York Trust Company should pay $200,000 to the commissioners, out of the first proceeds of the bonds which should be paid into the Trust Company in pursuance of the order of the 6th of December, 1872 (Rec. p. 31), which had directed the bonds to be delivered to Collinson.

This covers all the operations between the commissioners, Littlefield and Hopkins, important in this connection, touching the bonds. At this last date, even, when the draft was drawn, the 1000 State bonds had not reached the hands of Hopkins, and when they did reach him in the manner already stated, they were not sold, but went back to New York and were judicially impounded, and so remained until after the consent decree in London in 1872, to which the N. C. commissioners were not parties (Rec. p. 28), and until after the consent order in the New York case of the 6th December, 1872, to which the N. C. commissioners were parties (Rec. p. 31).

There is no pretence that the commissioners had any knowledge of the history of these bonds, but it appears that they took the steps they did, upon the supposition that the bonds were valid State bonds which, when disposed of, would furnish means to the parties responsible to the commissioners for the N. C. embezzled money, to repay it. No step of theirs induced the J. P. & M. Co., or its agents, to dispose of them, and the final and only effective transactions of the commission and which was to supersede all previous arrangements, only provided for their receiving money which might be raised by a disposition of the bonds by the people and in the interest existing entirely independent of the commissioners. Such steps, it is insisted, could have no effect as an estoppel against insisting upon the fundamental and pre-existing lien of the N. C. road on the property, even if the purchasers of the bonds had been informed of every step so taken by the commissioners. But neither the purchasers nor their agents ever relied upon or had any information of the fact that the N. C. commissioners had said anything or done anything upon the subject.

V.

The N. C. Commissioners had no connection whatever with the 2800 bonds sold by Hopkins. And the 2800 bonds sold by Hopkins to Collinson were the only bonds that Hopkins ever sold. (Rec. Folios 1747-48 and 2729). The 1000 bonds appear to have been disposed of as follows:

Lost	2
Returned to Florida and sold	224
Leaving	774
Deposited in Bank of England	568
Leaving	206

These bonds were not disposed of until after the last agreement between the commissioners and Hopkins. Hopkins says that 800 were placed in the hands of the Receiver of the Supreme Court, and 200 were delivered to the representatives of the J. P. & M. Co. (Rec. Folio 1748), 224 were cancelled, 568 tied up in Chancery in England, and the remainder went into the possession of Collinson to pay interest on maturing bonds, and that Hopkins sold none of them. (Rec. Folio 1748–9.) It thus appears that Hopkins never put out any of these bonds under the agreement with the commissioners. They had no agreement with Collinson. Hopkins disappearing from the scene, the further transactions were between Collinson and Chase trustee of J. P. & M. Co., by agreement of 29th August, 1872, to which the comissioners were no parties. (Rec. Folio 1624.) Whatever of these bonds, then, that got out through Collinson, could not have been taken by the holders in consequence of any of the agreements with the commissioners. At most, then, the bondholders and the commissioners were equally acting under a misapprehension of law and fact, and as neither were influenced by the action of the others, both parties must be remitted to their independent and original rights, whatever they were.

VI.

The deeds from the internal improvement trustees to Dibble by name, conveyed the title to the two sold roads. The deed from Dibble to Swepson, dated April 22, 1869 (Rec. p. 299), conveyed the same estate to him. The subsequent act of incorporation (of June 24, 1869, Rec. p. 300) of Dibble and associates as the Tallahassee Co., even admitting that it would otherwise have invested them with the estate, could not operate to divest the estate of Swepson. But the act of incorporation could not so operate in law. The title to the property was vested, by the deed of the trustees, in Dibble alone. In such a case an act incorporating Dibble and several others, for the purpose of operating the property, could not on its face operate to invest the corporate being with Dibble's personal title, any more than it could had Dibble's name been left out of the act. The two beings were entirely distinct and separate in law. The act, therefore, did not vest the corporation with an apparent title, which might have been good in the hands of an innocent purchaser, without notice of Dibble's deed to Swepson. It follows, therefore, that the legal title to the property, as well as the apparent title, remains in Swepson.

The paper purporting to be a deed without date (Rec. p. 952) from Dibble and others to the Tallahassee Co. was entirely inoperative on its face. There were five wives named in the deed who did not sign. There was no date or acknowledgment. And, so far as appears, there was neither delivery or record. Nobody, therefore, ever relied or could have relied on any apparent title arising from that paper.

In this attitude, if the bondholders have any lien upon the property at all, it must be subject to the prior equity created by the prior deeds.

The very act itself declares (which was quite unnecessary) that "any deed of trust, mortgage, conveyance, bond or bonds, "or security, which may have been executed, made, created or "contracted for, as a lien on said railroads or otherwise" by Dibble, prior to the passage of the act, shall be valid and effectual to all intents, etc. This provision is exhaustive. It is not limited to an ordinary railroad mortgage, but it is universal, and inclusive of every species of interest that Dibble could have created in the estate. One loaning money on the credit of the sold roads, then, on examining the title, would have traced it regularly to Dibble personally. He would then have found this subsequent act of incorporation, and would have been put on inquiry as to what Dibble had done with the estate meantime. Looking to the registry records he would have found no record that Dibble had conveyed either to Swepson or to the corporation, and, if he supposed that the act of incorporation transferred the estate and freed it from prior unregistered conveyances, he would have seen that the act declared that, if any such conveyances had been made, they had become a statutory lien, for the act so declared. It is plain, therefore, that whatever may be the effect of the act as a mere transfer of the title from Dibble to the corporation, the principle of caveat emptor applies.

VII.

But, if it could be supposed that the rights of the N. C. Co. have been in any way affected by estoppel, they can only be affected to the extent that the conduct of the commissioners may be supposed to have injured or misled the bondholders. As has been shown, only 206 of the bonds can have any possible relation to the action of the commissioners. The utmost consequence, then, would be that the trust claim of the N C. Co., as the equitable owner of the old bonds of the roads, which were turned in on the sale, must be diminished by the amount advanced by the bond holders on the faith of the 206 bonds, and no further.

OF THE

UNITED STATES,

OCTOBER TERM, 1880.

Florida Central Railroad Company, Appellant, vs. J. Fred Schutte, et al., Appellees.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, Appellant, vs. Schutte, et al., Appellees.

The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, Appellant, vs. Drew, et al., Appellees.

DIGEST OF THE RECORD.

DIGEST OF RECORD.

The chronology of the filing of the several bills touching this controversy in the Circuit Court for the Northern District of Florida is as follows:

First, the bill of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Company vs. Drew et al. was filed Feb. 9th, 1877.

The bill of the same Company vs. Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company et al., was filed March 8th, 1877.

The bill of Schutte et al. vs. Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company et al. was filed May 23d, 1877.

The cross-bill of the Florida Central Company vs. The Western Division Company et al., was filed July 20th, 1877.

The cross-bill of the Florida Central Company vs. Schutte et al. was filed July 30th, 1877.

The supplemental bill of the Western Division Company vs. Drew et al. was filed May 21st, 1879.

The first bill of the Western Division Company states that it is a North Carolina corporation; that for the purpose of constructing the railroad, it was in the year 1868 the owner of the $6,000,000 of bonds of the State of North Carolina in the hands of Swepson, its president and agent; that Swepson, under color of its being for the company's use, raised on said bonds in the city of New York about $3,000,000; that Swepson in breach of his duty placed about $1,000,000 of said money in the hands of Houstoun, who had notice that this was the orator's money; that Houstoun, conspiring with Swepson, invested this money, among other things, in the purchase of about 4,370 shares of the Florida Central Company, a corporation of Florida; that in October, 1869, Swepson ceased to be president of orator's company and Littlefield succeeded him, whereupon Swepson transferred said shares of stock to Littlefield; that in the Summer of 1867, the orator was informed of the fact of this breach of trust and that its money had been so used, and also used in the purchase of certain bonds called the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad bonds, and that said stock had been pledged by Swepson and Littlefield with Houstoun for a debt of Littlefield and was about to be unlawfully sold, whereupon the orator instituted suit in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, enjoining such sale; that Houstoun fled with the stock from New York to Georgia; that the Florida Central Company, a corporation of Florida, owns and operates a railroad from Jacksonville to Lake City, in that State, and that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, a corporation of Florida, owns and operates a railroad from Lake City westward; that by an act of the Legislature of Florida passed the 24th of June, 1869, and certain amendatory acts, the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company was authorized to issue its bonds to the amount of $16,000 per mile, to be exchanged for bonds of the State of Florida of like amount, which were required by said law to be applied to the building and completing of the road of said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company; that said act secured to the State of Florida and the holders of said bonds, a statutory lien on said railroad, but the Florida Central Company was not mentioned in the act and was no party to the transaction; that in 1870, Swepson was president of the Florida Central, and without authority caused to be printed bonds of the Florida Central to the amount of $1,000,000, and without authority signed the same as president, and caused the same also to be signed by Thompson as its treasurer; that said Thompson was never treasurer of said company and had no right to sign the same; that said bonds so signed were wholly false and fraudulent; that on or about the 13th of May, 1870, by an arrangement between Swepson, Houstoun and Littlefield, Littlefield gave his draft to Houstoun for about $163,000, and deposited with Houstoun, as collateral security therefor, the 4,370 shares of Florida Central stock before mentioned and 103 of Pensacola and Georgia Railroad bonds, making in all about $537,000; that on the 30th of May, 1870, and before the maturity of the draft, Houstoun and Littlefield agreed to issue bonds of the Florida Central Company to the amount of $1,000,000 for the alleged benefit of the stockholders of that company, which also were placed in the hands of Houstoun as further security for said draft of Littlefield; that on the 7th of June, 1870, and before the maturity of the draft, Houstoun and Littlefield made another agreement by which the said $1,000,000 of bonds were to be returned to the company, and coupon bonds payable to bearer were to be issued in their place, the proceeds of which, except $340,000, were to be applied to the payment of certain private debts; that when the project of issuing said $1,000,000 of bonds came to the knowledge of the board of directors of the Florida Company, the transaction was repudiated and two stockholders, Gamble and Westcott, filed bills enjoining their issue; that under the act of the Legislature of Florida of the 24th of June, 1869, and on or about the 1st of June, 1870, there were issued and placed in the hands of Reed, its Governor, 4,000 bonds of $1,000 each, consecutively numbered, for the purpose of being exchanged for the bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, and were so registered in the office of the State treasurer; that of these bonds, Reed, on the part of the State, handed over to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile company 3,000, numbered from 1 to 3,000; that in the year 1871, Littlefield paid Houstoun the $163,000 draft; that afterward one Coddington induced Houstoun to let Coddington take the $1,000,000 of said false bonds of the Florida Central and $1,000,000 of said State bonds; that at this time Houstoun had deposited the Florida Central bonds with Gamble the Comptroller of the State, by whom they were held subject to the injunction in the suit of Gamble and Westcott; that this injunction was agreed to be waived or dismissed on the payment of certain sums to Houstoun, Gamble, Westcott and others, amounting to about $650,000; that under an agreement between Houstoun, Coddington and Littlefield, Coddington was authorized to obtain from Reed said 1,000 State bonds to be issued for the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company; that with said transactions the Florida Central Company had nothing to do; that by these transactions Coddington got possession of the Florida Central Company's bonds and exchanged them for the State bonds as aforesaid; that Florida Central bonds were never delivered to or in the possession of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, and were never its property, but were received by Coddington under an individual agreement between him, Gamble, Westcott and others, including Reed, who, pursuant to said illegal arrangement, delivered the State bonds to Coddington personally, who immediately escaped from the State of Florida with the same to avoid legal proceedings on the part of the stockholders; that such bonds to be valid at all required the certificate of the Governor of Florida, stating that they were issued pursuant to law and for the special purposes specified, but that such certificate was never affixed to said bonds and that the same, for the reasons before mentioned, were entirely null and void, and that the same were cancelled by a resolution of the board of directors of the Florida Central Company and for that purpose returned to said Houstoun by the Governor by endorsement thereon, thereby divesting all title of the State of Florida thereto, if any such ever existed; that Houstoun applied to the Florida Central Company for new bonds in place thereof, which were never issued; that said Houstoun afterward brought said bonds to the State of Florida and wrongfully and fraudulently obtained the seal of said company and caused to same to be impressed upon said bonds. Folios 1 to 13.

That said false bonds were afterward placed in the custody of the treasurer of the State, who now holds the same without right and without consideration, and that the same ought to be surrendered to the company; that the treasurer and Drew, the governor of Florida, pretend to some right thereto and threaten to use the same; that after Coddington had so got possession of said Florida Central bonds and escaped from Florida, he took them to New York and then proceeded to London in the year 1871; that said State bonds numbered from from 3,001 to 4,000, remained in New York in some judicial custody until 1872, when one Chase proceeded to London as the agent of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company and of said Littlefield, for the purpose of arranging to retire said State bonds and to issue first mortgage bonds to the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company, but without any authority to act for the Florida Central Company; that at this time the State bonds obtained by the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company amounted to 4,000, of which 1,200 remained undisposed of in London and New York. Folios 13 and 14.

That no part of said bonds issued in pretended exchange for Florida Central bonds were sold previous to July, 1872. Folio 15. That long prior to this time all parties in interest had full notice of the fraudulent character of said 1,000 State bonds pretended to be exchanged for Florida Central bonds. Folios 15 and 16. That Reed, Governor of Florida, was impeached for his share in the transaction. Folio 16. That the directors of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company on 10th Dec., 1870, by resolution declared the whole of said bonds issued fraudulent, and required the return of their bonds, and sent said resolution to the parties claiming to be in interest in London. Folio 17. That Reed was privy to the corrupt transactions by which the pretended Florida Central bonds were issued and exchanged, and was corruptly interested therein. Folio 17. That the State of Florida is affected by such knowledge and conduct, and that said Florida Central Company is in no manner bound by any of said transactions. Folios 17 and 18.

That at this time litigation was pending both in England and New York, touching the said bonds, but to which the Florida Company was not a party. Folio 18.

That a consent decree was taken in the English suit to which Collinson was a party, by which decree 166 of the State bonds were sold by Collinson, which still left 34 of the first issue of the bonds on hand in London. Folio 18.

That by said decree Chase gave 40 bonds to Collinson to apply on a breach of contract of Hopkins & Co., which disposed of all of the first issue, together with six of the second issue. One hundred and ninety-two bonds of said second issue were ordered to be delivered to Collinson to secure the interest on the whole of said bonds due in January, 1873, leaving 1,800 bonds of the second issue in New York to be delivered to Collinson under said decree. Folio 19. That by said decree 224 bonds were ordered to be returned to the State of Florida and cancelled, which was done. That 576 bonds of the second issue were taken by Collinson under said decree, from New York to England, but were to be held subject to the order of the State of Florida or the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company. Folio 19.

That none of the Florida Central bonds were issued by its authority or for its benefit, and that the whole proceeding as to the Florida Central Company was null and void. Folio 20. That during all this time Houstoun, Coddington and Reed had full notice of the wrong attempted against the orator and that the orator had suits pending for the purpose of protecting its rights in the premises, of which they had notice Folio 20. That the Dutch defendants pretend to have in some way acquired an interest in said bonds of the Florida Company, although they claimed that all the said bonds were issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company. Folio 21. That in the proclamation of Reed, Governor, of 2d Dec., 1872, touching the matter, the Florida Central Company was not referred to as in any way affected by the transaction. Folio 21. That Sherwin on the 30th

Dec., 1876, professing to represent the Dutch bondholders but having no authority so to do, petitioned the Governor of Florida to seize the Florida Central road and sell the same for default of payment of interest. Folio 22. That thereupon Stearns, then Governor, did seize and advertise the road to be sold on 2d April, 1877. Folio 22. That the orator, as well as the Florida Central Company, soon afterwards protested to the then Governor, Drew, against the legality of the transaction, but that the Governor did not regard such protest or give up the seizure. Folio 23. That the Acts of the Legislature of Florida, of 24th June, 1869, and the 28th January, 1870, had no application to the Florida Central Company, and that if they had, their provisions were not complied with in respect of issuing and exchange of bonds for want of a certificate by the president that the road was completed and in good running order, and that there was no law authorizing the Florida Central to issue bonds for the benefit of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company, or for the latter to accept the same, or to issue bonds to the State of Florida, and that the constitution of Florida conferred no authority upon the Legislature to pass laws for any such purpose. Folios 24 and 25. That the Act of the 28th January, 1870, did not change the charter of the Florida Central Company, and that company never accepted the same. Folio 26. That the Florida Central Company was embarrassed by internal controversies and different and contesting boards of direction and management, and is so situated that the orator cannot have relief through the action of that company, and so stands upon its right to follow its funds, which have gone into the stock of said company. Folio 28. That the proceedings of the Governor undertaking to sell the road were so indefinite that it cannot be ascertained what sum, if any, the Florida Central ought to pay in order to preserve its road from the sale. Folio 29. That the orator offers to pay whatever interest on the 206 State bonds, if the same are valid against it, shall turn out to be equitably due from said company, and to pay all just charges in the premises which may be adjudicated by the Court. Folio 29. The bill then prays for an injunction and for special and general relief.

A copy of the Florida Central bonds in controversy, signed by Swepson and Thompson, appears in Folio 40, and on its face puts the holder on inquiry into the lawfulness of its issue.

The written contract touching the transfer of stock and bonds between Houstoun and Littlefield, appears in schedules C, and D, Folios 41-2-3-4 and 5.

The final disposition of the proceeds of the draft of Littlefield on Hopkins through Coddington, appears in schedule F, Folio 46.

The action of the board of directors of the Florida Central of the 10th of Dec., 1870, in endeavoring to put a stop to these transactions, appears in schedule G, Folio 47.

The consent decree in England appears in schedule H, Folios 48-49 and 50.

The proceedings in the Supreme Court of New York touching the same matter and a decree in furtherance of the English decree and a receipt by Collinson of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile bonds of the last issue, appear in schedule I, Folios 51 & 52.

The proclamation of Reed, Governor, of 2d Dec., 1872, reciting that 4000 bonds were issued in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company and stating that the 224 have been returned and cancelled and 2800, therefore, sold, and that the balance of the 400 belong to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, appears in Folio 53.

The proclamation of seizure and sale of the Florida Central by Governor Stearns of the 30th Dec., 1876, appears in schedule K, Folio 56.

The charter of the Florida Central Company appears in schedule L, Folios 57 and 8.

The action of the board of directors of the Florida Central on 21st Nov., 1870, reciting the action of the 2d June, 1870, adopting the Swepson bonds and providing for an issue of $700,000 of mortgage bonds, appears in schedule M. Folio 59.

The second bill of the Western Division Company omits the Florida Central Company as a party; makes the Comptroller and Attorney-General and Commissioner of Lands, as trustees of the internal improvement fund of the State, and James Gibbs and Spooner new parties, and is directed chiefly to the recovery of its funds used by Swepson to the amount of $720.000, in purchasing bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and the Tallahassee Railroad Company, which companies were succeeded by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company.

The bill alleges:

That Swepson, the orator's president and agent, in breach of his duty, invested $720.000, of the orator's funds in bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and the Tallahassee Companies. That the amount of the bonds so purchased is $1,063,000, and that they were obtained through Littlefield and Houstoun, who had knowledge of the breach of trust. Folios 64 and 5.

That Swepson made no record of the purchase of the bonds, but took them in his own name. Folio 65.

That in March, 1869, the Internal Improvement trustees sold the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee railroads to pay the first mortgage bonds of said company, including the bonds so purchased by Swepson. Folio 65.

That the purchase of said road was made by an association of persons described as F. Dibble and associates, which ultimately included Swepson. That Dibble, &c., were permitted to pay the purchase money by surrendering to the internal improvement trustees the bonds so purchased by Swepson to the amount of $960,300, exclusive of interest, and the paper of Swepson for $472,065, which paper was unlawfully accepted by the trustees as representing the outstanding portion of these railroads bonds, and that no other payment was made at the time of the sale. Folio 66.

That on the occasion of the sale Dibble, &c., declared a trust on the property in favor of Swepson for the $960,300 of said bonds and for his paper, being the entire purchase consideration. Folio 66. That this declaration of trust made the said purchase consideration a prior lien upon the property and that the same has never been discharged or extinguished. This declaration of trust appears in schedule A, Folio 113. That the declaration of trust provided also for obtaining an act of incorporation of the purchasers of the property; that the internal improvement trustees accordingly conveyed both said roads to Dibble for himself and associates. Folio 67. These conveyances appear in schedules B and C, Folios 115 to 122.

That the paper of Swepson for $472,015, given on the occasion of sale, was a sham, falsely purporting to cover other bonds of said roads than those so purchased with orator's money, but which in fact had no existence, and that said paper was not intended to be and never has been paid. Folio 68. That on the 24th June, 1869, the Legislature of Florida did incorporate Dibble, &c., under the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, for the purpose of operating the property so purchased, and that by said act the new company was authorized to issue bonds for the purpose of discharging the trust before mentioned, but it was expressly provided that all existing liens and securities upon the property made by Dibble, &c., prior to the passage of the act should remain in force against the property and should not be affected by the act, and that this provision was noticed to all the world and especially to the State of Florida and its officers. Folios 69 and 70. That no bonds were ever issued by said new Tallahassee Company as authorized by the act, although in fact 1500 one thousand dollar bonds were signed by Dibble and placed in the hands of Swepson, but were never used. Folio 70.

That on the 24th of June, 1869, the Legislature of Florida passed an act incorporating the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, the incorporators being Swepson, Littlefield and others. That this last company had no property, but was organized for the purpose of becoming the owner of said Tallahassee Railroad as held under the charter to Dibble and his associates. That under said acts, or one of them, Dibble, etc., conveyed the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads, subject to said trust, to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company. Folio 71.

That the orator's money so invested by Swepson in the bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads and paid to the State trustees on the sale thereof, thus became a first lien and charge upon all said property and followed it into the hands of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company so incorporated, and the orator became in equity the owner of all said property. Folio 72.

That Swepson transferred all such interest as he appeared or pretended to have in said trust agreement of said 22d of April, 1869, and in said property, to Littlefield, who by that time became the president and agent of orator; which transfer Littlefield received for the use and benefit of the orator. Folio 73.

That after said transfer and the incorporation of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, Littlefield caused certain papers called bonds to be executed in the name of said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, professedly under the authority of the acts of the Legislature of Florida of the 24th of June, 1869, and of the 28th of January, 1870, to the amount of $3,000,000, in 3,000 bonds of one thousand dollars each, payable to the State of Florida, and placed the same in the hands of the treasurer of the State for no valuable or lawful consideration, which bonds are now held by the defendant Gwynn as treasurer.

A copy of one of these bonds appears in schedule E, Folio 125, and states the professed authority under which it is issued.

That after said 3,000 bonds were placed in the hands of the treasurer, Swepson, Littlefield and others conspired with Reed, the Governor, to issue so-called bonds of the State, professedly under said acts of the Legislature, as an exchange for said railroad bonds and as a charge against the property of said company, and that the directors of the company, learning thereof, did on the 10th of December, 1870, annul said issue and forbid the use thereof, and demanded the return of the professed railway bonds. Folio 74-5

This action appears in schedule F, Folio 126.

That the orator being advised of this fraudulent use of its money and the issue of said bonds and their going into the hands of Hopkins & Co., of New York, for sale, instituted proceedings in New York for relief, and obtained an injunction against this disposition. Folio 75.

That said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company bonds are still in the hands of Gwynn, treasurer, and are claimed by the officials of the State of Florida. Folio 76.

That the bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee companies, so in equity belonging to the orator and paid over on a purchase of said road, were unlawfully and against the right of the orator destroyed on the 26th of February, 1872, whereby the orator is prevented from particularly describing the same by numbers, etc., and prays a discovery thereof. Folio 77.

That the orator's right to the extent of its money so used is paramount against the property as it respects all subsequent proceedings and issues, good or bad, and that the issue of said 3,000 Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile bonds and of the State bonds was wholly contrary to the constitution of Florida and to law. Folios 78-82.

That if the issue of these bonds was lawful, it could not destroy the pre-existing equitable right and property of the orator in the original bonds against said roads, but must be subject thereto. Folio 82-83.

That after the issuing said 3000 bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company and before the sale of said bonds to be exchanged therefor, the invalidity of the transaction became known to the defendants, and thereupon a new agreement was made between Reed, Governor, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, in the shape of a deed of conveyance, differing from and superseding any supposed statutory arrangement under the acts of 24 June, 1869, and 28th Jan., 1870, which provided in case of default that the Governor of Florida might take possession of the property and run the same for the benefit of the bondholders. Folio 84-5.

That the Dutch bondholders had notice of the premises, but nevertheless claimed some interest in the property as holders of some of said state bonds. Folio 86.

That on the 19th Feb., 1877, the Governor of Florida seized the railroad and advertised the same for sale and still holds the same. Folio 87 and 88.

That none of the said 3000 bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company were ever disposed of after being placed in the hands of the treasurer of the State, who still holds the same without authority of law and against the right and interest of the orator. Folio 88.

That Coddington has got into the possession of $25,000 of coupons of said railroad bonds, under color of a corrupt agreement with Littlefield, &c., and holds the same without right. Folio 90.

That Gibbs claims an interest in a part of said road as an unpaid contractor, but that he has received from the funds of the orator more than he is entitled to. And that Gibbs, under color of a judgment taken by default and a sale thereunder, pretends to have purchased part of said road Folio 90-1-2.

That the road has for five years been in the possession of persons holding under Drew as Governor, who excluded the rightful possessors and took the profits and unlawfully kept or applied the same, and that said Governor and other parties contemplate and threaten other steps injurious to the orator. Folios 93 and 95.

That the orator offers to pay any sum of money in the premises that may be found it, in equity, ought to pay in order to entitle it to relief in respect of its property which has gone into said roads. Folio 97.

That Foster has got possession of part of the earnings of the road. Folio 98.

That the orator has applied to the officers of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company to bring a suit to protect the property and the rights of the orator, which they have declined to do. Folio 98.

The bill then prays for discovery and for special and general relief. Folios 99-112.

An amendment to this last bill was filed on the 3d July, 1877, making some additional parties, and alleging that the defendants had notice of the illegality of the bonds numbered above 3000. Folios 136 to 139.

That the defendants, the claiming bondholders, had no dealings with and gave no credit to the Florida Central Company in the transactions, but bought the Florida bonds on the credit of the State. That these bonds were declared to be issued for the use of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company and did not purport to have, or have in fact, any legal connection with the Florida Central Company; and that the claim that these State bonds were in any way a lien on the property of the Florida Central Company is the result of a conspiracy. Folio 139. And states that pursuant to this conspiracy, Sherwin and others agreed to obtain a reorganization of these railroad companies as per plan appearing in schedule N, Folio 144, and that the Dutch bondholders or some of them, are not the original purchasers of the State bonds, but are confederating with Sherwin and the others in the scheme. Folio 140 to 142.

Drew, the Governor, filed a demurrer to the whole bill and also an answer to the whole bill. Folio 204 to 250. The demurrer was for want of equity as well as sundry technical objections. The answer admits that Swepson obtained the $6,000,000 of North Carolina bonds, but denies that they were the lawful bonds of the State; admits that Swepson purchased 3,100 shares of the Florida Central stock, but with his own money; admits the sale of the stock to Littlefield, but says that the orators knew of it and acquiesced. Admits the incorporation of the Florida companies and refers to the laws affecting them. Alleges that the stockholders of the Florida Central, on the 2d of June, 1870, ratified the action of Swepson in issuing the Florida Central bonds and provided for carrying the arrangement into effect, and alleges that Reed, Governor, delivered to Sanderson, president of the two Florida companies, $4,000,000 State bonds in exchange for $3,000,000 bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company and $1,000,000 of bonds of the Florida Company, and that Sanderson was acting as attorney for the Jackson ville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, and then delivered to Reed two certificates, the one in the record referring to the act of the 24th of June, 1869, signed by Littlefield as president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company and sealed with its seal and stating that he has turned over said bonds in exchange for the State bonds; and that the Florida Central bonds were issued "for and upon a part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville said part or portion of the railroad being from Lake City to Jacksonville, and that said exchange of bonds is asked for the purpose of farther aiding said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company to the speedy completion of its road." Folio 221 and preceding.

The answer claims that the decision of the Supreme Court of Florida on the subject was final and conclusive, and that it is a bar to this proceeding, and claims that as to the stock, the courts of the State of Georgia have exclusive jurisdiction on account of Houstoun's administrator residing there and those courts having taken jurisdiction of the stock Folio 225. It admits that he has taken possession of the road and property of the Florida Central Company for the purpose of sale for the benefit of the bondholders, and alleges that the Dutch holders purchased them on the faith that the bonds were valid against the State and that the State had a lien on all the roads as security, and that the selling bankers, Hopkins & Co., were the agents of both roads as a consolidated line, and alleges that the orator by its action is estopped from making any complaint, and alleges that 3,206 of the State bonds were sold—how many more, he does not know—and refers to the English consent decree, and avers that the orator was a party thereto, being represented by Woodfin, one of the North Carolina Commissioners, acting with the assent of his co-Commissioner; and that such decree and the agreement of the 15th of June, 1872, between the Commissioners and Littlefield, etc., bind the orator. Attaches a copy of the agreement and refers to a later agreement between the same parties of the 10th of November, 1870, changing details, and that orator in the year 1871 brought suit in the courts of New York to enforce these agreements, and that afterward, pursuant to the provisions of said consent decree, said suit was dismissed.

It denies that there have been conflicting boards of directors of the Florida Central Company, but admits that pursuant to a mandamus of a Florida Court, another board was elected who claimed the road, but insists that said mandamus and proceedings under it were null and void. This answer was filed the 19th of May, 1877.

Drew filed another answer to the other suit of the orator, setting up substantially the same history and insisting upon the same defences Folio 253-282.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company filed an answer not admitting the orator's corporate existence or its ownership of the North Carolina, or the frauds of Swepson and others; but admits the sale of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads, their purchase by Dibble and payment thereof by $960,300 of Pensacola, Georgia and Tallahassee bonds and Swepson's check for $472,000, and that Dibble conveyed the roads to Swepson on the 22d of April, 1869. That Dibble and associates were incorporated on the 24th of June, 1869, as the Tallahassee Railroad Company, from Lake City to Quincy, with branches, and that on the same day the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company was incorporated and authorized to construct a line west from Quincy. That by the act and that of the 28th of January, 1870, the company was authorized to exchange bonds to the amount of $16,000 per mile with the State of Florida; that the statutory contract for this purpose was null and void, and insists that the company's bonds are null and void. It admits the issue of 3,000 of the State bonds under said statutory agreement and that Littlefield fraudulently diverted the same; and denies that it ever had delivered to it more than 3,000 of the State bonds, and denies any agreement with the Florida Central Company to receive any bonds of the latter, or that it ever did receive any. It admits that its road had been taken possession of by the officers of the State of Florida, ostensibly for the benefit of the Dutch bondholders, and denies all privity with them and all right on their part. Folio 285-295.

The Florida Central Company filed an answer, averring want of knowledge of many of the allegations of the bill and admitting others. It admits the creation of the $1,000,000 of its bonds by Swepson, but denies his authority to do so, and denies that Thompson was its treasurer; and admits these papers were fraudulently put forth, and alleges that the Dutch bondholders had notice of the fraudulent transaction and want of authority sufficient to charge them, and sets forth letters and telegrams to Collinson and Boissevain, a Dutch banker, from Reed, Governor, and L'Engle, counsel, showing such notice as early as the 18th of December, 1870, while the disposition of the bonds was going on. Folio 299 to 302. Exhibit A, Folio 314.

The Florida Central Company also filed a cross-bill, alleging its charter on 29th July, 1868, and the existence of its road from Jacksonville to Lake City, completed long previous. That its capital stock was fixed at 5500 shares of $100 each. That conflicts have existed between contending boards and about elections, and alleges that 1000 bonds purporting to be those of the company have been issued as under the act of 28th Jan., 1870, and attaches a copy of one of the bonds [Exhibit A, Folio 336], which are now in possession of Gwynn, Treasurer of the State, and denies that they are the bonds of the company; asserts that they are fraudulent and void, and alleges that Thompson purporting to sign them as treasurer was not treasurer, and that the seal of the company was fraudulently attached; and alleges that the act of 28 Jan., 1870, under which said bonds were claimed to be issued, has no relation to or effect upon the Florida Central Company, and that there was no legal authority in the company to issue the bonds under any circumstances. And alleges that said act was invalid, and denies that any State bonds were issued in exchange for its bonds, or that its bonds were ever lawfully delivered to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, or that that company had ever received them, and avers that the bonds were issued under an agreement between Littlefield and Houstoun on the 30th May, 1870, for their benefit, and refers to proof thereof in Exhibits B, C, and E, and avers that the bonds were delivered to Houstoun, who on 11th Jan., 1871, delivered them to Coddington to be disposed of for the benefit of Houstoun. That the bonds on their face were never completed. That the printed certificate attached thereto that they were "issued in accordance with the provisions of the act of the legislature," was not signed by the Governor, but that Reed collusively endorsed the same. That the company, by a resolution of the 21st Nov., 1870, rescinded the resolution previously passed adopting the bonds, and ordered the same to be destroyed, and refers to Exhibit G. Folio 147. Alleges the execution of the 4000 State bonds professedly under the act of 28th Jan., 1870, to be exchanged for the bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, and that after the rescinding resolution of the Florida Central Company, Reed, Governor, with notice, fraudulently exchanged $1,000,000 of State bonds for a like amount of said company's bonds, so illegally issued and recalled, and delivered the same to Coddington as agent of Houstoun under the contract before referred to, and that said company's bonds were deposited with Gwynn, Treasurer. That Drew threatens to sell the road for payment of the same, that the defendants had notice of the illegality and fraud of the bonds, first, by suit pending in Leon County, Florida, in which an injunction order restraining the delivery of the bonds to the State was granted ; second, by despatch sent by Reed, Governor, to Boissevain on 18th Dec., 1870 ; third, by letter of L'Engle of 8th Feb., 1871.

It alleges that none of the State bonds exchanged for the bonds of this company were claimed to have been sold prior to July, 1872, more than a year after the notice. It claims that the issue of the State bonds being unconstitutional, the State, through its officers, had no right, under whatever circumstances, to seize the railroad property under the alleged trust. Folio 310. It alleges collusion, certain of defendants claiming to be bondholders, and the Western Division Company dismissed the original suit in which an injunction was in force in order to seize the railway, and that accordingly attempts have been made to procure the dismissal of said suit, Folio 310. It offers to pay any holder of the 206 bonds if the same shall be adjudged a debt against the company, and prays special and general relief. Folio 311.

The answer of the trustees of the internal improvement fund to both bills of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Company, after stating that they do not know concerning the transactions between the orator and Swepson, or Littlefield and Houstoun Folios 358 to 9, states that on 20th March, 1869, the trustees sold the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad for $1,220,000 and the Tallahassee road for $195,000, and the sum obtained for the Pensacola road exceeded the total amount of all its outstanding bonds, but the sum received for the sale of the Tallahassee road did not equal its outstanding bonds, but the Pensacola bonds were a first lien upon its road and the same with the Tallahassee bonds. Folio 360. That Dibble and associates were the highest bidders and that the sale was not made for cash and the possession was not to be delivered until the purchasers paid, and that they did pay only about $960,000, which was done in the first mortgage bonds of the Pensacola and Tallahassee roads, viz.: $806,000 of the Pensacola at par, and $153,700 of the Tallahassee at 95 cents, and that no other payments have been made on the purchase. Folio 361. That no cash payment was in fact required or made, but that the possession of the roads was delivered to one Robert Walker to hold as the agent of the trustees until the payment of the purchase money should be completed and title deeds delivered. That after the sale and before any payment, Swepson, who was holder of all the bonds paid in on said purchases as aforesaid, negotiated with Dibble and associates to become one of the association and turned over to them said bonds to be used in making the payment. Folios 361 and 362. That on 22d March, 1869, Swepson and the associates with Meeks Attorney-General of Florida, and one of the trustees, held a conference and it was then agreed by Dibble and associates that Swepson should receive the amount paid out by him for bonds and $150,000 more, and such further amount as should be necessary to purchase outstanding bonds, these sums to be realized from the sale of new bonds to be placed in the hands of Swepson and Dibble, and that Swepson should hold one-third of the stock and turn over to Dibble the bonds then in his hands, amounting to about $900,000. Folio 162.

That thereupon the internal improvement trustees directed Meek to prepare a deed of conveyance of the roads to the purchasers and when completed to take the same to New York and consummate the transaction by receiving payment in full and delivering the deeds. Folio 363 and Exhibit B referred to.

That after the execution of the deeds, the board of trustees appointed Dibble and Swepson their confidential agents to take up outstanding bonds and directing the attorney-general and comptroller to turn over to them, or either of them, all moneys received respecting the roads. Folio 364, and Exhibit A, Folio 379.

That the deeds were thereupon at New York delivered to Swepson representing the purchasers, and Swepson delivered to Meek and Gamble $806,600 of the Pensacola and Georgia bonds and $153,700 of Tallahassee bonds. That nothing else was received, except a check or draft drawn by Dibble on Dibble, Worth & Co., New York, an insolvent firm, which check was immediately delivered by Meek to Swepson in exchange for his receipt acknowledging that Swepson had received the sum of $472,065 to be applied to the retirement of the outstanding bonds, no funds or cash passing and no security being given, except that Swepson paid Meek $5,000 for his own benefit. Folio 364.

That these agents reported to the trustees that the purchase money had been fully paid, and thereupon Walker delivered the railroads to Dibble and associates. That the agents reported to the trustees that they had completed the transaction and that they had turned over the purchase money aside from the bonds turned in according to the resolution of the board to Swepson as confidential agent. Folio 365. That the whole transaction by these agents as to the balance of the purchase money was a fraud and sham, in order to get possession of the property. Folio 365. They deny that the bonds so surrendered were purchased with the money of the orator and claim that if they were, the orator, under the circumstances, has no lien on the property. Folio 366. They admit the making on 22d of April, 1869, the instrument marked schedule A, annexed to the bill. Folio 366. They claim that the balance of the purchase money is still a lien upon the property for the benefit of the prior bondholders. Folio 367. They admit the incorporation of the new company by the name of the Tallahassee Company and the passage of the act of the Legislature authorizing the issue of bonds and the final transfer of these two roads to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company as successors under the acts of the 24th of June, 1869, and 24th of January, 1870, and allege that such consolidation occurred after the 28th of June, 1870. Folio 369. They declare that the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds so turned over on the sale of said roads were burned on the 26th of February, 1872, and allege that such destruction was legal and proper and file a list of the bonds destroyed. Folios 370 and 371. They claim that if the orator ever had any right, it has been lost by the lapse of time or estopped by its own conduct and that the bonds were received by the trustees without notice. Folio 371. They admit that the earnings of the roads have gone into the hands of the Treasurer of Florida, but subject to the directions of the Supreme Court of the United States. Folio 372. They allege that by a judgment of the State Court of Duval County, of 4th April, 1874, the unpaid purchase money for said roads was declared to be a lien on all the property, (Folio 375), and that by the judgment of the Supreme Court of the United States in a suit by the State of Florida, the prior lien of the trustees for unpaid purchase money is recognized. (Folio 375.) They allege that the orator was party and privy to the issuance of the State bonds, so called, to the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company and in the sale thereof and received a portion of the proceeds and contracted for receiving other portions, and is, therefore, estopped to complain. (Folios 376 and 377.)

On 21st May, 1879, the Western Division Company, by leave, filed an amendment to the bill, charging that no conveyance of Pensacola, Georgia and Tallahassee railroads, sold on the 20th March, 1869, was made or executed to the Tallahassee Company, or to the J. P. & M. Co. and that no title ever vested in either of said companies, and that on the contrary by a deed executed by Dibble, etc., 22d April, 1869, were conveyed to Swepson, in whom the title still rests; and that neither the Tallahassee Company nor the J. P. & M. had any estate in the property which could be charged with the bonds alleged to have been issued and exchanged. Folios 409–412.

The answer of Coddington to the bill of the North Carolina Company, filed October, 1877, denies all charges of fraud on his part, and states that he believed at the time that the Governor had authority to make the issue and exchange of the bonds, and accordingly agreed to assist in taking the million of dollars of bonds to London for sale, and delivered them to Hopkins by order of Houstoun, Littlefield and Reed. Does not know whether Littlefield and Swepson embezzled the money of the N. C. Co. and insists that the complaint is barred by laches in not prosecuting sooner. Says he has no knowledge of the illegal charge against Littlefield, Swepson or Houstoun. That of the 1,000 bonds, numbered from 3,000 to 4,000, he believes 800 were in 1872 in the hands of the receiver of the Supreme Court of New York, and that the complainants in December, 1872, entered into an arrangement by which they consented that the 800 bonds should be turned over to Collinson for sale, and that the complainants in April, 1870, entered into an agreement with Littlefield and Swepson to get new bonds from the State of Florida, in the place of those so issued, and that they received the proceeds of such arrangement to the extent of $50,000, and that they are chargeable with all the consequences of these acts. He claims that he is a creditor of the J. P. & M. Co. to a large amount and is entitled to a lien on the property for its security. Says that he and Houston got the 1,000 bonds of the F. C. Co. from Gamble on 11th January, 1871, took them to the Governor's office and exchanged them for the 1,000 State bonds, which they carried back to the hotel where they were left with him; and sets out copies of the directions from Reed, Houstoun and Littlefield for the disposition of them. That he received no benefit from the transaction, but the contrary. He asserts that through the whole transaction he was acting as agent of Houstoun and nobody else, and that Houstoun procured an order from the stockholders of the F. C. Co. directing Houstoun to deliver the bonds to Hopkins. Folios 2532–54.

On the 23d May, 1879, the Dutch bondholders, by their solicitor, and not under oath, answered the Western Division bill, denying all its allegations and averring that their own bill is true, and refer to it as a particular answer. Folios 414 and 415.

The bill of the Dutch bondholders against the Western Division Co, the J. P. & M. Co., the F. C. Co. and the various other parties in interest, is only verified by Willard as counsel, upon information received from the Dutch bondholders of his professed clients, and sworn to 23d May, 1877. The date of the filing does not appear. Folio 440.

It alleges the sale of the Pensacola & Georgia and Tallahassee roads by the Florida trustees on 20th March, 1869, conformably to law, for $1,415,000. That Dibble, etc., purchased the roads and paid the purchase money, and received the deeds thereof, and the possession of the property. That part of the purchase was paid by bonds of the corporations where roads were sold. The balance of the money was lawfully placed in the hands of Swepson as agent of the trustees for the purchase of the outstanding bonds. That Dibble, etc., became incorporated under the name of the Tallahassee Company, and that the Tallahassee Company and Dibble conveyed the roads to the J. P. &. M. Co. of which Swepson and Littlefield owned nearly the whole stock. Folio 418. That in 1870 the J. P. & M. Co. obtained from Reed, Governor, 4,000 bonds of $1,000 each, issued in accordance with the law incorporating the J. P. & M. Co. and purporting to obligate the State of Florida to pay the bearer the sums named, with interest at 8 per cent; (copy of bond, Folio 2834.) That the J. P. & M. Co. delivered to the Governor in exchange for these bonds, 3,000 bonds of the J. P. & M. Co., and 1,000 of the F. C. Co., payable to the State of Florida. (Copies Folios 441 and 442.) That these bonds were delivered in order to comply with the terms of the law incorporating the J. P. & M. Co. That Littlefield then owned a large majority of the stock of the F. C. Co. and had contracted with Houstoun, etc., for other stock—substantially the whole. That Littlefield purchased for the purpose of consolidating the J. P. & M. Co. and F. C. Co. That the F. C. bonds were caused to be issued by Houstoun and other stockholders, to enable the J. P. & M. Co. to obtain from the Governor the State bonds, with the agreement that they should be sold and Littlefield pay for the purchased stock out of the proceeds, which he did, except as to Gamble. Folio 419. That the F. C. stockholders had notice of the premises and acquiesced therein. That Littlefield took possession of the F. C. road and treated it as constituting a part of the line of the J. P. & M. Co. That in 1871 the J. P. & M. Co. conveyed the whole of said roads to trustees to pay the debts of the company, and the trustees took possession and operated it some time without objection by the F. C. company Folio 420.

That the J. P. & M. Co. sent the State bonds to England and sold nearly all, through an agent in London, to a banker at 138 pounds per bond. That the buyer resold the same through bankers in Holland to the public, the buyers relying upon the representations of the London agents that the bonds were the lawful obligations of Florida; that the State law provided a security for their payment by a lien on the whole line from Jacksonville west, represented to be owned by the J. P. & M. Co. Folio 421. That the complainants are the owners of a large number of these State bonds, between the Nos. 1 and 3,200, and offer to produce the bonds. That interest from the 1st January, 1873, is due and unpaid, and that they have applied to the Governor to seize the roads, and claim that they have a right to have them sold for the payment of their State bonds. That interest was paid on the bonds to January, 1873, by the agents of the State, by money represented to have been provided by the State. Folio 422. That Vose and other defendants named, claimed to be the owners of unpaid original bonds of the road, with a subsisting lien thereon for payment, etc., but deny that such lien exists. Folios 423–25. That certain of the defendants fraudulently pretending to be stockholders of the F. C. Co, elected a spurious board of directors and issued certificates of stock and are about to issue bonds in the name of the F. C. Co., professedly pursuant to a judgment of a Florida State court alleged to be fraudulent. Folio 426. That the Governor has seized the F. C. and that from Lake City west, advertised the same for sale separately, but they claim that the whole is one property of the J. P. and M. Company, Folio 427. That, with a view to a speedy termination of the matter they entered into a combination with certain persons, as per plan marked D, (Folio 443-47,) which has been prevented by legal proceedings Folio 428. That the Supreme Court of Florida in a suit touching the matter has determined that the complainants have a lien upon the property, and claim such judgment to be conclusive in this case. Folio 429-430. That the North Carolina road united with Littlefield. Swepson, etc , in procuring the Governor to issue to the J. P. and M. Company the State bonds and in all the acts and representations attending the sale thereof. and received a portion of the proceeds, and claimed that they are thereby estopped, Folio 432-3 That L'Engle has illegally got possession of the stock of the Florida Central Company, and brought sundry unjust suits concerning the same. Folios 433-4. That sundry original bonds have been purchased by Littlefield and ought to be turned in for their benefit, Folio 434. That Littlefield has conveyed to the North Carolina Company the stock of the Florida Central Company contrary to equity. Folio 435.

On the 23d of May, 1879, the Dutch, by a solicitor, suggested that the Legislature of North Carolina, by an act of the 13th of March, 1876. repealed the charter of the North Carolina Company. Folio 486.

On the 26th of May, 1879, the Western North Carolina Company under order (Folio 1174), filed its bill, called a bill of revivor, to revive the suits supposed to have been abated by the repeal. Folios 490-496. On the same day the Dutch filed an answer admitting the facts stated for revival. The various answers, etc., were traversed. Folio 504 et seq.

It was stipulated that papers in comptroller's and trustees' offices might be read without proof; Folio 525 ; under this the papers are set out. Folio 526-535.

The North Carolina Co. answers the Dutch bill, 14th July, 1877, by setting out and insisting upon substantially the same case made in its original bill; Folio 584-627 ; and therein set out the transactions with Littlefield, Hopkins and Collinson, by which 800 of the State bonds were to be restored, being an order of Littlefield on Hopkins, dated and accepted 16th Nov., 1870; Folio 614; and letter of North Carolina Commissioners advising of draft against the same. Folio 614-15; Also the agreement between Dibble, &c., and Swepson concerning the railroad bonds and roads of 26th March, 186 9. Folio 628-30. The conveyance by the State authorities of the Tallahassee road to the same on the 8th April, 1869. Folio 634-36. Also further agreement by Dibble to Swepson, purporting to convey all the property to Swepson, to be held for the benefit of a corporation to be created, consisting of Dibble and his associates, and to secure Swepson for all the advances of the purchase money, &c., he had purported to make. Folio 638-9.

On 24th June, 1869, Dibble and associates were incorporated under the name of the Tallahassee Company as successors of the Pensacola and Georgia and old Tallahassee Co., and by sec. 6, authorized the new corporation to issue bonds to secure by mortgage provided, "that any deed of trust, mortgage, conveyance, bond or " bonds, or security which may have been executed, made, created " or contracted for as a lien on said railroads, or otherwise, by said " Franklin Dibble in behalf of himself and his associates prior to " the passage of this act, shall be valid and effectual to all intents, " either at law or in equity as a lien or mortgage or security on " said railroad as if the same had been made by virtue of this act, " and shall in no wise be affected by any provisions thereof." Folios 640-642. Also a copy of a new Tallahassee Company bond. Folio 642. Also partly executed and incomplete deed of conveyance from Dibble and associates, of the roads to the new Tallahassee Co. Folios 643-4. Also the act incorporating the F. C. Co., of 29th July, 1868; Folio 645-6. Also the contract between Houstoun and Littlefield of 13th May, 1870, touching the stock of the F. C. and the 110 bonds of the P. Ga. and Tallahassee Companies; Folios 647-8; Also additional agreement between the same of 30th May, 1870, on same subject; Folio 649-50; Also additional agreement between the same of 7th June, 1870, on same subject., Folio 651-2. Also action of F. C. Co., directors, of 21st Nov., 1870, rescinding the action of 24th June, 1870, touching the issue of the 1000 bonds of F. C. Co., and ordering the same to be destroyed, and providing for an issue not exceeding $700,000 of mortgage bonds as a first lien on the property. Folio 653. Also the receipt by Coddington from Houstoun of the 1000 F C. bonds with other provisions for the disposition of the moneys. Folio 655. Also the action of the board of the J. P. & M. Co., of 10th Dec. 1870, reciting the issue of its bonds in exchange for State bonds pursuant to its act of incorporation, and that such issue was made previous to the complete consolidation of the Tallahassee Company, with it, and the existence of a contract by its president with Swepson. as President of the F. C. Co., and the North Carolina Commissioners, by which the proceeds of the State bonds were to be divided, and declaring that such contract was unauthorized and unlawful and prohibiting the negotiating of such bonds, and directing them to be returned and that notice be given Hopkins & Co. and all others. Folios 656-7. Also the memorandum plan of 12th Jan., 1877, between Sherwin and others, agents of the Dutch and others, for dividing out the property and organizing. Folios 658-661. Also the agreement between Swepson, as President, F. C. Co., and the J. P. and M. Co., Littlefield and the North Carolina Commissioners, concerning the disposition of the difficulty, of about 15th, Aug., 1870. Folios 663-64. Also another agreement between the North Carolina Commissioners and Swepson on the same subject, dated 16th April, 1870. Folios 665-67. Also affidavit of Swepson in New York suit, 3d Oct., 1870, stating the use of the North Carolina Company's money in the transactions, &c. Folios 669-70. Also agreement of settlement 10th Nov., 1870, at London, between Littlefield for self and J. P. & M. Co.. and Woodfin for North Carolina Commissioners. And also articles of impeachment against Reed. Folios 677-8.

The answer of Baker and other directors F. C. Co. to the Dutch bill was filed the 20th of April, 1878, denying its equity as against them and setting forth the grounds thereof. Folios 679-85.

The J. P. and M. Co. answer the Dutch bill, 14th of July, 1877, denying its equity upon substantially the same grounds as those state by other defendants. Folios 694-704.

The answer of L'Engle, filed on the 14th of Sept., 1877, denying the equity of the Dutch bill and setting forth the history of the transactions as previously stated. Folios 704-724. And setting forth proceedings in the suit of L'Engle vs. Littlefield and others in the Florida Court in 1872. Folios 725-742. Also his letter of notice to the Dutch bankers of the 8th of Feb., 1871. Folios 742-46. Also the resolution of the F. C. Co. directors of the 21st of Nov., 1870, rescinding the previous action touching the bonds, etc. Folios 747-8. Also the action of the J. P. and M. Co. of the 10th of Dec., 1870, referring to the disposition of the State bonds and the deposit of the railroad bonds, declaring the same to be without authority and contrary to law, and requiring the railroad to be delivered up, etc. Folio 746-50. Also a writ of mandamus by the Florida Court requiring the election of the directors of the F. C. Co. Folio 752-59. Aalso the action of the stockholders in obedience to said writ; Folio 760; also the contract of the 13th of May, 1870, between Houstoun and Littlefield; Folio 762; also contract of the 12th of April, 1871, between Houstoun and Hopkins & Co.; Folios 763-65; also the decree in the United States Court of Florida in the case of Washington vs. Florida Central Co. et al., appointing a trustee for holding disputed stock, etc.; Folios 766-67; also proceedings at the stockholders' meeting of the 28th of May, 1877, at which said trustee represented a majority of said stock, and wherein L'Engle and associates were elected directors; Folios 769-71; also meeting and organization of the board of directors of May 28th, 1877; Folios 772-73; also letter of notice of June, 1871, by Brevard, counsel for the bondholders of the P. and Ga. and Tallahassee Railroad companies, addressed to the London committee, putting them upon inquiry concerning the whole transaction; Folios 775-781; also articles of impeachment against Reed before referred to. Folios 782-784.

The answer of the F. C. Co. to the Dutch bill denies its equity and states the case substantially as in its cross-bill before referred to, and particularly denies that the Dutch holders purchased without notice and that they are the holders of any Florida bonds issued to or upon the credit of the company; Folios 785-804; and it attaches papers to show that the consolidation of the Tallahassee and J. P. and M. companies had no reference to the F. C. Company; Folios 805-810; also a copy of the alleged F. C. Company bonds, showing the purpose for which they were ostensibly issued; Folios 810-11; also the receipt of Coddington of the 1,000 of such bonds; Folios 812-13; also the petition of Sherwin to Stearns of the 22d of Sept., 1876. Folio 814-16.

On the 30th of July, 1877, the F. C. Company filed its cross-bill in the Dutch case, setting forth the transactions substantially as in its answer and cross-bill in the Western Division Company's case, and praying that the transactions may be declared void and that 1,000 bonds so issued in its name may be cancelled, etc. Folios 822-824. The cross-bill has attached exhibits of the before mentioned proceedings in the Florida court in the case of L'Engle vs. Littlefield and others; Folios 844-859; and the notice of L'Engle to the Dutch bankers; Folios 861-3; and the writ of mandamus of the State Court for the election of stockholders; Folios 864-6; also the agreement between Houstoun and Littlefield of the 13th of May, 1870; Folio 867; also proceedings relating to the stock in suit of Washington; Folios 868-71; also proceedings of stockholders of the 28th of May, 1877, electing directors; Folios 871.74; also meeting and organization of the board so elected; Folio 785; also copy of the alleged F. C. Company bonds issued by Swepson; Folios 877-8; also further agreement of the 30th of May, 1870, between Littlefield and Houstoun; Folios 879-881; also further agreement between same of the 7th June, 1880; Folios 881-3; also receipt of Coddington to Houstoun for F. C. Company bonds Jan. 11, 1871; Folios 883-85; also proceedings of the directors the 21st of Nov., 1870, rescinding former actionas to the bonds and requiring them to be destroyed; Folios 885-6.

On the 10th January, 1879, Schutte, etc., filed a supplemental bill, stating that on the 28th May, 1877, the defendants, combining with one Doggett, met and pretended to be a majority of the stockholders of the F. C. Co., and proceeded to elect directors, who falsely claimed that they were lawfully chosen, for the purpose of defeating some of the rights of the complainants; that such meeting was not called pursuant to law, and asking relief as in the original bill. Folios 2449–50.

Guerrard and others, holders of original Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds, answer the Dutch bill on the 4th of Feb., 1879, setting up their claims as paramount; Folio 888-96.

The Florida trustees answer the Dutch bill on the 22d of Dec., 1877, setting forth the sale of Pensacola and Georgia, and Tallahassee roads on the 20th of March, 1869, for the payment of the bonds which were a first lien on the road; that Dibble, etc., were the highest bidders, but denying that they paid the purchase money, and set forth the circumstances of ostensible payment as before appears in the record, and the transactions of Swepson and Dibble in connection therewith and the representations of Meek, attorney-general, and the proceedings of Gamble, etc., and the representations made to them that the purchase money had been paid, and the execution delivery of the deeds of the property, the incorporation of the new Tallahassee Company and of the J., P. and M. Company as its successor, and the consolidation of the P. and Ga. and T. Companies into one road under said acts of the Legislature, and that the stockholders had notice of the fraudulent transactions at that time, and denying that the bonds claimed by the Dutch were issued in conformity with law, and referring to the statutes on the subject, and denying that they were a lien on the property and insisting that, if the laws were valid, the Governor had no authority to issue the State bonds in the manner that he did, and alleging that the amount of bonds issued was in excess of the law, and alleging notice to all the officers of the State of the preceding transactions, and that the original bonds constituted a prior lien, and setting forth a fraudulent alteration of the act of the 24th of June, 1869, and proceedings against the Governor at the suit of Scott and others to enjoin the issue of any bonds, and the injunction of the Florida Court issued on the 14th of July, 1869, still in force, enjoining Reed against issuing, or signing, or sealing any such bonds and enjoining the President of the J., P. and M. Company from receiving the same, and stating that the act of the 28th of January, 1870, validated the act of the 24th of June, 1869; that Reed issued the bonds in fraud of the rights of the State and of the holders of the original bonds, and insist upon proof of the bonds claimed by the Dutch and all other allegations in relation thereto. And allege that 224 of the bonds have been cancelled, two lost, unsold, 575 impounded in another litigation unsold. And denying that the Dutch holders purchased for value without notice, and on the faith alleged by them, and deny all the allegations of representations by the agents of the State, or bankers, concerning the same, and deny that Florida ever paid any interest on the State bonds; and allege that the money paid for interest was taken out of the purchase money on the sale; and allege that Vose & Co. are holders of large amounts of the original bonds, and allege that the purchase money on the sale of the roads was not paid; and deny that the Dutch holders have any paramount or other lien, or claim, on the railroad property, and refer to the proceedings in the case of the State of Florida in the United States Supreme Court; and allege the recovery of a judgment in a State court by said trustees for the unpaid balance of the purchase money and its declaration as a lien on the property; and allege that every effort was made to notify the public of the frauds and particularly a notice to Collinson on the 21st of June, 1871, at London, and to Hopkins & Co., and that L'Engle notified the Dutch bankers on the 8th of February, 1871; Folios 897-931.

This answer has attached exhibits showing the order for a deed of conveyance on the sale of property; Folio 931. The deed of conveyance of the Tallahassee road on the 8th of April, 1869; Folios 933-35. Deed of conveyance of P. and Ga. road, on the 8th of April, 1869; Folios 936-9. Appointment of Dibble and Swepson as confidential agents of the trustees to receive the purchase money, etc., on the 8th of April, 1869; Folio 941. Report of Gamble and Meek turning the thing over to Swepson; Folio 942. The agreement of Dibble and Swepson on the 22d of April, 1869; Folios 944-5. The injunction of the Florida Court against Reed, etc., prohibiting the issue or delivery of the State bonds; Folios 946-7. The letter of Brevard to the Governor; Folio 948. The decree in the State of Florida vs. Anderson, United States Supreme Court; Folios 951-3. The notice of Brevard to the foreign committees, before stated. The notice of L'Engle to the Dutch bankers, before stated; Folio 954-65. Sundry formal and interlocutory proceedings in the cause then appear; Folios 965-1079.

On the 31st of May, 1879, the bills of the North Carolina Company were dismissed and an appeal taken; Folios 1178 and 1181; and on the same day the prayer of the Dutch bill was granted, subject to the rights of the original bondholders, and the cross-bill of the F. C. Company was dismissed, from which an appeal was taken; Folio 1201-1238.

TESTIMONY.

Reed.—Says he was Governor of Florida from June, 1868, to Jan., 1873; he signed the State bonds corresponding to the whole distance from Jacksonville west as under the act of Jan., 28th, 1870; and in the year 1870 exchanged those numbered from 1 to 3000 for the bonds of the J. P. & M. Co., and those from 3000 to 4000 for the bonds of the F. C. Co. He delivered the last million to Houstoun, who returned them, and afterward they were re-exchanged with Coddington, Houstoun ann Gamble. Littlefield approved the exchange. Folio 1364. The exchange was made with Coddington for the purpose of raising means to pay $300,000 to Houstoun, Gamble, Coddington, &c., and the balance to be placed to the credit of the State of Florida in the National Trust Company, of New York. Does not personally know what became of the State bonds, except 224 which were cancelled. Charges of illegality and fraud were circulated touching them. He received letters and telegrams from Amsterdam and London inquiring whether the bonds were valid and to the first inquiry replied that they were legally issued; but to a later telegram from Amsterdam replied that no provision had been made for their interest and none would be under the circumstance. He cannot find the papers. At the time of the re-exchange had heard that some members of F. C. Co. objected to it. May have had official notice. The statement of Coddington in his deposition and the papers attached to it relating to Reed, are correct, except that Coddington was required not to deliver the bonds until the amount due the State was provided for. Folios 1365-66. In his annual message to the legislature, 4th Jan., 1872, he said: "The last million of the "four were delivered and held in trust, to be disposed when the "amount of $300,000 balance due the internal improvement fund

" is paid. This sum is still unpaid, and remains a lien on that " portion of the road between Lake City and Quincy. "Folio 1367. The four million State bonds were delivered simultaneously to the President of the J. P. & M. Co., or on his order and on his certificate of the length of the road then constructed between Jacksonville and Quincy and branches, on the representations of Sanderson that the company was entitled to receive bonds on the whole line of the road constructed and operated by the company. Cannot produce the certificates. The last million of bonds were delivered under the authority of Littlefield, then President of the J. P. & M. Co. The re-issue was under the authority of the act of the legislature. Folio 1368-71.

Foster.—Says he is stockholder of F. C. Co.; and a director since May 25, 1870. Secretary from 1873 to 1875. Does not know that the company issued any bonds. Some authorized to be issued at meeting 2d June, 1870, for certain purpose; this the only authority until 1877 Folio 1378-80 ; and produces and proves the records of the company : and that Thompson was not Treasurer. Folio 1380.

Ely.—Says he is Secretary of J. P, & M. Co.; consolidation of Tallahassee and J. P. & M. Co., occurred 25th May, 1870. The Tallahassee Co.'s road commenced at Lake City and extended to Quincy, and ran from Tallahassee to St. Marks, and had the Monticello branch. Folio 1382. The consolidation proceedings appear in record, copy annexed. Folios 3606-3623. The J. P. & M. Co. at that time had no road. Folio 1382 and the F. C. Co. did not consolidate with J. P. & M. Co., and no proceedings for such a purpose appear in record of J. P & M. Co. The F. C. Co.'s line was from Jacksonville to Lake City. Knew of no arrangement between these two companies for an issue or exchange of F. C. Co. bonds. No record of any such proceeding or that the J. P. & M. Co. ever agreed to receive or did receive any F. C. Co. bonds, or have any connection with the same. He produces the records for inspection, and files a copy. Is familiar with management of F. C. Co., which has always been controlled by its own board of directors. Folio 1383-84.

Stewart.—Is counsel for the N. C. Co. When the Governor was about to seize the Florida road on the petition of Sherwin for the Dutch, he remonstrated, and endeavored to persuade the officers of the corporations to take steps to resist, which they declined. That there were two or more boards of direction of F. C. Co. at that time and accordingly brought these suits. Folio 1385-87.

Stevens.—Acquainted with both the Florida Cos. Acting with Stewart endeavored to present the Governor from seizing the roads. No books of F. C. Co., could be found. Folios 1387-8.

Rainey.—Attorney General of Florida since Jan., 1877. Verifies the application of Sherwin to Stearns, Governor, for seizure and sale. First saw it in Jan., 1877. First saw the paper of Schutte, et al., dated 31 March, 1877, in March. The first paper was thought to be insufficient. Folios 1389-92.

Rollins.—Stockholder of N. C. Co. Director since 1868 and president since Oct., 1870; one of commissioners under the act of N. C. for recovering the money misappropriated by Swepson, &c. A conditional settlement was arrived at 16th April, 1870, in Washington, by the commissioners with Swepson and Littlefield. Folio 1408. Swepson had received over $6,000,000 of N. C. State bonds in payment for the State stock in the corporation and had raised on that about $3,000,000 to apply to constructing and equipping the road. Swepson had used only a small portion of this for this purpose, and misappropriated the balance—part of which he had invested in purchasing the stock of the F. C. and bonds of the P., and Ga. and T. Cos., which Cos. became the J. P. & M. Co. Swepson had no authority for these steps. Swepson's breach of trust was not known to witness until April, 1870; commission ascertained the amount of Swepson's misappropriation in this direction to be about $1,287,436. Folios 1409-1411. Conditional settlement was in writing, copy produced. Folios 1417 and 1420. The terms of the conditional settlement were not complied with by the other party. Folio 1411. Had no knowledge at that time of the origin, character or object of the Florida State bonds, or how Swepson or Littlefield were to obtain them, nor had his associates. Had never heard of these State bonds until they were referred to in the conditional settlement. The settlement proceeded entirely as an act of restitution. Folio 1411. Had no knowledge of the character of the act of the Florida legislature connected with the bonds, but supposed the legislature had issued valid bonds. Folio 1412. Nothing further occurred until Oct.. 1870, when the commissioner learned that the Florida bonds had been disposed of at the date of the settlement, which gave rise to judicial proceedings in New York against Littlefield and Houstoun, and caused Woodfin, chairman of the commission, to proceed to London to see if the proceeds of the bonds could be obtained. Folio 1412. Woodfin in London entered into a further conditional agreement with Littlefield and Hopkins & Co. Copy produced (Folio 1422) by which 800 of the bonds were to be held by Hopkins, subject to the order of the commission. Folios 1425-1426. This agreement was not performed and nothing was ever obtained under it. Folio 1413. On 8 Sept., 1871, he instituted suit against Hopkins to enforce the surrender of the bonds, but the court decided that according to the law of Florida the bonds were dedicated to a special purpose and could not be claimed by plaintiff. Folios 1313-14. The commission did succeed in April, 1871, in obtaining £10,000 from Hopkins on account of the transaction, obtained by threatening to sue Hopkins on the agreement. Folio 1414. As a part of the settlement the commission was to have turned over the whole of Swepson's and Littlefield's interest in the Florida roads, and the commission hold 5000 shares of F. C. Co., and claim the entire stock of J. P. & M. Co. Folio 1415. All the transactions of the commission were efforts to obtain restitution of the misappropriated funds, by following the money into the property it had been used to obtain. Folio 1416.

Candler.—Stockholder and director in N. C. Co., also N.

C. commission under act of legislature 24th March, 1870, states substantially the same facts as Rollins. Folio 1427-33.

McLoud.—Stockholder and director and counsel of N. C. Co. Swepson was its president from Oct., 1868 to Nov., 1869. Succeeded by Littlefield, who was president from Nov. 1869 to Nov., 1870, succeeded by Rollins, president ever since. Folio 1448. The company first knew of Swepson's misappropriation about 15 April, 1870, through the investigations of the commission. Thereupon the stockholders at a meeting of 23d May, 1870, by resolution, denied the authority of Swepson, and soon after suits were instituted and other steps taken to endeavor to obtain restitution. Folio 1449-50.

Swepson.—Produces copy of charter of N. C. Co. Folio 1462-63. Received $6,000,000 of State bonds for the use of the company in building its road. Disposed of the same through Soutter & Co., N. Y. The matters stated in his affidavits previously made and produced are true. Folio 1465-72. Proves settlement between Littlefield and himself and N. C. commissioners at Washington, 16th April, 1870. Had no authority for using the money of the F. C. Co., nor so far as he knows had Littlefield for using that of the J. P. & M Co.; but each owned large majority of the stock. Proves the drafts drawn by Houstoun as his agent on Soutter in payment of F. C. stock and the P. & Ga. & T. bonds. Folios 1451-1454. Proves the agreement between Dibble and himself of 26th March, 1869, and 22d April, 1869, touching the Florida roads. Folio 1473-79. He paid $960,700 on the sale of the P. & Ga. & T. roads in the bonds of said roads, and that Dibble was to provide for the balance of the purchase. Folios 1453-56. Dibble did not pay, and the check for $472,065 was taken instead and to be retired by the use of bonds to be issued under the agreement of March 26th. The commissioners thereupon conveyed the roads to Dibble. Folio 1456. In order to protect him in the matter, the deed of Dibble to him of 22d April, 1869, of the sold roads and the delivery of the trustees' deeds to Dibble was made to be held for the purposes mentioned in the deed, and when this trust should be fully executed, he was to convey the roads to the company to be incorporated. Folios 1456-57. The act incorporating Dibble, &c., 25th June, 1869, was accordingly passed containing provisions recognizing his lien and security. The only conveyance of the property he ever made was to Littlefield of Nov. 1869, referred to in his affidavits. Folios 1457-8. The balance of the purchase money has never been paid, nor has he been reimbursed. Folio 1458. Some new Tallahassee bonds partly executed were placed in his hands under the deed of 22d April, 1869, of which he still holds $724,000. Folio 1458. He thinks Littlefield has the others; that none of them have been disposed of to his knowledge. Folio 1459. The P. & Ga. & T. bonds paid in on the sale were delivered to Gamble, treasurer, and destroyed. Folio 1459. N. C. Co. first knew of his transactions in the matter by his informing the commissioners thereof, 16th April, 1870. The action of the commissioners was with a view to follow the money of the State and had nothing to do with the Florida bonds as such. Folio 1460.

Slater.—Supposed to be not material. Folio 1490.

Herzberg.—Supposed to be not material. Folio 1494-96.

Bayne.—He is a broker in New York; arranged with Littlefield to sell the Florida bonds in 1870, but they were not delivered, but were placed with Hopkins of New York and London. When the bonds were first brought to his attention. they were represented as legal and valid; but in a short time charges of fraud and illegality were circulated and it was very difficult to introduce them into the market. They were then offered on the London market by Collinson, where he thinks they failed to be taken, and were subsequently placed on the Amsterdam market at reduced prices, and he understands were sold at 50 cents on the dollar. He visited London in 1872, in reference to the subject; found the standing of the bonds in the market was very bad on account of the alleged fraud and illegality. These rumors and reports were based on written and published statements by parties and officials in Florida, and were very numerous. The bonds were controlled in London by Hopkins & Collinson, and in Amsterdam by Boissevain. Folio 1497-99.

Thompson.—Says he was never a stockholder or director; signed some F. C. Co. bonds as treasurer; lives in North Carolina. Was informed by Swepson that he had been elected treasurer and believed it, and at his request signed 1000 bonds as such, without any suspicion that Swepson's statement was untrue. Did this at Littlefield's room in a New York hotel. Folio 1500-1502.

Herzberg.—Again. Nothing.

Porter.—Knows the various companies and Swepson and Littlefield and Coddington. Was a member of the firm of Soutter & Co. Proves the deposit of N. C. State bonds by Swepson and their sales, the money being drawn out by Houstoun, as agent of Swepson, and produces a large number of drafts. Folio 1507-34.

Wilson.—Day editor of the New York World. Produces a copy of the World of 15th June, 1870, containing an article dated Florida, 10th June, 1870, of which he attaches a copy to his testimony; Folio 1536; referring to the State issue of bonds and claiming that they are illegal and that proceedings had been commenced to enjoin their issue as fraudulent, and an injunction granted. The World had a large circulation in Europe and contained, in the year 1870, several other articles and paragraphs tending to put people inquiring as to the fraudulent and illegal character of these bonds. Folio 1540-5. Folio 1434-41.

Chapman.—Member of the firm of Hopkins; knew the J. P. and M. Co. in the year 1870, and the Florida bonds in question. Sold 2,800 of the 4,000 bonds for the J. P. & M. Co., and agreed to allow 50 cents on the dollar for the same. Folio 1541-2. Before any of the bonds were placed on the market, the newspapers of Florida and City of New York charged that the issue of the bonds was fraudulent and illegal, in consequence whereof they were put on the market at the prices named. There were also verbal rumors of the same character afloat as early as June, 1870, but before this he had given credit on the faith of the bonds; consequently Littlefield president of the company, agreed to let them be accounted for at the price named, and they were disposed of through Collinson, in London, at £138 10s. The bonds were taken at the reduced price under correspondence with Littlefield, June 16th and 17th, and Nov. 14th and 28th, 1870—letters attached; Folios 1545-46-47-48 and 49. Certain parties in Amsterdam were also interested in the sale and purchase. The first real sale of bonds was on the 19th of Nov., 1870, and the last on the 31st of July, 1871. About $400,000 of the proceeds of the sale were used for paying the interest on the bonds and floating them on the market. Folios 1541-45.

Chase.—Proves the handwriting of three letters of W. G. M. Davis, (Folios 1585-93 and 1597-1600) and says that he received them as trustee of the J. P. and M. Co. Davis was then in London, assuming to act for the same company. About the time of the issue 3,000 State bonds to that company there was a controversy about their constitutionality, which appeared in the public press. He visited Europe in the Summer of 1870, in reference to the bonds. Found the bonds being handled by Collinson and a Dutch syndicate composed of Boissevain, etc. When he arrived in Europe 2,800 of said bonds had been disposed of. Folios 1570-71. He learned from Collinson and his brother-in-law, one of the syndicate, that about 500 of the bonds were outside of the syndicate. Folio 1572. There were damaging reports in circulation in Europe at that time. He heard them first from Collinson on the 4th of July, and they were published in a Dutch paper in Amsterdam, in consequence of which he was requested by Collinson to procure from Florida statements to counteract the reports. Folio 1572. Attacks had been made on the bonds as illegal, etc., which had been suppressed as far as possible by the syndicate. Folio 1574. The attorney required a mortgage of the road to be made and recorded to secure the bonds, on the ground that a lien on the road would be worth nothing without it. Produces a paper written by Collinson in Dec., 1872, (Folio 1600), stating the same thing and that there must be an endorsement by the Governor that the old bonds are no longer a lien on the road, with a foot note of his own—the object being to satisfy the Amsterdam people that the P. and Ga. bonds were not ahead of theirs. Folios 1575-6. Met persons of the syndicate in London, Aug., 1872, who said they wanted the interest on the State bonds which they held provided for out of the proceeds of the sale. Folio 1576. Verifies other correspondence attached on the same subject between himself and Littlefield, etc., and between Collinson and himself, (Folios 1601-1610), the general purport of which is that the whole affair is in bad odor and involved in dispute and litigation. The bonds then disposed of numbered from 1 to 2,800; Folio 1578; $461,736 were taken out of the sales of the bonds to pay coupons on the 2,800. Folio 1579. There were 1,200 more of said bonds which went to Europe, numbered to 4,000, which he was charged with the duty of negotiating. Folio 1579. At that time there was litigation concerning the same both in New York and London. Folio 1579. These 1,200 bonds were charged with the payment of sundry particular debts described in schedules D, E and F, attached to the bill. Folio 1579. He verifies the papers between Collinson, Chase and others, of London, July, 1872, touching the last 1,200 bonds, and attached to his deposition; Folios 1603-27; which papers bear upon the disposition of the controversy touching the bonds and provide for their disposal. The controversies resulted in a consent decree in England before referred to. Folios 1580-83. The provisions of the consent decree were not complied with. Folio 1582. There was no consolidation of J. P. and M. Co. and F. C. Co Folio 1583. The F. C. Co. was kept a distinct and separate one and was managed distinctly and separately by its own board of directors. Folio 1583. The Florida State bonds had no market value in Europe in 1872, and he could not dispose of any of them except through the agency in London of the Holland syndicate, because the reputation of the bonds was bad as to their legality, and because the syndicate had so arranged it that none could be disposed of without their stamp. Folio 1584.

Littlefield.—Says he is president of the J. P. and M. Co. since Aug., 1869. Knows N. C. Co. Was president of it, Oct., 1869, to Oct, 1870. Swepson expended about $500,000 of the N. C. Co.'s. funds in first mortgage bonds of the P. and Ga. and T. companies, and about $130,000 in stock of the F. C. Co. Demand was made on Swepson for refunding the money, April, 1870. He proves the paper executed between Swepson and himself and the N. C. Commissioners, on the 16th of April, 1870. (Folio 1661). His notice to Hopkins of final settlement with the Commissioners of the 10th of Nov, 1871; (Folio 1664); the agreement between Dibble, etc., and Swepson, of the 26th of March, 1869; the conveyance of Dibble, etc., to Swepson of the 22nd of April, 1869; (Folio 1669;) his certificate to the Governor of Florida of the 6th of June, 1870, for the issue of bonds to the J. P. and M. Co.; (Folio 1671); agreement between Hopkins & Collinson of the 28th of Dec. 1870; (Folio 1674); and sundry telegrams; (Folios 1673 and 76-77); the draft of the mortgage from the J. P. and M. Co. to Reed, Governor; (Folios 1678, 1684 and 1686). He says the terms of the settlement with the Commissioners were not complied with. (Folio 1629). That he had no authority to act for the N. C. Co. or Commissioners, and that no Florida bonds were present at the settlement. That the N. C. Co. had nothing to do with the disposition of the bonds. That the railroad bonds purchased with the N. C. company's money amounted to $960,000 principal, and were delivered to Dibble and associates. Folios 1630-1. That these bonds were the only real paid on the sale of the railroads; Folio 1632. That the terminus of the F. C. railroad was at Lake City, 60 miles west of Jacksonville, and the eastern terminus of the J. P. and M. Co., is at the same place. Folio 1634. That the F. C. Co. was never consolidated with the J. P. and M. Co., or any other road; Folio 1635. That the F. C. Co. bonds were made up in New York by Swepson and Thompson, carried to Florida, and delivered to Houstoun, according to the understanding between Houstoun, Swepson and himself; Folio 1636. That the bonds were not complete in respect of stating the place of the office of the company and the certificate of their object not being signed, before which completion the consent of all the stockholders was to be obtained, and that only two or three were consulted and they did not consent. That Flagg at that time was the treasurer of the company; Folio 1640. That the professed meeting of the stockholders of the F. C. Co., on the 2d of June, 1870, occurred without notice as required by the laws, and only by two stockholders, himself and Houstoun, were present. They transferred temporarily some shares to Huling, Foster and Papy to make up a meeting for the purpose of bringing the bonds mentioned in schedule B into use as provided in schedule D; Folio 1641. The by-laws of the company required for meetings of the stockholders, the call of the president, or any three stockholders by ten days public notice in the newspapers, which on this occasion was not done; Folio 1641. That the professed meeting of the directors on that occasion was not called at all. The president, Sanderson, was not present, but Huling, Houstoun, Foster, Papy and himself met and passed the resolutions converting themselves from a stock holders' into a directors' meeting, not at the office of the company, but in that of Papy; Folio 1642. That there was never any contract or agreement between the F. C. Co. and the J, P. and M. Co., by which the J. P. and M. Co. were to have or use the F. C. Company's bonds, and the J. P. and M. Co. never received any. That the F. C. Co. were charged with the payment of a large amount of private claims; Folio 1644. That Flagg, the treasurer of the company and custodian of its seal, refused to seal the bonds on account of their illegality, etc., and that Houstoun in some way obtained the seal, brought it away from the railway office, and one Saunders affixed it to the bonds at his room in Tallahassee; Folio 1644-5. That from April, 1870, to April, 1871, Sanderson was president of F. C. Co.; Folio 1647. That in June, 1870, the J. P. and M. Co. exchanged with the State 3,000 of its bonds for State bonds, numbered 1 to 3,000; Folio 1647. That the certificate of the president of the company under oath required by law to be made to the Governor before the issue of the State bonds was never made; Folio 1648. And that he, as president, refused to make it because it was not true; Folio 1647-8-9. That he refused to execute a receipt to the Governor for either the 3000 or the additional 1000 bonds after the exchange was in fact made. Folio 1649. He proves the record of the proceedings of the J. P. & M. Co. stockholders as to the exchange of the bonds, and says there is no other. Folio 1650. That at that time, or since, the J. P. & M. Co. owned no road. It was a prospective road, not built, to commence at Quincy and go west. Folio 1650. Afterward it consolidated with the new Tallahassee Company, which owned the line between Lake City and Quincy. Folio 1650. That the consolidated company took to action as to the exchange of bonds. Folio 1651. That the State bonds were disposed of at great discount on account of damaging statements of the public papers in Florida and New York which were sent to Europe. That he tried to dispose of them in England, Germany and Holland without success, on account of these public damaging reports. Folio 1652. That a syndicate was formed for taking the bonds in 1871, of which Collinson was the head, who stated that Boissevain and others were members. Folio 1653. That the bad charactor of the bonds was notorious in the bond market of Europe. Folio 1653. That two questions were raised by Collinson and his associates in the negotiation. First, whether the State had any authority to issue the bonds, &c., and, second, whether there was any lien under the statute upon the roads for the benefit of the bondholders. Folio 1654-5. That Collinson took the opinion of Barlow, counsel in New York, which was adverse to the legality of the bonds. Folio 1655. That the mortgage of the road desired by the syndicate was not executed. Folio 1656. That he executed a deed of trust upon the J. P. & M. road to Reed, Governor, in Dec., 1872, without the authority of the stockholders and sent it for record to the county clerk, where, with other papers, it was burned. Folio 1658.

Barnet.—Was director of J. P. & M. Co. after the exchange of bonds. Collinson, agent of Hopkins and Co., told him the bonds could not be negotiated, as they were objected to in Holland as illegal, etc. Folio 1705. In summer of 1872 was in Holland and England; saw articles in the papers published in Holland attacking the validity of the bonds, and the impeachment of Reed, Governor, in connection therewith was a matter of public notoriety. Folio 1708. Was elected president of the F. C. Co. in 1872, and acted about a year. There was no consolidation of that company with any other, and it acted independently. Folio 1709. Knew of no contract or agreement between F. C. and J. P. & M. Cos. for issue or exchange of bonds. Folio 1710.

Engler.—Says he is trustee for the foreign owners of a certain number of Florida bonds—cannot give their names, there are hundreds. Became trustee about March, 1877. Acts by authority of powers given by the then bona fide owners of the bonds. Says he will produce the powers. Received under the powers about 2,700 or 2,800 State bonds. Folio 1711. That his trusteeship had no relation to anything else than the "memorandum plan." Folio 1713. Has no personal knowledge as to who were bona fide holders. Folio 1715. Produces Florida bond No. 1,240 as specimen of the whole. Folio 1719. Produces and proves "the memorandum plan," Folio 1724, and specimen power of attorney, Folio 1720, and produces his correspondence, Folios 1719–21.

Coddington, one of the defendants, makes his answer to the bill a part of of his testimony and repeats the material parts of it and says it is true; in which he gives an account of the steps by which the last thousand of State bonds were obtained, viz: That he and Houstoun received the one thousand F. C. bonds from Gamble on 11th January, 1871, carried them to Reed, Governor, who then delivered therefor 1,000 State bonds, numbered from 3,001 to 4,000, which were taken by him and Houstoun to the hotel and left with him. The next morning the paper, Schedule F, was delivered to Houstoun with the authority and assent of Littlefield, as president of the J. P. & M. Co., Folio 1736, and a direction from Reed to deposit the amount called for in the instructions in the National Trust Co. Folio 1737. He then left the State with the bonds and went to New York and thence to Europe and kept the bonds in London until 18th April, 1871, being unable to raise money on them. He then, under orders from Houstoun, confirmed by Littlefield and Reed, Folio 1738, delivered the bonds to Hopkins. Folios 1736–7. Hopkins & Co. had a house in New York, as well as London, and were the fiscal agents of the Florida and of the J. P. & M. Co. On the delivery of the bonds he obtained the signature of Hopkins as required. Schedule F. At that time a suit was pending by Westcott and Gamble and injunctions existing against the disposition of the bonds, but Gamble and Westcott consented that they should take the bonds, and he supposed the suits were dismissed, but they were not. Folio 1740. He presents the receipt of Coddington of 11th January, 1871, and the agreement of Hopkins of 18th April 1871. Folios 1741-2. He received no money on the bonds. Folio 1743.

Hopkins.—Contracted on 13th April, 1870, with J. P. & M. Co. for negotiation of all the State bonds which it was to receive under the laws of the State. Folio 1746. During the negotiation of the bonds, letter was received by Holze and Borssevain, of Amsterdam, in February, 1871, attacking the validity of the whole issue and he believes there were other statements circulating in public, affecting them. Folio 1747. On 16th November, 1870, accepted an order by Littlefield in favor of Woodfin, commissioner, for 800 bonds to be held subject to Woodfin's order, and fixed upon 800 bonds out of the 1,000 which were to go into his hands, numbered above 3,001. The bonds did come into his hands, but were not delivered under the order. Folio 1748. Eight hundred of them were placed in the hands of the receiver of the Supreme Court of New York, and 200 were delivered to the representatives of the J. P. & M. Co. Folio 1748. 224 of the same were sent back to the State of Florida and cancelled; 568 were or are tied up in chancery in England, the remainder went into the possession of Collinson to furnish money to pay maturing interest on bonds previously negotiated. He did not sell any of the 1,000 bonds. Folio 1748-9.

Requa.—One of the directors and large stockholder in J. P. & M. Co. The company was consolidated with Tallahassee Company after its sale to Dibble, etc, which, under the new name. extended from Lake City west. Has no knowledge of any consolidation with F C. Co. Never knew of any action of the companies of that kind. There was discussion, but nothing was done. The question of the illegality of the F. C. Co. bonds was very generally discussed both privately and publicly at the time they were issued. Folios 1751-3.

Porter.—Head of the firm of Soutter & Co. Sold the N. C. State bonds for Swepson, president. Proceeds paid out on order of the president. Does not remember the particular persons to whom proceeds were paid. Folios 1760-1

Wertheim.—Amsterdam, lawyer, etc. Knows Borssevain, Schutte, etc. Is counsel for the Dutch bondholders. Identifies copy of a speech he made to the Dutch bondholders, April, 1877, Folios 1774-85, supporting "the memorandum plan" Says he is a holder of some of the Florida State bonds purchased at 80 on the faith of the State of Florida and the managers of the railroads, through his brother, a stock broker, who took him to the office of Borssevain, where he inspected the official documents. He does not state the time or that he had heard nothing adverse to the legality of the bonds. Folios 1771-2.

Gamble.—Treasurer of Florida in 1869. Terms of sale of P. and G and T. roads, cash as advertised. At the sale the terms were changed to a small deposit of cash. Corroborates previous witnesses as to the amount bid and the purchase by Dibble. Folios 1788-9. Houstoun was then president of both roads. Folio 1789. He went to New York to carry out the provisions of the resolutions of the Florida commissioners in receiving payment, etc. The check of Dibble for $472,062 was produced and Swepson asked if he would take it as cash The subject of the production of the money being up, Swepson said there was no need of that, as the Florida commissioners had ordered the money to be turned over to Dibble and himself, and they would take the check as so much money, which was accordingly done, and the bonds, which had been turned in on the sale, were turned over to the Florida commissioners. Folios 1792-3. The Florida commissioners approved the transaction about the check in New York on its being reported to them on his return. Folio 1796.

Brevard.—Was counsel for some of the holders of the original bonds. Payment on the sale was made in part by turning in first mortgage bonds of the company. Balance was not paid in fact. Folio 1803. He notified Collinson, agent of Hopkins, and addressed a letter to the chairman of the corporations arrears committee in London, of the existing condition of things, and objecting to the issue of the bonds under the Act of 1870. Had copies of his letter printed and sent to various persons, among whom were Hopkins & Co., of New York, and Collinson, of London. Folios 1803-7.

Foster.—Finds no bill of Cohen on file in clerk's office. Folio 1809.

Meek.—Was attorney general of Florida; went to New York with Gamble to receive payment from Dibble, etc., on the sale of the road. Confirms Gamble's statement as to what took place when the deeds were delivered. Folios 1812-13.

Reed.—Governor of Florida from June, 1868, to January, 1873 Delivered the $4,000,000 of State bonds in spring of 1870 to J. P. & M. Co. to aid in the construction of the road and received in exchange $4,000,000 of railroad bonds, $3,000,000 of J. P. & M, and $1,000,000 of Florida Central Company. Delivered $1,000,000 of the State bonds on the order of the president of the J. P. & M. Co. to Houstoun. The first three million were numbered from 1 to 3,001 and were delivered to some representative of the J. P. & M. Co. The other million numbered from 3,001 to 4,000. The delivery was on certificates, required by the law, as to the number of miles of the road, which were delivered by Sanderson, who represented himself as attorney of the entire line of road from Jacksonville to Quincy, and as vice-president of the Central Company. The million delivered to Houstoun was in exchange for the Florida Central Company bonds. Does not know Houstoun's relation to the F. C. Co. Folio 1816. Heeds that the law only authorized the issue of bonds on a one hundred miles from Jacksonville west. Sanderson construed it differently and on his and Papy's written opinion, he issued the whole $4,000,000. Folio 1817. At the time of the first delivery the roads had been sold. The $1,000,000 delivered to Houstoun were returned on the understanding that the negotiation for the sale of all the bonds had failed. Houstoun afterwards demanded re-delivery, representing that the negotiation for the sale had succeeded. Then the question was raised by stockholders and bondholders of their claims, and Reed required on the re-delivery of the bonds to Coddinton that before they were delivered to the commissioners provision should be made for the payment of these claims. Folio 1817. It was represented by Sanderson, Houstoun and Littlefield that the J. P. & M. Co. owned the whole line from Jacksonville west, and giving a reason for keeping up separate organizations. Folios 1817-18. The $1,000,000 of State bonds delivered to Houstoun in exchange for F. C. Co. bonds were delivered on the order of Littlefield, president of J. P. & M. Co. Sanderson presented two certificates, one as to the length of the road operated from Jacksonville to Lake City, and one as to the line from Lake City west. Recollection is that both these were signed by Littlefield, and Sanderson said they complied with the law. Folio 1818. The million bonds were first delivered June, 1870, re-delivered in December or January following. When Houstoun returned the State bonds, he returned the F. C. bonds to Houstoun. No objection was made by F. C. Co. to the re-delivery. Do not know that the F. C. Co. knew the bonds had been returned, Recollects no additional authority to re-deliver the bonds, nor any original authority for the company or companies. Folio 1818.

Baker.—Immaterial. Folio 1820.

Henderson.—Says a deed of trust was executed by J. P. & M. Co. to Flagg and others, and attested by him on 2nd October, 1871. Does not know where the deed is. Deed was delivered to Chase, one of the trustees. Trustees accepted the trust and entered into possession and management of the J. P. &. M. Road, and continued in it until the appointment of a receiver. Folio 1821-2. They took possession of the whole line from Jacksonville west. Says Chase is not in the State. Proves a copy of the Floridian newspaper of 10th and 17th October, 1871, and states that the contents of the trust deed were correctly set forth therein. Folios 1822-3.

Cheney.—Director of J. P. & M. Co. from its organization in 1870. Company first had its office at Tallahassee, afterwards at Jacksonville, in building now claimed by the F. C. Co. The removal was on occount of both roads being under one management. Folio 1824. From the time of the removal of the offices until the appointment of Greeley receiver, the entire line was run as one, under the name of the J. P. & M. road, under the management of the directors of that road, and all contracts in regard to the line were made in the name of the J. P. & M. Co., etc.

Sanderson ~~Sanford~~ in May, 1870, was president and attorney of F. C. Co., and vice-president and attorney of J. P. & M. Co. Folio 1825. Flagg and Chase, under deed of trust, took possession of the whole line of road and ran it under the name of the J. P. & M. Road. Folio 1825. After the organization of J. P. & M. Co. meetings were held by stockholders and directors, the stockholders all being directors, at which resolutions were passed and arrangements made "looking to the consolidation" of the J. P. & M. Co. and F. C. Co. Do not know what records were made, but the result was the practical consolidation. Company had books, secretary always present and took minutes. Custom to read minutes at each meeting of the preceding one. Was not an officer of F. C. Co. Cannot give the date of the consolidation, but it was after May, 1870, when the two roads were under one management. Folio 1826.

L'Engle.—Proves his letter of February 8, 1871, to the Dutch bankers, (Folio 1848.) and its being sent them by mail in the summer of 1871—thinks June. Has had search made for bill in chancery in his his name against Littlefield, Barnett and others, Duval County. Original cannot be found. Proves a printed copy of it. (Folio 1854). Proves copy of injunction in same suit issued 11 May, 1872, against Littlefield, Houstoun, Swepson, J. P. & M. Co., Florida land commissioners, etc., and Hopkins & Co., forbidding the receipt or expenditure of the proceeds of the State bonds, or the carrying out of the arrangement made respecting the same, etc., etc. (Folio 1871.) Folio 1829. Proves press copy of a letter of the 21 January, 1871, from Sanderson to Houstoun. (Folio 1878.) Folio 1831. Puts in copy of proceedings in United States Circuit Court, Florida, Precher v. Florida Central Company, etc., etc., touching these matters, and praying injunction filed 1st May, 1872, and injunction granted. (Folio 2880-1891.) Also copy of the opinion of the Supreme Court of Florida, January, 1875, in case between State of Florida the trustees internal improvement fund and the F. C. Co., etc. Folio 1831-2.

Buckman.—Clerk of Duval County. Proves search for the papers referred to in evidence of L'Engle. Folio 1832.

Reed, Recalled.—Says he received in December, 1870, from Boissevain and others, bankers, Amsterdam, telegraphic despatch inquiring whether provision had been made for the payment of the interest on the State bonds issued to the J. P. & M. Co., which he answered stating that no provision had been made and none would be. That the bonds were recently recalled by the company. Folio 1833.

Taylor.—Previous to 1876, resided in Tallahassee; connected with railway; knows Walker, general superintendent J. P. & M. Co., and Anderson, superintendent F. C. Co., Flagg, secretary and treasure, of J. P. & M. and F. C. companies. Indentifies and proves sundry papers and accounts of isbursements, etc., of J. P. & M. Co, and F. C. Co., called exhibits 1 to 8. Folios 1834-37. The same books were used by both companies, but separate accounts kept with each company, and earnings were kept separately according to ticket and way-bill reports, mail earnings according to mileage, wharfage earnings entirely to the F. C. Co. Expenses distributed on a similar ratio. Folios 1837-8.

L'Engle, Recalled.—Proves handwriting and signature of Flagg, deceased, secretary of F. C. Co., on copy of proceedings of 21 November, 1870, called exhibit No. 9, E. M. L. Folio 1838.

Braden.—Employed as clerk, etc., of F. C. Co., since 1867. Produces books and papers concerning the business operations and shows that the two corporations kept separate accounts of their respective interests and did not act as one company. Folios 1841-3.

Washington.—Claims certain shares in stock of F. C. Co., as trustee under deed between himself and L'Engle, executed in 1875. He was acting for L'Engle, who attended to the business and furnished the necessary funds. The suits instituted by him were only under the authority of L'Engle. That he only claims referred to in suits in his character as trustee under the deed, and that L'Engle was fully authorized to represent him in the whole matter. Folios 1992-95.

Pierce.—Resided in London in 1870-1 and was chief clerk of Hopkins & Co., and as such had knowledge of the handling of the Florida State bonds by that firm, who acted, as he believes, as agents of the railway company by whom they were issued. Folio 2024. Never saw the paper purporting to be appointment of Hopkins & Co. as agents by Littlefield, president J. P. & M. Co. (Folio 2004-5.) Hopkins & Co. sold to Collinson, of London, 2,800 of said bonds at 138£, 1s and 10d each, during the years 1871-2. That Hopkins & Co. endeavored to negotiate the bonds in Paris in 1870, but failed on account of the war. Does not know what Hopkins did to induce purchasers to buy the bonds. Collinson was introduced to Hopkins & Co. by Mendell, of Brussels, who was to have a commission on the transaction. Hopkins & Co. sold to nobody else than Collinson. Folios 2024-26. Thinks paper marked A. is a copy of one of the bonds. (Folio 2004.) The bonds were sold privately to Collinson and were originally taken by Hopkins on speculation at about one-half the face value. To the best of his knowledge and belief Boissevain, Mildeus Zaddocks, Stoope, Manga and others were jointly and personally in the speculation, Hopkins & Co. selling to Collinson, and Collinson to the Amsterdam parties—who in their turn issued the same on the Amsterdam market. Believes these parties were in constant communication. Nothing came to his knowledge in regard to the invalidity or illegality of the bonds. Some of the money was set aside to float the issue, and flattering paragraphs appeared in the newspapers. Folio 2028. The agreement between Hopkins & Co. and Collinson was on 14th November, 1870—the modified agreement in December following. At that time no question was raised as to the validity of the bonds, though the question was raised and warmly discussed in Holland, as he saw by the newspapers some time after. Does not recollect any attempt to issue the bonds in London. Hopkins & Co. represented themselves in these transactions as being the fiscal agents of the State. He submits a copy of his correspondence with Davis on the subject of communicating what he knows. Folios 2027-29. This correspondence is not material except as showing the reliability or want of reliability of the witness, and methods of attorneys in procuring testimony. Folios 2029-44. Form of original P. and Ga. bond. Folios 2045-47. The Act of the Legislature of N. C. of 13th March, 1879, repealing the laws creating the Western Division N. C. Co. Folio 2073. The Act amending the charter of the Western N. C. Co., and creating the Western Division thereof of 19th August, 1868. Folio 2076. The Act providing for the completion of the Western Division road and the appointment of Woodfin and others commissioners, of 24th March, 1870.

Folio 2079. The order of the 27th December, 1872, in the New York suit of Collinson vs. Hopkins & Co., touching the claims of the N. C. Co. and the conditional agreement of settlement of 15th June, 1872, on which the same is based. Folios 2131-38. Ratification thereof by J. P. & M. Co. Folios 2140-47. Order of Woodfin of 16th November, 1870, to Hopkins & Co. to sell the 800 Florida bonds. Folio 2211. Agreement of 28th December, 1870, between Hopkins and Collinson on the subject of the alleged unconstitutionality of the State bonds, providing for deposit for part of the price until decision of the Supreme Court of the State can be had. Folio 2473. Definitive prospectus of Florida State loan referred to by Wertheim. Refers to Act of 28th January, 1870, as authority for issue. Says the money raised was to be devoted to railroad purposes and paid on the completion of every 20 miles, State being secured by first mortgage. The J. P. & M. Co. has 250 miles completed and has mortgaged to the State its entire property, etc., for security. Folio 2477.

Collinson.—Says that he dealt with Hopkins & Co. in the purchase of the bonds during the years 1870, '71, '72 and '73, or some of them. All the papers are in England and he cannot state more particularly. The bonds were put on the Dutch market and sold there, as he is informed, and he sold the bonds to Boissevain and Milders and Maingay of Holland. Nothing was done by him to induce persons in Holland to purchase the bonds from them. Mendell, of Brussels, was interested with him in the transaction. The purchase money used with Hopkins & Co. was found in certain proportions by Boissevain, Milders, Maingay, Mendell and himself. There was no association created by him to buy the bonds. He made no representations to any one of such persons, except copies of documents received from Hopkins. Did not receive any bonds from Chase. Does not remember whether he received any by his authority. Folios 2512-16. That he received and delivered the 1,000 State bonds, numbered from 3,000 to 4,000, as stated in his answer in the case. He claims a lien on them for $40,000. Two hundred and twenty-four of the bonds were cancelled, leaving 776. Of these 568 were placed in the Bank of England by order of the English Chancery, out of which he received, in June, 1878, 192. The remaining 376 are still in the Bank of England, held by order of the court. Folios 2518-23. Proves the letter of Littlefield and of Reed and his receipt for the bonds to Houstoun, and says that he did not receive any money on the bonds with which to execute the directions in the papers. Folio 2528.

Collins.—Was member of the firm of Hopkins, etc., and resided and did business in London. The firm became agents of the J. P. aad M. Co. by the agreement of the 13th of April, 1870. (Folio 2803.) Hopkins & Co. believed the bonds to be good and that the State had a mortgage security against the railroad for the benefit of the bondholders. It was represented by the president of the J. P. and M. Co. that it owned the line from Jacksonville west, and that, under an act of the Legislature, the company were to deliver to the State the first mortgage bonds of the company at the rate of $16,000 per mile as security for the State bonds. Folios 2674-7. It was represented that there were no prior liens. Each bond had an endorsement signed by the Governor, stating that the company had deposited their first mortgage bonds. The line of railroad west of Jacksonville supposed to be covered, as learned by statements made by the president of the company. Folio 2677. All these statements were relied upon by the firm and repeated in Europe. Folios 2678-9. Hopkins & Co. received 4,000 of the State bonds; 3,000 were delivered by the then Governor or the agents of the railroad company, and 1,000 by Coddington. Folio 2680. Hopkins sold 2,800 of the bonds to Collinson under certain contracts entered into with him, and commenced delivering the bonds on the 19th of November, 1870. These bonds were the only ones sold by Hopkins, though all had been contracted for. Folio 2681.

Hopkins & Co. repeated the representations that the buyer of the bonds would have both the security of the State and 250 miles of completed road. That the eastern terminus of the road was at Jacksonville. Folio 2681-2. In the latter part of December, 1870, just as Hopkins had commenced to deliver the bonds, doubts were suggested as to the legality of the issue, and the delivery was suspended and steps taken to inquire into the legality of the issue.

The judges of the Supreme Court of Florida gave it as their opinion that they were legally issued, which fact was cabled to Hopkins & Co., in London, on the 16th of February, 1871, and copy of opinion of each of the justices forwarded, and the delivery of the bonds was again commenced and continued until 2800 had been taken and paid for by Collinson. Folios 2682-5. At the time they accepted the agency, had no knowledge of the existence of the F. C. Co., or that any part of the line was claimed by it. Folio 2685. Had they known that the F. C. Co. claimed the road from Jacksonville to Lake City, they would not have attempted to act. Folio 2685. Did not know whether Collinson had any associates in the purchase, and was aware that Collinson resold the bonds in Holland and believes that he repeated the representations. Folio 2686. Hopkins & Co. had no interest in the resale by Collinson, but from time to time gave him such information as they could. Folio 2687. Governor of Florida had appointed Hopkins & Co. agents for the State to pay interest coupons on the bonds, and furnished them with various documents touching the validity of the bonds, all of which they passed over to Collinson. Folio 2688. Hopkins & Co. paid out large sums of money received from Collinson under directions of the president of the company, to various parties, as per accounts. Folio 2689. In Aug., 1870, Hopkins was notified by president of J. P. & M. Co. of the agreement between it and the N. C. commissioners, under date of April, 1870, and again on the 16th Nov., 1870, of another agreement between the same of 10th Nov., 1870. Folio 2690. Woodfin was in London in the fall and winter of 1870-71, and assisted Hopkins in the matter, and never denied the representations made by the authorities of Florida, or that the bonds covered the line west from Jacksonville. Folio 2690. Woodfin claimed large amount of the bonds on account of an agreement with Littlefield, and Hopkins & Co were to hold 800 of the bonds subject to the order of Woodfin, who authorized the firm to sell the 800 and account for the proceeds, and did all in his power to aid the firm in effecting the sale. Folio 2692-3.

Woodfin never denied the title of the company to the line west from Jacksonville, or that the bonds were a valid lien on the entire line. Folio 2694. Thinks the dispatch of the Governor of Florida about not providing for the interest, &c., was sent to one of the parties in Amsterdam, a member of the Bourse. Cannot state the time with reference to the sale of the bonds. Folio 2696-7. Thinks the notice from L'Engle to Boissevain was sent, and a copy delivered or shown to witness by Collinson. Does not know what publicity was given to the communication. Thinks it was known to the parties in Holland. Folio 2699. Recollects slightly the communication of Brevard to the London committee, and thinks the sale of the bonds had been suspended about that time. Folio 2699. The £38 difference between the price obtained from Collinson and the price to be allowed the company was for indemnity against extraordinary expenses, as might happen by reason of attacks that were being continually made upon the character of the bonds. Folio 2706. The sale to Collinson was in the form of an option, which extended through a year. Folio 2707. Counsel differed as to the constitutionality of the bonds, which led to the additional agreement with Collinson of the 28th Dec., 1870. Folio 2708. It was a part of the agreement with Collinson that a certain amount of the proceeds of the sale should be appropriated to pay interest to mature thereafter—the amount thus appropriated being about $350,000. Folio 2710. The first delivery of the bonds to Collinson was on 19th Nov., 1870, and the last on 21st July, 1871. Folio 2710. No bonds above No. 2800 were delivered to Collinson under the agreement Folio 2711. His firm has no information on the subject that was not accessible to everybody. Folio 2711. The bonds numbered from 3000 to 4000 were brought to England and delivered to the firm by Coddington, who gave instructions as to the disposition of the proceeds. Folio 2713. Thinks they were received subject to some of the charges and conditions contained in Coddington's receipt to Houstoun. Folio 2714. 224 of the 1000 bonds were returned and cancelled—two were lost, 568 were tied up in English Chancery. Remainder passed into the hands of Collinson under some agreement made with him by the agent of the company to advance sufficient money to pay one or more of interest coupons of the 2800 bonds taken by him. Folio 2715-17.

Hopkins.—Corroborates Collins and proves exhibits. Says Littlefield, President of the J. P. & M. Co., made the representations as to the bonds being secured by the line west of Jacksonville, and that he delivered resolutions of the directors and stockholders of that company authorizing him to act. Folio 2723-4. A copy of the act of legislature of Florida and map of the line were delivered to the firm. Folio 2726. The firm believed in the validity and adequacy of the security. Folio 2727. His firm had no interest in the resale of the bonds by Collinson. Folio 2737. Has no recollection that L'Engle ever took part in any of the negotiations. Folio 2743. Remembers that before he sold any of the bonds, they were denounced by some parties as being fraudulent bonds illegal in their issue, and that some party alleged that the statute was unconstitutional. Remembers that these charges were published in some public journals in the United States, but he did not believe the charges. Folio 2758. In consequence of the illegality and fraud, his firm were embarrassed in their efforts to negotiate, and it was finally agreed with Littlefield, that they should sell the whole issue to Collinson for the price stated by Collinson, &c. Folio 2759-60. Collinson having received an adverse opinion as to the constitutionality of the act, the modified agreement of 28th Dec., 1870, was made. Folio 2763. Knew that the 1000 bonds were the subject of some kind o suit in one of the courts of Florida, and that they have ever since been the subject of litigation either in London, New York or Florida. Folio 2772. He attaches to his testimony the papers referred to by him. Folios 2803-3023.

Engler.—Proves his authority to act for certain Dutch bondholders as per paper produced. (Folio 3037–42.) Never owned any of the bonds. In his former testimony, stating himself to be trustee, he meant only that he held the bonds as custodian. Claims no power to institute suits, but recognizes the power of Wertheim and Willard to control the litigation. Folio 3026-28. Has in his possession 2,950 of the bonds, owned by about two or three hundred people in Holland. They were first delivered for the purpose of executing the "memorandum plan." Now held to follow the directions of Wertheim and Willard. Folio 3028-29. Interrogatories in Schutte case, sundry witnesses in Holland. Folio 3675-92. Cross interrogatories. Folio 3736-43 and Folio 3746-69. Under which,

The proceedings bringing the case to a hearing and sundry applications, motions and the filing of sundry papers, and the minutes of Mr. Justice Bradley of the hearing, May 19th, 1879, appear in Folios 3052 to 3067.

The cases were heard on the 31st of May, 1879, and the final decree entered, declaring: 1st, A first lien of the trustees of the internal improvement fund for the unpaid balance of the purchase money on the sale of the 20th of March, 1869, on each of the roads sold; 2d, Declaring a second lien in favor of Schutte, etc., on both the roads so sold, in respect of bonds numbered to 3,000; 3d, Declaring a first lien in favor of Schutte, etc., on the F. C. road for bonds held by them numbered 3,001 and upward—being 197 bonds.

The decree then makes provisions for satisfying these liens by sale, etc., etc.

No notice appears to have been taken in the decree, of the cross-bill of the F. C. Company. From this decree the F. C. and the North Carolina Companies appealed. Folio 1233.

founded thereon. They should be amended so as to stand as follows:

No. 669.

Without any fault of the appellants, this record is made to contain much that is irrelevant and unnecessary. Such matter was put upon it at the hearing, by the appellees, by simple reference, without being read, or any opportunity upon the part of appellants to object or procure rulings of the court upon its admissibility. A brief allusion, therefore, to the origin of the litigation and the status of the parties, will be necessary to enable the court to enter upon an inspection of the record intelligibly.

The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company filed two separate bills below—one against the Florida Central Railroad Company, George F. Drew, Governor, Trustee, &c., and several other individual defendants (Record, pp. 1 to 39); the other, against The Jacksonville, Pensacola, & Mobile Railroad Company and the same individual defendants (Record, pp. 39 to 78).

It was deemed necessary, under the peculiar circumstances existing, to file separate bills, though the parties were the same, and the wrong and injury complained of in both cases had their origin in the same fraud and breach of trust, as will be seen as we progress.

The gravamen of the suits presented by these two bills, is that of a corporate cestui que trust seeking to recover its assets or the proceeds thereof, to the amount of upwards of $1,287,000, which were fraudulently used and appropriated by its Trustees, agents, and fiduciaries who had them in charge.

The suits, though nominally between the several corporate appellants and J. Fred. Schutte, Jans Prins, and others, known in this litigation as the "Dutch Bondholders," are, in reality, a contest between the several appellants, and Frank R. Sherman, Charles D. Willard, Henry R. Jackson, Charles H. Simonton, and their associates, under a scheme known as the "Memorandum Plan," which will be found at page 219 of the record.

By this plan these persons, who were total strangers to the two Florida Railroad Companies, appellants, some time in the year 1876, undertook to seize and appropriate said companies' roads, by the use of certain bonds of the State of Florida, held by the so-called Dutch Bondholders, which, at the time this project was entered upon, and long before, had been declared unconstitutional and void, by the Supreme Court of the State of Florida. The wreckers were to appropriate to themselves upwards of two-thirds of the avails of these two railroads, paying all the expenses themselves, and to concede to the Dutch Bondholders less than one-third of the proceeds, for the use of their names, and their void and unconstitutional bonds, in carrying out the "plan."

Stripped of all disguise, this litigation, on the part of the appellees, is an application to this High Court of Equity for its aid in enforcing this monstrously corrupt, champertous, and wrecking contract, called the "Memorandum Plan," and so appears upon the face of the bill filed by Willard, Sherwin, and associates, in the names of J. Fred. Schutte, and others, as will be shown to this honorable court, as we further progress with our argument.

With these introductory and explanatory remarks as to the general nature, real parties in interest, and character and object of this extraordinary litigation, we will endeavor to present the facts. as shown by the pleadings, as nearly in their chronological and consecutive order, as is possible from the mixed and confused state of the record.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE.

And first, as to the matters and facts which are not disputed, and are common to both the bills filed by the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

The following facts are not disputed:

First.—That the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company (and which for brevity we will hereafter style the Western Division Company) was organized under the laws of North Carolina, previous to the year 1869. That George W. Swepson was president of said company, but, who being a citizen of North Carolina, could not be made a party to this suit. The defendant, Milton S. Littlefied was a director of said company, and succeeded Swepson as president thereof.

Second.—That said company owned upwards of $6,000,000 of bonds of the State of North Carolina, which were under the control of Swepson and Littlefied, as its agents and fiduciaries, who converted said bonds into cash, through the house of Soutter & Co., of New York, for the alleged purpose of constructing the road of said Western Division Company, and thereby became possessed of a large amount of money belonging to said company as the proceeds of its said bonds.

Third.—That at the same time (1869) there existed in Florida a body corporate, owning a railroad from Lake City westward to Quincy, a distance of about 138 miles, known as the Pensacola & Georgia Railroad Company; and also a company owning a railroad from Tallahassee to St. Marks, a distance of about 22 miles, called the Tallahassee Railroad Company. One Edward Houstoun, then of Florida (but since deceased) was president of the two last named companies. These two companies were subject to a bonded debt of about $1,420,000, on which they were in default in the payment of interest.

Fourth.—There was also, at the same time, a separate and distinct body corporate, known as the Florida Central Railroad Company, owning a railroad extending from Jacksonville westward to Lake City, about 60 miles, represented by a capital stock of about 5,500 shares, and free of debt, of which one William E. Jackson was President.

Fifth.—That in the early part of the year 1869, the said Swepson, Littlefield, and Houstoun, fraudulently used and appropriated upwards of $1,287,000 of the money and assets of the said Western Division Company in the purchase of $1,063,000 of the $1,420,000 bonds of the Pensacola & Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Companies, and some $4,700 shares of the capital stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company.

These P. and G. bonds and the F. C. stock were purchased by said Houstoun, as agent, by drafts drawn upon Soutter & Co., of New York, and paid out of funds belonging to the Western Division Company (see list of P. & G. bonds purchased with the Western Division funds, fols. 1479 to 1486), and (see a portion of the drafts drawn in payment of said bonds, fols. 1510 to 1533).

Sixth.—That after the purchase of the P. & G. and Tallahasee bonds, the roads of the companies by which they they were issued, were sold by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund of the State of Florida, on the 20th day of March, 1869, and purchased by Franklin Dibble and associates, at the price of $1,420,000, but which purchase could be discharged by the delivery of said P. & G. and Tallahasee bonds, at par.

Seventh.—That on the 26th day of March, 1869, the said Swepson agreed with the said Dibble and associates to advance about $960,300 of said P. & G. and Tallahasee bonds so purchased with the fraudulently appropriated funds of the said Western Division Company, in payment for said Pensacola & Georgia and Tallahasee Roads, the remaining $472,065, of which purchase moneys was to be paid by Dibble and associates upon the terms and conditions of a written agreement executed between said Swepson and Dibble and associates of that date (see Agreement, fols. 628 to 630).

Eighth.—The terms of this agreement were not complied with on the part of said Dibble and associates, who were to supply the means for paying for said roads over and above the said $963,000 (see clause first of the agreement page 212) so as to secure the execution and delivery of the deeds conveying said two railroads to said Dibble and associates.

Ninth.—That in consequence of the failure on the part of said Dibble and associate to pay the said $472,065, the remainder of said purchase money, for said two roads, it devolved upon said Swepson alone to consummate the said purchase, which was done by a modified agreement entered into between Swepson, Bibble, and associates, on the 8th day of April, 1869, when the deeds conveying said roads were duly executed (see Deeds, fols. 630 to 637), but were not delivered then or at any subsequent time to Dibble and associates, but were delivered to said Swepson, to be held until he was reimbursed according to the terms of a deed of trust executed by said Dibble and associates, as follows (pp. 62–3, R.):

WHEREAS, George W. Swepson, has paid to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund of the State of Florida, for and on account of F. Dibble and his associates, in payment for the Pensacola & Georgia and the Tallahassee Railroads, sold to said F. Dibble and his associates by said Trustees on the 20th day of March last, bonds of said roads amounting at their face to nine hundred and sixty thousand and three hundred ($960,300) dollars, and has also paid to said Trustees for the same parties the sum of four hundred and seventy-two thousand and sixty-five ($472,065) dollars, being the full amount due said Trustee for said roads; and whereas said F. Dibble, for and on behalf of himself and his associates, has obligated himself and them, and does hereby obligate himself and them, to cause bonds upon said roads as now completed, as soon as further legislative authority from said State of Florida shall be obtained therefor, to be issued, the same to be secured and in every respect to be, as stated in an agreement executed and dated the twenty-sixth day of last March, between said F. Dibble, on behalf of himself and his associates, and said George W. Swepson, which bonds, when executed, are to be and shall be placed as provided in said agreement, for the purposes therein set forth and for the further purpose of enabling said Swepson to be reimbursed the said sum of four hundred and seventy-two thousand and sixty-five dollars.

Now, therefore, this indenture, made and entered into between F. Dibble, on behalf of himself and his associates, party of the first part, and George W. Swepson, party of the second part, Witnesseth, that said party of the first part, for and in consideration of the premises, has granted, bargained, conveyed and confirmed unto said party of the second part, all that property of whatever name, nature and description, conveyed to said party of the first part by said Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund of the State of Florida by two separate deeds of conveyance, each dated April 8, A. D. 1869, which deeds for full description of property are hereby made part and portion of this instrument. The said property hereby conveyed, to be held by said party of the second part in trust for the express purpose of enabling said party of the second part—which he hereby agrees and binds himself to do—to convey the same to that incorporation, consisting, or to consist as incorporators of said F. Dibble and his associates. As soon as said Dibble and his associates shall have granted to them such a similar relief as the Legislature of the said State of Florida granted to Wm. E. Jackson and his associates by act for relief of William E. Jackson and his associates, approved July 29th, 1868, and also for the further purpose of securing said party of the second part in all advances made as specified and agreed upon in the said agreement between these parties, executed and dated March 26th, 1869, and the advancement, as aforesaid, of said sum of four hundred and seventy-two thousand and sixty-five dollars, until such time as said relief shall have been granted, and said party of the second part shall have conveyed said property to said incorporation, as hereinbefore prescribed.

To have and to hold said property to said party of the second part for the purposes and trusts herein declared.

In testimony whereof, said party of the first part has hereunto signed his name and affixed his seal this day of 22d April, A. D. 1869.

Tenth.—That, by the terms of this Trust Deed, the legal title to said Pensacola and Georgia, and Tallahassee Railroads was conveyed to and vested in said Swepson, and the terms of said deed of trust never having been complied with, the said Swepson never has conveyed the same to any person or company, or divested himself of the title thus acquired, except so far as he agreed to transfer the same to Milton S. Littlefield, for the use and benefit of the Western Division Company (see Deposition of Swepson, Questions and Answers, 16 to 21, fols. 1455 to 1460).

Eleventh.—That on the 24th June, 1869, a company was incorporated, composed of said Dibble and associates, called the Tallahassee Railroad Company (see Schedule 5, of Answer of Western Division Company to Shutte bill, fol. 640) which authorizes the said new Tallahassee Company to issue coupon bonds, secured by deed of trust—subject, however, to the deed of trust executed by said Dibble and associates to Swepson, on the 22d April, 1869, as provided, in these words:

"Provided, that any deed of trust or mortgage, conveyance, "bond or bonds, or security, which may have been executed, made "or executed, or contracted for, as a lien on said railroads, or oth- "erwsiee, by said Franklin Dibble, on behalf of himself and asso- "ciates, prior to the passage of this Act, shall be valid and ef- "fectual to all intents, either at law or in equity, as a lien or mort- "gage, or security, as if the same had been made by virtue af this "Act, and shall in nowise be affected by the passage thereof."

Twelfth.—That the said Tallahassee Company duly organized, pursuant to the charter so granted, and as required by the terms of said agreement, of the 26th March, 1869, between Dibble and associates and Swepson (see clauses 2, 3, and 4, fols. 628 and 629); and further provided by the trust deed of 26th April, 1869 (supra), whereby the title of the said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads was conveyed to Swepson, to secure him for the $960,300, so purchased with money of the Western Division Company, and paid to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund of Florida, in the purchase of said two roads, as sold on the 20th March, 1869.

The said new Tallahassee Company, as soon as organized, in July, 1869, attempted to issue and deliver to Swepson its coupon bonds, to the amount of $1,500,000, secured by deed of trust to Stewart L. Woodford, Darius R. Mangam and B. G. Worth, of New York (see copy of Bond, fol. 641); but the same not being satisfactory to Swepson, he refused to accept this bond issue, and make the conveyance of the two roads to the new Tallahassee Company, and he still holds the title thereto (see Questions 16 to 21, Swepson's Deposition, fols. 1455 to 1460).

Thirteenth.—That by reason of such fraudulent use and appropriation of the assets of said Western Division Company by Swepson, Houstoun, and Littlefield in the purchase of said railroads, and the incorporating of the same into the said new Tallahassee Company, the latter became charged with a lien or trust in favor of said Western Division Company in the same manner that the bonds were before they were paid over to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, which prior lien and equity was expressly reserved by the proviso of the 6th section of the act of incorporation (supra), and being so reserved in a public statute was notice to all subsequent purchasers or incumbrancers, and still remains so.

Fourteenth.—That on the same 24th day of June, 1869, on which said Dibble and associates were incorporated into the new Tallahassee Company, the Legislature of Florida passed an act incorporating The Jacksonville, Pensacola, & Mobile Railroad Company, with power to construct a railroad westward from Quincy, the terminus of the said Tallahassee Railroad, to Pensacola and Mobile. This company was wholly on paper, and possessed no property, assets, or estate whatsoever beyond its naked franchise, and never has had any.

Fifteenth.—That by the 9th and 10th sections of the act to incorporate the J. P. & M. R. R. Co. an attempt was made to create a statutory contract between the State of Florida and said company for the issue and exchange of state bonds for said company's bonds, at the rate of fourteen thousand dollars per mile for each mile of road built, said bonds to be dated July 1, 1869, and secured in the manner provided in the 11th and 12th sections of said act. However, no such bonds were ever issued.

Sixteenth.—That by the 14th section of this act it was declared to be lawful for certain companies owning railroads east of Quincy to consolidate with the said J. P. & M. Co. This privilege, if it was one, was extended "to the several companies, owning the roads or parts of roads from Quincy to Jacksonville, from Tallahassee to St. Marks, and the branch to Monticello, or either of said companies," but does not mention either by its corporate name, nor provide for any amendment of their charters, nor enlarge their powers in any respect whereby they could lawfully consolidate with any other company.

Seventeenth.—That this act was never utilized, except by the formal organization of the J. P. & M. Co., until it was in a great measure superceded by an amendatory act, passed January 28, 1870, by the 2d section of which a new and altered statutory contract was created between the State of Florida and said J. P. & M. Co. These several acts will be referred to more fully hereafter.

Eighteenth.—That at the time of the purchase of the Florida Central, Georgia & Pensacola, and Tallahassee Railroads as aforesaid, with the funds of said Western Division Company, it had no knowledge of such fraudulent use of its means, and it had no such knowledge until early in March or April, 1870, when its directors called for an accounting for its assets and money.

Nineteenth.—That on a failure to procure the accounting mentioned in the last paragraph, the Legislature of the State of North Carolina, on the 24th day of March, 1870, passed an act creating a commission, composed of five citizens and stockholders of the said Western Division Company, empowered to "examine and fully investigate the condition and "affairs of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, as far as concerns the administration "of G. W. Swepson, late President thereof; and to make a "full and final settlement of all accounts and liabilities of said "president, G. W. Swepson, in connection with said company. "It shall be the duty of said commissioners hereby created, to "collect and receive the funds and other assets belonging to "the said company, and due from the said G. W. Swepson "and all other officers of said company elected or appointed "since its organization, and to place the same in some safe "bank, there to be held, and to be faithfully applied to the "construction of said road, the construction and work on which "shall remain as heretofore, under the supervision of the president and board of directors." &c. (fols. 2080 and 2081).

Twentieth.—That these commissioners and officers of the Western Division Company met said Swepson and Littlefield in the City of Washington, on the 16th day of April, 1870, when they, as such commissioners and officers of said Western Division Company, were, for the first time, advised of the embezzlement and fraudulent appropriation of the funds of said Western Division Company as aforesaid.

See Swepson's Dep., Ques. 22, fol. 1459.
Ditto W. W. Rollins, fol. 1410, Ques. 13.

Twenty-first.—That thereupon said commissioners, within their power, agreed to written terms of settlement with said Swepson and Littlefield, to be effective, and operate as a discharge of the delinquents, when the terms thereof were fully executed and performed, and not otherwise.

See Ex. W. W. R., No. 1, fols. 1417 to 1420, and particularly fol. 1419.

But these terms and conditions never were performed by said Swepson, or any one for him.

Dep. W. W. Rollins, Ques. 17, fol. 1411.
Ditto W. G. Candler, Ques. 15, fol. 1432.

Twenty-second.—That at the date of said conditional settlement, to wit: April 16, 1870, at the City of Washington, the said commissioners were not advised how or by what means the said Swepson and Littlefield were to become possessed of any Florida State Bonds; that they saw no bonds, nor any statutes authorizing their creation; that the commissioners were looking solely to the recovery of the embezzled funds, and stipulated for releases of the tort feasors, when the funds were so restored, which never has been done (fols. 1411, 1429, 1430, 1460 and 1630).

Twenty-third.—That after the making of said conditional agreement to settle, said Swepson, in good faith, sought to execute the same, and refused and still refuses to release his lien upon said Florida roads, because the funds, for the repayment of which such lien was created, have not been returned to him or said Western Division Company, whilst Littlefield and Houstoun have, without his knowledge or consent, sought to involve and alienate the estate, without repaying said Western Division Company (fols. 1457, 1458 and 3606 to 3630).

Twenty-fourth.—That previous to said settlement, and previous to the attempted consolidation of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads (fols. 3605 to 3630), the said Swepson and Littlefield had, of their own motion, and without the knowledge or consent of the officers or stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad Company, caused 1000 papers, called bonds of that company, of the par value of $1,000, to be issued, being about twice the amount of the capital stock of said company; that in order to conceal this transaction from said company, its stockholders and officers, said Swepson assumed to act as its president, and induced one H. H. Thompson to act as treasurer, though in no wise authorized so to do; and that they surreptitiously obtained possession of the seal of said company, and affixed it to said papers. (For a copy of these pretended bonds, which were illegal and void, see fol-40. For other circumstances connected with them, see fols. 1501, and 1636 to 1645.)

Twenty-fifth.—That, with full knowledge of the said settlement of April 16, 1870, and the rights of the Western Division Company in the premises, and after the attempted consolidation of May 24, 1870 (supra), said Littlefield and Houstoun, assuming to own said 4,700 shares and upwards of the stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and $1,000,000 in Florida State bonds, brought the same to New York City, and attempted to sell them and divide the proceeds among certain parties, pursuant to the several agreements dated respeciively May 13, May 30th, and June 7th, 1870, and that the said sums of money so paid to the parties named in said agreements out of the proceeds of said bonds were to pay private debts of the said Littlefield, and not the debts or obligations of said company (folios 4 to 46).

Twenty-sixth.—That, upon information of the last-mentioned scheme communicated by said Swepson, an action was commenced in the Supreme Court of New York, October 3, 1870, wherin said Littlefield and Houstoun were enjoined from selling or disposing of said stock and bonds, and such injunction has never yet been dissolved (folios 36 to 41).

Twenty-seventh.—That said Houstoun never appeared in said action, but made default therein, and avoided arrest by flight from the State of New York, and never returned to said State during his life time; and that upon his return to the State of Florida, he returned said State bonds to the Governor of that State, and got possession of the forged and fraudulent bonds aforesaid, which had been exchanged for said State bonds (folios 46, 1,817, 1,818).

Twenty-eighth.—That while said Houstoun was thus dealing with these 1,000 State bonds, the said Littlefield caused 3,000 other bonds of the State of Florida, which had been illegaly exchanged for 3,000 bonds of the Jackson, Pensacola, & Mobile Railroad Company, under the statutory contract of January 28, 1870, to be sent to Europe for sale; that this action was in violation of the conditions of settlement (fols. 1,417 to 1,428, supra), whereupon said commission sent its president, Hon. N. W. Woodfin, to Europe to seek payment pursuant to such settlement, which resulted in another conditional settlement, dated London, November 10, 1870, whereby said Littlefield agreed to supply the Western Division Company some 4,000 tons of iron for its road, and the delivery as by sale of 800 of said bonds of the State of Florida, upon condition that said bonds should be left with said S. W. Hopkins & Co for sale (see fols. 1,422 to 1,425).

Twenty-ninth—That the conditions of the last-named settlement not being complied with, said commissioners, acting under advice of counsel, and upon information again furnished by said Swepson, brought another action in the Supreme Court of the State of New York against S. W. Hopkins & Co., to recover the value of said 800 bonds under the London terms of settlement; that to this action Hopkins & Co. appeared, and pleaded, among other things, in defense thereto that said Florida State bonds were dedicated exclusively to the construction of the Jackson, Pensacola, & Mobile Company's road from Quincy westward, and could not lawfully be devoted to the payment of any money due the Western Division Company, and moved the court to be dismissed and discharged from further answering said complaint, and said motion was granted (see fols. 128 to 130 and 2,277).

Thirtieth.—That, during the legal proceedings aforesaid, two suits were pending in the State of Florida to test the constitutionality of the said Acts of June 24, 1869, and January 28, 1870, creating the said statutory contracts for the exchange of bonds between the State of Florida and said Jackson, Pensacola, & Mobile Railroad Company; and that, upon said cases reaching the Supreme Court of the State of Florida, said acts were declared to be unconstitutional and void, and that said State bonds, so called, were not, and never were, the undertakings of the State of Florida.

See the State v. Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, and Holland and others, 15 Fla. R.

State v. The Florida Central R. R. Co. and others idem.

Thirty-first.—That, whilst the Supreme Court of the State of Florida decided that the statutory contract created by the Act of January 28, 1870, for the exchange of State bonds, was unconstitutional and void as against the State of Florida; nevertheless, the bonds were a good and valid contract as against the company, which had agreed to exchange, and had exchanged, its bonds, in consideration of said void and unconstitutional State bonds.

15 Fla. R., supra.

Thirty-second.—That, though the matters involving the rights of all the parties respecting said Florida roads were pending in court, where the said Dutch bondholders were represented by the Governor of Florida, as their Trustee, under the said Act of Jan. 28, 1870, the said Sherwin, Jackson, Willard, and their associates, conspiring together for that purpose, formed the scheme called the "Memorandum Plan," for wrecking the said Florida railroads, and prepared a petition to the Governor, on said 22d day of September, 1876, sworn to by said Sherwin, whom they represented to be the duly accredited agent in this country of the committee of Dutch bondholders, having in charge the interests of Gideon M. Boissevain, Adrian J. Mildeus, Joseph Zaddock, Adrian Stoop, and others, alleged to be the holders of 3,200 of the so called Florida State bonds.

See Petition, fols. 144 to 146.

Thirty-third.—This petition was supported by the personal letters of Sherwin, Jackson, Simonton, and Willard, assuring the Governor that it was made by authority of the committee of foreign bondholders, in Amsterdam, and using the names of said Boissevain, Mildeus, Zaddock, Stoop, and others (see letters, fols. 147 to 185), when the fact was that no such authority had then been given by the said committee, Boissivain, or any other person or persons, but the object of said petition, supported by the letters, was to induce the seizure of the roads by the Governor, and then procure the authority and powers of attorney from the so-called Dutch bondholders, which were not procured until about the month of March, 1877. These facts are distinctly charged in the amended bill of the Western Division Company (fols. 136 to 144), were never denied, and are fully proven by the dates of the powers of attorney to Willard, Wertheim, and Engler, Trustee.

See Dep. of Engler, fols. 1710 to 1735.

Thirty-fourth.—That as part of the scheme to possess themselves of these Florida railroads, said Willard, Sherwin, and their associates, as early as October 15, 1876, organized a company, under the General Incorporation Laws of the State of Florida, called The Jacksonville & Mobile Railroad Company, to be composed solely of the Florida Central and Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile railroads, when the same should be forced to sale under the said "memorandum plan," and owning no other road or property.

See Articles of Incorporation, Supplemental Record A.

Thirty-fifth.—That the formation of such a company as last above named was provided for, and constituted a part of said "memorandum plan." At folios 658 is the following:

"For the reorganization of Jacksonville, Pensacola, and "Mobile Railroad Company, and the Florida Central Railroad "Company of Florida to be agreed upon by and between "Frank R. Sherwin, agent of the owners and holders of "the bonds of the State of Florida, issued in aid of "said railroad companies of the first part, and the owners "and holders of the first mortgage bonds of the Pen-"sacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Companies "of said State, issued under the provisions of the act of Jan-"uary 6, 1855, generally known as the "Internal Improvement "'Act,' represented by Henry R. Jackson of Savannah, in the "State of Georgia, and Charles H. Simonton of Charleston, "in the State of South Corolina, of the second part," thus declaring the real object to be not to secure payment of the Dutch bondholders, but to place Sherwin, Jackson, Simonton, Willard, and their associates in possession of these Florida railroads.

The "Plan" next proceeds to to provide in what manner the Governor of Florida shall be used to perfect this huge speculation and adventure, by seizing upon the two roads, then sub judice before the courts, and sell the same at the shortest notice under the 3d section of the statute of January 28, 1870, not for "lawful money of the United States, and for nothing else," as provided by said section, but, in direct violation thereof, to be paid for in these void and unconstitutional bonds of the State of Florida, and to make this operation, and free them from competing bids, the said Sherwin and sssociates were to be treated by the Governor as preferred bidders to the full extent of said void bonds and past due coupons, and when so purchased at such forced sale, to be conveyed to said Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company when formed.

The " plan" further provides that the funds necessary to consummate this forced sale were not to be a charge upon the so-called Dutch bondholders, but were to be provided by the promoters of the adventure (fol. 661).

Thirty-sixth.—That by the further provision to the " plan " it was provided that bonds at the rate of $12,000 per mile, for the whole line of said roads, say about $3,000,000, and stock of $3,000,000 were to be issued by the new company, and this stock and these bonds divided two-thirds of the bonds, or $2,000,000 and $2,500,000 of the stock to Sherwin and his associates, $1,000,000 in bonds and $500,000 in stock to the Dutch bondholders, but with the distinct provision, however, that no charge or expense should fall upon the Dutch bondholders (fol. 662),

Thirty-seventh.—That with the exact interests and profits of the respective parties to this wrecking adventure thus pre-arranged, though carefully concealed and excluded from the face of the petition, said Sherwin, as the accredited agent of said Dutch bondholders presented to the Governor (M. L. Stearns) as Ex-officio Trustee, under the 3d section of the Act of January 28, 1870, that document praying the seizure and sale of the Florida Central and Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroads as the next step to be taken in the execution of the " plan."

Thirty-eighth.—That the seizure thus prayed was made, and notice of sale thereof duly advertised on the 30th day of December, 1876, for the 2d day of April, 1877 (fol. 56); that this advertisement was ordered at the expiration of said Stearn's term of office; that his successor in office, Governor Drew, not deeming the petition of Sherwin sufficient authority to warrant the action of his predecessor in all respects, so advised said Sherwin by an official letter, dated January 10, 1877 (fol. 147), which was responded to by several letters from Sherwin, Willard, Jackson, and Simenton, to Governor Drew and Hon. Geo. P. Raney (fols. 148 to 162), seeking to justify the seizure as made, but desiring that the time of the sale should be so arranged as to suit the speculative conveniences of the promoters of the " plan.

Thirty-ninth.—That in consequence of Governor Drew not regarding the Sherwin petition supported by sufficient evidence of authority to represent anybody, another petition was prepared and presented in the name of J. Fred. Schutte, Jans, Prins, and others, by said Willard as their agent, on the 31st day of March, 1877, whereunto was attached the first power of attorney that was executed by any of the persons called Dutch bondholders to either Sherwin or Willard; and this bears date March 1st, 1877, thus showing that the Sherwin petition of September 22, 1876, was fabricated and presented without any authority whatsoever.

This last named petition, with its seven exhibits, was put in proof as part of the deposition of Hon. Geo. P. Raney (question 5, fol. 1389), but, being omitted from the printed record, is printed, document B, in Supplemental Record.

Fortieth.—That the seizure and advertisement of sale of said railroads at once terminated all judicial proceedings then being prosecuted by said Commissioners on behalf of the Western Division Company, and gave rise to the filing of the two bills in equity, on the part of the Western Division Company in February, March, and July, 1877 (fols. 1 to 151).

The foregoing somewhat lengthy but chronological statement, leading down to the origin of the two bills of the Western Division Company appellant, it is hoped will explain how it came that the parties defendant for years, or some of them, should turn up almost in possession of the subject of litigation, and how it became necessary, in order to maintain and test the rights of the appellant to said property, to cut under the whole previous litigation by these bills, and enjoin these wreckers from destroying the property, as prayed in and granted under said bills, until the rights of the parties could be tried.

It is also hoped that the foregoing statement, supported as it is, at all points from the record, makes it clear that the scheme which resulted in the petitions to the Governor of Florida (supra), and the J. Fred Schutte bill, had not its origin in any attempt to collect the bonds held by the Dutch bondholders, but had its origin in a corrupt conspiracy by Sherwin, Willard, and their associates to get wrongful and fraudulent possession the Florida railroads, without a dollar interest in either of them themselves; and that this High Court of Chancery, is besought to aid in the execution of this scheme.

A brief reference to the bills and the proceedings had thereon in court will enable us now, to present the issues of law and fact involved in these appeals.

I.

The bill in respect to the Florida Central road alleges that about 4,700 out of 5,500 shares of its capital stock were purchased with the funds of the complainant, and appellant, fraudulently misappropriated to that use by its officers; and seeks to reclaim the same through a Court of Equity.

II.

It contends that the Florida Central Company was not authorized by its charter to issue its bonds or charge its estate for the building of any other road.

III.

That said company never did agree to issue bonds to aid in the construction of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, & Mississippi road.

IV.

That its charter never contained any authority to issue such bonds; that it never accepted or adopted the provisions of said Acts of June 24th, 1869 and January 28th 1870; and that it never became bound to pay any of the bonds issued, or pretended to be issued, under said acts.

V.

That the 1,000 papers called bonds, signed by George W. Swepson, as President, and H. H. Thompson, as Treasurer, were not the acts or deeds of said company, but were fabrications and forgeries, binding on nobody. The only genuine thing about them being the impression of said companies seal, which was stolen from the Secretary's office for the purpose to be so used.

VI.

That said company never exchanged any bonds with the State of Florida; and that the pretended exchange of said forged and fabricated papers, with the Governor of the State for State bonds, was but the unauthorized act of Edward Houstoun and M. S. Littlefield, and in no manner bound said company.

VII.

That said Florida Central Company never received a dollar of the proceeds of any bonds issued by the State of Florida, and never was in law or in equity chargeable therewith.

VIII.

That the said papers called bonds of said company were fraudulently placed in the hands of Edward Houstoun by M. S. Littlefield on or before the 7th day of June, 1870, to be used in the payment of private debts, and were so attempted to be used in New York City, where a suit was brought by the Western Division Company against Houstoun and Littlefield on the 3d day of October, 1870, in the Supreme Court of New York, wherein an injunction order was granted, as follows:

"I do hereby order that the said defendants, and each of " them above named, and their agents, employees, and repre- " sentatives, do, all and each of them, until the further order " of this court, refrain from selling or offering to sell, assigning, " transferring, concealing, removing from this State, or in any " way transacting business about certain certificates of stock " (about three thousand shares) in the Florida Central Railroad " Company, and one million dollars in bonds of the State of "Florida, all of which said stock and bonds were placed in the "hands of Houstoun, by or through the agency of Littlefield, "as collateral security" (fols. 38 and 39).

IX.

That, in disregard of this injunction order, said Houstoun fled the State ot New York, taking with him said stock and bonds, to Florida, where he and said Littlefield resumed the corrupt use of the same; and that, in Florida, they were again sued, this time by James D. Westcott and Robert H. Gamble, as stockholders of the Florida Central Railroad Company, for themselves and others, and again placed under like injunction from dealing with or disposing of said bonds, and Houstoun was duly served with said injunction (fol 2,097).

X.

That, after the granting of said last named injunction, and with full knowledge thereof, the Governor of the State of Florida, acting in his capacity as Trustee under said act of January 28, 1870, combined with said Houstoun and Littlefield and one Thomas B. Coddington, for the fraudulent use and appropriation of said forged Florida Central Bonds in the payment of private debts to an amount beyond the market value of the said bonds, even if they had been lawfully issued; that as a means of accomplishing this fraudulent object the said Houstoun, on the 11th day of January, 1871, passed the 1,000 papers called bonds of the Forida Central Company to said Coddington, who receipted for the same "in trust and for acount of Edward Houstoun," who, after paying said Houstoun $163,000, with interest, in payment for $103,000 Pensacola and Georgia Bonds, and $5,000 as an arbitrary charge for "costs and expenses incurred by said Houstoun in suits brought by parties against said Houstoun in relation to those bonds, or other bonds, and the stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company," was to pay other large sums for private debts, as scheduled at folio 46.

XI.

That, in further consummation of the fraudulent use of said forged bonds, and in violation of said injunction then just granted, and with full knowledge thereof, the Governor of Florida accepted them back from said Coddington, and returned to him, in lieu thereof, the said Florida State Bonds numbered above 3,000, which the said Houstoun and Littlefield had been enjoined from handling (fols. 38 to 40).

XII.

That the Governor of Florida, having thus exchanged said bonds with said Coddington, on the 11th of January, 1871, the latter, in order to avoid the jurisdiction of the courts of Florida, taking said State Bonds with him, fled the State in a private conveyance that night to Georgia, and thence to London, England, where he delivered said bonds to S. W. Hopkins & Co., pursuant to the stipulation in his receipt (fol. 46).

See dep. Coddington, fols. 1,735 to 1,745.
See dep. S. W. Hopkins, fols. 1,747 to 1,749.

XIII.

That the said Boissevain, Mildeus, Stoop, and others, called Dutch bondholders, who purchased said State Bonds, had knowledge of the fact that the same were illegally and fraudulently issued, and sought to speculate in the same with a knowledge thereof, and acquired no right or title or equity as against the said Florida Central Railroad Company, or lien upon its property or estate, or if any such lien at all, it is subsequent and subject to the prior lien and equity of the said Western Division Company, appellant, whose money had been fraudulently used in the purchase of the stock of said company.

THE BILL RESPECTING THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA, AND MOBILE RAILROAD COMPANY.

This bill seeks to recover the $1,063,000 of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad bonds purchased with the fraudulent appropriation of that portion of the $1,287,000 of the Western Division Company's funds which were used in Florida, $960,300 of which were paid in the purchase of said two railroads, at the sale thereof, on the 20th day of March, 1869, as alleged in the bill.

The material and undisputed allegations of this bill are:

I.—That early in the year 1869, Swepson, Littlefield, and Houstoun, acting as the fiduciaries of the appellant, the Western Division Company, fraudulently used and appropriated $1,287,000 and upwards of its funds in the purchase, among other things, of $1,063,000 of the bonds of the said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Companies.

II.—That the said $1,063,000 of bonds, when so purchased with the funds of the Western Division Company, at once enured to, vested in, and became the property and estate of the said Western Division Company.

III.—That subsequently to such purchase of said bonds, which were paid for, owned, and held as aforesaid, and on the 20th of March, 1869, the railroads of the respective companies issuing said bonds were sold by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund of the State of Florida, and purchased by Franklin Dibble and associates for $1,420,000, the sum of about $1,220,000 being bid for the Pensacola and Georgia road, and about $195,000 for the Tallahassee road. The terms of said sales were such that the whole of said purchases could be discharged and paid in said bonds so fraudulently purchased with the funds of the said Western Division Company.

IV.—That subsequent to said purchase by said Dibble and associates, the said Swepson became a party to said transaction by virtue of a written agreement, dated March 26, 1869 (fols. 628 to 630), by the terms of which agreement said Swepson undertook to advance $960,300 of the said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds, so fraudulently purchased by him, in payment for said two railroads, he to be secured for such advance by an agreed bond issue, and a certain portion of the stock of a company to be formed pursuant to legislation in that behalf to be obtained, as shown by the terms of said agreement; the remainder of said purchase money, amounting to about $472,065, to be paid by said Dibble and associates.

V.—That said Swepson paid the said $960,300 of bonds, but Dibble and associates did not pay $472,065, which was subsequently assumed by Swepson, which arrangement secured the conveyance of the two railroads to Dibble and associates on the 8th day of April, 1869; but that the said deeds conveying the same were not delivered to Dibble and associates, but were to be, and were in fact, delivered to said Swepson, and to him duly assigned in trust, by a deed executed by said Dibble and associates on the 22d day of April, 1869 (fols. 113 and 114), to be held by him until his said advances should be repaid, as well as the $472,065 which he had agreed to pay.

VI.—That, by the payment of said $960,300 of Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds for said roads, they immediately became and remained the property and estate of said Western Division Company, and were so its property and estate on the 24th day of June, 1869, when the said act incorporating the new Tallahassee Company was passed (fols. 123 to 125), wherein, and in the 6th section of which, a special lien is reserved in favor of said Swepson to secure the repayment of said bonds to him, as well as the $472,065 which he had assumed for said Dibble and associates, as follows: "Provided that any deed of trust, mortgage, conveyance, bond or bonds, or security, which may have been executed, made, created or contracted for, as a lien of said railroads, or otherwise, by said Dibble, in behalf of himself and his associates, prior to the passage of this act, shall be valid and effectual to all intents, either at law or in equity, as a lien or mortgage or security on said railroads, as if the same had been made by virtue of this act, and SHALL IN NO WISE BE AFFECTED BY ANY PROVISIONS THEREOF."

NOTE.—We maintain that this reservation of the lien in favor of Swepson, our agent, in this puplic statute, was notice to all the world of our lien, and saves it so as to postpone to it any equities which the appellees may possibly have in those roads.

VII.—That, in obedience to the reserved right and lien in favor of said Swepson, provided for in the sixth section of the Act of June 24, 1869, incorporating said new Tallahassee Company above mentioned, and soon after the organization of said new company it issued and placed in the hands of said Swepson 1,500 of its First Mortgage Bonds of $1,000 each, secured by deed of trust from said new Tallahassee Company to Stewart

L. Woodford, Darius R. Mangam, and B. G. Worth, Trustees, but the said deed of trust and the said bonds not being satisfactory to said Swepson, he refused to accept the same and convey the said railroads so held by him to the new Tallahassee Company until the terms of the deed of conveyance of the 22d day of April, 1869 (fol. 113), were complied with by Dibble and associates. The conveyance never was made, and said Swepson still holds the title to said roads.

See Swepson's Dep., fols. 1451 to 1461.

VIII.—That in the month of November, 1869, said Swepson was succeeded by said Littlefield as president of said Western Division Company, who, by virtue of his office, assumed the performance of the trust previously devolving upon said Swepson, to secure the payment of the money due the said Western Division Company. Swepson delivered to Littlefield all the assets held by him for that purpose, but held the title to said two roads until the payment of the said $969,300 and the sum of $472,065 should be paid to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund. But these respective sums never were paid, and said Swepson never conveyed said roads to said new Tallahassee Company.

See Swepson's Deposition, supra.

IX.—That the Legislature of North Carolina, by an act passed on the 24th day of March, 1870, created a commission clothed with special power to settle with said Swepson as late President of said Western Division Company, and collect its money and assets, and place the same in some safe bank (fols. 2080 and 2081); that pursuant to this power the conditional settlements of April 16, 1870, and November 10, 1870, were executed, showing that $1,287,000 and upwards of the Western Division Company's funds were used in the purchase of the said Florida roads, and an attempt was made to provide means to repay the same.

Folios 1417 to 1425.

X.—That after the settlement of the 16th April, 1870, was made, and after the said 1,500 bonds of the said new Tallahassee Company had been issued and tendered to said Swepson, and after said Swepson had ceased to have any connection with the Florida roads, to wit, on the 24th day of May, 1870, the said new Tallahassee Company, assuming to own said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahasse roads, was assumed to have consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, which owned no property or estate whatsoever.

See Proceedings of Consolidation, fols. 3606 to 3620.

NOTE.—There was no power or authority granted to the Tallahassee Company by its charter (fols. 123 to 125) to consolidate with any other company. The 4th section of its charter expressly provides "That said Tallahassee Railroad "Company may, when they shall see fit, rent, lease, farm out, or "sell any part of said railroads to any person or persons, cor-"poration or corporations, upon such terms as may be agreed "on." We maintain that this careful expression of powers excludes the authority to consolidate, and therefore, that the attempted consolidation was ultra vires and void. But if the consolidation were fully authorized and affected, we still maintain that such consolidation did not and could not carry the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads into the Jacksonville Pensacola, and Mobile Company, because the title to them remains in Swepson, and never was conveyed to the new Tallahassee Company.

Justice Bradley, in his opinion (fol. 1210), says: "It seems to me from a careful examination of this statute [the Tallahassee Charter], that it intends to clothe with corporate powers the said Dibble and associates as purchasers and owners of the roads, and that no further conveyance from them to the corporation into which they were constituted was contemplated. As a corporation, they are invested with the rights to hold, operate, and enjoy the said railroad, under the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company," &c. But the record shows (fols. 3608-9), that Swepson, in whom the title was before the act of incorporation, was not a party to the organization nor the holder of a share of its stock. This subject, however, will be more fully considered in the assignment of errors and on argument.

XI.—That the $960,300 Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds purchased with said Western Division Company's funds were delivered to the State of Florida (fols. 1479 to 1486), and were in existence and intact in June, 1871, when the litigation was begun in New York (fol. 2163), in which that court held and decided that the Western Division Company never acquired, and could not acquire any right to the proceeds of said Florida State bonds to pay the private obligations of Swepsen and Littlefield, or either of them, because said bonds were specifically dedicated to the building of a railroad; and that upon the rendering of this decision, and on the 26th day of February, 1872, the State of Florida took said bonds from the Comptroller's office and burnt them.

Rollins's Deposition, fol. 1414.

XII.—That such burning of said bonds did not impair or destroy the right of said Western Division Company as cestui que trust to pursue and claim the same from the State of Florida (fol. 78), or to treat them as subsisting, for the purposes of this litigation, and to enforce the same as against said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads.

XIII.—That if, for any sufficient reason, the court should hold that said $960,300 of bonds were not subsisting, as above charged and claimed, that then, and in that event, the Western Division Company has the right to claim, adopt, and complete the purchase of said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads, and pay to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund the balance of $472,065, and take possession of said roads as the avails of the fraudulent use of its funds.

Fol. 79.

XIV.—That the act of January 28, 1870, assuming to authorize the exchange of Florida State bonds for bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, was unconstitutional and void, and was so held by the Supreme Court of the State of Florida, being the court of last resort in said State, and therefore that the State of Florida never gave any consideration for the said 3,000 papers called bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company; and that said 3,000 papers were made payable to the State of Florida specifically, and not to bearer or order, and so were not negotiable.

See fols. 79–80.

XV.—That by the express provision of said statute of January 28, 1870, it was made a condition precedent to any exchange of bonds between said company and the State, that "the president thereof shall certify upon his oath that the road or parts of road for which he asks such exchange of bonds is completed and in good running order," but that no such certificate upon oath was ever made by the president of said company.

Fol. 81.

XVI.—That the act purporting to authorize the exchange of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company's bonds for State bonds is void because it tenders an impossible contract, for the reason that in the event of a sale of the roads for non-payment of interest to the State to meet the interest on its pretended bonds, the Governor, as ex-officio Trustee, may enter upon and sell the said roads "for lawful money of the United States, and for nothing else," except that the State, for its own protection, may become the purchaser at such sale, and may pay in said purchase any indebtedness the State may hold against said roads, which purchase money or evidence of indebtedness shall be paid on the day of sale or within ten days thereafter, "and all moneys arising from said sale, and paid into the treasury as heretofore prescribed, shall be promptly and exclusively applied to the payment and satisfaction of the bonds issued by the State under this act," but that, as the State of Florida never issued any bonds, for want of constitutional power so to do, no consideration ever passed to said company, and no bonds were ever issued to the payment of which the proceeds of the sale of said roads could be "promptly and exclusively applied," as proposed by said statute. This transaction cannot be carried out, and the whole scheme is impossible, and must fail unless this court will undertake to make a contract for the parties, of which they were incapable themselves, and then execute it.

XVII.—The bill charges that there is no privity of relation between the parties holding said State bonds and the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company; that such parties are the creditor of the State of Florida so far as they acquired any rights as the holders of said unconstitutional State bonds; that the defendants Schutte, Boissevain, and others never held any bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, and can in no event claim or maintain any rights other than such as are vested in the State of Florida, which, by reason of its bonds being unconstitutional and void, was exactly nothing; and that the 3,000 papers called bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company held by the State should be held for nought, and be delivered up to said company to be canceled.

Fols. 86, 87.

XVIII.—The bill charges that the said Boissevain, Mildeus, Zoddock, Stoop, and others had full notice of the character of said State bonds; that the Governor of the State of Florida, as Trustee of the said parties, at all times had full notice of the character of said bonds, and the whole transaction; and that notice to such Trustee was good and sufficient notice to his cestuis que trust.

Fols. 88–89.

The bill prays that the sale of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company's road may be enjoined, and for general and special relief.

The court is therefore advised, as matter of fact, not disputed by answer or proof, and indeed found by the court below, that the funds used in the purchase of over 4,700 shares of the capital stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and $960,300 of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad bonds, which were used in payment for said two last mentioned roads when they were sold on March 20, 1869, were the funds of the Western Division Company, fraudulently so used by its agents and fiduciaries Swepson, Littlefield, and Houstoun; that said $960,300 Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds were all the payment that was in fact made upon said sale; and that this high court of equity is appealed to by the Western Division Company to restore to it its own stolen property, fully, completely, and specifically traced and identified, and which it has been diligently pursuing for these many years.

The court will also see that the real contest is between a set of railroad wreckers, under a most corrupt, champertous contract (and not the Dutch bondholders) on one side, and the Western Division Company on the other.

The origin of this scheme is well set up by Jacobus Wertheim, at folio 1774 of the record. He heads a document addressed to the Dutch bondholders: "Propositions for a settlement tendered to the holders of 8 per cent. Florida bonds by Mr. J. Wertheim, attorney and counsellor, of Amsterdam."

Now, let it be noted that Wertheim does not pretend here to represent either the State of Florida or its railroad companies. Nor does he pretend to represent any one who has any real interest in either, beyond the scheme of wrecking called the "Memorandum Plan."

He says:

"Gentlemen,—Having been requested last year by certain "parties in the United States interested in the reorganization "of the railways in Florida to present plans, in the event of "certain contingencies, to holders of bonds in the Nether- "lands, I expressed my entire willingness to do so, on the "following conditions:

"1st. That Charles D. Willard, solicitor at the Supreme "Court at Washington, who for a long time had seemed to "me to be a man of extensive knowledge, and honorable and "punctual in attending to any business entrusted to him, "should be appointed, together with myself, as legal counsellor "in America.

"This desire was complied with.

"2d. That I should be permitted to submit all propositions "and plans through Messrs. Skreglinger & Co., to their cor- "respondents Messrs. Kremelberg & Co., of New York," &c.

He then sets out and tells them the truth about the invalidity and worthlessness of the Florida bonds, in order, so far as he and his clients were concerned, to enable them to make advantageous terms with the bondholders for the use of their position in the scheme they had devised for capturing the Florida railroads. He tells them plainly that the bonds have been declared unconstitutional and void, both by the Supreme Court and the Legislature of the State.

Fols. 1775 and 1776.

As previously stated, the seizure and notice of sale of the Florida Central and Jacksonville, Pennsacola, and Mobile Railroads by the Governor of Florida, as Trustee, &c., upon the petition of Sherwin, Willard, and their associates in the "Memorandum Plan" for "reorganizing" said roads, in the name of Schutte, Prius, Boissevain, and others, called Dutch bondholders, at once suspended all proceedings then pending in the courts on the part of the Western Division Company, and necessitated the filing of the two bills in equity involved in this appeal, praying for an injunction against such sales, and for general relief.

Upon the filing of these bills, the Governor of Florida, as Trustee for said Dutch bondholders, appeared, and, in their name, demurred to the bills (fols. 203 to 206). These demurrers were prepared by, or under the advice of, the special counsel of the Dutch bondholders, and, upon argument, were overruled, and judgment entered thereon for appellant.

NOTE.—These orders were entered at Tallahassee, and do not appear in the record as transferred to Jacksonville.

The motions for injunctions then coming on to be heard, the Governor of Florida, as Trustee for the Dutch bondholders, filed separate answers to the Western Division Company's bills (fols. 207 to 287), which were read as affidavits in opposition to the motions, by counsel for the Dutch bondholders, who prepared said answers and conducted the argument on said motions.

To show how completely and exclusively the defenses to the appellant's bills were conducted in the name, as well as for the benefit, of the Dutch bondholders, J. Fred. Schutte and others, we cite the following extracts from the answers as read and argued on the hearing of said motions :

"Respondent says that J. Fred. Shutte and others, of Amsterdam, Kingdom of the Netherlands, have presented a memorial to him, setting forth, on oath, that they are the bona fide holders of bonds issued by the Governor of the State of "Florida to the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad "Company, under the provisions of the Act of January 28, "1870, and by it sold, and that no interest has been paid on "such bonds by said company for more than twelve months "after a default in payment of interest, and praying that the "respondent would make such seizure and sale, and there "having been presented to respondent by said persons a list "giving the numbers of said bonds by them respectively held, "copies of which list are herewith filed, marked Exhibit E, "the respondent deems himself bound by the laws of the "State, and the decisions of the Supreme Court thereof, to "proceed in the manner and form as he has before stated, and "he is advised that it is his duty to proceed to make sale of "said franchise, railroad, and property, at the time before "specified."

Fol. 227.

By the answer of the Governor the court is advised that he was simply responding to the call of said J. Fred. Schutte and others, as their recognized Trustee, under the Act of January 28, 1870, when he undertook to seize and sell said roads, as therein provided. The importance of keeping this fact in view will appear presently, when we come to speak of the filing of an original bill by Schutte and others.

Another important ground alleged by the Dutch bondholders, in their answer by said Trustee, the Governor of Florida, may also be profitably borne in mind in this connection, showing that they wholly ignored the separate corporate existence of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and that they had had no dealings with said company. The part of their answer to which we refer is as follows:

"Respondent says that the said parties holding said bonds "do not admit that any specific bonds held by them are to "the exclusion of the others, a lien upon any particular portion of the line of railroad beginning at Jacksonville, and "running westward to the Apalachicola River, but that the whole "of said line of said road is liable for each and every of said "bonds."

Fol. 228.

In other words, the Florida Central Company was not known to the Dutch bondholders as a party to the issue of any of said bonds.

Besides the special matters above cited, the answers of the Governor, as Trustee, &c., set up all the alleged rights and equities of the Dutch bondholders, as why should they not do? since they were both drawn and supported in argument by the counsel employed in the name of the Dutch bondholders, to promote and consummate the "Memorandum Plan" for appropriating those two railroads, as shown by the record.

We now arrive at the real grounds of contest in these remarkable suits—suits rendered remarkable by what follows. We have shown—

1st. That the Western Division Company, resorted to the courts as early as October 3, 1870, to assert its rights as cestui que trust to its fraudulently appropriated assets, and so continued down to December, 1876.

2d. That during the year 1876, the parties to the "Memorandum Plan," Sherwin, Willard, Jackson, Simonton, Allen, and others, sought the Dutch bondholders, and purchased the use of their names and position as holders of Florida State bonds, then declared unconstitutional and void, agreeing to give nearly one-third of the avails of the proposed wrecking of these roads, by what the wreckers called a "reorganization" of them—they to hold the Dutch bondholders free from all expense.

3d. That pursuant to this corrupt and champertous contract, Sherwin, Willard, and their associates, petitioned the Governor, as ex-officio Trustee, to seize and sell the roads, in such a manner as to make the wreckers preferred bidders, with leave to pay in these void and unconstitutional State bonds, notwithstanding the statute provided that such sale should be made for "lawful money of the United States, and nothin, else."

4th. That to prevent this irreparable injury, the Western Division Company filed its two bills, praying injunctions until its rights could be heard and determined, and for general and special relief.

5th. That to these bills the Dutch bondholders, through the Governor, as their Trustee, appeared and demurred.

6th. That upon argument these demurrers were overruled, and judgment given for the complainant in the usual form.

7th. That the motions for injunctions on appellant's bills were then heard upon the bills, answers, and exhibits; the answer of the Dutch bondholders, through the Governor, as their Trustee, being read in their behalf, as an affidavit.

8th. That, upon consideration, the motions were granted and the sales, advertised at the instance of said Dutch bondholders, were enjoined May 22, 1877.

So far we say all was regular, but just here all regularity ceases, and just here the foundation was laid for all the confusion that appears in this record.

The said J. Fred. Schutte and others petitioned the Governor, as Trustee, &c., to seize and sell said roads; they appeared. through him, and by special counsel, to sustain their demurrer, then to resist the injunctions. But, when the injunctions, notwithstanding their resistance, were granted, what then? The very next day, May 23, 1877, the same Sherwin, Willard, and their associates of the "Memorandum Plan," in the name of the same J. Fred. Schutte, Jans Prins, G. M. Boissevain, and others, Dutch bondholders, filed in the same court an original bill against the Western Division Company, the Florida Central Company, the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, and a multitude of other defendants.

Folios 536 to 581.

This bill, which we will hereafter call "The Schutte Bill," sets up and alleges affirmatively the same rights and equities which were set up in their elaborate answers to the Western Division Company's bills, through the Governor, as Trustee. The leading, distinguishing feature between these answers, filed through the Governor as Trustee, and their bill filed in their own name, being that they pretend to make the "Memorandum Plan" a part of their bill (par. xvi, fol. 548), and annex a part of it (Bijlage A) to their bill marked Schedule D (folios 563 to 570), but suppress the other part (Bijlage B), which will be found at folio 662, where the "Memorandum Plan" is set out in full, in the Western Division Company's answer to the Schutte bill.

THE SCHUTTE BILL.

The material allegations of this bill are:

I.—That on the 20th day of March, 1869, the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads were sold by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund.
Fol. 537.

II.—That F. Dibble and associates purchased said roads and paid the purchase money.
Fol. 538.

III.—That the roads were not paid for in money, but partly paid for in bonds of said companies, which they immediately cancelled; and that the balance was placed in the hands of said Swepson, as agent of said Trustees, with directions to purchase and deliver to them, for cancellation, the balance of the bonds of said company's bonds that were outstanding, and which were entitled to be paid out of said funds.
Par. IV., fol. 538.

IV.—That said Dibble and associates were incorporated as a body politic under the name and style of the Tallahassee Railroad Company.
Par. V., fol. 538.

V.—That afterward said Dibble and associates and the Tallahassee Company conveyed the said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads to the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, of which George W. Swepson and Milton S. Littlefield owned nearly all the capital stock.

Par. V., fol. 538.

VI.—That in the year 1870, the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company received from the Governor of Florida $4,000,000 in State bonds, in accordance with the law incorporating that company.

Par. VI., fol. 539.

VII.—That the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company delivered to the State of Florida $3,000,000 of its own bonds and $1,000,000 of the Florida Central Company's bonds.

Par. VII., fol. 539.

VIII.—That said $1,000,000 of Florida Central bonds were executed by said company, and that M. S. Littlefield owned a majority of its stock.

Par. VIII., fol. 539.

IX.—That Littlefield had contracted to purchase the stock of J. P. Sanderson and Edward Houstoun, for the purpose of making a consolidation of the Florida Central and Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Companies; and that 1,000 bonds of the Florida Central Company were to be delivered to the Governor of Florida in exchange for State bonds, which were to be sold and the proceeds applied to the payment for said stock, and that this was done.

Par. VIII., fols. 539, 540.

X.—That the complainants, Schutte and others, own said State bonds, numbered from one to 3,206; that said State bonds, so numbered, are on their way from Amsterdam to Adolph Engler, in New York City, as agent of the complainants, entrusted by them to do with said bonds as may be deemed best for the interest of complainants, by their agent, Charles D. Willard, and their counsel.

Par. XI., fol. 542.

XI.—That the interest from the 1st day of January, 1873, was due upon said State bonds, and that complainants (Schutte, Prins, Boissevain, and others) had applied to the Governor of Florida to seize and sell said roads for their benefit.

Par. XI., fol. 542.

XII.—That the interest paid on said bonds, up to January 1, 1873, was paid by a trust company in the City of New York; and that said interest was represented to be paid with money provided by the State of Florida.

Par. XI., fol. 542.

XIII.—That the Governor of the State of Florida has seized the whole line of railroad, and the property thereunto pertaining, which was formerly owned by the Florida Central Railroad Company, as well as that from Lake City to the Apalachicola River, &c., and has, in the advertisement, described the railroad from Lake City to Jacksonville as the property of the Florida Central Railroad Company, but complainants are advised that the road from Jacksonville to Lake City forms, with the road west of Lake City, one entire line and is the property of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company.

Pars. XIV., XV., fol. 547.

XIV.—That the complainants, J. Fred. Schutte, Jans Prins, and others, had authorized one Frank R. Sherwin, as their agent, to make an arrangement with the holders of Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds to join the "Memorandum Plan" for the sale of said roads; that "complainants are willing that a decree be made and entered in this cause, making "provision for the sale of said railroads and property upon the "basis in said plan contained," &c.

That is, the said Schutte and others ask that a decree be made carrying into effect the "Memorandum Plan," creating them preferred bidders, with the right to bid as CASH the void and unconstitutional bonds of the State of Florida.

Par. XVI., fol. 548.

XV.—The bill reiterates the allegation that the Florida Central Company was consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, and therefore dissolved.

Par. XVII., fol. 549.

XVI.—That the complainants set up and rely upon the decision of the Supreme Court of the State of Florida.
Par. XVIII., fol. 550.

XVII.—That the defendant, the Western Division Company, united with said Littlefield and Swepson, and S. W. Hopkins & Co., in procuring the Governor of Florida to issue and deliver to said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company the said State bonds (so called), and in all the acts done and representations made by said Jacksonville, Pensocola, and Mobile Company, its officers and agents in the sale of said bonds.
Par. XXII., fol. 552.

XVIII.—That the Western Division Company agreed to receive $600,000 of the proceed of said State bonds, and to assert its right thereto, brought a suit in the Supreme Court of the State of New York, against S. W. Hopkins & Co.
Par. XXII., fol. 550.

XIX.—That Edward Houstoun held 4,370 shares of the capital stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company at the time of his death; and that Littlefield has made a conveyance of said stock to the Western Division Company.
Par. XXVI., fol. 555.

There are many other allegations in this bill as to other defendants, and as to whom the bill has been dismissed; many that are irrelevant, multifarious, and immaterial, but we think we have extracted all that are material to this appeal.

The filing of this bill by Schutte, Prins, and others, as complainants, who were at the same time defendants to the Western Division Company's bills, the filing of which they had necessitated by the petition in their names to seize and sell the roads, and which bills said Schutte and others had just answered, through the Governor as their Trustee, was a violent infraction of the authoritative rules of equity procedure. The bill, as stated, is but a reiteration of their grounds of relief, as alleged in their said answer. The only difference being, as we have just seen (par. XVI, fol. 548), that the "memorandum plan" is set up, in express terms, as the basis of the relief demanded, though it was suppressed in their answer to the Western Division Company's bills. In all other respects the Schutte bill is but a substantial restatement of their answer through the Governor as their Trustee.

ANSWER TO THE SCHUTTE BILL.

Instead of consuming time to correct the filing of the bill of Schutte et al., and assuming that the causes would be tried as one, and the Schutte bill be treated as a cross-bill, it was answered by the Western Division Company as such.

Therefore, the Western Division Company, the principal and first named defendant against whom the Schutte bill was aimed, at once appeared to and answered it fully and completely. This answer (fols. 584 to 627) meets every allegation of the Schutte bill, and is supported by a schedule of documents numbered from 1 to 20 (fols. 628 to 677), which fully sustains every allegation and denial contained in the answer so completely as to overcome the bill, as matter of evidence, and justify its dismissal, if submitted upon bill, answer, and exhibits.

As the answer of the Western Division Company is but a substantial repetition of its two bills, somewhat amplified and supported by documentary evidence, we need not repeat its points here in detail, as the grounds of relief are presented as alleged, in the summary of said bills in the preceding statement.

The only material change is in the correction of a clause in the XVIth paragraph of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile bill (fol. 71). "That at the time of such incorporation of the " said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, " it was possessed of no railroad, property, or estate of any " kind, but was organized for the purpose of becoming the assignee and owner of the said Tallahassee Railroad, as incorporated by and created under the purchases by said F. Dibble " and associates, as aforesaid, and that pursuant to said acts " of incorporation, or one of them, the said Franklin Dibble " and associates did convey and transfer said Pensacola and " Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads, according to the terms " of said trust agreement, when, and from and after which time " the said Pensacola and Georgia Railroad and the said Talla- " hassee Railroads as separate properties, and the said " Tallahassee Railroad Company as incorporated in the " name of said F. Dibbs and associates, on the 24th day of " June, 1869, became, and now are, the railroad owned by the " corporation defendant, the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and " Mobile Railroad Company, as aforesaid."

When this bill was drawn, the solicitor for the Western Division Company not being advised, supposed such to be the facts. But soon thereafter, and whilst the answer of the Western Division Company to the Schutte bill was being prepared, the counsel of said Swepson (Hon. T. C. Fuller, of Raleigh, N. C.) advised the said solicitor that the averment just quoted was incorrect, and did said Swepson great injustice, because, in truth and in fact, no conveyance had ever been made by Swepson of the said two railroads to the Tallahassee or the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Companies; that the only deed or conveyance executed was said Dibble and associates to said Swepson on the 22d day of April, 1869, when the deeds of the 8th of April, from the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, were delivered to Swepson also, to secure him for the $960,300 paid by him, and the $472,065 he had agreed to pay; and that he, Swepson, still held, and should continue to hold, the legal title to said roads until such payments were made.

The receipt of this information, substantiated as it was by the record, both as matter of truth and justice, demanded that the paragraph quoted should be corrected by amendment. This was done first, in answering the Schutte bill (par. V, fol. 538), which alleges:

" V.—That said Dibble and associates afterward became in- " corporated by an Act of the Legislature of Florida, under " the name and style of Tallahassee Railroad Company, for " the purpose of operating the said railroads to which they " had so acquired title. Afterwards the said Tallahassee Rail- " road Company, and said Dibble and associates conveyed the " said railroads to the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile " Railroad Company, of which George W. Swepson and Mil- " ton S. Littlefield owned nearly the entire stock."

In answering the paragraph just quoted, the Western Division Company, being better advised, set up the true transaction as follows:

" (i.) But this defendant further and especially answering " paragraph V, of complainants' bill, expressly denies the allegations therein contained, that 'Afterwards, the said Tallahassee Railroad Company and said Dibble and associates " conveyed the said railroads' (meaning the Pensacola and " Georgia, and Tallahassee Railroads) 'to the said Jacksonville, " Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, of which George " W. Swepson owned nearly all the stock,' and denies that any " such conveyance ever was made at any time, and that the " statements in complainants' bill, in that behalf, are wholly " untrue.

" (j.) That the only conveyance ever attempted to be made " by said F. Dibble and associates was a conveyance, partially " executed, in the year 1870, in the shape of a deed of release " from said Dibble and associates to the said Tallahassee " Railroad Company, but which never was fully executed, as " will better appear by a copy of such conveyance, partially " executed, but not acknowledged, and without date, except " the words 'day of A. D. 1870,' and which was never recorded, as will be seen by a copy thereof, made part of answer, marked Schedule No. 7."

Fol. 589.

In view of the fact that Dibble and associates never acquired any title to said roads, except such as they forthwith conveyed to Swepson, who alone paid, with the Western Division Company's funds, all that was paid on said purchases, it is useless to say the attempted quit-claim deed of F. Dibble and associates, even if duly executed and delivered, could convey anything beyond a mere equity of redemption of the thinnest kind. For, as their is no covenant for possession by Dibble and associates, in their deed to Swepson, of April 22, 1869 (supra), both the legal and equitable title were thereby vested in him until absolutely reconveyed by him.

And this position is strengthened by the record that Swepson never held a share of stock in either the new Tallahassee Company or the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company.

Fols. 3606 to 3623.

We the more especially invite the attention of the court to these conclusive facts, as they will hereafter be referred to and relied upon, in discussing the assignment of errors, and seeking to correct serious mistakes in the findings of fact by the court.

The answer of the Western Division Company, as before stated, meets and denies every material allegation of the Schutte bill, and especially denies—

1st. That the sales of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads were honestly or legally conducted as alleged in Pars. I., II., and III. of said bill (fol. 538), but alleges that sales were bungles, frauds, shams, and swindles from their inception to their last act, and denies that there was a dollar paid thereon except the $960,300 Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds equitably belonging to the Western Division Company.
Fols. 585 and 586.

2d. The answer avers that by the agreement of March 26 and the deed of April 22, 1869, from Dibble and associates to Swepson, the said roads, when purchased for said $960,300 of bonds, became the property and estate of the Western Division Company, to be held in trust for it until the said $960,300 of bonds, or their proceeds, with interest, were returned to it.
Fols. 587 and 588.

3d. That by the 6th section of the Act of June 24, 1869, incorporating F. Dibble and associates into the new Tallahassee Railroad Company, it was "Provided, that any deed of trust or mortgage, conveyance,

"bond or bonds, or security, which may have been executed, made
"or executed, or contracted for, as a lien on said railroads, or "otherwise, by said Franklin Dibble, on behalf of himself and as- "sociates, prior to the passage of this Act, shall be valid and ef- "fectual to all intents, either at law or in equity, as a lien or mort- "gage, or security, as if the same had been made by virtue of this "Act, and shall in no wise be affected by the passage thereof."

Fol. 588.

This was designed to reserve, and did reserve, and vest in said Swepson, a prior lien, right, and title to the extent of said $960,300 of Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds and the $472,065 of unpaid purchase money assumed by him. And and this reservation being in a public statute creating the new Tallahassee Company, was notice to all the world of such lien.

4th. The said answer further shows that, pursuant to said reserved lien in favor of said Swepson, the said new Tallahassee Company issued and tendered to said Swepson 1,500 bonds of $1,000 each, secured by a mortgage on said new Tallahassee Company's road; that said bonds and the mortgage were unsatisfactory to said Swepson; and that he therefore refused to treat them as a compliance with the agreement between Dibble and associates and himself, and refused to convey said roads to said company.

Fol. 588.

5th. The answer specifically denies the VIIth par. (fol. 539), of said bill, wherein it is alleged that the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, in 1870, or at any other time, delivered 3,000 of its own bonds and 1,000 of the Florida Central Company's bonds to the Governor of Florida, and received 4,000 State bonds therefor; and denies that the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company ever, at any time, had in its possession, or in any manner handled any bonds of the Florida Central Company, for any purpose, or ever received any State bonds therefor, to be used in the extension of its road, or for any other purpose.

Fol. 593.

6th. The answer denies that the Florida Central Company ever issued any bonds for the benefit of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company under the Acts of June 24, 1869, or January 28, 1870; but avers, on the contrary, that the Florida Central Company had no power or authority by its charter to issue any such bonds; that it never accepted the provisions of either of said acts; and that it never entered into any agreement to assume a debt for another company, of nearly double its capital stock, &c.

Fol. 594.

7th. The answer denies the allegations of the bill as respects the pretended bond issue of the Florida Central Company, and gives the true version thereof, as supported by the proofs of record.

Fol. 594 to 598.

8th. The answer admits that the interest was paid on the State bonds up to July 1, 1873, and avers that it was paid, not by the State of Florida, but out of the pooceeds of a portion of said State bonds; and that the statement that said Dutch bondholders were ignorant of this fact, as pretended, in the XIth paragraph (fol. 542) of the bill was wholly false and untrue.

9th. The answer specifically denies that the Florida Central Company ever was consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company.

Par. XV., fol. 605.

10th. The answer denies that the said Dutch bondholders have any right to bring or maintain any suit on account of said State, Florida Central, or Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile bonds, because the same being unconstitutional and void, cannot be enforced at law or in equity, &c.

Fol. 606.

11th. The answer denies that the decision in the said Florida suits concludes the Western Division Company, which was not a party to it.

Fol. 608–9.

12th. The answer denies that said Schutte and others were ignorant of the fraudulent, illegal, and unconstitutional character of said bonds, and avers that the fact thereof was of such general notoriety as to put the said Dutch bondholders upon inquiry. It also denies that there is or was any privity or relation between said railroad companies and said Dutch bondholders, who are creditors of the State, and not creditors of the said railroad companies, against which latter the said Dutch bondholders can have no better demand than the State can assert in its own behalf.

13th. The answer denies that the Western Division Company, in any manner, aided S. W. Hopkins & Co. to sell said State bonds, and avers that it only sought and agreed to accept money in return for its own, which had been embezzled and misappropriated, without knowing or having means to know, that it was not to be acquired honorably by its debtors.

Fols. 611 to 616.

14th. The answer denies that the $103,000 Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds mentioned in par. XXV. of said Schutte bill, are in the court for cancellation, but avers that they are so in court as the property of the said Western Division Company, the same having been purchased with its funds, as aforesaid.

Fols. 616 to 619.

15th. The answer cites the statutory contract, as tendered in the 2d and 4th sections of the Act of January 28, 1870, and charges that the same is wholly unconstitutional and void, and cannot be enforced for any purpose.

Fols. 621 to 626.

16th. The answer charges full knowledge to the purchasers of said bonds of the fraudulent character thereof, and states the means of such notice.

Fol. 626.

The foregoing are the material grounds set up in the answer of the Western Division Company to the bill of Schutte and others.

PLEA OF THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA, AND MOBILE RAILROAD COMPANY.

The Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company interposed a plea in bar to that portion of said Schutte bill which alleged that the complainants were holders of any bonds of the State of Florida, as alleged in their bill, and supported its plea with an answer denying each and every allegation of said bill as to other matters.

Fols. 689 to 703.

ANSWER OF THE FLORIDA CENTRAL COMPANY.

The Florida Central Campany also answered this bill (fols. 784 to 822), and filed its cross-bill to the same, supported by exhibits.

Fols. 822 to 887.

The Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund also answered this bill in detail, supporting the answer by exhibits.

Fols. 897 to 968.

These several answers meet and deny all the material allegations of the Schutte bill, and fully expose its false and fraudulent character, and show that the complainants are not entitled to the relief they seek.

The Directors of the Florida Central Company, who were made defendants, also filed their joint and several answers.

Fols. 677 to 688.

To these several answers the complainants filed their replications.

Fols. 1037 to 1042.

The plea of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company not having been set down for argument, an order was entered April 6, 1878, dismissing this bill as to said company. That order was subsequently vacated by consent, on June 11, 1878, reserving the argument of the plea until the final hearing of the cause.

Fols. 1067 to 1074.

Upon the issues thus closed, the parties went to their proofs.

THE TAKING OF TESTIMONY.

The Western Division Company gave notice that it demanded that all the testimony be taken orally according to the 67th Rule of Equity Procedure. It commenced the taking of its testimony, giving notice to all the parties, and concluded it in due season.

The testimony of the complainants was taken upon interrogatories, notwithstanding the demand of said Western Division Company. The taking of their testimony was delayed until the last moment, and then conducted in a manner showing conclusively, the tampering with the witnesses, suppression of facts, and fraud. These suggestions will be more fully considered when discussing the evidence.

THE TRIAL.

The trial of the suit, or suits, if there be more than one, was set for the 19th day of May, 1879, to suit the convenience of the Hon. Circuit Justice who presided at the trial.

When the case as prepared was called for trial, the Western Division Company—the complainant in the original bills—was ready to proceed, at which time the counsel for Schutte et al. commenced a series of motions and manœuvers upon the record which so radically disturbed the status of the suits as to create the greatest possible confusion. Notwithstanding the Western Division cases were prior in point of time, the counsel for Schutte et al. attempted to usurp the control of the docket, and try their case, irrespective of the right of precedence of the Western Division Company; and for that purpose attempted to prevent any hearing on the part of the Western Division Company, and thus get rid of the objections to the irregular and corrupt manner in which the testimony on the part of Schutte and others was taken. This attempt produced the utmost confusion, and embarrassed the trial from that time forward. As the notes of the learned justice who tried the cause are admitted as part of the record (fols. 3052 to 3065), we reproduce them as the best evidence of the manner in which the trial was conducted.

"Court, Bradley, J., delivered opinion."
Fols. 3054 to 3065.

The dismissing of the Schutte bill as to the Western Division Company, was objected to as disturbing the pleadings and proofs after the trial had commenced, and depriving the Western Division Company of the benefit of one of its best and most important pleadings, which was intended to operate as an answer to the Schutte bill, treated as a cross-bill. The court, however, granted the dismissal as applied for, without prejudice to any evidence that may have been taken in the cause affecting the rights of parties still remaining parties in the cause.

Fol. 3055.

This order of dismissal rendered it necessary for the Western Division Company to ask leave to file an amended and supplemental bill so as to cover its testimony taken in support of said answer to the Schutte bill, which it had treated as a cross-bill. Its solicitor prepared such amendment as he thought proper, but he was restricted by the court to merely transferring from said answer the allegations correcting the original bill respecting the statement (par. XVI., fol. 71) that the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads had been conveyed by Dibble and associates to the new Tallahassee Company, and finally to the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, which the solicitor believed to be the case when he verified said answer. The order was as follows:

"The complainant in the above cause having asked leave to " amend the bill filed therein as read to the court in the pres- " ence of the defendants' counsel, now in consideration of the " fact that the complainants in the case of J. F. Schutte and " others vs. The Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad " Company and others have dismissed their bill as against The " Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad " Company, whereby the said last named company is deprived " of the benefit of certain matters set up in its answer in said " cause. It is, therefore, ordered that the complainant in this " case have leave, upon terms hereinafter stated, to amend its

" said bill in the matter proposed by the amendment now read " to the court as revised thereby, but that it shall not be necessary for the defendants to answer the said amendment under " oath or affirmation unless they choose so to do, and no further evidence shall be taken in the cause unless the defendants shall desire to take further evidence therein, in which " case both parties shall have leave to take evidence on the " matters stated in said amendment."

Fols. 1168, 1169.

But, as before stated, when advised by counsel for Swepson that no such conveyance ever had been made, and that the legal title to said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads vested in said Swepson by his deed of April 22d, 1869, and was still held by him to the use of the Western Division Company, the proper correction was made in its answer to said Schutte's bill (Subdivs. i and j, fol. 589), which said answer was verified by the oath of the president of said company and its seal, July 14, 1877.

Fol. 627.

The averment of the amended and supplemental bill correcting said mistake is as follows:

"That since filing your orator's said original bill, it first came " to its knowledge, and it so charges the fact to be, that no " conveyance or transfer of the franchises, properties, or estates " of said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad " Companies, which were sold on the 20th day of March, 1869, " by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund of the " State of Florida, and purchased by F. Dibble and associates, " as in your orator's said original bill set forth, ever was made " or executed to the said Tallahassee Company, or the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, or either " of them; and that no title to said roads ever vested in said " companies last named, or either of them; on the contrary, " your orator alleges and charges the fact to be, that by a deed " executed by said F. Dibble and associates, on the 22d day of " April, 1869, the said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee " Railroads, together with the two deeds conveying said roads " by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund to said

" Dibble and associates, dated April, 1869, were conveyed, " transferred, and delivered to Geo. W. Swepson, the Trustee of " your orator; and that the said Tallahassee Railroad Company
" or the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company " have not now, and never had, any title or estate which could " be charged with the bonds alleged to have been exchanged
" by said last named company for the alleged bonds of the " State of Florida set forth and described in your orator's " original bill, and claimed to be held or owned by the defend" ants, or some of them."

Fols. 410, 411.

Upon the filing of this amended and supplemental bill, the counsel for the Dutch bondholders again sought to avoid the issue thus kept before them, by moving to strike the names of Schutte, Prins, and others from the record, because not served with process according to law.

See judge's notes, fol. 3056.

Counsel for the Western Division Company resisted this motion, upon the ground that the Dutch bondholders were applying to the Governor to sell these roads, and had appeared and contested the motion for an injunction, and were also represented by their Trustee, Adolph Engler, who was made a party defendant by a special order of court.

Fol. 1073.

After hearing argument upon this motion, the court took the matter under advisement and adjourned.

Fol. 3057.

The next day, May 22, 1879, the court, of its own motion, made the following order:

" Whereas, the bill of J. Fred. Schutte and others, though in " form an original bill, is in fact in the nature of a cross-bill,
" relating to the same subject matter of litigation, and setting " up the same rights which the Western Division of the West" ern North Carolina Railroad Company by its bill seeks to " overthrow; and as the controversy, as a whole, cannot be

" adjudicated without considering the cases involved in both " bills; and, whereas, all the suits have really been prosecuted as " one litigation, and as the complainants in the bill of Schutte " and others do not reside in the United States, and cannot be " served with process, and yet the complainants are seeking to " dispose of the same matter in controversy, the court is of " opinion that the complainants in the Schutte bill be required, " as a condition of obtaining the relief they seek, to make themselves " selves parties to the bills of the Western Division of the " Western North Carolina Railroad Company, so that the " whole matter may be settled together.

"Wherefore, it is ordered that the complainants in the " Schutte bill, who are defendants in the other bills, be required, " as a condition of obtaining the relief they seek, to enter appearance " ance to the bills of the Western Division of the Western " North Carolina Railroad Company, or to adopt the defense " of the parties situated in like case with them, who are defendants " fendants to those bills.

" It is further ordered, that the said J. Fred. Schutte and " others shall have the option whether they will put in answers " to the bills of the Western Division of the Western North " Carolina Railroad Company, and proceed to take testimony " therein, or whether they will adopt the litigation in its present " ent state and go to a hearing at the present time."

Fols. 1172, 1173.

The making of this order by the court, of its own motion, restored the status of the parties substantially as they stood upon the record, and as they had been treated by counsel in the preparation of the suits before the dismissal of the Schutte bill as to the Western Division Company. That is to say, the court recognized the right of the Western Division Company to proceed with the trial of its suits as complainant therein against the Governor of Florida, as Trustee, and the Dutch bondholders, as represented by the Governor, according to their petition to him to seize and sell the roads. That the position of Schutte and others was that of defendants, and must be heard upon their answers and cross-bill if they sought affirmative relief.

The only further act necessary was to vacate the order dismissing the Schutte bill as to the Western Division Company, which the court, after seeing the confusion that had resulted from the premature dismissal as to said company, was pleased to suggest to the counsel for Schutte et al. had better be done.

But the advice of the court was declined. The court adjourned until the next day, May 23d, to give the counsel for Schutte and others opportunity to determine upon their answer to the Western Division Company's amended bills.

The next day Schutte and others filed separate answers to the two bills.

Fols. 413 to 468.

The court will perceive that these answers are merely a reproduction of their original bill, filed May 23, 1877.

Fols. 413 to 485.

To these answers the Western Division Company filed replications, which again placed the suits at issue.

Fols. 510 to 513.

This state of the cases remained but a moment, as counsel for Schutte and others, still determined to defeat a contest with the Western Division Company if possible, moved the abatement of said suits upon the ground of an alleged act of the Legislature of North Carolina repealing the charter of the Western Division Company. (See judge's minutes, fols. 3058–9.) The court intimated that the causes were abated, but gave the Western Division Company until the next day to elect whether it would abide by the abatement or file bills of revivor.

Judge's notes supra.

The bills of revivor above mentioned referred to the 2d and 3d sections of the act repealing the charter of the Western Division Company, which, besides repealing the charter, attempted to donate all its property, estate, and rights of action to the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, an adjoining and rival corporation.

Fols. 2073 to 2075.

Bills of revivor were filed (fols. 490 to 496); they were confessed by Schutte and others (fols. 497–8), and orders were made reviving both suits in the name of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

Fols. 1174 to 1178.

But no order or judgment was made or entered of record abating said suits of the Western Division Company, and none ever has been made or entered, so that technically that company remains as the complainant in the record.

NOTE.—No advantage is sought from this fact, but it is simply mentioned here to save any prejudice to the causes, because no appeal was taken from such alleged dismissal. No judgment was ever entered from which an appeal could be taken.

We have labored thus far to advise the court of the facts which underlie this peculiar litigation, and the origin of the interests of the respective parties thereto. As the record presents three suits tried as one cause, each involving, in many respects, the same facts, a repetition of these facts, to some extent, in our tripple-headed narrative, was unavoidable.

It is shown by the facts, as developed in the record, that the money of the Western Division Company was fraudulently used by its agents and fiduciaries.

1st. In the purchase of about 4,700 of the 5,500 shares, constituting the capital stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company.

2d. In purchasing $1,063,000 of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds.

3d. That $960,300 of these Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds were fraudulently used in the purchase of those roads, and that no other consideration was ever paid on said purchases.

4th. That said Western Division Company, as such cestui que trust, filed its two bills in equity, seeking to recover its property, so fully traced and identified.

5th. That this claim is resisted by a class of persons holding or representing bonds of the State of Florida, which they allege are a superior lien and equity on these several railroads.

These conflicting interests were tried in the court below, upon the two bills of the Western Division Company, and the answer and cross-bill of Schutte and others. That is to say:

1st. The Western Division bill to enforce its lien upon the 4,700 shares of the Florida Central stock.

2d. Its bill to enforce its lien upon the $960,300 Pensacola and Georgia, and Tallahassee bonds, used in the purchase of the two roads now known as the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile road.

3d. The answer and cross-bill of J. Fred. Schutte and others, claiming under said State bonds, issued under the Act of January 28, 1870.

Upon the hearing of these suits, tried as one cause, in the order stated, in the court below, the court, though finding the fact to be that the funds of the Western Division Company were fraudulently used in the purchase of the stock of the Florida Central (fol. 1202), and that the $960,300 Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahasse bonds, were the only payment made on the purchase of the said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads (fol. 1206), nevertheless, held that the holders of the Florida State bonds had the prior equity, and so decreed. And this, though pleadings and proofs, as well as the findings of the court thereon, showed that these bonds were fraudulently procured and used, and had been decided to be unconstitutional and void, by the court of last resort in Florida. And though so finding the facts, dismissed the Western Division Company's bills, without granting any relief at all.

This decision, and decree the founded thereon, we respectfully contend are erroneous, and contrary to the merits, as shown by the pleadings and proofs, and the principles of law and equity applicable thereto; and, among other things, for the errors which we now proceed to assign.

ASSIGNMENT OF ERRORS,

I.

It was error not to dismiss the bill of Schutte and others for want of merits upon its face, and among others, in the following respects:

(a.) It asks the enforcement of the statutory contract of January 28, 1870, between the State of Florida and the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, to which said Schutte and others were neither parties nor privies.

(b.) It asks the enforcement of the provisions of a pretended statute declared unconstitutional and void by the court of last resort in said State.

(c.) It asks the enforcement of a statute incapable of execution, on its face.

(d.) The bill, upon its face, sets up and relies upon a corrupt and champertous contract and adventure called the "Memorandum Plan," whereby the Florida Central and Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Companies were to be "reorganized" by strangers who had no interest in the affairs of said companies.

II.

It was error to permit Schutte and others to file their original bill against the Western Division Company after having appeared to and answered its bills; whereas it should have compelled them to seek the same relief by cross-bills in the original litigation.

III.

It was error to grant any relief upon the Schutte bill as an original bill, or a cross-bill because of the multifariousness, contradiction, and inconsistency of its allegations, and because it asks contradictory, impossible, and inequitable relief.

IV.

It was error not to dismiss the Schutte bill after finding, as the court did, that the Florida Central always maintained an independent existence, and never consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, instead of decreeing that it should pay 197 of said void and unconstitutional State bonds, with interest.

V.

It was error to find that said Florida Central Company ever issued any bonds to aid the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company in extending its road; whereas it should have found that said company never did, and never had the power or authority, to issue any such bonds for any such purpose.

VI.

The court erred in finding that the 1,000 papers, called bonds of the Florida Central Company, purporting upon their face to have been issued in aid of the construction of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Road, were the act and deed of said Central Company; whereas, it should have found that they were not its act or deed, but fabrications and forgeries.

VII.

The court erred in finding that the Florida Central Road, or more than 100 miles of road east of Quincy were subject to the provisions of the act of January 28, 1870 in any event; whereas, it should have found that no more than 100 miles of road east of Quincy were subject to the provisions of said statute, and therefore that all the bonds claimed in this cause, above 1600, are an over issue, and utterly wortheless and void, and especially all the bonds attempted to be laid upon said Florida Central Road by said decree, (Act Jan. 28, 1870, sec. 4.)

VIII.

The court erred in not finding that Edward Houstoun parted with posession of said 1,000 so-called Florida Central bonds

January 11, 1871, in contempt of an injunction order of the Circuit Court of Leon County, in the State of Florida, obtained at the suit of Robert H. Gamble and James D. Westcott, which, being a public proceeding, was notice to all the world that said bonds were unlawfully and fraudulently issued.

IX.

The court erred in finding that the Florida Central Company, by its stockholders or directors, ever authorized, or directed, or ratified, the issuing of said one thousand so-called bonds; whereas it should have found that the pretended meetings of stockholders and directors at which it was sought to authorize or ratify the issuing of said bonds were illegal, collusive, and fraudulent, and that the record of what was done was notice to any one whose duty it was to inquire, that they were issued in violation of the statute, to pay private debts, and not to extend the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile road, as provided in the statute pretending to authorize the issue and exchange of bonds of that company.

X.

The court erred in finding the fact only, that on the 25th day of May and the 2d day of June, 1870, the stockholders and directors of the Florida Central Company had authorized the issue of said bonds; whereas it should have found that at a regular meeting of its board of directors, held on the 21st of November, 1870, and before any of said bonds had been delivered or exchanged, said resolution of June 2d, was rescinded and said bonds ordered to be destroyed.

XI.

The court erred in decreeing any lien upon the Florida Central road, in favor of the State of Florida or the holders of its void and unconstitutional bonds; whereas it should have found that no such lien was reserved in favor of the State or said bondholders, either in the statute of June 24, 1869, or that of January 28, 1870; and that no mortgage or deed of trust creating any such lien was ever made or executed by said company.

XII.

The court erred in adopting decision of the Supreme Court of Florida, wherein that court held "that the State bonds which these parties hold were created and issued in violation of the Constitution of the State, and that they are for that reason absolutely void," but that the bona fide holders of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company's bonds issued under the same statute are a valid lien upon that road; whereas it should have held that the purpose of the statute was to accomplish a single object only, to wit: this exchange of bonds, and being void in part, was void in toto, and could authorize or create no valid lien upon anything.

XIII.

The court further erred in adopting the decision of said State Court, which attempted to make a contract between the Florida Central and Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Companies, wherein the former is assumed to have agreed with the latter to issue and deliver to it $1,000,000 in bonds, payable to the State of Florida, to aid in the construction of its road west of Quincy; whereas the court should have held that it was not competent for said court, or any court, to make a contract for the parties to which they had not themselves assented, and that no such contract was made by the parties.

XIV.

The court further erred in adopting the dictum of said Supreme Court of Florida that it was competent for the Florida Central Company to contract to issue, and to issue such bonds; whereas it should have followed the finding of said court in the same cause that, as matter of fact, no such contract was made and no such bonds issued, and the decree in favor of said company denying any such lien or charge upon the road of said company. This being a judgment in favor of said company wherein Schutte and others, by the Governor as their Trustee, were parties, was therefore res judicata as to them.

XV.

The court erred in finding that there was any lien created by the statute of January 28, 1870, in favor of said Schutte and others, as holders of said State bonds, prior to that of the Western Division Company, as cestui que trust ; whereas it should have held that, by the proviso of the 6th section of the Act of June 24, 1869 (being the charter of the Tallahassee Company), a prior lien in favor of said Western Division Company was expressly reserved upon the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads.

XVI.

It was error in the court to find that the Florida Central Company aided in placing said one thousand bonds in the hands of Houstoun, and that the Western Division Company acquiesced therein, or aided in placing said bonds in the hands of T. B. Coddington, in January, 1871, upon substantially the same trust as Houstoun held them ; whereas the court should have found, as shown by the pleadings and proofs, to be true ;

(a.) That as soon as the Western Division Company learned that Houstoun was in possession of said one thousand bonds, to wit: on the 3d day of October, 1870, it brought its suit, in the Supreme Court of the State of New York against Houstoun and Littlefield, enjoining them from in any manner using or disposing of said bonds, which said injunction order thereafter remained in force, and in contempt of which said Houstoun fled from the jurisdiction of said court, taking with him said bonds, and was pursued with an order of arrest for contempt of court, to escape the execution of which he never again dared to be found within the jurisdiction of said court, or to visit the State of New York.

(b.) The court should further have found that, upon the return of Houstoun to the State of Florida, with said bonds, he was also enjoined from using them, at the suit of the stockholders of the Florida Central Company ; and that the Florida Central Company, on the 21st day of November, 1870, by its Board of Directors, revoked and declared said bonds canceled and annulled.

(c.) The court should further have found that as Houstoun evaded the courts of New York, and disregarded the demands of the Florida Central Company, as expressed by the resolution canceling said bonds, and to prevent further use thereof, James D. Westcott and Robert H. Gamble, the latter at the time the Comptroller and an executive officer of the State of Florida, brought a suit in equity in behalf of themselves and all others interested in the stock of the Florida Central Company in the Circuit Court for Leon County, Florida, against said Houstoun, Littlefield, the Governor of Florida, and others, charging the fact that said one thousand bonds were fraudulent, null, and void, and prayed, and were granted, an order of injunction against Houstoun, Littlefield, and the Governor, restraining them from in any manner dealing in or parting with said bonds, which said order was served on the 9th day of January, 1871, and was in full force and effect on the 11th day of January, 1871.

(d.) The court should further have found that notwithstanding this order of injunction, the Governor of Florida (Harrison Reed), said Houstoun, M. S. Littlefield, and T. B. Coddington, in wilful contempt thereof, did, just two days later, to wit, on the 11th day of January, 1871, conspire together, when Houstoun handed the one thousand forged and fabricated Florida Central bonds to Coddington, who receipted for them as the agent and Trustee of Houstoun, pledged to the payment of the $620,000 private debts and obligations, including the State of Florida, the Trustee created by the statute under which the bonds are claimed to have been issued; that the Governor of Florida, as such Trustee, and with a knowledge of the facts, took the said Florida Central papers from said Coddington and handed to him, in exchange, the one thousand State bonds numbered from 3,000 to 4,000; and that Coddington, to escape the injunction of the courts of Florida, secretly departed from the State before daylight on the morning of the 12th of January, 1871, and delivered the one thousand State bonds to Hopkins & Co., in London, on the 18th day of April, 1871.

(e.) The court, instead of finding that "on the 13*th of April,* "1871, at a stockholders meeting of the Florida Central "Company, he (Coddington) was authorized to place the bonds "in the hands of S. W. Hopkins & Co., subject to the same "trusts as to the proceeds thereof," should have found that said pretended stockholders' meeting was illegally convened by Houstoun and Littlefield; and that the pretended resolution was a sham and fraudulent trick, gotten up by Houstoun three months after he parted with the 1,000 papers called bonds, in contempt of the injunction orders of two courts, and in disregard of the resolution of the Florida Central Company, declaring the said bonds canceled.

These are the facts, verified by the pleadings and proofs, without even a contradiction in the record, and certainly do not show either complicity or sanction on the part of either the Western Division Company or the Florida Central in the outgoing of said bonds.

XVII.

That when the court found that it was "conceded by Swep-"son and Littlefield, that the stock of the Florida Central "Company was purchased by the fraudulent use of the West-"ern Division Company's money, and that the stock is now "understood to be held for the use and benefit of the Western "Division Company, and that in view of such admitted fact, "there is no contoversy which calls for the adjudication of the "court," thereby establishing the right of the Western Divison Company as a cestui que trust to the possession of its property, thus fraudulently appropriated by its fiduciaries, its was error in the court not to perpetuate the injunction, and grant the relief prayed in the bill respecting the Florida Central Company.

XVIII.

That when the court found and decided that, "It is estab-"lished beyond controversy that the bonds which were used "by F. Dibble and associates in payment of the bid for the "two railroads in question, namely, that of the Pensacola and "Georgia Railroad Company, and that of the Tallahassee "Railroad Company, were furnished to them by George W.

"Swepson, and that Swepson procured the same by a fraudu-"lent use of money in his hands, produced by the sale of "North Carolina State bonds belonging to the Western Divi-"sion of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, of "which he, Swepson, was President," it was error not to further find, decide. and decree that the Western Division Company, as such cestui que trust, had a right to recover and possess its money, or the property which it had been used to purchase, and which it had traced, identified, and brought to the knowledge of the court; and for that purpose to have perpetuated the injunction, and granted the other relief prayed in the bill in respect to the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company.

XIX.

It was error in the court, after finding that the money of the Western Division Campany was used by Swepson to supply the $960,300 Pensacola & Georgia and Tallahassee bonds used in payment for said two railroads, and that Dibble and associates assigned the deeds from the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, dated April 8th, 1869, to said Swepson as security, by their deed of trust, dated April 22d, 1869, not to further find, as the proofs show the fact to be, that said Swepson still holds the legal title to said two roads as Trustee for, and to the use and benefit of, the said Western Division Company.

XX.

It was error in the court, after finding that Dibble and associates did not pay a dollar of the purchase money for said two roads, that the $960,300 of Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds which were paid were purchased with the funds of the Western Division Company, fraudulently used for that purpose by Swepson; and that, to secure this advance said Dibble and associates, on the 22d day of April, 1869, deeded both of said roads to Swepson (who, at the same time, assumed the payment of the $472,065 remaining of the purchase money), to be held by him until his advances so made and assumed, were repaid, to assume, as the court did, that Swepson ever conveyed or parted with his said lien, or transferred his title to those two roads, when the fact is proven positively to the contrary.

XXI.

It was error in the court to find that the deed of trust to Swepson, from Dibble and associates, of April 22d, 1869, "was "never recorded and never heard of by any of the parties to "these suits since the commencement thereof;" whereas it should have found, as the fact is, that for the purpose of preserving the right and title of Swepson, as between himself and Dibble and associates, the recording of said deed was not essential; and that as between Swepson and all others the prior lien in his favor was preserved by the statute, or act of the Legislature, passed only 63 days after the date of said deed, and before any one claims to have acquired any adverse title, to wit: on the 24th day of June, 1869, wherein it was "Provided that any "deed of trust, mortgage, conveyance, bond or bonds, or security, "which may have been executed, made, created or contracted for as "a lien of said railroads, or otherwise, by said Dibble, in behalf of "himself and his associates, prior to the passage of this act, shall "be valid and effectual to all intents, either at law or in equity, as "a lien or mortgage or security on said railroads, as if the same "had been made by virtue of this act, and SHALL IN NO WISE BE "AFFECTED BY ANY PROVISIONS THEREOF;" which statute, and the publication of said lien, was designed to, and did in fact, supercede the necessity, if any ever existed, for recording said deed.

XXII.

The court erred in finding that the "deed (of trust to Swep-"son) is not mentioned, and the provision itself is a proper "one to prevent the operation of the act in transferring the "title to a new personality from affecting the previous convey-"ances or mortgages, which it might be thought to do;" whereas it should have found, as the language of the statute is, that Dibble and associates were incorporated into a body corporate, called the Tallahassee Railroad Company, with certain specified powers, and among others, by section 6, were empowered to contract obligations to pay money by the issue of bonds, subject, however, not only to "any deed of trust," or "conveyance," or "bond or bonds," or "security which may have been executed," but also went further, and provided for any such "bond," or "security" that had been "CONTRACTED FOR as a lien

" upon said railroads or OTHERWISE by said Dibble in behalf of " himself and associates, prior to the passage of this act," etc.; and that this law was recorded and proclaimed notice to all " personalities " who might acquire subsequent liens upon said roads through any act of said Dibble and associates, or any one else.

XXIII.

It was error in the court, after finding that the bill of the Western Division Company respecting the new Tallahassee Company recites the conveyance of the two roads by Dibble and associates to said company, reciting that part of said bill, and conceding that leave was granted at the time to amend the bill (as before stated), correcting this mistake, by averring in the amended bill, as the truth is, that no such conveyance by Dibble and associates was ever made, thus tending to show that the Western Division did not discover or seek to correct this error of its solicitor until the time leave was asked on the trial; whereas the court should have found, as the record shows, that the Western Division Company, when answering the Schutte bill, only a short time after filing the original bill, to wit, on the 14th day of July, 1877, did, over its corporate seal, verified by the oath of its president, correct this mistake of its solicitor (see Par. 6, sub-divs. i and j, fol. 589) by distinctly averring that the title to said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads never was conveyed by said Dibble and associates to said new Tallahassee Company, or to said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company; but, on the contrary, that the only conveyance of said roads was to Swepson, on the 22d day of April, 1869, who still held the same as security for the $960,300 Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds he did pay, and the $472,065 he had agreed to pay to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund; and that said Shutte et al. joined issue with the Western Division Company upon its said allegations at that date (July 14, 1877), and not on the trial, as assumed in the finding of the court.

XXIV.

The court erred in finding that any deed of conveyance or transfer of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Roads ever was made, executed, and delivered by Dibble and associates to the new Tallahassee Company, or the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company; and the court further erred in finding that the paper, marked Schedule 7, made part of the answer of the Western Division Company to the Schutte bill, constituted a deed; whereas the court should have found that no such conveyance has been made, and that said paper was not a deed because neither signed, dated, nor acknowledged in such manner as to make it a deed; and that it never was delivered, but was simply an attempt to make a quit claim conveyance, which was abandoned, and which, had it been duly executed and delivered could not have conveyed more than a mere equity of redemption, subject to the $960,300, and the additional $472,065 secured to Swepson by by the deed of April 22, 1869, conveying both roads.

NOTE.—The attention of the court is called to the fact that by some means there has been a material alteration made in the said paper, Schedule 7, as it in fact is, and as it appears in the record (fols. 643 to 645), as to the frame of the paper and the signatory parties, which alters its character.

The original paper concludes, and is partially executed, as follows:

In this partial execution the court will see that five signatures and nine seals are omitted, which imparts to the paper a far more finished appearance than is shown by the genuine paper. Whether the omission is one of design or accident we have no means of knowing.

But the paper never was executed and delivered for any purpose. It shows upon its face, by the character of the blanks, that it was prepared, not by the grantors, but by some one who discovered the want of title in the Tallahassee Company, and attempted to secure a title of record in this way, but failed to do so, as the deed of Swepson was in full force, and he refused to convey until he was paid. It is quite certain that if the Tallahassee Company had considered it had a title to the two roads, when chartered and organized in 1869, they would not have sought this attempted conveyance in 1870.

The court will take notice that this attempt at a deed is not produced from the custody of the new Tallahassee Company nor the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Comyany; but is introduced by the Western Division Company in answer to the Schutte bill, to show, as it certainly does show, that at the time, some such conveyance was conceived by the parties to necessary, and that it never was completed or delivered.

Fols. 589 and 643.

XXV.

The court, when finding, as the fact is, that the new Tallahassee Company did, pursuant to the said deed of conveyance to Swepson, soon after said company was organized in 1869, issue $1,500,000 first mortgage bonds, secured by deed of trust, and delivered the same to Swepson, should also have found, as the record shows, that Swepson still holds said bonds to the use of the Western Division Company, but that because the agreement in said deed was not complied with, he refused to accept the bonds as a discharge of the $960,000, and the additional $472,065 lien in his favor on said two roads, and therefore declined to convey the same to said new company, but still holds the title thereto to the use of the Western Division Company, and in failing to so find the court erred.

NOTE.—If the money due to Swepson was paid, and his title divested and conveyed to the new Tallahassee Company by virtue of the act of incorporation, why did the company thereafter issue and deliver to Swepson the $1,500,000 first mortgage bonds?

XXVI.

The court erred in finding that "the fact is, an act was soon " after procured similar to the act passed in behalf of William

" E. Jackson and his associates in relation to the Florida Central Railroad, and bonds were given and stock was disposed " of amongst the parties, in accordance with the agreement of " March 26, 1869;" whereas it should have found that bonds and stock were not issued and delivered to Swepson, or any one else, in accordance with said agreement of March 26, 1869, or the deed of trust to Swepson, of April 22, 1869; and that no stock whatever in said Tallahassee Company, or said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, was at any time issued to or owned by said Swepson.

XXVII.

The record shows that the court should have found that the president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company never did " certify upon his oath that the roads or parts of roads" of said company, on which said State bonds were pretended to be issued, were completed and in good running order, as positively required by the statute of January 28, 1870, creating the statutory contract between the State and said company, and no such certificate, upon oath or otherwise, ever was made or attempted to be made or signed by the president of the Florida Central Company, and it was error in the court not to so find.

XXVIII.

The court finding that the 11th section of the Act of June 24, 1869, and the 3d section of the Act of January 28, 1870, created a valid lien upon the franchise and estate of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company in favor of the State of Florida, it was a contradiction and an error not to find, as the court should have found, that the equally distinct and positive provision and reservation in the 6th section of the act of the same date, incorporating the said Dibble and associates into a body corporate and politic called the Tallahassee Railroad Company, created a good, valid, and subsisting lien in favor of the deed and conveyance to Swepson, of April 22, 1869, as security for the $960,300 paid, and the $472,065 agreed to be paid by him in purchase of said two roads.

XXIX.

The court erred in finding that the Commission created by the act of the Legislature of North Carolina, March 24, 1870, participated in, or in any manner aided in procuring the issuing of said bonds by the railroad companies, or their exchange for the bonds of the State; whereas the facts and proofs show, and the court should have found that the said Commission created by said act, wherein it was provided that "it shall be the duty "of said Commmission hereby created to collect and receive the "funds and other assets belonging to said company, and due "from George W. Swepson, and all other officers of said company elected or appointed since its organization, and place "the same in some good bank" (fol. 956), did not do otherwise than perform their duty as specified by said act, and tried to collect the money due the said company, and had nothing whatever to do with the issue and sale of bonds, either company or State.

XXX.

The court erred in finding that said Commission ever handled or sold, or attempted to sell, a bond of the State of Florida; whereas it should have found, as the truth is, that when said Commissioners agreed to accept the said $1,287,000 so fraudulently used, in the manner provided in the conditional settlement of the 16th of April, 1870, had no knowledge whatever of the bond issue from which said money was to be derived, and never knew until they derived it from the suits they were compelled to institute in the Supreme Court of the State of New York to enforce the terms of said settlement which they had in good faith agreed to, when, and not until when, they were advised by the affidavit of Swepson, and other facts put in evidence, of the illegal and fraudulent character, issue, and use of said bonds.

XXXI.

The court erred in finding that the Western Division Company not only acquiesced in the sale of said State bonds, but urged and promoted the sale thereof; whereas it should have found, as the proof shows, that the Western Division Company never saw one of said bonds, or had any of them in its possession, or under its control; that 2,800 of them were disposed of by S. W. Hopkins & Co., without even the knowledge of the agents of the Western Division Company; that upon the order given to Woodfin for the 800 bonds in London November 10, 1870, not a single bond was delivered to him, or ever was intended to be; that the pretended order for 800 bonds was a mere sham and fraudulent trick imposed upon Mr. Woodfin, to be supplied from the State bonds numbered above 3,000, which at that time were pledged by Houstoun and the State, through its Governor, to the payment of private debts to an amount beyond their value; that at the time the order was given in London (November 10, 1870), the said 1,000 bonds were in the hands of the State of Florida under an injunction restraining their use; and that Woodfin left London and returned to the United States long before the bonds he is alleged to have aided in or urged the sale of reached London, or Hopkins & Co. to be offered for sale, and that they were in fact never sold, all of which is fully shown by the pleadings and proofs, and the court should have so found.

XXXII.

The court erred in finding that the settlement of the 16th of April, 1870, in Washington, and the supplemental settlement in London on the 10th of November, 1870, between Swepson and Littlefield, jointly and severally, and said Commissioners were not conditional settlements, and branding the same as a "new thought, the result of new light," and that "no such language is used in the original bill;" whereas it should have found, as the fact is, that the said settlements are made part of the original bill, containing their own terms which show them to be conditional, and that to state or swear that they are not conditional would not be correct; and that the paper set out in extenso in the finding of the court (fols. 1216, 1217) was not the settlement, but the mode of providing the means to carry the settlement into effect (see the three papers made part of the depositions of Rollins and Candler, fols. 1471 to 1425, marked Schedules 1, 2 and 3).

XXXIII.

The court erred in adopting as law the decision of the Florida State court, that the use of the plural word "roads," in the 16th section of the Act of June 24, 1869, incorporating the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, in which the Florida Central is not mentioned, nevertheless authorized the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company to exact and receive of the Florida Central Company, and conferred upon the latter the right to issue $1,000,000 bonds paying eight per cent. interest, amounting to $80,000 per annum, a sum beyond its utmost capacity to earn, and which must bankrupt the Florida Central Campany at the end of the first six months; and all this to give effect to the verbiage (the word "roads") in a fraudulent and void act of the Legislature, and thereby creating a contract between two railroad companies which never was entered into, either written or verbal, under seal or by parol, between the companies, and denied by both under the oath of their offices, attested by their corporate seals, ever to have existed.

XXXIV.

The court erred in finding that the Florida Central Company was estopped from pleading that the 1,000 forged and fabricated papers called bonds were illegal and created for an unlawful purpose; whereas it should have found, as the law is, that said company had the right to plead the illegality of said so-called bonds, not only because the same were fraudulently fabricated by Swepson, Littlefield, and Houstoun for an unlawful purpose, but also because their issue was ultra vires, against the pleading of which there is no estoppel known to the law.

XXXV.

The court erred in finding that the North Carolina Company either aided or acquiesced in the issue of bonds by either the Florida Central or the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company; whereas it should have found, as the uncontradicted proof shows, that said company never saw or handled a bond of either of the Florida companies or knew aught of their issue, or the manner thereof, until long after it was done, and then promptly sought the aid of the courts to restrain the use of said bonds.

XXXVI.

The record shows that the Florida State bonds, being upon their face dedicated to the building of a railroad, could not, either as bonds or their proceeds, become the property or money of the Western Division Company, in the discharge of its claim for the said $1,287,000 so fraudulently appropriated, and besides, these said pretended bonds, being unconstitutional, were no bond at all, and could not be treated as consideration for said compromise and settlement, and it was error in the court not to so hold and decide.

XXXVII.

The court erred in finding that the Western Division Company received any proceeds of said 800 bonds covered by the order of November 10, 1870, on S. W. Hopkins & Co.; whereas it should have found, as the proof shows, that the £10,000 was asked as an advance, and that Hopkins proves it was an advance, and not a payment.

XXXVIII.

The court erred in finding that the said Schutte, Prins, Boissevain, Mildens, and others, called Dutch bondholders, were innocent purchasers of said State bonds, even had the same not been declared unconstitutional, fraudulent, and void; whereas, it should have found, as the evidence clearly proves, that said Schutte, Boissevain, Mildens, Prins, and others were not innocent purchasers without notice, but had notice of the illegal and fraudulent character of said bonds; that the same were procured by fraud and issued in violation of the Constitution of the State of Florida, and having such notice, were put upon inquiry, and did inquire and cause inquiry to be made as to the truth of such charges of fraud and illegality, and for that purpose did, on the 18th day of December, 1870, when only a few bonds had been sold, send a cable dispatch from Amsterdam to the Governor of Florida, saying, "Being "negotiating four million bonds issued by your State, the "Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company beg to "know by telegraph from you whether provision for payment "interest; whatever result of railroad traffic; financial posi"tion of State really sound, and bonds undoubted security," to which broad inquiry the Governor of Florida gave this significant reply, information, and warning, "Bonds recently "recalled by the company; no provision will therefore be "made for interest," which notice, with other notices, writings, and publications in England and Amsterdam caused the suspension of the dealings in said bonds from the 24th of December, 1870, at which time only 480 bonds had been parted with, until the 20th of February, 1871, on which last named day the Dutch syndicate received such reply from the Governor of Florida, Collinson, and Hopkins & Co., and others interested in speculating in said bonds, as to cause them to publish the result of their inquiries (fol. 3938) to the public, and on that day resume the sale of said bonds, all of which is shown by the testimony of the defendants, and it was error in the court not to so find and decide.

XXXIX.

There was no evidence before the court proving the bona fide ownership of any of said State bonds, and especially the 197 bonds numbered above 3,000, claimed and decided to be a lien upon the Florida Central Road, as to which bonds the court should have found, as the testimony proves, that they were never sold, but taken to account for money advanced to Houstoun to meet Littlefield's drafts held by him for $163,000 in payment for the $103,000 Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee bonds, and to provide funds to pay the interest on the first of January, 1873, as shown by the proceedings in the Court of Chancery in England, in August, 1872, and it was error in the court not to so find and decide.

XL.

It was error in the court to give any credit to the testimony of the witness Wertheim, who, as the record shows, was examined by the North Carolina Company only as to the authenticity of three papers bearing his own signature, or supported by his previous ex parte oath, but in giving which testimony he evaded the questions, falsified and refused to answer, to such an extent, and so flatly contradicted his own written statement as to his relation to the suit as to justly deprive his testimony of all credibility or weight, and it was error in the court not to so find and decide.

XLI.

Both the deposition of said Wertheim and his ex parte affidavit, made in May, 1877, referred to by the court, are false upon their face, and show that said Wertheim was not of counsel for the said Dutch bondholders, but was the special agent and solicitor of Sherwin, Willard, Jackson, Allen, and others by whom he was employed to impose upon the Dutch bondholders the "Memorandum Plan," and it was error in the court not to so find and decide.

XLII.

The court erred in refusing leave to the Western Division Company to put in evidence the five letters written by Hopkins & Co. to M. S. Littlefield, mentioned in the minutes of the court (fol. 3064), covering the period during which Hopkins and Collins testify that Woodfin was aiding them to sell said bonds, and showing that Woodfin never saw one of said bonds, or offered one of them for sale to anybody.

XLIII.

The court having found the fact that the stock of the Florida Central Company, and the $960,300 bonds paid in the purchase of the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahasse roads were purchased with funds of the Western Division Company, fraudulently used for that purpose, erred in dismissing its bills without any relief, or giving a day to redeem said roads or either of them, if it elected so to do.

XLIV.

The court erred in entering a final decree in the name of J. Fred. Schutte et al., as if they were the original complainants in the suit; whereas, the decree should have been entered in the name and style of the Western Division Company's suits to which Schutte et al. were defendants by answer and cross-bill; or if not in the cause by answer and cross-bill, then the court further erred in granting affirmative relief upon the answer alone, without a cross-bill.

XLV.

The court having found that Schutte et al. did not stand upon equity, but upon the statutes, erred in not dismissing their bill and cross-bill, on the ground that their remedy was at law and not in equity.

XLVI.

The decree is erroneous, in that it adjudges more than is due, even upon the theory of the facts and law as found by the court, by many thousand dollars, and must, for this reason, be reversed or amended.

XLVII.

The court erred in decreeing that Schulte et al. should have the right to pay said State bonds in satisfaction of any bid they might make upon the sale of said roads; whereas, it should have found and decreed that said bonds were void, and could constitute no consideration for anything; and that the statute provided that such bids should be paid in "lawful money of the United States, and for nothing else."

XLVIII.

The court erred in failing to find and decree that the bonds of said companies held by the State, were payable to the State only, and not negotiable; that whatever debt or lien they created was in favor of the State alone; and that, since the State parted with no value for them, they should be delivered up to said companies and canceled.

XLIX.

The court erred in not decreeing the perpetuation of the injunction granted to the Western Division Company on the 22d day of May, 1877, and granting it the general and special relief prayed in its bills.

THE TESTIMONY.

Before proceeding with our argument and presentation of the law and facts in support of our assignment of errors, we ask leave to make a few statements about the depositions and proofs introduced into the case, and the manner of the taking and presentation of the same.

As soon as the cases were at issue, the Western Division Company gave notice that it desired the testimony to be taken orally, as provided in the 67th Rule of Equity Procedure, the taking of testimony for this appellant commenced, due notice being at all times given, and full opportunity for cross-examination afforded to all parties.

In the taking of depositions by the Western Division Company, the bill of Schutte and others was treated as a cross-bill, as it had been in the pleadings after its being filed on the 23d day of May, 1877, and notice was given as well to the counsel appearing for Schutte et al., as to the counsel of the Governor of Florida, their recognized Trustee.

The taking of testimony on the part of Schutte et al. was conducted differently. Notwithstanding said notice to take the testimony orally, they, after waiting until the early part of the year 1879, filed interrogatories to take their depositions in Amsterdam, and got their commissions off ex parte, without affording opportunity to except to their interrogatories, or cross them. The matter being brought to the attention of the court, this irregularity was in part corrected by allowing the Western Division Company to file exceptions to their interrogatories, and forward cross-interrogatories. The argument of the exceptions was necessarily deferred until the final hearing.

The Western Division Company's depositions were not only taken orally, but were all printed as taken, and copies furnished to all parties. But the depositions of Schutte et al. were not completed until on the eve of the trial, and copies of them were not attainable until after the trial had commenced, on the 19th day of May, 1879.

Motions were made to suppress all the depositions taken on behalf of Schutte et al., at Amsterdam, Holland, and New York, because of manifest fraud and illegality in the mode of taking them. Upon argument of the motion as to the Amsterdam depositions, the court suppressed them, because it appeared upon their face that they were prepared beforehand, and written out in English for all except two witnesses, and in that condition read before the Examiner; and that the witness G. M. Boissevain was not named as one of the witnesses to be examined in the interrogations and notice.

The motion to suppress the depositions of Hopkins, Collins, and Collinson, taken in New York, was deferred to their reading before the court on the trial. But as the court declined to hear the testimony read by counsel, the trial proceeded without an opportunity being afforded to consider or insist upon the exceptions to the interrogatories and answers in said depositions. For this reason we ask the court, on the hearing of this appeal, to take into consideration our exceptions to these New York depositions taken on behalf of Schutte et al., Hopkins (fol. 1197), Collins (fol. 1187), and Collinson (fol. 1130). Our reasons for this statement will be more fully set forth when we have occasion to refer to the depositions of these witnesses.

DEPOSITIONS TAKEN BY THE WESTERN DIVISION COMPANY.

The witnesses examined on the part of the Western Division Company were:

Jacobus Wertheim (Agent of Sherwin, Willard, and other promoters of the "Mem. Plan.")	803

These several witnesses were orally and openly examined by the Western Division Company, upon notice to all parties, touching matters in issue in the suits, of which they had personal, and some of them official knowledge.

There were two other witnesses examined by the Western Division Coompany, to wit, Ephriam D. Slater (p. 652) and Moritz Hertzberg (p. 654), mainly in reference to the removal of C. H. Allen as Receiver, but which, being no longer a material matter, were not referred to on the trial, and might have been omitted from the record.

Several witnesses were examined on the part of the Florida Central Company which will be referred to.

Papers Put in on the Trial.

When the pleadings had meandered their way through the legal legerdemain practiced by the learned counsel of Schutte et al. in their adroit efforts to deprive the Western Division Company of a hearing in its own original suits, which resulted in the court finding it necessary, of its own motion, to make the important order (fols. 1172 to 1174), placing Schutte et al. back in their rightful position of defendants to the Western Division Company's bills, and the trial sought to be avoided, at last proceeded.

The counsel for Schutte et al. offered in evidence a large amount of printed matter, which might as well have been offered before the trial commenced, or the publication of testimony passed, so that proper objections made as to the competency or admissibility of such evidence could be heard beforehand. But this was not done, and the confusion incident to such contentions in court, subject to the intensely hot weather, allowed persistent irregularity to prevail in the putting in of unverified papers as proofs. Many of these papers constitute the last 155 pages of the concluding part of the record.

With this explanation to the court as to the method of taking and putting in the testimony, our want of opportunity to pursue and take rulings upon our exceptions to the depositions taken for Schutte et al., as above, we will now go to our argument in support of the errors assigned.

ARGUMENT

The court having found and decided as to the Florida Central stock claimed in the bill respecting that company, that it was shown by the proofs, as well as conceded by the parties (fols. 1202-3), that it was purchased with the funds of the Western Division Company, fraudulently used for that purpose, and, " therefore, required no adjudication of this court."

And the court also having decided that—

" It is established beyond controversy that the ($960,300) " bonds which were used by F. Dibble and associates in the " payment for the two roads in question, namely, that of the " Pensacola & Georgia Railroad Company, and the Tallahassee " Company, were furnished by George W. Swepson, and that " Swepson procured the same by a fraudulent use of money in " his hands, produced by the sale of North Carolina State " bonds belonging to the western division of the Western " North Carolina Railroad Company, of which he, Swepson, " was president."

We say, these important and comprehensive findings of fact by the court below, and which are not appealed from or contradicted by any party to the record, relieve us from the necessity of marshalling the proofs to sustain the allegations of the Western Division Company's bills averring these important propositions.

In the event that the court should desire to inspect the proofs, we refer it to the depositions of Swepson (fols. 1451 to 1461), M. S. Littlefield (fols. 1646-7), T. H. Porter (fols. 1507 to 1510), together with the drafts drawn by Houstoun, as the agent of Swepson, upon the funds of the Western Division Company in the hands of Soutter & Co. (fols. 1510 to 1534).

In arguing the errors assigned, we will take them up in their order, and handle them singly, or several together, as their subject matter may admit, and will condense our remarks as much as possible.

Sections 2 and 4 of the act of the 28th of January, 1870, creating the statutory contract for the exchange of bonds between the State and the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, is a contract purely between the State and the company, and especially so far as the matter of obligation or security, from the one to the other, is involved. The purchasers of the State bonds, after they went into the market, became the creditors of the State only, and not the creditors of the company. The undertaking of the State was to give the company a bond to be sold in the market for a specified purpose expressed in the statute. The State bound itself to pay the interest on its bonds, at stated times, and also to pay the principal when due. The obligation of the State did not depend upon any contingency or condition. It did not depend upon anything to be done or performed by the company, and was neither better nor worse, though the road of the company never should be built.

The fact that it was no part of the attempted contract to secure the State by the delivery to it of the company's bonds, to an equal amount and rate of interest, in no manner alters the State's obligation to the holder of its bonds, or lessens or shifts its liability or responsibility. The statute does not so provide, and the bond does not so state (fol. 5693). The only thing beyond a positive obligation to pay to the bearer is "issued in accordance with the Act of the Legislature of Florida, approved, January 28th, 1870."

The bonds of the company are made payable to the State, and to no one else. No other payee or beneficiary is named in the statute, or on the face of the company's bond; being payable to the State alone, it is not negotiable, and shows upon its face that it never was intended or designed to be the property of any other holder, and could not be, unless made so by further legislation, creating a new contract between the parties.

See J., P. and M. Bond, p. 218.

Or, in other words, the State, by the terms of its bond, became in and of itself the debtor, and the sole debtor, to the holder, whoever and wherever he may be, while the company, by the terms of its bond, made itself solely and exclusively the debtor of the State.

Hence it follows that there is no privity between the company and the holder of the State bonds, in the creation of the contract for exchange of bonds.

And the same is true of the security created by the statutory contract. It is nowhere provided in the statute that the holder of the State bonds is empowered to seek redress against the company. To the State is this right reserved, by the third section of the statute; and if this statute is to be enforced by this decree, and not the general principles of equity in the marshalling of securities, it is the State, and not the holder of the State's bonds, that can do it.

Chamberlain vs. Minnesota, 2 Otto, 299.

It is clear, therefore, that there is no privity of relation between the holders of said State bonds and the company.

Besides the fact that there is no privity of relation created by the terms of this statutory contract between the State and the company, whereby the bonds proposed to be issued by the company to the State in any manner, or for any purpose, became the property of Schutte et al., none is alleged or claimed in their bill or cross-bill, which they seek to enforce. Their bill alleges title to the State bonds, and not to the company bonds, and claims no relation on the part of Schutte et al. to the company or its bonds (fol. 419). And without such allegation it was erroneous to grant such relief.

The issue and exchange of the company bonds for the State bonds is alleged in paragraphs VI., VII.. VIII. of the Schutte bill; that the State bonds are made payable to bearer, and the company bonds to the State; and avers that the execution and delivery of said bonds was done by said companies in order to comply with the terms of laws incorporating said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, but does not allege any relation thereto on the part of Schutte et al.

By paragraphs IX. and X., the bill alleges the manner of sending the State bonds to Europe for sale, and the sale thereof (fol. 421), and by the XI. paragraph of their bill (fol. 422), Schutte et al. distinctly allege:

"That complainants are the owners of a large number of the "said bonds issued by Governor Harrison Reed to the Jack-"sonville, Pensacola, & Mobile Company, and sold by its "agents as before set forth, which bonds are numbered "between number one and number three thousand two hun-"dred."

Such are the allegations, and the only allegations of title in Schutte et al. to bonds—State bonds and not company's bonds.

And in their prayer for relief they conform to these allegations. See 2d prayer, (fol. 436):

"2d. That the entire line of railroad from Jacksonville to "the Apilachicola river, with the branches to Monticello and "St. Marks, and all the property, real and personal, thereto "pertaining, may be decreed to be subject to a lien for the "payment of complainants' bonds, superior to the claim of all "persons whatsoever, and expressly said defendants."

The court will therefore see that no privity of relation between Schutte et al. and the companies is alleged in their bill, or that they are the holders or owners of any of the companies' bonds, or ask that the companies' bonds be enforced for their benefit; but do allege, and only allege, that they are holders of the State bonds, and pray that the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company's line of railroad, extending from Jacksonville to the Apilachicola river, be decreed to be sold to pay their State bonds. And this relief is asked, though the bill shows on its face that the bonds and the statute under which they were issued are admitted to be void, and the bonds thus sought to be enforced in a court of equity are styled "so-called bonds."

Again:

The bill upon its face seeks to enforce the provisions of the Statute of January 28, 1870, attempting to create a contract between the State and the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, declared by the Supreme Court of the State to be unconstitutional and void.

The contract attempted to be created by the Statute is embraced in the 2d, 3d, and 4th sections of the act. The contracting provisions being in the 2d and 4th sections, the 3d section is devoted to the creating of a statutory mortgage lien in favor of the State, and stipulating the manner of enforcing the lien so created by the statute.

In order, therefore, to set forth definitely the terms of these statutory contracts, we will present them as they are, before being declared unconstitutional and void; and then as they exist after purging out the unconstitutional and void portions of them.

Section 2 of the Act of January 28, 1869, attempting to create this statutory contract, provides that:

"In order to aid the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Rail-"road Company to complete, equip and maintain its road, and "to aid in perfecting one of the public works embraced in the "internal improvements of the State, the Governor of the "State is hereby directed to deliver to the President of said "company coupon bonds of the State to an amount equal to "sixteen thousand dollars per mile for the whole line of road "and length of railroad owned by or belonging to said Jack-"sonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company in exchange "for first mortgage bonds of said railroad company, of the "denomination of one thousand dollars, when the President "thereof shall certify upon his oath, that the road or parts of

"road for which he asks for an exchange of bonds is com"pleted and in running order. The said bonds shall be of "the denomination of one thousand dollars, signed by the "Governor, countersigned by the Treasurer, sealed with the "great seal of the State; shall bear eight per cent. interest, "payable semi-annually to bearer. They shall be dated on "the first day of January, A. D. 1870, and shall be due thirty "years thereafter, and principal and interest shall be payable "at such place in the City of New York as the Governor shall "designate. The coupons for interest shall be payable to

"signature of the Treasurer."

The court here sees a contract proposed as distinct and complete between the State and the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, as sole parties, as ever was drawn up or worded between contracting parties, public or private.

This statutory contract rests upon three arbitrarily positive conditions:

1st. The State must issue and deliver its bonds to the company.

2d. The company must thereupon deliver its bonds to the State.

3d. And this can only be done by the company "when the "President thereof shall certify, upon his oath, that the road
"or parts road for which he asks for exchange is completed
"and in good running order."

Either of these conditions failing or being disregarded, the contract is broken,—the statute disobeyed. The court will see, further along, that the "certifying upon his oath by the "President of the Company" was never complied with.

Passing, for the present, the 3d section of the statute creating a lien in favor of the State for the bonds it agreed to issue to the company, we will present to the court the very peculiar and obscurely worded contract proposed by the 4th section of the statute, because it is by this section that the Florida Central Company is to be burdened with a debt of $1,000,000, bearing an interest debt of $80,000 per annum—a sum wholly beyond its capacity to earn, and that, too, by mere implication, to create a covering for the plural word "roads," as we shall hereafter see, if this monstrous transaction is to be enforced against the franchises and property of the Florida Central Company. The contract proposed by the 4th section is as follows:

> "Section 4. That the Governor shall, for the purpose of "further aiding the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Rail- "road Company in the speedy construction of its road, deliver "to the President of said company coupon bonds of this State "of the same character as those above described in this act "to the amount of sixteen thousand dollars per mile, upon "receiving for and from the President of said company first "mortgage bonds of like amount on any part or portion of "the road between Quincy and Jacksonville; provided, how- "ever, the State bonds under this section shall not be ex- "changed for first mortgage bonds for a greater length than "one hundred miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and "Jacksonville. Provided, the said railroad company or com- "panies shall not issue first mortgage bonds to a greater "amount than sixteen thousand dollars per mile."

The court, by looking at the commencement of other sections of the Act of January 28, 1870, say the 2d, 3d, 5th, and 6th, will see that this 4th section was not intended as an amendment of the 14th section of the Act of June 14, 1869, but as a complete supercession of it. The other sections named, commence by naming the sections of the former act which they are intended to amend.

The 14th section of the Act of June 14, 1869, authorizes the company to issue and vend its own bonds at $14,000 per mile, and says nothing about State bonds; whilst this new 4th section authorizes the issuing of bonds to the State at $16,000 per mile, in exchange, &c., and says nothing about vending its own bonds. It is unquestionably new legislation entirely, and supercedes the old 14th section. They are utterly diverse and inconsistent, and the latter, of course, supercedes and repeals the former.

We invite the especial attention of the court to this matter, as it utterly repels and destroys the whole theory of the disquisition of the learned justice at pages 700 to 710 of 15 Florida R., to which we shall have occasion hereafter to pay some attention.

But, to resume the line of our argument.

The proposed contract of the 4th section of the Act of January 28, 1869, for the exchange of State bonds for company bonds, the court will observe, mentions the name of no company authorized to accept its provisions as the other contracting party, or whose franchise or road was to be burdened with the charge, and it certainly does not mention the Florida Central Company. It refers to the bonds of the State to be issued as "of the same character as those above described in this act," meaning, of course, in the 2d section, and like which it is a transaction with the State to which no one but the State and such company are or can become parties or privies.

In the suit of Holland vs. The State of Florida, these bonds, issued by the State and held by Schutte et al., became the subject of litigation as to their constitutionality. The Supreme Court of the State, in disposing of that case (15 Fla., p. 533), held and adjudged that the Act of January 28, 1870, under the provisions of which the State bonds were issued and exchanged for company's bonds, is unconstitutional and void.

The bill of Schutte et al., nevertheless sets up this unconstitutional statute, and these void bonds as a ground of relief, and the court below has decreed accordingly, by adopting the decision of the State court in that behalf, which we insist was erroneous, and respectfully contend that no relief at law or in equity can be founded upon or result from a statute declared unconstitutional.

It is therefore laid down as axiomatic law, that "When a statute is adjudged to be unconstitutional, it is as "if it had never been. Rights cannot be built up under it; "contracts which depend upon it for their consideration are "void; it constitutes a protection to no one who has acted "under it, and no one can be punished for having refused obedience to it before the decision was made. And what is true "of an act void in toto is true also as to any part of an act "which is found to be unconstitutional, and which, conse" quently, is to be regarded as having never, at any time, been " possessed of any legal force."

This case is precisely on a par in principle with the case of Craig vs, Missouri, 4 Peters, 425.

That case, like the present, was founded upon a statutory contract created by the Legislature, between the State of Missouri and her people by the issuing and exchanging of what were called "Loan certificates," for the promissory notes of her citizens who chose to avail themselves of the privelege, instead of the exchange of bonds of the State for bonds of corporations, as in this case. In that case also, like the present, the statute creating the attempted contract specified the exact form and terms of the State certificates, and the terms of the citizens notes therefor.

The contracting sections of the statute were as follows (4 Pet., 430):

"Section the third enacts: 'That the Auditor of the " 'Public Accounts and Treasurer, under the direction " 'of the Governor, shall, and they are hereby required " 'to, issue certificates, signed by said Auditor and Treasurer, " 'to the amount of $200,000, of denominations not exceeding " 'ten dollars, nor less than fifty cents (to bear such devices as " 'they may deem most safe) in the following form,' to wit: " 'This certificate shall be receivable at the treasury, or any of " 'the loan offices of the State of Missouri in the discharge of " 'taxes or debts due the State for the sum of $—— with in- " 'terest for the same at the rate of two per cent. per annum " 'from this date, day of , 182 .'"

" Section thirteen declares: That the certificates of the said " loan office shall be receivable at the treasury of the State, and " by all tax-gatherers and other public officers in payment of " taxes or other moneys now due the State, or to any county " or town therein, and the said certificates shall also be receiv-

" able by all officers, civil and military, in the State, in dis" charge of salaries and fees of officers."

The statute proceeds to direct how the certificates shall be issued by districts, among the people.

These State certificates were issued to a large amount, and went into general circulation in exchange for the notes of the citizens, as provided by the statute; and, among others, of the defendant Craig, who, failing to pay his notes at maturity, was sued by the State thereon, and the defense interposed was that the State certificates were "bills of credit" within the meaning of, and hence forbidden by the Constitution of the United States, Art. I., sec. 10, and, consequently, that the notes given by Craig to the State were void in its hands, and could not be enforced in any court of law or equity; and that, too, notwithstanding the admitted fact the maker of the notes had received the stipulated consideration therefor, and had appropriated the same to his own use for its full value.

The State courts, both at circuit and on appeal, in that case, as in this, construed this statute and their own Constition, and also the Constitution of the United States, and decided that the State certificates were not "bills of credit," and that Craig was estopped from interposing the plea of no consideration. In due course of time and proceeding the case was brought to this court on writ of error, where the decisions of the State courts were reversed.

Chief Justice Marshall, delivering the opinion of the Court, after deciding that the "State certificates" were "bills of credit," then proceeded to announce the legal effect of that conclusion upon the validity of the notes given in exchange for them, as follows: (p. 436.)

"The certificates for which this note was given, being in " truth 'bills of credit,' in the sense of the Constitution, we " are brought to the inquiry:

" Is the note valid for which they form the consideration?

" It has been long settled that a promise made in considera" tion of an act which is forbidden by law is void. * * *
" The consideration of this note is the emission of bills of " credit by the State. The very act which constitutes the

"consideration is the act of emitting bills of credit in the mode "prescribed by the law of Missouri, which act is prohibited "by the Constitution of the United States. * * * * * "Had the note been made in consideration of these bills, instead of being made payable in them, it would not have been "less repugnant to the Constitution, and consequently have been "equally void. * * * It has never been doubted that a "note given on a consideration which is prohibited by law IS VOID."

The Court, then citing a number of cases in point, concludes its opinion by saying:

"A majority of the court feel constrained to say that the consideration on which the note in this case was given, is against "the highest law of the land, and that the note itself is utterly "void."

Mr. Justice Johnson, though holding that the State certificates were not bills of credit, but concurring in the opinion of the court as to the note given for them being void, if the certificates were bills of credit, stated (p. 441):

* * * "In the argument of counsel, the objections to "this contract were presented in the form of objections to its "consideration. But this was unneccessary to his argument, "since even a valuable cansideration will not make good a contract "in itself illegal. These notes originate directly under the law "of Missouri; they are taken in pursuance of its provisions, "have their origin in it; and rest for their validity upon it, "and if that law be void, must fall with it. Whether, therefore, "the bills for which they were given, be VOID or VALID, if the law be "void, the notes would be so. * * * * *

"It follows, that when the officers of a State undertake to "act upon such a law, they act without authority; and that the "contracts entered into, direct or incidental to such, their illegal "proceedings are mere nullities."

The State of Missouri not being satisfied with this decision, and encouraged, no doubt, by the difference of opinion in the court as to the certificates being "bills of credit," hoping to avert the heavy loss devolving upon her, brought another one of the cases to this court for review, namely, Byrne vs. The State of Missouri (8 Peters, 39), which was again argued by Mr. Benton for the State, no counsel appearing for Byrne. But the court unanimously affirmed its former decision.

Now, the Florida State bonds at bar, take the place of the Missouri State certificates, and the railroad company's bonds at bar, take the place of Craig's note in the Missouri case. All depend upon the void State statute, and all must fail alike upon the doctrine just cited.

Nor is this doctrine new. Chitty lays it down in his text, older than Craig vs. Missouri:

"Whenever the contract which a party seeks to enforce, be "it express or implied, is expressly or by implication forbidden by the common or statute law, no court will lend its "assistance to give it effect. For although, in general, the "agreements into which parties enter have the force of law, "because modus et conventio vincunt legum. Yet, this, even, "does not apply where the interests of the public or morality "are affected by the agreement, or may be injured by the observance of its terms.

"And the test as to whether a demand connected with an illegal "contract be capable of being enforced at law, is whether the plaintiff requires to rely upon such transaction in order to establish his "case."

Chitty on Con., 729-30, and cases cited.

Again:

"As the benefit of the public and not the advantage of the defendant, is the principle upon which a contract is allowed to be "impeached on the ground of illegality; so this exception can "be taken by either of parties to such contract. 'The objection,' says Lord Mansfield, 'that a contract is immoral or "illegal as between plaintiff and defendant, sounds at all times "very ill in the mouth of the defendant. It is not for HIS sake, "however, that the objection is allowed; but it is founded on "general principles of policy, which the defendant has the advantage of, contrary to real justice as between him and the "defendant; not for the sake of the defendant, but because the "courts will not lend their aid to such a plaintiff.

Chitty on Con., pp. 731-2.

And later in this court:

"In such cases (illegal contracts) there can be no waiver. The "defense is allowed; not for the sake of the defendant, but of the "law itself. The principle is indispensable to the purity of its "administration. It will not enforce what it has forbidden and "denounced. The maxim ex dolo malo non oritur actio is limited "by no such qualification. The proposition to the contrary "strikes us as hardly worthy of serious refutation. Whenever "the illegality appears, whether the evidence comes from one "side or the other, this disclosure is fatal to the case. No con- "sent of the defendant can neutralize its effect. A stipulation in "the most solemn form to waive the objection would be "tainted with the vice of the original contract, and void for "the same reasons. Wherever the contamination reaches it "destroys. The principle to be extracted from all the cases "is, that the law will not lend its support to a claim "founded upon its own violation."

Coppell vs. Hall, 7 Wall., 558.

Still later, in United States vs. Macon, 9 Otto, 590.

"While there has undoubtedly been great recklessness on "the part of the municipal authorities in the creation of "bonded indebtedness, there has not unfrequently been gross "carelessness on the part of the purchasers, when investing in "such securities. Every purchaser of a municipal bond is "chargeable with notice of the statute under which the bond was is- "sued. If the statute gives no power to make the bond the munici- "pality is not bound."

DID THE STATUTE OF THE 28TH OF JANUARY, 1870, CREATING THE PRETENDED CONTRACT FOR THE EXCHANGE OF STATE BONDS FOR COMPANY BONDS, CONTEMPLATE A DOUBLE OBJECT, AND IF IT DID, WHAT WERE THE TWO PURPOSES EMBRACED IN THE STATUTE?

The Florida State court, while deciding that the Statute of the 28th of January, the second and fourth sections of which created the pretended contract for the exchange of State bonds for Company bonds, was unconstitutional and void, and in no manner bound the State, though one of, and the first named, contracting party, and "that neither the State, nor her people, "are bound for the bonds now in the hands of those who hold "them," next proceeded to hold and decide that the company, the other contracting party to this statutory contract, was bound by it. Or, in other words, that the statute, VOID as to the State, was VALID as to the company—one party bound, the other party not bound.

To arrive at this remarkable result, so new to the law of contracts, the State court assumed that the second, third, and fourth sections of the Statute of the 28th of January, 1870 (the statute referred to in the face of both State and Company bonds as the authority for their issue), contemplated a double purpose.

In assuming this position, the State court defined that double purpose to be in fact a double relation of the State to the bondholders and the company, and states the grounds for this assumption as follows (see 15 Fla., 534):

"A careful and strict examination of this statute will show "that the State of Florida was to occupy two distinct and "different relations to the holders of the State bonds and to the "company. The first relation was that of a primary debtor to "the holders of the State bonds, under and by virtue of its bond, "and also of a mortgage creditor of the company by virtue of the "bond of the company."

Such are "the two distinct and different relations of the State "to the holders of the State bonds and the company," as described by the State court to have been created by the Statute of January 28, 1870.

For the sake of the argument, concede the statute to have created twenty separate, distinct, and different relations between the State, its bondholders, and the company, that fact would not show, or tend to show, that the statute its lf was passed to accomplish a double purpose—that is, two such separate and distinct purposes, that one might be valid and the other void; that the void part of the statute could be stricken out, and still leave a valid purpose capable of being executed. And this, may it please the court, is the only material question for consideration, and which is not touched by the decision of the State court.

The subject of the effect of valid and void purposes or provisions occurring in statutes, or any portion of a statute, has been most carefully considered by the courts because of their well maintained indisposition to interfere with the legislative will when resolved into law. To avoid this as much as possible, this court, and the courts of the States, have accepted and recognized certain well defined rules of discrimination, which are most carefully and clearly expressed by Judge COOLEY in his work on Constitutional Limitations, under title of "Statutes Unconstitutional in Part."

That learned author says:

"It will sometimes be found that an Act of the Legislature " is opposed in some of its provisions to the Constitution,
" while others, standing by themselves, would be objection" able. So the forms observed in passing it, may be sufficient " for some of the purposes sought to be accomplished by it,
" but insufficient for others. In any such case, the portion
" which conflicts with the Constitution, or in regard to which " the necessary conditions have not been observed, must be " treated as a nullity. Whether the other parts of the statute " must also be adjudged void, because of the association, must " depend upon a consideration of the object of the law, and in " what manner, and to what extent, the unconstitutional por" tion affects the remainder. A statute, it has been said, is " judically held to be unconstitutional, because it is not in the " scope of legislative authority; it may either propose to ac" complish something prohibited by the Constitution, or to " accomplish some lawful, and even laudable object, by means " repugnant to the Constitution of the United States or of the " State. A statute may contain some such provisions, and yet
" the same act, having received the sanction of all branches of " the Legislature, and, being in the form of law, may contain
" other useful and salutary provisions, not obnoxious to any " just constitutional exception. It would be inconsistent with " all just principles of constitutional law to adjudge these en" actments void, because they are associated in the same act,
" but not connected with or dependent on others, which are un" constitutional. Where, therefore, a part of the statute is " unconstitutional, the fact does not authorize the courts to " declare the remainder void also, unless all the provisions are “connected in subject matter, depending on each other, operating together for the same purpose, or otherwise so connected together in meaning, that it cannot be presumed the Legislature would have passed the one without the other. The constitutional and unconstitutional provisions may even be contained in the same section, and yet be perfectly distinct and separable, so that the first may stand, though the last fall. The point is not whether they are contained in the same section, for the distribution into sections is purely artificial; but whether they are essentially and inseparably connected in substance. If when the unconstitutional portion is stricken out, that, which remains, is complete in itself, and capable of being executed in accordance with the apparent legislative intent, wholly independent of that which was rejected, it must be sustained. The difficulty is in determining whether the good and bad parts of the statute are capable of being separated within the meaning of this rule. If a statute attempts to accomplish two or more objects, and is void as to one, it may still be in every respect complete and valid as to the other. But if its purpose is to accomplish a single object only, and some of its provisions are void, the whole must fail, unless sufficient cause remains to effect the object, without the aid of the invalid portion. And if they were so mutually connected with and dependent on each other, as conditions, considerations, or compensations for each other, as to warrant the belief that the Legislature intended them as a whole, and if all could not be carried into effect, the Legislature would not pass the residue independently; then, if some parts are unconstitutional, all the provisions which are thus dependent, conditional, or connected, must fall with them.”

Cooley, Con. Lim., p. 177.

In support of the rule of interpretation here stated, the author recites a multitude of cases, embracing most of the States of the Union. The test, then, is whether the statute is intended to accomplish—

(a.) A single purpose.

(b.) Or is capable of being separated so as to leave a valid law, capable of being executed.

(c.) Or whether the Legislature could or would pass such an act, omitting the void part?

In the case at bar we have to deal with the 2d and 4th sections of the Statute of January 28, 1870, for, by these two sections, the remainder of the act must stand or fall. We will therefore present these two sections in parallel columns. The left column presenting them as enacted; the right presenting them with the unconstitutional portions expunged.

With this exhibition of this statute before the court, it certainly requires no argument to show that these sections were not designed to accomplish more than the single purpose of creating a contract between the State and these companies, for the exchange of bonds—a statutory contract for a single object.

The Supreme Court of Florida has decided that the Constitution did not confer the power on the State, one of the contracting parties, to exchange its bonds, and, not having the power, had never done so; that its act was null and void, and no bond or obligation by which the State could be charged had passed into the hands of J. Fred. Shutte et al., or any one else. Therefore, all that attempted to express or import the right to issue its pretended State bonds being expunged, because never having existed or been enacted, leaves nothing in the shape of language or law capable of being applied or enforced for any purpose.

The 2d and 4th sections of the statute being thus inoperative the 3d section, which creates the trust, so elaborated by the State court, is rendered equally nugatory, and incapable of performing any practical result or utility, because it has no subject upon which to operate. The State could not be a "primary debtor," or any other debtor, on account of a bond that was no bond, or be in debt where it had not contracted, because what it attempted to do was unconstitutional and void.

It is hardly necessary to argue, as a proposition of either law or fact, that the Legislature would or could have passed a law requiring the railroad company to hand over its bonds, payable to the State for $4,000,000, or any other amount, without the precedent condition of handing over to the company bonds of the State in exchange therefor; and furthermore, that the State obligation must be a valid bond, and not a mere worthless piece of paper, such as the Supreme Court of Florida have adjudged the State bonds in this case to be. No such absurdity was intended or attempted.

It is difficult to see why the State court devoted nearly the fourth of a volume to discussing the act of June 24, 1869, to determine what was the effect of the 2d, 3d, and 4th sections of the statute of January 28, 1870, and the validity of the bonds issued thereunder. It is too plain for question that the 9th and 10th sections of the act of June 24, 1869, attempting to authorize the issue of State bonds for company bonds, were altered, amended, and superceded, by the 2d section of the act of January 28, 1870, merging the 9th and 10th sections of the former into the 2d section of the latter.

It is equally clear that the 3d section of the act of January 28, 1870, alters, amends, and supercedes the 11th section of the statute of June 24, 1869, creating the statutory lien in favor of the State, adding thereto the mode of sale, "for lawful money of the United States, and for nothing else," and appropriating the same by the Governor as Trustee, the same being new and additional legislation.

Nor can it be mistaken that the 4th section, conferring the right to issue state bonds on a hundred miles of road "between Quincy and Jacksonville," is totally new and independent. Besides, the State, in the issue of its pretended bonds, clearly so understood the statute of January 28, 1870, because it alludes to that act alone in the face of its bonds. Treated in this light the statute is simple and plain. It is a contract between the State and the company for the exchange of bonds, entered into by sections 2 and 4, in which the State is to be secured by the statutory lien provided in section 3 of the statute of January 28, 1870, the three sections being blended together to accomplish one object. And when the Supreme Court of Florida decided that this statutory contract was unconstitutional and void, it left nothing having either the form or substance of law, capable of being enforced or executed for any purpose, either single or double.

Such is the origin and condition of the statutory contract sought to be enforced by the bill of Schutte, et al.

THE STATUTE NOT CAPABLE OF BEING EXECUTED.

The said State bonds, or, as they are styled in the bill of Schutte et al., the "so-called" bonds of the State, being declared unconstitutional and void, are, in contemplation of law, no bond– never existed—and, of course, could not be the subject matter of any trust, as a trust cannot be based on nothing; being nothing they could not be a consideration for anything. It follows that the State holds the papers called company's bonds for no consideration, that it issued no bonds; and that no State bonds were delivered to the people called Dutch bondholders, or held by them for any purpose known to the law.

Such being the case how can that statutory contract which requires the State, as Trustee, to sell the roads, upon certain contingencies, "for lawful money of the United States, and for nothing else," and "which purchase money shall on the day of sale be "deposited in the Treasury of the State, or within ten days thereafter, and all money arising from said sale and paid into the "Treasury of the State as heretofore prescribed, shall be "promptly and exclusively applied to the payment and satisfaction "of the bonds issued by the State of Florida under this Act" be executed, or a sale be made according to its provisions? How can a sale be made for "lawful money of the United States, "and for nothing else" and the money received at such sale be applied in payment of "the bonds of the State of Florida issued "under this act" when the State court has decided that no such bonds were ever issued under said act, and that no such bonds are held by any one for such payment and liquidation? Such a contract cannot be executed according to its positive terms and provisions, and there is no process known to the law whereby it can be executed by any judicial tribunal. The bill or cross-bill (whatever it is), of Schutte et al., asks for relief that is thus impossible—for the execution of a statute that cannot be executed.

And again:

The bill of Schutte et al. upon its face (Par. XVI., fol. 465), discloses the fact, as a ground of relief, that it is really not the "Dutch bondholders," so called, who are prosecuting the suit in the name of Schutte et al., but, on he contrary, that it is the promoters of the scheme and adventure called the "Memorandum Plan," described as Exhibit D, made part of the Schutte bill. This paper or "plan" was prepared during the summer and fall of 1876, in the City of Washington and Savannah, Ga., by Sherwin, Willard, Jackson, Simonton, Allen, Hart, Walker, and others, whose names appear therein. It was executed in two parts or provisions, described, when translated into the Dutch language and appended to a statement of Wertheim as "Bilage A" and Bilage B." In the Exhibit D, made part of the Schutte bill (fols. 481 to 485), the first part "A" is set up, but the second part "B" is omitted or suppressed.

The bill shows that the parties named, or some of them, convened in Washington City, on the 15th of October, 1876, and formed themselves into a body corporate under the general incorporation laws of the State of Florida, called the "Jacksonville and Mobile Railroad Company." The articles of incorporation are Appendix A, Supplemental Record. The line of this new corporation was made to cover the roads of the Florida Central and Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Companies, from Jacksonville to the Chattahooche river, and claimed no other road, property, or estate.

With this organization so arranged, a paper was designed to become the recipient and owner of the two roads named. This ownership was to be acquired through the "Memorandum Plan," in the manner described in the second clause thereof (fols. 481–2), and was to be paid for in the said bonds of the State of Florida, then recently declared unconstitutional and void by the Supreme Court of that State.

When title to the Florida Central and Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroads was secured by the forced sale to be made by the Governor (fol. 48), and vested in the "reorganizers," under the name of the new Jacksonville and Mobile Company, created in Washington City, October 15th, 1876, as aforesaid, then a bond issue was to be put upon the whole line of both roads to the amount of $12,000 per mile, or say about $2,850,000 (fols. 482–3), covered by a mortgage on both roads according to provisions made therefor in the "plan" (fols. 483–4). This part of the "plan" ("A") was set up in the Schutte bill, but, as stated, the other and more significant part ("B") was suppressed. The reason of this omission is quite apparent. The court will find the whole paper set forth in the answer of the Western Division Company to the Schutte bill (fols. 658 to 663), wherein it is seen (fol. 662) that the parties who convened at Washington and Savannah, for the disinterested and benevolent purpose of the "reorganization of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, and the Florida Central Railroad Company," in the summer and autumn of 1876, in which the names of the so-called Dutch bondholders were to be used, that the latter were allowed a little less than one-third of the new stock and bonds for the use of their void State bonds and their names, whilst the "reorganizers," Sherwin, Willard, Allen, and others, were to have over two-thirds of said stock and bonds as their plunder, for the use of their wits and skill in wrecking these roads, to which, as elsewhere stated, they were total strangers.

With the "plan" thus completed, the petition of Sherwin, sworn to on the 22d of September, 1876 (fols. 814 to 817) was presented to the then Governor of Florida (M. L. Stearns), and the roads seized on the 30th day of December, 1876 (fol. 56).

During this preparation the people called Dutch bondholders had not the least knowledge of the character of the benefit being prepared for them by the "reorganizers" in America, or that their names were being used for that purpose. The only person privy to this scheme and "plan," in Amsterdam, was was one Jacobus Wertheim, the local attorney and agent of Sherwin, Willard, Allen, Walker, and others, residing at that place, whose duty it was to secure the approbation of the Dutch bondholders to this "plan," when it should be perfected. This work was commenced by him in the latter part of February or early in March, 1877, when the seizure made by the Governor of Florida was availed of to secure the first power or authority of any of the Dutch bondholders, which formed the basis of Willard's petition to the Governor, in the name of J. Fred. Schutte, Prins, Boissevain, and others, sworn to on the 31st of March, 1877 (see deposition of Geo. P. Raney, folios 1389 to 1390, and appendix B, Supplemental Record), previous to which date the said "plan," or the work of the "reorganizers," had not been heard of in Holland.

The "memorandum plan" being thus matured in all its parts, only required the acceptance of the Dutch bondholders, whose names had been usurped by its authors in its preparation, to put it into operation. This last requirement was accomplished by the agency of said Jacobus Wertheim, who, as the agent of Sherwin, Willard, Clarke, Allen, Dodge, and others, authors of the "plan," under date of April 10th, 1877, addressed over his signature, in the Dutch language, what was termed and styled "A proposition for a settlement tendered to the holders 8 per cent., Florida bonds, by Mr. J. Wertheim, attorney and counsellor, of Amsterdam," (fols. 1774 to 1786).

By the facts shown upon the face of the record the court is advised that it was not the Dutch bondholders whose names were used by Sherwin, Willard, Allen, and others, who conceived the scheme of wrecking these two Florida railroads, and for that purpose convened and co-operated during the year 1876, and early in 1877, organized a railroad company over the line of the two roads, providing for a capital stock of $3,000,000, and a bond issue of $2,850,000, to be apportioned so that about $2,000,000 of the bonds, and $2,500,000 of the stock should be their share of the wrecking, and only about $900,000 of the bonds, and $500,000 of the stock be allowed to the Dutch bondholders as the price of the use of their names, they, however, being protected from all costs and expenses of any litigation that might occur, in both the papers "A" and "B" as follows:

"It is also further stipulated and agreed, that all funds "necessary to meet the costs and expenses in such sale or "sales, and in perfecting said title thereafter, shall be supplied "by the said party of the first part," that is, Willard, Sherwin, Allen, and others.

Fols. 484, 661 and 602.

This champertous and corrupt contract and adventure, under this "memorandum plan," is the foundation of this litigation, and constitutes the relief prayed in the Schutte bill or cross bill.

Champerty is an offense to the laws of Florida, and no such contract or adventure as the "memorandum plan" could be enforced by the courts of that State, and it was error not to dismiss the bill of Schutte et al. below.

By the IId and IIId assignments of error it is maintained that it was error to grant affirmative relief on the bill of Schutte et al. in any event. The ground of this objection is, that they were already before the court through the Governor of the State of Florida, as their Trustee. They petitioned the Governor, as such Trustee, by Sherwin and Willard, their agents and attorneys, to seize and sell the roads (fol. 814, and Appendix "B," Supplemental Record).

The Governor thereupon seized the roads and advertised them for sale (fol. 56), when the Western Division Company filed its two bills against the Governor, as such Trustee, and others, to restrain said sale. The Governor, by the special counsel of said Schutte, Prins, Boissevain, and others, appeared and demurred to said bills (fols. 203 to 206). Upon argument, by the same counel, the demurrers were overruled.

The demurrers being overruled, the Governor, as their Trustee, again, by their special counsel, answered the Western Division Company's bills, (fols. 206 to 283), and these answers, together with the petition and affidavits of Schutte, Prins, and others, were read in opposition to the motion for injunctions. These motions were likewise argued and resisted, by the same special counsel of Schutte et al. But upon the decision of the court, granting said injunctions May 22, 1877, (fols. 1116 to 1126) the said Schutte et al., whose petition to the Governor, as such Trustee, had occasioned the filing of said bills, without leave of the court, filed their original bill against the Western Division Company and others, and thus, without right or authority, changed their position from defendants to complainants. Under these circumstances, we contend it was error to treat them otherwise than as defendant cestuis que trust, regularly in court, by the Governor, as their Trustee, and that they had no right to go out of the case and bring their original bill.

Perry on Trusts, sec. 328, et seq., and cases cited.

For these reasons we contend it was error not to dismiss the Schutte bill, or to treat it otherwise than as a cross-bill, in any event.

That the bill of Schutte et al. should have been dismissed for multifariousness, we leave for the court to determine, upon an inspection of the bill itself. It is true an attempt was made to correct much of this by wholesale dismissals at the hearing of the causes; this, however, was after the publication of the testimony, and could not correct the inherent defects of the bill.

By the IV. assignment of error we contend that it was error not to dismiss the bill of Schutte et al., either as an original bill or cross-bill, when it was found, and decided by the court, that the Florida Central Company was not consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, but was a separate and distinct body corporate, owning and operating its own road. This ruling at once decided against the allegations (par. XIV. and XV., fols. 547–8) of the Schutte bill, and the prayer for relief founded thereon (2d prayer, fols. 556–7).

This court has ever enforced the axiomatic rule that allegations and proofs must agree, and relief be granted accordingly.

Railroad vs. Bradley, 10 Wall., 303.

In the case at bar the bill of Schutte et al. alleges title to bonds issued upon a railroad extending from Jacksonville to the Chatihoochee (or Apalachicola) river, owned by the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company. To this bill answers were filed and issue joined by replications. The proofs taken were addressed to this issue. Schutte et al. contending that there was a consolidation, and the Western Division Company, denying the allegations of the bill, labored to prove, and did prove, that the Florida Central never was consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, as alleged in the bill, but had always maintained a separate corporate existence. The court below found this important issue in favor of the Western Division Company, and should thereupon have dismissed the bill as to the Florida Central, instead of granting, as it did grant, such relief as could only have been lawfully granted if the court had found exactly the reverse of what it did find.

This, we contend, was error, and should be reversed, with an order to enter a decree below dismissing the Schutte bill as to the Florida Central, with costs.

By the V. and VI. assignments, we contend that it was error for the court to decide that the Florida Central Company ever issued 1,000 bonds to aid in the construction of the Jacksonvilla, Pensacola, and Mobile road, or for any other purpose; and that the court further erred in finding that said bonds were the act and deed of said company, whereas the proof shows that they were not its act or deed, but were fabrications and forgeries.

The first essential to the issuing of a bond by a chartered company is that it should have been granted the power by law to do so; or, if issued under the implied power incident to corporations, it must be for necessary purposes, and not for the ruin and bankruptcy of the corporation to serve an alien interest. The charter of the Florida Central Company (fol. 57 to 59) does not contain a word authorizing the issue of $1,000,000, or any other amount of bonds, for any purpose. The charter was not altered or amended by any act of the Legislature in which the Florida Central Company is named, or necessarily included. Its records do not show that it ever accepted the provisions of the acts of June 24, 1869, or January 28, 1870, or either of them. Without such action by its stockholders, no modification of its charter could become operative.

"It is the concurrence and acceptance that gives force to the charter of the crown."

"A charter or act of incorporation from the Government is "in the nature of a contract, and, therefore, in order to com-"plete their creation, something more than the mere grant of "a charter is required; that is, in order to give the charter the "full force and effect of an executed contract, it must be accepted."

Angell & Ames on Cor., sec. 81.
Falconer vs. Higgins, 3 McLean, 196.

The Florida Central Company never did accept these acts of the Legislature, and certainly the acts of Houstoun and Littlefield, who had fraudulent possession of its stock, purchased with the Western Division Company's funds, and which they had, on the 16th of April, 1870, delivered over to the use of their defrauded cestui que trust, will not be held by this court to have bound that company for a debt far beyond its capacity to pay, and that, too, for the benefit of an alien corporation. To so hold will be to say that the $550,000 of the capital stock of this little company, owning sixty miles of road, and worth par on the night of June 1, 1870, could be lawfully rendered worthless by the acts of Houstoun and Littlefield, before the sun went down on the 2d day of June, without any sanction or approval of its real owners, and without even being afforded an opportunity to object to such an act of destruction. We suppose the law to be that the holder of a single share of stock could lawfully defeat this sort of action. But no notice was given of any meeting to consider the question—the records of the company contain no such history. We insist, therefore, that this monstrous debt of $1,000,000, with an annual interest of $80,000—at least $30,000 beyond the earning capacity of the road—cannot thus be lawfully laid upon it.

But absence of any authority in the charter of the Florida Central Company to create such a ruinous debt, and the silence of the records of the company that any such thing was ever done, or attempted, in the manner required by law, is by no means the only evidence addressed to this court upon this part of the case. All the testimony, without exception, tends to establish the same facts.

The by-laws of the Florida Central Company provide for the holding of stockholders' meetings, as follows:

"Article 5. That an annual meeting of stockholders shall be held " on the second Wednesday of August of each year. Other meet-" ings may be called by the President or any three stockholders, by " giving ten days public notice thereof through the newspapers."

The proof is positive that no such notice was given, or attempted to be given. On the contrary, it is positively proven that Houstoun and Littlefield assumed to be a stockholders' meeting, and for that purpose transferred ten shares of stock to each of three other persons, and then proceeded to perpetrate the fraud disclosed in the record.

The witness Littlefield, whose testimony commences at page 724 of the record, after proving how this $1,000,000 of bonds were concocted, and for what purpose, that they were issued for the purpose of paying private debts, and not to aid in the building of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Road, answering from Questions 34 to 49, testifies as follows:

" Q. 34. Were or were not the stockholders consulted and " their consent obtained to the issuing of said bonds before " the same were signed and placed in the hands of said " Houstoun, as you have testified?

" A. Only two or three stockholders were consulted, the " rest were not; those that were consulted did not give their " consent.

" Q. 35. Who, if any one, in the month of April, 1870, was " the duly elected Treasurer of the Florida Central Railroad " Company?

" A. Francis H. Flagg.

" Q. 36. Please look at pages 9 and 10 of the book which " you have testified was and is the original record of the pro- " ceedings of the stockholders and Directors of the Florida " Central Railroad Company, now shown you, at certain " proceedings of September 21, 1868, and state whether or " not you know what the same are, and if so, what the same " are?

" A. I do know what these proceedings are; they are the " By-Laws of the Florida Central Railroad Company.

" Q. 37. Were or were not said by-laws in force in and " during the year 1870?

" A. They were.

" Q. 38. Please look again at said records at pages 22, 23, " 24, and 25, which commences on page 22, under date of 'Tal- " 'lahassee, June 2. 1870,' headed 'The stockholders of the " 'Florida Central Railroad Company convened this day pur- " 'suant to call of the Chairman at the last meeting,' and at " page 24 under same date, which reads 'The Directors of the " 'Florida Central Railroad Company met this day at the call " 'of the President,' &c., and state what, if anything, you know " about said meeting, and the origin thereof, and whether " the same was convened in the manner required by the by- " laws?

" A. I have examined said record at said places; the stock- " holders convened on the 2d day of June, 1870, as stated in " said record, no previous notice was given as the by-laws " required for said meeting; there were present but two stock" holders; they were Edward Houstoun and myself; stock " was transferred temporarily to A. Huling, ten shares, G. R. " Foster, ten shares, and M. D. Papy, ten shares of Mr. " Houstoun's stock, to make up a meeting; the object of the " meeting was to bring into use the bonds mentioned in " Schedule 'B,' as provided in Schedule 'D.'

" Q. 39. The fifth article of said by-laws at page 10 of said " record, to which you have testified, reads as follows: '5th. " 'That an annual meeting of stockholders shall be held on " 'the second Wednesday in August of each year; other meet- " 'ings may be called by the president or any three stockhold- " 'ers, by giving public notice for ten days through the news- " 'papers;' will you please state if either the president or any " three stockholders of said Florida Central Railroad Com- " pany made a call for the said meeting of the 2d of June, 1870, " and published the same in any newspaper as required by " said by-law?

" A. They did not.

" Q. 40. Now, please look again at said record, on page 24, " purporting to be a meeting of the directors of said Florida " Central Railroad Company, and state whether or not you " were present at said meeting, and if yea, state in what man- " ner that meeting was called?

" A. I was present at said meeting; the record purports to " say that the directors met at the call of the president; this " certainly was a mistake, as John P. Sanderson, the president " of the company, was not in Tallahassee at the time when said " meeting purports to have been called; in fact the meeting " was not called at all; Directors Huling, Houstoun, Foster, " Papy, and Littlefield met and passed resolutions which had " just been passed at the meeting of stockholders above testi- " fied about; the above named directors converted themselves " from a stockholders' meeting into a directors' meeting; the " meeting was not held at the office of the company, but at the " office of M. D. Papy.

" Q. 41. The resolutions purporting to have been passed and " adopted at said stockholders' and directors' meetings, as re- " corded at pages 23 and 24 respectively of said record, direct " that the Florida Central Railroad bonds, purporting to have " been signed by George W. Swepson and H. H. Thompson, " 'as therein described, shall be placed in the hands of Edward

" 'Houstoun, for the purposes agreed upon by an arrangement " 'between himself and M. S. Littlefield;' do you or do you " not know, and if yea, please state, what agreement was re- " ferred to between yourself and said Houstoun as therein " mentioned?

"A. Agreements Schedules 'C' and 'D'; principally Sche- " dule 'D,' dated May 13th and 30th, 1870.

"Q. 42. You have stated that besides being a stockholder " and director of the Florida Central Railroad Company, you " were likewise a director, stockholder, and president of the " Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company; will " you please state whether there was or was not any agree- " ment or contract of any kind entered into between said com- " panies, verbal or written, whereby the Florida Central Rail- " road Company agreed to issue and deliver a thousand, or " other number, of its bonds to the Jacksonville, Pensacola, " and Mobile Railroad Company, and whereby the last named " company agreed and bound itself to receive and apply said " Florida Central Railroad bonds, in any manner or for any pur- " pose, and if yea, please state when, how, and in what manner " such agreement was made between the said two companies, " and produce the record thereof, if any such exists?

"A. No such contract was ever entered into between the " said companies, or between any persons for them, or either " of them, written or verbal.

"Q. 43. Did or did not the Florida Central Railroad Com- " pany ever at any time, and if yea, please state when and " in what manner, issue, seal, sign, and deliver a thousand, or " any other number, of its bonds to the Jacksonville, Pensacola " and Mobile Railroad Company, and did or did not said last " named company ever receive, or have in its possession, such " bonds or apply the same in the construction of its road, or " for any other purpose?

"No such bonds were ever issued by the Florida Central " Railroad Company for the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile " Railroad Company; the latter company never received any " bonds of any description from the Florida Central Railroad " Company.

"Q. 44. Please look again at the bill filed in this cause re- " specting the Florida Central Railroad, at Schedule 'F,' headed " and dated 'Tallahassee, Fla., January 11th, 1871,' and signed

" 'T. B. Coddington,' which says, 'Received from Edward " 'Houstoun, Esq., in trust and for his account one thousand " 'Florida Central Railroad Company First Mortgage bonds, " 'payable to the State of Florida, for one thousand dollars " 'each,' &c., and state, if you know, what bonds are therein " mentioned, and if yea, please state to the best of your knowledge and recollection.

" A. I know the bonds mentioned in Schedule 'F,' and they " are the same bonds mentioned in Schedule 'E,' and are " shown by Schedule 'B.'

" Q. 45. Do you or do you not know whether said bonds " were charged in the hands of said Houstoun or Coddington " with the payment of any debts or obligations other than the " debt to said Houstoun, as to which you have testified, and if " yea, please state the same to the best of your knowledge and " recollection; please give the names and amounts as far as " you can remember?

" A. The said bonds were charged with the payment of other " debts; besides the one hundred and sixty-three thousand " dollars to Edward Houstoun, there were to M. D. Papy, " $16,000; R. H. Gamble, $15,000; J. P. Sanderson, $57,560; " F. H. Flagg, $4,000; J. D. Wescott, Jr., $3,845.33; T. W. " Brevard, $50,000; Harrison Reed, Governor of the State of " Florida, about $300,000; T. B. Coddington, $25,000.

" Q. 46. You have stated that said bonds, purporting to have " been issued by the Florida Central Railroad, Company were " signed by said Thompson, as Treasurer, in New York, and " by said Swepson, as President, in Washington City; do you " or not know, and if yea, will you please state when, where, " and in what manner the seal of the Florida Central Railroad Company was affixed to said bonds, if its seal was " affixed thereto?

" A. The seal of the Florida Central Railroad Company was " affixed to said bonds at my room in Tallahassee, by Thomas " J. Saunders; the seal was brought from the railroad office at " Tallahassee by said Edward Houston, and delivered to said " Saunders or myself, I will not be positive which.

" Q. 47. You have stated that F. H. Flagg was, at the time " mentioned, Secretary and Treasurer of said Florida Central " Railroad Company; will you please state whether or not the " said seal of said company was in his custody, and whether or " not he was applied to to affix the same to said bonds; and if " yea, please state what, if anything, he said or did in relation " thereto?

"A. The said Flagg was the custodian of the seal of the Florida " Central Railroad Company, and he was asked to put the seal " upon said bonds, by Mr. Houstoun, in my presence and " hearing, which said Flagg decidedly refused to do, for the " following reasons, as given by him: First, that there was no " authority given by the law to said company to issue any " such bonds and exchange them with the State; second, if " there was any such law, the stockholders had not authorized " or directed him to do so; third, if the stockholders should " authorize and direct him to put the seal upon said bonds he " would resign before he would obey it, unless Mr. Houstoun " would first purchase his stock in the Florida Central Rail- " road Company.

" Q. 48. Referring again to the original record book of the " Florida Central Railroad Company, at page 27 occurs the " following resolution, purporting to have been adopted by a " meeting of stockholders, represented to have been held at " Tallahassee April 13, 1871: 'Mr. Houstoun offered the fol- " 'lowing resolution: Resolved, That Edward Houstoun is " 'authorized to place the bonds referred to in the preamble " 'and resolution of the stockholders adopted June 2, 1870, in " 'the hands of S. W. Hopkins & Co., for the purposes men- " 'tioned in the said resolution, subject to the same exceptions " 'as therein expressed with respect to the portion thereof " 'applicable to the stock owned by other parties, and accord- " 'ing to the same terms therein mentioned;' will you please " look at said resolution, and state whether you was or was not " present at said meeting; and if yea, state to what bonds " said resolution referred to the best of your recollection?

"A. I was not present at said meeting; the bonds referred to " were the same bonds T. B. Coddington received from Edward " Houstoun on the 11th day of January, 1871, as described " in schedule 'F,' heretofore testified to."

These facts, proved by the only surviving party (except George B. Foster) who participated in the transaction he testifies about, and whose testimony is in no manner contradicted, but, on the contrary, is fully corroborated by the other testimony, both oral and written, certainly shows a case which does not justify the finding of the court that any 1,000 bonds were ever lawfully issued by the Florida Central Company; or were in any manner applied to its use.

The witness George R. Foster (fols. 13, 78 to 81) fully corroborates the testimony of Littlefield as to the character of the pretended stockholders' meeting of the 2d of June, 1870, and proves it was not convened in the manner prescribed by law.

Houstoun, Huling, and Papy, the only other parties who were present at this impromptu stockholders' meeting of June 2, 1870, are all dead.

THE ALLEGED $1,000,000 OF FLORIDA CENTRAL BONDS ARE PROVEN TO BE FABRICATIONS AND FORGERIES.

Besides the testimony of Littlefield, proving that this 1,000 papers called bonds of the Florida Central Company, were never authorized by said company, or issued for its use—that they were gotten up in New York and Washington, and signed by Swepson as president, early in the year 1870, and by H. H. Thompson as treasurer, who never held such office—F. H. Flagg being then the lawful Treasurer of said company, and who refused to sign or seal any such papers. The seal of the company was secretly abstracted from his office and custody by said Houstoun and taken to Littlefield's room, where it was fraudulently affixed to said papers by Thomas J. Saunders. Besides these facts thus proven, we present the deposition of H. H. Thompson, corroborating Littlefield as to the time, place, and manner of getting up said pretended Florida Central bonds.

This witness, who occupies a high position in the financial department of the Erie Railway Company, in New York, testifies (fols. 1,501-2) as follows:

" Henry H. Thompson, called and sworn as a witness on the " part of the complainants, deposes and says:

" Q. 1. What is your name, age, residence, and occupa- " tion?

" A. Henry H. Thompson, fifty-four years of age, residing " in the City of New York, and am clerk in the Treasurer's " office of the Erie Railway Company.

" Q. 2. Are you or not acquainted with a corporation known " as the Florida Central Railroad Company, and if yea, were " you at any time a stockholder, director, or officer of the " same?

" I am acquainted with such a corporation by repute, but " never was a stockholder or director thereof.

" Q. 3. Did you at any time sign any bond as Treasurer of " said company, and if yea, state under what circumstances you " did so?

" I did sign some bonds as treasurer of said company, " and under the following circumstances: In the years 1866, " 1867, and 1868 I was cashier of the Newbern National Bank, " in Newbern, North Carolina, where I made the acquaintance " of Geo. W. Swepson, and soon thereafter of Milton S. Little " field; they informed me that they were the owners of the " Florida Central Railroad, and held other railroad interests in " the State of Florida, connected therewith, and desired me to " organize and take the cashiership of a National Bank at Jack- " sonville, Florida, together with the treasurership of said rail- " road, which they said would prove agreeable and remunera- " tive to me financially. Believing in the representations made " to me, I was persuaded to agree to do so, and made my ar- " rangements accordingly; after considerable preparation to " go to Florida, I was informed by Mr. Swepson that I had " been duly elected Treasurer of said railroad company, and I " believed his statement to be true; about or soon after the " time mentioned I was requested by Mr. Swepson, as Presi- " dent of the Central Florida Railroad Company, to sign " papers purporting to be bonds of said company, which " I did to the number, I believe, of one thousand, not suspect- " ing at the time that I was being imposed upon and deceived, " for had I suspected or doubted the truth of said Swepson's " statement I never would have signed said bonds as Treas- " urer.

" Q. 4. Please state where you were at the time when you " were induced to sign said bonds, and whether you had seen " them before signing the same, or have seen them since?

" A. I was at Littlefield's room in the St. Nicholas Hotel, New " York City; the bonds were brought to me by Mr. Swepson, "and believing his statement that I was duly elected Treasurer of said company, I signed the same as such, and have since become satisfied that I was imposed upon in the manner stated; I never saw said bonds before, and have never seen them since."

In addition to the conclusive proofs thus presented to the court that these 1,000 papers never were issued with the knowledge or consent of the Florida Central Company, it is proven by the record (fol. 59) that at a regular meeting of the directors of the Florida Central Company held on the 21st of November, 1870, it was, among other things,

"Resolved, That the resolution adopting the bonds to be issued by the company, signed by George W. Swepson, President, and H. H. Thompson, Treasurer, at a meeting of the Board of Directors, held on the 2d day of June, A. D., 1870, be, and the same is hereby, rescinded, and that said bonds be destroyed."

The existence of this resolution was well known to Governor Reed, Houstoun, Littlefield, and Coddington, on the 11th day of January, 1871, when they conspired together to exchange said Florida Central bonds for State bonds, in willful contempt of the injunction of the State court, granted in part upon said resolution, procured by Judge Westcott and Comptroller Gamble only two days before.

Governor Reed testifies (fol. 1364) that he "delivered one million of bonds to Edward Houstoun, which were afterwards returned by him and deposited with the Comptroller, and afterwards, I don't recollect the date, they were re-exchanged with Thomas B. Coddington, he acting in conjunction with Edward Houstoun," &c. * * * * *

"13th Q. At the time of the re-exchange I had heard of objections being made on the part of some members of the Florida Central Railroad Company, or persons connected with it; I may have had official notice; I don't know; I can't recollect."

He also testifies, A. 9 (fol. 1365), that "there were charges of illegality and fraud circulated" about the issue of said bonds.

Thomas B. Coddington testifies (fol. 1735½) precisely how these 1,000 papers called bonds of the Florida Central Company came to his hands, for what purpose, and how he disposed of them; that he received the bonds as the agent of Houstoun, but from the hands of Gamble; that he then took them to Governor Reed's office in the Executive Chamber, where he received from Governor Reed 1,000 State bonds numbered from 3,001 to 4,000, inclusive; that Houstoun then directed his servant to take the said bonds to his (Coddington's) room at the hotel, where they were left with him; that he received the bonds to apply the proceeds as set out in his receipt to Houstoun—that is, to pay over $600,000 of private debts (fol. 46), and that he received his instructions from Littlefield and Governor Reed.

Coddington further testifies (fol. 1740), that when he made said exchange of bonds he knew of the suits pending, and that the injunction was granted restraining the issue and use of said bonds. He also says (fol. 1745) that, after getting said bonds, he left Tallahassee by way of Thomasville, Ga., by private conveyance, to avoid any further process of the court (see, also, his testimony, fol. 1737, on the same subject).

In the face of the facts, and acts of the parties thus proven, it seems hardly possible that any one can contend, with any degree of success, that the Florida Central Company ever issued, or agreed or attempted to issue any bonds payable to the State of Florida, to aid in the building of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Road, or for any other purpose, or that the court below was justified by the testimony in so finding.

The transaction shows a corrupt conspiracy to appropriate this 1,000 papers called bonds, which, if properly understood, would have been viewed differently by the court below.

We do not overlook the statement of the court (fol. 1225), that "On the 13th of April, 1871, at a stockholders' meeting of " the Florida Central Company, he (Houstoun) was author- " ized to place them (the State bonds) in the hands of S. W. " Hopkins & Co., subject to the same trusts as to the " proceeds thereof."

In the first place, there is no proof presented to the court, or in the cause, that any such resolution ever was passed at a lawful meeting of the stockholders. No such resolution was offered in evidence by Schutte, et al., and consequently, no opportunity was offered to the Western Division Company to contest the legality or regularity of the same, or to expose the palpable fraud by which it was placed on the minute-book of the stockholders. This resolution of April 13, therefore, was neither pleaded nor proved by Schutte, et al., and was not properly in evidence before the court.

The only evidence touching it, and the only time it was inquired about was in the Western Division's examination of Littlefield, who, at fol. 1645, was asked:

> "Q. 48. Referring again to the original record book of the "Florida Central Company, at page 27, occurs the following "resolution, purporting to have been adopted by a meeting of "stockholders, represented to have been held at Tallahassee, "April 13, 1871.
>
> "'Mr. Houstoun offered the following resolution:
>
> "Resolved, That Edward Houstoun is authorized to place the "bonds referred to in the preamble and resolution of the stock- "holders, adopted June 2, 1870, in the hands of S. W. Hopkins & "Co., for the purposes mentioned in the said resolution, subject "to the same exceptions as therein expressed with respect to the "portion thereof applicable to the stock owned by other parties, "and according to the same terms therein mentioned'; will you "please look at said resolution and state whether you was or was "not present at said meeting; and if yea, state to what bonds "said resolution referred, to the best of your recollection.
> "A. I was not present at said meeting; the bonds referred "to were the same bonds T. B. Coddington received from Ed- "ward Houstoun on the 11th day of January, 1871, as "described in schedule F., heretofore referred to."

Now, independently of the fact that the record does not show that any such stockholders' meeting was convened on the 13th of April, in the manner required by the company's by-laws, we here see that Littlefield, who had just acquired all of Houstoun's stock, and then represented fully four-fifths of the entire stock, was not present, and, consequently, that there could not have been a majority of the stock present, and capable of passing this or any other resolution.

But what is still more significant of the false, sham, and fraudulent character of this pretended resolution is, that all the proof shows that there were no bonds, company or State, in Houstoun's hands to be handed over by him to Hopkins & Co., or anybody else. He had parted with them all on the 11th of January, some four months before; that the bonds were then in London; and that his resolution, directing himself to hand them over, was a palpable attempt to cover up his own fraud upon the other stockholders, committed on the 11th day of January preceding, and in open contempt of court at that.

We respectfully submit that such a manifest sham and fraud cannot receive sanctification at the hands of this honorable court; but, being correctly advised, will treat and regard the same as deserving of no favorable consideration whatsoever.

In fact this resolution discloses a robbery upon its face. It attempts to speak of rights reserved to other stockholders not agreeing to the fraud, whose bonds were to be reserved; when it is shown that all the bonds were then in England, in the hands of Hopkins & Co., and the entire proceeds appropriated to other purposes than those for which they were created by the statute; and in which misappropriation it is shown that the State, the common Trustee, was to share. Surely this court will not, for a moment, give effect to such injustice and fraud, when thus brought to its attention.

But this resolution, even supposing it to have come to the knowledge of any intending purchaser of said State bonds, could not have misled him. If it was necessary for any one to inquire whether said bonds were legally and regularly issued, this resolution would advise such persons that they were not so issued. The bonds of the State show that they were issued under the act of January 28, 1870. That act only attempts to authorize the issue of bonds to aid in the construction of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile road. But this resolution, and the one of June 2, 1869, which it refers to and revives, show that these bonds were issued to pay private debts, and so were issued fraudulently. No party, therefore, could be innocently misled by it, and neithor the Florida Central Company, nor the Western Division Company can be justly held estopped by it, as decided by the court below.

The VIIth error assigned presents a very important point, which seems to have wholly escaped the attention of the court below. And that is, that the first proviso in the 4th section of the act of January 28, 1870, under which all these bonds were sought to be imposed upon the Florida Central Road expressly restricted, and limited the exchange of State bonds for company bonds to "one hundred miles of any part of railroad "between Quincy and Jacksonville."

This 4th section, as we have before argued, is new and independent legislation. It refers to nothing contained in the act of June 24, 1869, and neither amends nor repeals any section or portion thereof, except by implication.

On the contrary, it confers new powers—imparts new rights—and tenders a new and different contract between the State and said company. It confers the right to exchange State bonds for company bonds, on the road east of Quincy. It says: "any portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville." "THE ROAD," here is the road of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, which is to receive the bonds, and not the road of the Florida Central Company, which is not named in the act!

To the exchange of State bonds for Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company bonds, the Legislature set a distinct and unequivocal limitation, in these words: "Provided, however, The State bonds under this section shall not be exchanged for First Mortgage Bonds for a greater length than one hundred miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville." The "length" of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile road, between Quincy and Jacksonville, is found by the State Court to be 138 miles. It is therefore seen that the said bond issue and exchange would have reached its statutory limit thirty-eight miles before it reached the western terminus of the Florida Central, at Lake City. The Florida Central is, therefore, clearly not within the scope of the provisions of this statute, even if it were constitutional and valid, instead of unconstitutional and void, as rightly adjudged.

This statute, it will be further noticed, only authorizes the issue and exchange of 1,600 bonds by the State, upon the road "between Quincy and Jacksonville." This provision, also relieves the Florida Central Road; for 2,800 bonds—an over-issue of 1,400—had been exchanged and sold, before it was ever attempted to exchange any bonds of the State for Florida Central bonds, and those which were exchanged, the proof shows, were numbered from 3,001 to 4,000 inclusive.

Besides this, the court will observe that the statute of June 24, 1869, only provides for a bond issue of $14,000, per mile, whilst the act of January, 1870, provides for the issue and exchange of bonds at the rate of $16,000 per mile, which, had it been made under the 9th, 10th, and 11th sections of the act of June, 1869, would have rendered the whole issue void on the doctrine of ultra vires. How, in any event, is this issue and exchange of over 3,000 bonds to be upheld under the statute of January 28, 1870, which they recite upon their faces as the authority for their existence? Is it possible to put more than 1600 bonds east of Quincy under this act? And if not, is it possible to lay any of them on the Florida Central Road? Must they not be placed on road claimed by the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, and not on the Florida Central road.

The only way we can account for the action of the court below, is, as we stated at the beginning of the discussion of this topic, that it was overlooked.

The VIII assignment of error contends that the 1,000 bonds charged against the Florida Central Company as exchanged on the 11th of January, 1870, were parted with by the Governor and Houstoun, in contempt of court, because inviolation of the injunction order in the suit of Westcott and Gamble against Reed, Houstown, Littlefield, and others, upon bill in equity filed in the Leon County Circuit Court, issued and allowed, January 9, 1871.

This is shown by a copy of the record, in said suit (fols. 2083 to 2099).

In this bill Westcott and Gamble charged upon their oaths (fol. 2089), that this 1,000 papers called bonds of the Florida Central Company were not its bonds, and were not a lien upon its property or estate; that they were issued at the instigation of M. S. Littlefield, and were not the act and deed of said company; that they had passed into the hands of said Houstoun, and were about being parted with (fol. 2095, and would be, unless restrained and enjoined by the order of said court, &c.

This complaint was sworn to by both Westcott and Gamble before Chief Justice Randall, of the Supreme Court of Florida, on the 6th day of January, 1871 (fol. 2096), and this verified bill, an order of injunction, was granted and served, upon 9th of January, 1871.

This proceeding, we contend, was notice to all the world that said bonds were fraudulently and illegally issued; and was especially good and sufficient notice to the Governor of Florida, the Trustee of Schutte et al., who as his cestui que trust, were affected and bound by his knowledge.

The IXth Xth and XIth assignments of error refer to corresponding findings of fact by the court below, and involve the same questions which have been discussed under errors V and VI, and need not be repeated here.

The only question not before discussed is in that part of assignment XI, which alleges that no mortgage was ever executed or delivered by the Florida Central Company to the State of Florida, creating any lien on its franchise or estate.

It is not alleged in the bill of Schutte et al. that any such mortgage was ever made, nor is there any proof offered in support of such an obligation had it been made.

A lien is claimed by their bill upon the Jacksonville Pensacola, and Mobile road extending from Jacksonville to the Chatahoochee river, and relief prayed accordingly. We contend that the court erred in finding a lien upon the Florida Central Road notprayed in the Schutte bill, nor proven.

That no such lien existed was found by Mr. Collinson's counsel, Mr. McFarland, before the bonds were sold, and an attempt made to correct it, which never accomplished the result aimed at. The witness Chase swears (fols. 1575–6) as follows:

> "Q. 33. Please look at the telegram now shown you, dated "New York, December 17, 1872, addressed to M. S. Little-"field, and which reads as follows: 'Before anything can be "'completed, the mortgage to the State, sent down by Mr. Mac-"'Farland for execution last year, must be executed and re-"'corded in each county through which the road runs; answer "'immediately; send Henderson here immediately,' and "signed 'C. L. Chase, Trustee,' and state whether you wrote "or sent said dispatch, and if yea, the reason therefor?
> "A. I wrote and sent this dispatch because Mr. MacFar-"land, the attorney for John Collinson, required it; he said "the mortgage would not be valid unless the mortgage was re-"corded in each county through which the road run. In other "words, he said the lien on the road was worth nothing without the "mortgage."

In support of the XIIth and XIIIth and XIVth errors assigned, we contend that the decisions of the State court (15 Florida R.,) should not have been followed and adopted by the court below, as governing the construction of the proposed statutory contract of January 28, 1870.

As we think we have conclusively demonstrated elsewhere that the construction put upon the statute by the State court is erroneous, we will not pursue that branch of the subject further here.

We only add here that this is not the ordinary case of construing a statute; but is the very different case of the con-

In the construction of State statutes and constitutions, the Federal courts are loth to interfere with the doctrine of the state courts; but in the construction of statutory contracts, where a State is a party, we understand the doctrine of this court to be uniform, that such contracts must be construed and upheld or overthrown upon the grounds of merit or infirmity which uphold or overthrow other contracts.

In construing a statutory contract of the State of Pennsylvania, Chief Justice Marshall, speaking for this court, says:

"This is a contract, and although the state is a party, it ought to be construed accordtng to those well established principles which regulated contracts generally."

Huidekoper's Lessees vs. Douglass, 3 Cranch, 70.

"This court has uniformly applied the general principles of the law contracts in constructing such statutes, and not unfrequently has overruled the State courts in so doing."

Craige vs. Missouri, 4 Pet., 436.
Byrne vs. Missouri, 8 Pet., 39.
Woodruff vs. Trapnall, 10 How., 203.
State of New Jersey vs. Wilson, 7 Cranch, 164.

The Vth assignment of error will be considered with XIXth, XXth, XXIst and XXIId, which relate to the same subject matters.

In support of the XVIth assignment, we contend that the court below erred in finding that either the Florida Central Company or the Western Division aided or acquiesced in the issuing and sale of any of the State bonds in question, and in finding that the resolution of the 13th of April, 1871, was passed by any regular or lawful meeting of the stockholders of the Florida Central Company.

This assumption pervades the whole finding of the court below at different points. But the part immediately under consideration is at fols. 1225 to 1228.

The court finds that this appellant is estopped to set up that the State bonds were issued for an unlawful purpose. To support this proposition it indulges in the totally unwarranted assumption that this appellant participated in the issue and sale of said State bonds; whereas the truth is as abundantly shown by the evidence, that this appellant never did any such thing, and is a greater sufferer by the fraudulent issue of said bonds under the decree appealed from, than the Dutch bondholders could become in any event, and this appellant has the advantage of having traced its property into the roads which are the subject of this litigation.

Now, we suppose it is only necessary to call the attention of this court to the old and well settled principle of law that an estoppel by matter of record in equity must be plead and proved, to be available. But there is no such plea interposed here by Schutte et al. They should not only set up the matter of record by plea distinctly, but they should have alleged and proven that they were influenced thereby to their damage. But they have done neither.

Again:

The court below, in its opinion, at folio 1230, says:

"The question is not so much what the bondholders ought to " have, as WHAT THE STATUTE GIVES THEM. If they stood on " grounds of mere equity, they might not be able to secure " more than the amount paid by them for the bonds. I think, " however, that the matter is to be governed by the statute" (fol. 1230).

Now, the State court has found, in the opinion adopted by the court below, that this statute is unconstitutional and void so far as the State's side of the contract is concerned. We have tried to argue, that without the State as a party, the statutory contract tendered would be unilateral, and therefore no contract; that the statute being confessedly void in part, is void in toto.

"Where a statute is adjudged to be unconstitutional, it is as " if it had never been. Rights cannot be built up under it; " contracts which depend upon it for their consideration are void; " it constitutes a protection to no one who has acted under it; " and no one can be punished for having refused obedience to " it before the decision was made."

Cooley on Con. Lim., p. 188, and cases cited.

If this proposition be true, how can any party, by any matter of any kind, estop himself to plead the infirmity of the bonds at bar to charge the Florida Central Company, the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, the Western Division Company, or any one else?

As stated, the matter of estoppel should be alleged and fully set forth. If consisting of judicial proceedings they should be fully set forth, and must be between the same parties. We repeat, that nothing of this kind is alleged in the Schutte bill, nor shown by the proofs.

The bill of the Western Division Company, on the other hand, does allege the repeated efforts at compromise settlements of its demands, but that all those efforts failed to accomplish the desired ends.

We have seen that the Western Division bills allege that the company had no knowledge of the use made of its funds by its agents and fiduciaries until advised in part by Swepson and Littlefield on the 16th day of April, 1870, when the compromise settlement of that date was made, as shown by the document which is made part of the bills. This is their starting point, and the proof shows just what followed.

The testimony on this point is derived from Rollins and Candler, two of the Commissioners under the Act of March 24, 1870, and Swepson and Littlefield, the other contracting parties. No other witnesses were examined touching this subject.

The four witnesses above named unite in proving that previous to the 16th of April, 1870, the Western Division Company had no knowledge whatever of the fraudulent use made of its funds; and only got such knowledge as the wrongdoers chose to disclose.

The testimony of Rollins, one of said Commissioners, and now President of the Western Division Company, was taken orally, upon notice to all parties, and is as follows (folios 1408 to 1417):

" 1. Question. State your name, age, residence, and occu" pation.

" Answer. Wallace W. Rollins; thirty-nine years old; " residence, Marshall, N. C.; by occupation, a farmer.

" 2. Ques. What relation have you, if any, with the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, the complainant in the suits in equity mentioned in " the caption?

" Ans. I am a stockholder and President of the company, " and have been a director of the same from its organization, " in 1868.

" 3. Ques. How long have you been President of said company?

" Ans. Since October, A. D. 1870.

" 4. Ques. Beside your relation as stockholder and President of said company, have you occupied any other relation " thereto, and if so, what?

" Ans. I was one of the Commissioners, appointed under " an act of the Legislature of North Carolina, passed in the " early part of the year 1870, to seek to recover the money " and assets due to, and belonging to, said company, which " had been misappropriated by George W. Swepson and " others, while acting as fiduciaries and agents of said company.

" 5. Ques. Was, or was not, any settlement of the matters " referred to arrived at, in whole or in part, with said parties?

" Ans. There was a conditional settlement arrived at.

" At the request of, and to afford witness an opportunity to " examine papers, the examination is adjourned until Friday " morning, April 26th, at eight o'clock.

" And on Friday morning, the 26th day of April, 1878, at " the place abovesaid, I proceeded with said examination, " according to previous adjournment, when and where the " said Wallace W. Rollins further deposed and said as follows:

" 6. Ques. When and where did the settlement take place?

" Ans. On or about the 16th day of April, 1870, in the City " of Washington, D. C.

" 7. Ques. In what capacity were you acting when said " conditional settlement occurred?

" Ans. I was acting as one of the Commission, under the " act of the Legislature of the State of North Carolina, before " mentioned.

" 8. Ques. Who, besides yourself, was present at and par- " ticipated in said settlement?

" Ans. Nicholas W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. P. Welch " and myself, on the part of the State of North Carolina; and " George W. Swepson and Milton S. Littlefield, as parties " representing the fund and assets belonging to the complain- " ant, and which we were seeking to recover.

" 9. Ques. Please state what was the special object intended " by the Commission, of which you were a member, in seeking " the settlement to which you have referred?

" Ans. The first and primary object was to ascertain what " amount of money or assets, belonging to the complainant " corporation, had come into Swepson's hands while acting as " President and fiduciary of the complainant corporation, and " then to ascertain, as far as possible, in what manner the " same had been used and disposed of.

" 10. Ques. What amount, if any, of either money or assets, " did your Commission ascertain had come into the hands of " Swepson while acting as President; and state in what ca- " pacity, and under what circumstances,, and for what purpose " he received the same?

" Ans. During the latter part of the year 1868, and until " October, 1869, said Swepson was the President, fidicu- " ary and agent of the complainant company, and as such " President he received about $6,666,000 of bonds of the State " of North Carolina, which were issued and paid by said State, " in payment for its capital stock in the complainant corpora- " tion. These bonds said Swepson, as such President and " fiducuary, but acting upon his own motion, took to New York " and there sold and hypothecated, and otherwise raised on " them about $3,000,000. The exact amount we could never " ascertain. He received the bonds of the State of North " Carolina for the purpose of applying the same, or the pro- " ceeds thereof, to the construction and equipping of the road " of the complainant corporation.

" 11. Ques. What disposition did your Commission ascer- " tain the said Swepson had made of the said assets, or the " proceeds thereof, which he had received as President of the " complainant company?

" Ans. We found from the statements of said Swepson, and " from papers shown us by him, that he had paid out a small " portion, the exact amount not remembered, in the construc- " tion of the road of the complainant company; but that much " the larger portion thereof, and, indeed, more than nine- " tenths of it, had been used and appropriated by said Swep- " son for his own purposes; and among others, that he had " invested a large portion of the money belonging to the " complainant company in purchasing stock and bonds of cer- " tain Florida railroads; that is to say, in purchasing the " capital stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and " purchasing bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia, and Talla- " hassee railroad companies, which were, by a subsequent sale " and purchase, to which said Swepson was a party, organized " into what is now the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile " Railroad Company, which, together with the said Florida " Central Railroad Company, are parties defendant to this " suit.

" 12. Ques. Had, or had not, said Swepson any right or au- " thority, by reason of his position as President of said com- " plainant company, or otherwise, to use, invest, or apply its " assets or money in the purchase of stock or bonds of any " company or corporation whatever?

" Ans. He had not.

" 13. Ques. When did it first come to your knowledge, as a " stockholder or director, or that of the Commission of which " you were a member, that said Swepson had used and mis- " appropriated the assets and money of the complainant com- " pany?

" Ans. Not until April, 1870, about the time of the conditional " settlement above mentioned.

" 14. Ques. Referring now specially to the use and appropria- " tion by said Swepson of the complainant company's money " and assets, in purchasing the stock and bonds of the said " Florida railroads above mentioned, did, or did not, your " Commission ascertain what amount of money had been so " used in Florida, and if yea, please state the sum, to the best " of your recollection?

" Ans. The Commission did ascertain the amount, which was " shown to be about $1,287,436.

"15. Ques. Was, or was not the terms of said conditional "settlement reduced to writing, and if yea, will you produce "the same, or a copy thereof, as part of your answer to this "question?

"Ans. The result of said conditional settlement was reduced to writing, in two parts of even date, viz;: April 16, "1870, signed by the parties as interested therein, the originals "of which I now present for inspection and comparison; but "as I desire to retain the same, as President of said company, "for business reasons, I furnish copies thereof, and make the "same part of this answer, marked, 'W. W. R., No. 1,' and "'W. W. R., No. 2,' respectively.

"16. Ques. Was, there, or was there not, any provision made, "or agreed to be made, for receiving, and having returned to "the complainant company the said $1,287,000, or any part "thereof, so appropriated by Swepson in the purchase of said "stock and bonds of said Florida railroads, and if yea, please "state in what manner the return of said money was proposed "to be secured?

"Ans. As shown by the two papers of April 16, 1870, above "mentioned, there was a proposal made by said Swepson and "Littlefield which was conditionally accedted by said Commis- "sioners for the return to the complainant company of its said "money, so misapplied by said Swepson. By the terms of the "proposal so made and accepted, the complainant company was "to receive one-half of the proceeds of the sale of bonds of "the State of Florida, a sufficient amount to return back to "the complainant company its said money, so illegally appro- "priated by said Swepson, to the amount of $1,287,000, as "aforesaid.

"17. Ques. Was, or was not, the terms of said conditional "settlement complied with?

"Ans. They were not.

"18. Ques. You have spoken of bonds of the State of "Florida which were to be applied, or the proceeds thereof, in "returning the money due the complainant company; will "you please state in what manner the said bonds were to be "issued by the said State of Florida, and for what purpose, "and in what manner the same were to be obtained, or pass "into the hands of said Swepson and Littlefield, or either of " them, as indicated in the said papers of the 16th of April, " 1870?

" Ans. I had no knowledge whatever as an individual, or as " a member of said Commission, or otherwise, of the origin, " character, and object of said Florida State Bonds, or for " what purpose they were to be issued, or in what manner " they were to come into the hands of, or be subject to the " control of said Swepson and Littlefield, or either of them, " nor do I believe that either of my associate members of said " Commission had any knowledge whatever of the origin, character, and object of said bonds; I, myself, had not, nor do I " believe that either of my associates had heard of said Florida " State Bonds till they were mentioned in the conditional settlement above stated, and referred to in one of the papers of " the 16th of April, 1870; the action of the Commission in " making said conditional settlement was based wholly upon " the proposition—first, that said $1,287,000 of the complainant company's money had been illegally and fraudulently invested in the purchase of the stock and bonds of the said " Florida roads; and second, that the equivalent in value in " Florida State bonds were being issued, and would come back " into the hands of said Littlefield and Swepson, or one of " them, and which he, or they, could apply, and would have " the lawful right to apply, to restoring to the complainant " company its money which had been so illegally used; and " acting upon these two propositions, with no other knowledge " or information whatever, the Commissioners appointed by " the Legislature of North Carolina, when so advised of the " means of settlement, accepted the same, on condition that " the same was carried out.

" 19. Ques. Had you, or had you not, yourself, individually or as a member of said Commission, or within your " knowledge, information, or belief, had, or had not, said Commission seen or read, or been advised of, the act of the Legislature of the State of Florida under which the bonds of " said State were to be issued, or the terms, objects, and conditions thereof?

" Ans. I certainly had not, myself, ever seen or read the act " of the Legislature of Florida under which said bonds were " then being issued, and I know that the same was not, in any " manner, discussed by the members of the Commission; as " before stated, we were seeking to get the best security we could for the complainant company, in obtaining the restor-" ation of its money so illegally used; that the whole of the " $1,287,000 of the complainant company's money had gone " into the State of Florida, and been applied to the purchase " of said roads, as aforesaid, and represented at par the pur-" chase of the bonds of the said State of Florida, then being " issued, and that the State had already received the par " value, in money, for its said bonds, or the proceeds thereof, " and the Commission supposed and believed that the Legis-" lation of the State of Florida, whatever it was, was such as " to impress proper validity upon said bond issue, and nothing " was said or intimated to the contray, within my knowledge " or belief; the State bonds, themselves, were not shown to " the said Commission.

" 20. Ques. State what next occurred in reference to said " conditional settlement, after the execution of the papers of " April 16th, 1870, to which you have referred?

" Ans. Nothing occurred; the Commission awaited the " coming of the money, which did not come; but, about the " month of October, 1876, it came to our knowledge that the " bonds of the State of Florida, above mentioned, had been " disposed of, and were, in fact, disposed of at the date of said " settlement; this information, coupled with other matters, " coming to our knowledge, gave rise to certain judicial pro-" ceedings which were instituted in New York, about the 3d " of October, 1870, against said Littlefield and Edward Hous-" toun; and soon thereafter Mr. Nicholas W. Woodfin, Chair-" man of the Commission, proceeded to London, to see what " possibility there was of obtaining the proceeds of said bonds, " as provided in said agreement of April 16th, 1870.

" 21. Ques. Please state what was the result, if any, of Mr. " Woodfin's visit to London; whom did he see there, and what, " if anything, did he do?

" Ans. The result of said Woodfin's visit to London, was the " entering into further conditional agreement, by himself, as " Chairman of the Commission on the one part, and Milton S. " Littlefield, in conjunction with S. W. Hopkins & Co., on the " other part, dated November 10, 1870, a copy of which said " agreement I make part of this answer, marked 'W. W. R., " No. 3;' according to the terms of this agreement 800 of the " said Florida State bonds of $1,000 each, were to be turned " over and applied to the use of the complainant company, " and an order was given by Littlefield in favor of said Wood- " fin, as chairman, to that effect, on said Hopkins & Co., in " London, on or about the 16th day of November, 1870, and " was accepted of them of the same date, agreeing to hold said " 800 bonds subject to the order of said Commission, a copy of " which acceptance is made a part of my answer to this ques- " tion, marked 'W. W. R., No. 4.'

"22. Ques. Were the terms and conditions of said last " named or modified agreement complied with, and the said " bonds, or any of them, delivered as therein provided?

" Ans. The said modified conditional agreement was not " complied with in any respect whatever, and not a single one " of said bonds ever was delivered under it.

" 23. Ques. What steps did you next take towards recover- " ing the money due the complainant company, as provided in " said agreements or either of them?

" Ans. Acting under the advice of counsel, in the City of " New York, on or about the 8th day of September, 1871, I, as " President of the complainant company, brought suit in New " York against said Hopkins & Co., to enforce the surrender of " said bonds, or the proceeds thereof, and caused the members " of said firm, or some of them, to be arrested.

"24. Ques. Did said cause come to a hearing in any respect, " and if so, what was the result thereof?

" Ans. The said cause did come to a hearing, upon a motion " made upon the part of the defendants, S. W. Hopkins & Co., " to vacate said order of arrest and dismiss the plaintiff's suit " upon the ground, among others, that by the terms of the " act of the Legislature of Florida, authorizing the issue of " said Florida State bonds, that the same were dedicated " to a special purpose, and could not be used, transferred, or " appropriated to the payment of any money to the complain- " ant company, which could acquire no title to said bonds, or " the proceeds thereof, or right of property therein, and upon " hearing, the court so held and decided, and discharged said " order of arrest, and the plaintiff's suit was dismissed.

"25. Ques. Previous to the bringing of this suit, had you " acquired any knowledge of the facts about the issue of said " bonds, or the object for which they were issued?

" Ans. We had not, so far as I know or believe. There had " been some discussion, but none that led to any conclusion " till after the action above taken.

" 26. Ques. Did you, at any time, receive any money from " Hopkins & Co., for or on account of said 800 bonds, and if " you say you did, state when it was, and under what circum- " stances?

" Ans. We did receive £10,000 of said Hopkins & Co., by a " sixty days draft, dated April 3d, 1871, a copy of which " draft is made part of this answer, marked 'W. W. R., No. 5.' " The circumstances which gave rise to the drawing of said " draft were as follows: That after said Woodfin had returned " from London we waited for the forthcoming of the proceeds " of said 800 bonds till we lost confidence and threatened the " bringing of the suit, which we afterwards did bring, at the " time wholly ignorant of the facts which we subsequently " learned, when, to prevent our bringing suit, the said Hop- " kins & Co. agreed to accept our draft for said sum of £10,- " 000, which we accordingly drew on the 3d of April, 1871, " they assuring us that we should have our money in the fu- " ture as agreed, but we subsequently became convinced that " the said draft was designed to throw us off our guard till " other things could be accomplished, which being done, all " further payments were denied, and we thereupon brought " suit on or about the 8th of September, 1871, which resulted " in the court holding and deciding that we had acquired no " titles to said bonds by any of said agreements, when we " abandoned all further effort to realize anything from said " bonds, except such as we could effect by negotiation, which " amounted to nothing.

" 27. Ques. Besides the said proposed Florida State bonds, " or the proceeds thereof, what other security, or means of " payment, if any, was provided for in said agreement of the " 16th of April, 1870?

" Ans. It was agreed that the entire stock, bonds, and in- " terest of every description of the said Florida Central Rail- " road Company, and Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Rail- " road Company, purchased and acquired by said Swepson " and Littlefield, or either of them, should be turned over and " invested in the complainant company, or held for its use.

"28. Ques. Are you, or are you not, in possession of and "holding said stock and bonds of said companies?

"Ans. We do hold about 5,000 shares of the stock of the "Florida Central Railroad Company, and also claim to hold "the entire capital stock of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola, "and Mobile Railroad Company, and especially certificates "Nos. 6, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 25, 27, 30, 33, "34, 35, 36, making a total of 51,668 shares out of the capital "stock of 60,000 shares, and also claim that the remainder of "said stock is held to the use of the complainant company.

"29. Ques. By the concluding paragraph of one of the said "agreements of the 16th of April, 1870, it is stated: 'It is "further understood and agreed by the parties of the first and "second parts, that all interest, accrued or claimed by the said "parties of the first part, both George W. Swepson and Milton "S. Littlefield, or which they, as individuals, have a right to "control in the said Florida railroads, are hereby pledged for "the faithful fulfillment of this contract, without the right on "the part of any party to interfere with our management, or "the control of the affairs of the roads;' will you please state "for what purpose said clause was inserted, and what control "was therein referred to?

"Ans. The Commission claimed and contended that all the "interest in said Florida railroads, purchased by the misappropriation of the complainant company's money, as aforesaid, forthwith and instantly became the property and estate "of said complainant company, and in no manner became the "property of said Swepson and Littlefield; but as they claimed "to have purchased a portion of said property with their own "money, but which we did not admit, but claimed the assignment of it, nevertheless, as a part of said security, but agreed "not to claim the right to control the working operation of "said roads, or the management thereof, by reason of the control of said stock, pending the fulfillment of said conditional "settlement, and for this reason, and this only, was said clause "inserted.

"30. Ques. Was it, or was it not, the intention of the said "clause to create or constitute said Swepson and Littlefield, or "either of them, the agents to represent the interest of the "complainant company in any respect, or use or pledge the " same for any purpose, or encumber or charge the same in " any manner?

" Ans. It certainly was not; the Commission was dealing " with reference to the speedy fulfillment of the terms of said " conditional settlement, and parted with, and intended to part " with, no interest whatever, till the same was done, and such " not being done, claims that the said stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and the entire property and estate " of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, belongs to the complainant company in this suit, as " being acquired and purchased by its assets and money, fraudulently appropriated by agents and fiduciaries.

" 31. Ques. Besides the papers of the 16th of April, 1870, " what other papers, if any, were then transferred to the complainant company, or to the said Commission for its use?

" Ans. We claim that all papers, assignments, and transfers, " in any manner creating or vesting any right in said Swepson " or Littlefield, or either of them, passed to and vested " in the complainant company, and especially the assignment " in trust of F. Dibble and associates to George W. Swepson, " dated April 22, 1869, conveying to him the purchase and title " deeds of F. Dibble and associates, as executed by the Trustees " of the Internal Improvement Fund, dated April 8, 1869, conveying what is now known as the Jacksonville, Pensacola, " and Mobile Railroad, and described as Schedules " A," " B," " and " C " in complainant's bill, filed in this cause for the recovery of said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad, " subject to the terms of sale therein provided.

" 32. Ques. Do you know, or can you state, any other matter or thing material to the interests of the parties plaintiff " or defendant, besides what you have stated; if yea, please " state the same fully and at large in your answer, as if you " had been particularly interrogated thereto?

" Ans. Nothing occurs to me beyond what I have stated in " answer to the question propounded.

" W. W. Rollins."

Mr. Candler, another member of the said Commission, who was a party to the conditional settlement of April 16, 1870 being likewise orally examined, on notice to all parties, testified as follows (fols. 1427 to 1433):

"1. Ques. State your name, age, residence, and occupa" tion?

"Ans. William G. Candler; age, forty-four; residence, " Hominy Creek, Buncombe County, North Carolina; by oc" cupation, a lawyer.

"2. Ques. Please state your relation, if any, with the com" plainant company—said Western Division of the Western " North Carolina Railroad Company?

"Ans. I am a stockholder, and was a director, in said com" pany.

"3. Ques. Did you, or not, at any time occupy any other " relation to the complainant company than that of stockhold" er and director, and if yea, please state what it was?

"Ans. I did, at one time, occupy an additional relation to " said company, as being one of a Board of Commissioners ap" pointed under an act of the Legislature of North Carolina,
" approved on or about the 24th of March, 1870, empowered " to ascertain what disposition had been made of certain assets " of said company by George W. Swepson, while acting as the " President thereof, and I accepted and acted as one of said
" Commission.

"4. Ques. Did said Commission have such settlement, and " ascertain the facts authorized by said act of the Legislature " of North Carolina?

"Ans. We did, to the best of our ability.

"5. Ques. When did such investigation take place, and " where?

"Ans. On or about the 16th day of April, 1870, in the City " of Washington, District of Columbia.

"6. Ques. Did you or not, arrive at a settlement with said " Swepson?

"Ans. We arrived at a conditional settlement.

"7. Ques. Please state who were present and participated " in said settlement?

"Ans. On the part of the Commission, Nicholas W. Woodfin, " Wallace W. Rollins, W. P. Welch, and myself, and the per" sons with whom we conducted said conditional settlement
" were George W. Swepson and Milton S. Littlefield.

"8. Ques. How, and in what way, did said Littlefield be" come a party to said proceedings and settlement?

"Ans. I only know of his connection by what was developed " by the papers which they exhibited and executed, wherein it " appeared he had become connected with the illegal appro" priation of the assets and money of the complainant com" pany, which was the subject matter of said settlement, and " which had become invested in the purchase of the capital " stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and of the " Tallahassee Railroad Company, which had, by some change,

" organization, become the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile
" Railroad Company.

" 9. Ques. What amount of assets of the complainant com" pany did it appear, or was shown by said settlement, had " passed into the hands of said Swepson ; in what manner and " capacity had he received same, and what disposition had he " made thereof?

" Ans. It was shown, by the papers brought before the Com" mission, that said Swepson, among other things, had come
" in possession of about $6,600,000 of the bonds of the State " of North Carolina, which had been issued to the complainant
" company by the State in payment for its stock subscription ;
" that at the time this occurred, to wit, in the latter part of the " year 1868, till about November, 1869, said Swepson was the " President, agent, and fiduciary of the complainant company,
" and received said bonds in such fiduciary capacity ; that he " subsequently took said bonds to New York, and by sale or " hypothecation of the same, I believe principally through the " house of Soutter & Co., realizing therefor in the neighbor" hood of ($3,000,000) three million of dollars, the exact " amount the Commission could not ascertain ; the disposi" tion made of said money belonging to said complainant com" pany, as shown by the papers brought before the Commission,
" and by the statement of said Swepson, made it appear that " a small portion of said money had been applied to the build" ing and equipping of the road of complainant company, but " that much the larger portion thereof had been fraudulently
" misappropriated by said Swepson to his own purposes, in" cluding, in the amount so misappropriated, about ($1,287,000)
" one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand dollars
" had been fraudulently used by said Swepson, in conjunction " with said Littlefield, in the purchase of said stock of the " Florida Central Railroad Company, and the absolute pur" chase of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad

" Company, so far as payment was made for the same, amounting, I believe, to about nine hundred and sixty thousand dollars; that, in fact, no other payments had been made for " said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad, except " such as had been made for the misuse of the " complainant company's money; such was the information imparted and derived in the course of the settlement referred to, and which I believed, and still believe, to " be true.

" 10. Ques. Was, or was not, the settlement you referred to " reduced to writing, and if yea, will you produce the same, or " a copy thereof, as part of your answer to this question?

" Ans. The terms of said conditional settlement were reduced to writing, in two papers, simultaneously executed on " or about the said 16th day of April, 1870, one of which was " signed by N. W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler and W. W. Rollins, " on the part of the Commissioners, and by George W. Swepson, for himself, and the other was signed by George W. " Swepson, President of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and Milton S. Littlefield, individually, and M. S. " Littlefield, President Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile " Railroad Company, and by N. W. Woodfin, W. W. Rollins, " W. P. Welch and myself, as Commissioners, both of which " said original papers are now before me, but are not subject " to my control; I will, if possible, procure and produce copies " of the same as part of my answer to this question; but I am " informed that the originals themselves will be before the " court on the hearing of this cause, and in that event refer to " them.

" 11. Ques. You have stated that the sum of about $1,287,000 " of complainant company's money was shown, by the papers exhibited at the time of said conditional settlement, to have been " invested in the purchase of the said Florida railroads; will " you now be so good as to state by what means the return of " said money to said complainant company was proposed to " be secured and effected?

" Ans. The terms were such as were set forth in said papers; " that is, it was stated that said Littlefield and Swepson, one " or both of them, were about to receive a large number of " bonds of the State of Florida, then being issued to said " railroads, and that the same, or the proceeds thereof, should "be applied in such manner as to secure the return to the "complainant company of said sum, of about $1,287,000, "which had been so misapplied by said Swepson and Little-"field; the manner in which the same should be done was "stated and provided in one of the papers so signed, to which "I refer for details.

"12. Ques. You have spoken of certain bonds which were "being issued by the State of Florida, which said Swepson "and Littlefield proposed should be applied to the payment "of the money due the complainant company; will you please "state what knowledge or information you or said Commis-"sioners had or received, at the time of said conditional "settlement, about the said Florida State bonds, and especially "by what authority, or for what purpose, the same were being "issued, and would be subject to the control of said Little-"field and Swepson, or either of them?

"Ans. I, myself, either as an individual or as a stockholder "and director of complainant company, or as a member of "said Commission, had not, and never had, any information "whatever on the subject of said Florida State bonds, or the "object for which they were issued, except such as was im-"parted by said papers, so signed on the 16th of April, 1870; "and, to the best of my knowledge and belief, neither of the "other members of said Commission had any other knowledge or "source of information about said bonds than I had. It was "only at the time of said conditional settlement that we "learned that any of the money of the complainant company "had been so illegally applied by said Swepson, in the pur-"chase of said Florida railroads, or the stock and bonds there-"of; and only at the same time learned anything about the "issuing of said bonds on the part of the State of Florida, "which, or the proceeds of which, it was proposed to turn over "to the complainant company, in reimbursement of its illegally "appropriated assets, and the impression conveyed, and belief "established in the minds of the Commissioners were, that "these Florida State bonds were being issued as the equiva-"lent, or consideration, of the said $1,287,000 of the complain-"ant company's money, which, it was shown, had been in-"vested in the purchase of said Florida railroads, and that the "authority under which said Florida State bonds were being "issued was such as conferred upon said Swepson and Little"field the right to use the same in the manner proposed in "said agreement, but the law itself was not brought before, "seen or considered by the Commissioners. The object of the "settlement being the return of the complainant company's "money, and the terms of the settlement being conditional, whereby the complainant company's money, demands and equities would only be discharged, on such "payments being made as proposed, there was no necessity or motive for the Commissioners to enquire into "the laws of the State of Florida, or to ascertain the relations "of Littlefield and Swepson, or either of them, to said Florida "State bonds, or for what reason, or by what authority they "assumed the control of the same.

"13. Ques. Referring to said agreement of 16th of April, "1870, proposing to turn over said Florida State bonds, or "their proceeds to the complainant company, as therein "stated, the concluding paragraph of the same is in the following words: 'It is further understood and agreed by the "'parties of the first and second parts, that all the interest "'owned or claimed by said parties of the first part, both "'George W. Swepson and Milton S. Littlefield, or which "'they, as individuals, have a right to control in the said "'Florida railroads, are hereby pledged for the faithful fulfillment of this contract, without the right on the part of "'any party to interfere with our management or control of "'the affairs of the road.' Will you please state, to the best "of your knowledge and recollection, what was the reason "and object of inserting said clause?

"Ans. As soon as it was developed, by the facts shown at "the time of the said conditional settlement, that the money "and assets of the complainant company, to so large an "amount, had been so illegally applied in the purchase of the "said Florida railroads, the Commission claimed the same, "as the property and estate of the complaint company, to the "exclusion of any right of property in said Swepson and Littlefield; but as Swepson and Littlefield claimed that they "had invested some of their individual money in the purchase "of said roads, it was agreed that that interest also, if it existed, should be assigned as part of security for the fulfillment of said additional agreement, which was so done accordingly; and it was also agreed, that the control and man" agement of the roads should not be interfered with pending " the fulfillment of said conditional agreement, for which " reason the words in the concluding clause to that effect were " added, namely: 'Without the right on the part of any party " 'to interfere with our management or control of the affairs of " 'the roads.'

" 14. Ques. Was it, or was it not, the intention of said " clause to create said Swepson and Littlefield, jointly or severally, the agent or agents of the complainant company, in " the management or the direction of the affairs of the said " Florida Central Railroad Company, or Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, as bodies corporate?

Ans. Such was the intention of the said clause; the word " 'company' or 'companies' was not used, or intended to be " used; it was the management of the 'roads,' as properties, " that said Swepson and Littlefield were permitted to control, " and not the exercise of corporate functions, which it was not " in the province of the Commission to delegate, had they " been disposed, and which they did not attempt to do.

" 15. Ques. Was, or was not, said conditional agreement fulfilled, as provided therein?

" Ans. It was not.

" 16. Ques. What other steps were taken, if any, to secure " the return to complainant company of its said money, so " misapplied by said Swepson and Littlefield?

" Ans. The money agreed in said conditional settlement not " being paid, suit was instituted, in the City of New York, in " the month of October, 1870, with the details of which I am " not familiar; and soon thereafter, Mr. Woodfin, as chairman " of Commission, by reason of information obtained, proceeded " to London, where he met said Littlefield and the firm of S. " W. Hopkins & Co., which resulted in a modified agreement " being entered into, on or about the 10th day of November, " 1870, wherein it was agreed that eight hundred thousand " dollars of said Florida State bonds should be turned over to " the commission for the use of the complainant company; " and an order was given by said Littlefield, and accepted by " said Hopkins & Co., on or about the 16th day of November, " 1870, as I am advised and believe to be true. I never saw " said order and acceptance myself, but did see said modified " agreement of 10th November, 1870, and approved the same, " as a member of said commission.

" 17. Ques. Was, or was not, the terms of said modified " agreement of 10th November, 1870, complied with, and the " bonds delivered as therein provided?

" Ans. The said modified agreement was not complied with " in any respect, nor a single one of said bonds delivered to " said Commission, or to the complainant company, so far as I " have any knowledge or belief.

" 18. Ques. What further steps, if any, were taken by the " Commission, or the complainant company, to recover its said " $1,287,000, so far as you know or believe?

" Ans. There were further suits instituted, in the City of " New York and elsewhere, during the years 1871 and 1872, as " I have been advised from information and the inspection of " papers, but I have no personal knowledge thereof, and did " not participate therein. My personal participation ceased " after my approval of the contract made by the chairman of " the Commission, as aforesaid.

" 19. Ques. Do you know, or can you state, any other matter or thing of interest to the parties complainant or defendant, or material to this, your examination, besides what you " have answered, and if yea, please state the same fully and at " large, as if you were particularly interrogated in reference " thereto?

" Ans. Nothing that I now remember.

" W. C. CANDLER."

Such is the testimony of these two of the commissioners who made the settlement of April 16th, 1870.

By the terms and conditions of the settlements of April 16th, and November 10th, 1870, the court will see that the testimony of Rollins and Candler that these settlements were conditional, and made as an attempted compromise, is fully sustained by the writings between the parties. The paper of the 16th of April, made part of Rollins' deposition, after reciting the fraudulent use of the Western Division Company's money, and the proposed mode of payment, says (fol. 1419):

" The said commissioners, in their capacity as commissioners, " by authority of the said act of the Legislature of North Carolina, " * * * * agree and promise to excute and deliver to said

" George W. Swepson a full and final release and discharge, &c., " WHEN the said Swepson shall have executed the said mortgage or " deed of trust, &c., and WHEN the sum of $880,000 of the amount " of $1,287,000 transferred in Florida railroads shall have been " paid or made FULLY SECURE."

The same conditional and provisional character is also preserved in the London paper, of November 10th, 1870, also made part of Rollins' deposition.

It is there provided as follows (fol. 1424):

" Now, WHEN the foregoing undertakings and agreements of " the party of the first part are fully accomplished and performed, " it is to be taken as a full compliance with and final discharge " of the parties of the first part to this contract, as well as all " parties to the first part to the said contract executed at " the City of Washington aforesaid, a copy of which is hereunto " annexed; and this shall operate as a receipt and final dis- " charge thereof, from all obligations growing out of the " same."

It certainly will not be questioned that these papers constitute a conditional settlement and compromise between the parties thereto, and fully sustain the depositions of Rollins and Candler that the settlements were in every respect conditional, and not otherwise.

The testimony so far, certainly shows that the Western Division Company in no manner aided in the sale of bonds. That neither the company nor its agents ever had a bond in their hands to sell, and the further fact that none of the proceeds of said bonds was ever paid to them.

The other two parties to these papers of April 16th and November 10th, 1870, Swepson and Littlefield, were examined, upon notice to all parties. Littlefield testifies (fols. 1429 to 1431) that less than $100,000 was paid to said Commissioners under said settlements; that neither he nor Swepson were, in any manner, constituted the agents of the Western Division Company, by virtue of the settlements aforesaid; that neither the Western Division Company nor any of its agents ever, at any time, assumed the authority to dispose of any of the bonds mentioned in said settlements, within his knowledge that he gave an order for 800 bonds to Woodfin upon Hopkins & Co., who informed him that the bonds, the proceeds of which they had allotted to him, were those numbered above 3,000, "and that no bonds of the State of Florida, numbered above 3,000, were then issued.

And, again, the witness is asked the direct question (No. 88, fol. 1658):

"Did or did not said Woodfin take any part or assume to exer- "cise the right to sell the Florida State bonds referred to in this "action?
"A.-Not to my knowledge."

The deposition of S. W. Hopkins was also taken orally, upon notice to all parties, and, among other things, he was especially interrogated as to the receipt or sale of bonds by said Woodfin, and the order for 800 State bonds given by Littlefield, on the 16th of November, 1870, which it is pretended he aided in the sale of. To these interrogatories the witness answered as follows:

"11. Ques. On or about the 16th day of November, 1870,
"did you acknowledge and accept an order on your house, in "London, drawn by M. S. Littlefield, President, in favor of "one N. W. Woodfin, a commission on the part of the State of "North Carolina, representative of the complainant?
"Ans. Yes.
"12. Ques. Have you a copy of said order?
"Ans. I have.
"13. Ques. Will you produce the same as part of your ex"amination?
"Ans. I will produce the original, or a true copy thereof.
"14. Ques. Do you remember the number of the bonds "called for in said order, and if you do, please state the "same?
"Ans. The number was 800 bonds, of $1,000 each, to be held
"subject to the order of the party in whose favor the order "was drawn.
"15. Ques. Did you appropriate any particular portion of " said bonds to meet said order, and if you did, please state

" what portion of the bonds they were?

" Ans. We fixed upon 800 bonds out of the 1,000 bonds " which were to come into our hands, numbering from 3001 to " 4000, inclusive.

" 16. Ques. Did said bonds ever come into your hands, and " if yea, did you ever deliver the same, according to said " order?

" Ans. They came into our hands, but we never delivered the " bonds under said order.

" 17. Ques. Please state what became of said bonds, according " to your recollection, and where they are now, if you have " any knowledge of the subject?

" Ans. 800 of them were placed in the hands of the Receiver
" of the Supreme Court of the State of New York, for the City " and County of New York; the other 200 bonds were delivered " to the representative of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and " Mobile Railroad Company.

" 18. Ques. Do you know what became of the said 1,000
" bonds, and to what purpose they were applied?

" Ans. 568 of the bonds are now tied up in chancery, in " England; 224 were sent back to the State of Florida and " canceled, and the remainder went into the possession of " John Collinson, of London, England, under an agreement by " which he, Collinson, agreed to furnish money to pay the then " maturing interest on certain of the Florida State bonds which " had previously been negotiated. I have given the figures as " near as I remember them.

" 19. Ques. Did your firm sell any of the said 1,000 bonds, " numbered from 3001 to 4000, inclusive?

" Ans. We did not.

" 20. Ques. Do you know, or can you state, any other matter " or thing material to this, your examination, of benefit to " either party, beyond what you have been interrogated to, and " if so, please state the same?

" Ans. No, sir.

"S. W. Hopkins."

The defendants Schutte et al. placed in evidence an affidavit of this same witness, Hopkins, made in a case in which the Western Division Company was plaintiff, and Hopkins & Co.

were defendant, as early as the 28th of June, 1871, respecting these same bonds, wherein he fully corroborates his testimony given above. as follows (fols. 22, 32):

> " And deponent says that the sale of the Florida bonds mentioned in the 32d folio of the affidavit of the said Woodfin " afterwards fell through and was never completed, and in confirmation thereof, deponent referees to a letter dated London, " 27th day of March, 1871, signed George Richardson, in the " possession of deponent and ready to be produced if required, " and he says that the fact that said sale had fallen through was " well known to the said Woodfin when he made his affidavit.
> " And deponent further says that the £10,000 sterling referred to in folios 44 and 45 of the affidavit of said Woodfin, " was what it purported to be, an advance, and not a payment."

Upon the foregoing, which we believe includes all that is material or competent in the record upon this topic, we respectfully submit that it is conclusively shown that neither the Florida Central Company, nor the Western Division Company either aided or acquiesced in the issue or sale of said bonds. The testimony shows that said commissioners appointed under the Act of March 24, 1870, tried, in good faith, to secure the restoration of the fraudulently appropriated funds of the Western Division Company, and that all their steps were taken in that behalf legitimately and properly.

Before leaving this branch of the subject it is proper that we should call the attention of this court to another manifest oversight of the court below. It sets out one of the papers of April 16, 1870, which is rather a memorandum of the means of of settlement, than the terms of the settlement itself. The court will see (deposition of Rollins, ans. 15, fol. 1410) the following:

> " The result of said conditional settlement was reduced to writing in two papers of even date, viz., April 16, 1870, signed by " the parties as interested therein, the original of which I now " present for inspection and comparison, but business reasons, " I furnish copies thereof, and make the same part of my answer marked W. W. R., No. 1, and W. W. R., No 2, respectively."

These papers will be found at folios 1417 to 1422. No. 2 is inserted in the opinion at length, but No. 1, which contains the condition above recited, is totally omitted, and no allusion made to it. This accounts for the impossibility encountered by the court in considering this subject. It had overlooked the paper containing the condition or reservation.

In support of the XVIIth and XVIIIth assignments of error we contend that when the court found that the stock of the Florida Central Company, and the Pensacola and Georgia, and Tallahassee railroads (the latter two now known as the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile road) it should have then granted to this appellant the relief prayed in the bills.

In this respect the case at bar comes within the doctrine of Cook vs. Tullis (18 Wall., 431), cited early in the argument. The doctrine is elementary that a cestui que trust can follow his property, when fraudulently appropriated and invested by his Trustee, and repossess it wherever he can find it or its proceeds and identify them.

Perry on Trusts, sec. 831, 217.

Under XIXth, XXth, XXIst, and XXIId assignments of error, we contend that the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company has not, and never had any title to ths Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads now operated under its name; that they were paid for with the funds of the Western Division Company when sold by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, as found by the court below; and that title to them having been conveyed to Swepson, in trust, to secure the repayment of the Western Division's funds so, remains in him to this day.

There is not a shred of documentary title in the case to the contrary, and the assumption of the court that the incorporation of Dibble and associates into the new Tallahassee Company by the charter of June 24, 1879, wrought a conveyance to that company, would seem to be thoroughly exploded by the record (fols. 3608–9, infra), where it is shown that Swepson, in whom both the legal and equitable title were at the time, was not one of "Dibble and associates," and that he did not have a share of the stock of either the new Tallahassee Company or the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company.

No covenant for possession is reserved in the deed of Dibble and associates to Swepson, of April 22, 1869, and hence we say that both the legal and equitable title were in him. How, therefore, could the incorporation of "Dibble and associates," of whom Swepson was not one, work a conveyance of these roads out of him and into this new company? Is it either rational or just to assume, as the court did, that a responsible man, as Swepson was at the time, would suffer himself to be divested of his title, without first having the $960,300 which he advanced for Dibble and associates, and the $472,065, which he assumed or guaranteed for them, repaid?

But this assumption is not only made without any evidence even tending to sustain it, but in the teeth of the unimpeached and uncontradicted oath of Swepson to the contrary (fols. 1455 to 1458).

The Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company could not to-day eject a trespasser upon its premises, for want of a proper title. Were any one to erect a building upon the ground the company occupies, it could not assert sufficient title to expel the intruder. To get such a title would require a bill in equity to divest the title of Swepson. And will any one say that such relief would be granted by any court of equity without paying the $960,300 and interest, which the legal title he holds was conveyed to him to secure?

Besides this the court must observe that because of Swepson's citizenship he is not a party to this suit, though deeply interested in it, and the more so because the 8th paragraph of the decree in favor of Schutte et al. allows them to sue Swepson for any deficiency that may exist after the exhaustion of the property of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile to its road and rolling stock. Surely it will not be contended that Swepson can be divested of his title to the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads without the payment of the money he held the title to those roads to secure.

Be his errors and breaches of trust what they may, he is not to be wholly outlawed, and denied his legal and constitutional rights, without a hearing.

By the XXIVth assignment of error, we contend that the court erred in holding that any conveyance was executed by Dibble and associates to the new Tallahassee Company or the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, conveying the Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee roads. This question has been considered in another part of our argument, and will not be repeated here.

We said then, and again say, that no such deed ever was executed or delivered, and prove that we are correct by presenting the pretended and incomplete execution of the alleged deed to the court, the reading and inspection of which ends the question.

Besides the deed being unexecuted and not acknowledged, it never was delivered to either company, and is not alleged or claimed in the bill of Schutte et al as a basis of title, nor do they introduce it into the record.

The Western Division Company found the paper in the possession of one of those whose name is appended to it, and set it up in its answer to the Schutte bill (fols. 589–90), to show the negative fact that no such conveyance ever had been made. This was in answer to the Vth paragraph of the Schutte bill, which alleges that "Afterward the said Tallahassee Railroad Company and "said Dibble and associates, conveyed the said railroads to the "Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, of which "Geo. W. Swepson and Milton S. Littlefield owned nearly "the entire stock," and does not even allege that Dibble and associates ever made any conveyance to the Tallahassee Company at all.

The proof shows that not only was no such conveyance made as found by the court, but that no such conveyance is alleged in the bill. The finding of the court, therefore, is utterly without either allegation or proof to warrant or sustain it, and must be reversed and set aside.

There is no attempt made to prove the alleged conveyance by the Tallahassee Company and by Dibble and associates to the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, and the allegation that Swepson owned nearly all the stock, "is equally without any proof even tending to show it, whilst the contrary has just been conclusively shown by the record (fols. 3608–9), where it has been seen that Swepson was not a party to the organization of either company, and did not own a share of stock in either."

The XXVth and XXVIth assignments have been sufficiently considered in the argument of the XXIIId, and we will only add that the issue of the stock and bonds was not made as provided in the agreement of March 26, 1869, and the trust deed of April 22, 1869 (fols. 113–114), as assumed by the court. There is no allegation in the bill of Schutte et al. that such was done, or that Swepson in any manner received his pay; and no proof to suport such an allegation if were made, whilst the contrary is shown most positively by Mr. Swepson and the record facts.

The truth is, as shown by the record, that the passage of the Act of the Legislature of North Carolina, of March 24, 1870, creating the commission and calling on Swepson for a settlement, terminated all his proceedings; and from that time forward he did all in his power to consummate said settlement of the 16th of April, 1870, and secure to the Western Division Company its assets which he had misappropriated.

Under the XXVIIth assignment we show that the court erred in finding that the President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company ever certified upon oath that any portion of the road was completed and in running order, as positively required by the 2d section of the Act of January 28th, 1870.

This is proven by the alleged certificate (fols 1671–2), which was never completed by the oath of the President, and by the testimony of Littlefield, (fols 1648–9).

“Q. 54. Will you please produce the said original paper,
“ and make the same a part of your deposition?

“ A. I do produce the same, and it is marked ‘L, No. 10.’

“ Q. 55. Now, please state the origin, why and for what pur“ pose, and by authority of what law, if any, said paper ‘L,
“ ‘No. 10,’ to which you have just testified, was prepared?

“ A. It is a paper presented by Harrison Reed, then Gov“ ernor of the State of Florida, for me to sign and swear to, on “ or about the 6th day of June, 1870; it was intended to be “ the authority of said Governor to exchange bonds with said “ company under section 2 of ‘An Act to alter and amend an “ ‘Act entitled “An Act to perfect the public works of the “ “State” (of Florida), ‘approved June 24, 1869,’ said amen“ datory act was approved January 28, 1870.

" Q. 56. By the terms of second section of said act 'the " 'Governor of the State is hereby directed to deliver to the " 'President of said company, coupon bonds of the State to " 'the amount of $16,000 for the whole line of road and length " 'of railroad owned by or belonging to said Jacksonville,
" 'Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, in exchange for " 'first mortgage bonds of said railroad company, when the " 'President thereof shall certify upon his oath that the road,
" 'or parts of road to which he asks for exchange of bonds, is " 'completed, and is in good running order.' Will you please
" state whether or not you ever made, signed, or certified on " oath to any such certificate as described in said act, and de" livered the same to the Governor of Florida?

" A. I never did.

" Q. 57. Do you remember, and, if yea, please state who " placed the original of said paper, 'L, No. 10,' in your hands,
" and whether there was any change or alteration made there-
" in, and if so, by whom?

" A. The paper was prepared by J. P. Sanderson, and by " him delivered to said Harrison Reed, Governor, requesting " me to swear to the same, and deliver it back to him, which " I declined to do, for the reason that in the original were these " words: 'Do certify that one hundred and fifty-nine miles of " 'road of said company, is that for which, under said section,
" 'I ask for an exchange of bonds.' This sentence was changed
" when handed to me by said Governor, so as to read: 'Do cer" 'tify that one hundred and eighty-eight miles of road of said " 'company is that for which, under said section, I ask for an " 'exchange of bonds,' and, declining to make such oath, as " stated, I retained said original paper in my possession, and " make the same part of this my examination.

" Q. 58. Subsequent to the date of said paper, 'L, No. 10,'
" and the exchange of the said $3,000,000 of bonds of the State
" of Florida, did or did not the Governor of said State further " request you to execute the said paper, or give a receipt for
" the said $3,000,000 of bonds, and the further amount of " $1,000,000 of bonds, and if yea, please state what you did in " reference thereto?

" A. Referring to a memorandum in the handwriting of " Harrison Reed, Governor, under date of May 22, 1871, he " called upon me to 'give a receipt for $3,000,000 and $1,000,000

"'railroad bonds, and return coupons to July,' referring to "another memorandum, also in the handwriting of said Har"rison Reed, Governor, he requesed me to 'forward receipt "'for $3,000,000 and $1,000,000 railroad bonds, and send stamp
"'for railroad bonds in treasury;' for the same reason stated
"above, I declined to execute and forward the receipt."

The XXVIIIth assignment has been anticipated in the preceding portion of our argument. We contend that the lien created in favor of the State by the 3d section of the Act of June 28, 1870, is of no higher dignity, or of any greater force or notoriety, than the 6th section of the Act of June 24, 1869, incorporating the new Tallahassee Company, reserving a lien in favor of Swepson, as the assignee of Dibble and associates, named in said act; and that if the former was notice of the lien of the State, the latter was equally good notice of the prior lien existing in favor of Swepson, created by Dibble and associates, no matter who held it. The statute was notice to all the world that such lien existed, and that is all that was required.

The XXIXth, XXXth, and XXXIst assignments of error have also been covered by the previous part of our argument. We contend that there is no sufficient allegation in the bill of Schutte et al., that the Commissioners, under the Act of March 24, 1870, took any part in the sale of said bonds of the State, and that there is no proof to support the allegation if made.

The only evidence on that subject is derived from the reswearing of Hopkins by Schutte et al., after he had been examined on notice by the Western Division Company, and the testimony of Collins, taken under the New York Commission on the eve of the trial (fols. 2670 to 3022), which are under our motion to suppress, for reasons apparent on their face, which will be considered in a separate presentation.

The portion of the testimony referring to Mr. Woodfin while in London is at fols. 2689 to 2695, and it is upon its face fabricated testimony, giving statements not called for in the questions, and attempting to prove what Woodfin and others did not do. It attempts to state that Woodfin did all he could to sell bonds, but does not say what he did do. And this, too, in the face of the previous testimony of Hopkins, that Woodfin never saw or received a bond—that the bonds he "set apart" for Woodfin were numbered above 3,000, which bonds we have seen were in Florida until Coddington spirited them out on January 11, 1871, whereas Woodfin returned from London to the United States in November, 1870. He never could have helped to sell any such bonds. This finding should be reversed, therefore, as having neither allegations nor proof to sustain it.

Under the XXXIInd assignment we contend that the court erred in finding that the settlements of April 16th and November 10th, 1870, were not conditional settlements, and branding the claim that they were as a "new thought, the result of new light."

This assignment, also, has been anticipated in a preceding portion of our argument to, which we refer; and especially to the papers themselves, which were made part of the pleadings, and which show upon their face that they were and are all conditional or compromise settlements.

Indeed, the whole case on the part of the Western Division Company is one of repeated compromises:

1st. That of April 16, 1870.
2d. That of November 10, 1870.
3d. The compromise decree of December 26, 1872.
4th. The compromise decree of January 18, 1873.

But none of these arrangements being complied with, all fell to the ground.

The XXXIIIrd assignment of error has been fully covered, as we maintain by the argument.

Under the XXXIVth, XXXVth and XXXVIth assignments we contend that the issue of any bonds by the Florida Central Company, of the description involved in this suit, was ultra vires, and that the State bonds, being on their face dedicated by the statute to the building of the road of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company west of Quincy, could not, in any event, become the property of the Western Division Company, or constitute a consideration for the said compromise settlements, even had the act attempting to authorize them not been declared unconstitutional and void. Having elaborated these propositions elsewhere in our argument, we will not repeat them here.

By the XXXVIIth assignment of error we contend that there was no proof to justify the finding of the court that the Western Division Company received any of the proceeds of the Florida State bonds. The testimony of Rollins and Candler is to the contrary. And we have seen that Hopkins, upon whose testimony the finding must have been based, swears positively to the contrary in the suit of the Western Division Company, before the Supreme Court of New York, on the 28th day of June, 1871 (fol. 2232).

In that suit, the witness, Hopkins, swore that the State bonds of the Western Division Company was to have had the proceeds (those numbered above 3,000) were never sold, and hence no proceeds were ever derived from them; and that the £10,000 was not a payment, but an "advance," as the draft for the money purported to be upon its face. And this is the only proof on the subject.

By the XXXVIIIth assignment, we contend that the court below erred in finding that the parties called Dutch bondholders had no notice of the fraudulent, illegal, and unconstitutional character of the State bonds sued on in this case.

As against this finding, we contend that full, ample, and legal notice was given and received by the parties who were dealing in said bonds in London, Amsterdam and Rotterdam; that they had such notice as to put them upon inquiry and investigation; that, before the bonds were sold, such inquiry was made, and the purchasers chose to be governed by such information as they got, while, as a matter of law, they were bound by such knowledge as they could have gotten, and did get, but preferred to disregard.

In pursuing this subject we shall avoid comment as much as possible, and simply present the facts.

Notice was given and received as follows:

1st. The State bonds bear upon their face the endorsement "issued in accordance with the Act of the Legislature of Florida, January 28, 1870" (fol. 3693), which gave notice to all parties as to the statute under which they were issued.

2d. The said Act of January 28, 1870, being declared null and void, was, at all times, notice to all persons that it was null and void. And for the purposes of this suit, as we understand the law, as expounded by this court, all unconstitutional and void laws proclaim their own inherent worthlessness.

United States vs. Macon, 9 Otto, supra.

But there was other notice given of the unconstitutional, void, fraudulent, and criminal character of this Florida legislation of 1869 and 1870, in the matter of creating and circulating bonds of the State of Florida, and of these in their order.

3d. No sooner had the Act of June 24, 1869, incorporating the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, become a law than it was assailed and published to the world as passed by fraud, and had been feloniously altered between the legislative hall and the executive chamber. This lod to the indictment of Littlefield and others as to this change in said law.

4th. That to restrain the execution of that fraudulent and void act a bill in equity was filed in Leon County, Florida, by George W. Scott, Joseph Williams et al., against Gov. Reed and others, charging fraud, bribery, and forgery in the passage of said law, (fol 910).

That a motion for injunction was made and granted, restraining the issue of any bonds under said corrupt and fraudulent Act of June 24, 1869, in words and figures as follows (fol. 946).:

“ George W. Scott, and Joseph “ John Williams, “ Complainants

“ notice of said motion had been served on defendant Reed, a “ writ of injunction is awarded the complainants to enjoin the “ ing, signing, and sealing, and from causing to be issued,

“ ing or permitting to be delivered, any such bonds to the “ Company, or to any other person, and restraining the 947 “ defendant Conover, from countersigning or causing to “ be countersigned such bonds, and restraining who“ ever is or may be President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, “ and Mobile Railroad Company from receiving any of the “ said bonds, or if received, from negotiating the same until the “ further orders of this court.

“ (Endorsed:) Order in Scott Case. J. Fred Schutte et als.
“ vs. West'n Div. West'n N. C. R. R. Co. et als. Exhibit H
“ to answer of trustees internal improvement fund.”

No answer was made to this bill by the Governor, or other parties enjoined, and decree pro confesso was duly entered, and together with the injunction was in full force during the year 1870, and has since remained in full force and effect. This injunction and decree were notice of the fraudulent character of said Act of June 24th, 1869.

5th. Upon the passage of the Act of January 28, 1870, and the proposed exchange of bonds thereunder, and before said bonds were sold in the market, said act and the bonds to be issued thereunder, were declared to be unconstitutional and void, and repeated publications made to that effect. Among these was a publication in the New York World, June 10, 1870, copied generally in the press of the country, (fols. 1536 to 1560).

6th. An editorial in the World, June 18, 1870, (fols. 1540–1.)

The deposition of Thomas E. Wilson, proves that the World had then an office in London, and circulated generally in Europe.

The effect of this publication was such,that none of the Florida State bonds could be sold in the American stock market (see deposition of Chapman, of the firm of Hopkins & Co., fol. 1542), which is as follows:

"Q. 9. What, if anything, within your knowledge caused "said bonds to be sold at such a reduced price as, say, of about "five hundred dollars for each one thousand dollar bond, and "when and in what manner were said purchases and sales "made; please state fully the facts as they occurred?

"A. When the said bonds were first brought to the firm for "sale, they expected to get a good market price for them, as "they were eight per cent. gold bonds of a State, but before "any of them were placed upon the market the newspapers of "the State of Florida and of the City of New York charged "that the issue of said bonds was fraudulent, illegal, and void; "in consequence of these publications and the fact that it was "charged that the law authorizing the issue of said bonds was "unconstitutional and void, it was not in their power to put "them on the market at the price they originally expected; "there were verbal reports of the illegal and fraudulent char-"acter of the bonds in circulation before the publications I "have mentioned, and these rumors were afloat as early as "June in the year eighteen hundred and seventy, but before "this time the firm had given credit on the faith of the bonds, "and they were forced to sell them at some price to protect "themselves; the attention of M. S. Littlefield, the President "of said company, was called to these rumors and publica-"tions, and requested that they be allowed to take the bonds "to account at a reduced price of fifty per cent. or less, so as "to be able to hold out special inducements for parties to buy "them, as the only way to make a sale of them at all. Their "proposition to said Littlefield was acceded to by him for the "company, and the bonds were taken to account at one hun-"dred pounds per bond, and afterwards disposed of through "John Collinson, in London, at or about one hundred and "thirty-eight pounds, ten shillings and one pence per bond.

"Q. 10. About what time did your firm make the offer to "take said bonds at fifty per cent. or less, and at what time "were your propositions agreed to, if at all, and if the proposi-"tion or acceptance, or either of them, was in writing, please "produce such writing and make the same a part of your an-"swer to this interrogatory?

"A. Letters were addressed to M. S. Littlefield, as Presi-"dent of said company, under dates of June 16th and 17th, "1870, which I will produce and make part of my answer to "this interrogatory; his acceptance was subsequent, and "made in London, November 14th, 1870, which I also produce "as part of this answer, and also the acceptance of said firm "under date of November 28th, 1870, which I also make a part "of this answer (marked respectively Exhibits C, D, E, and "F).

"Q. 11. Who, if any one, to your knowledge or information, "besides your firm and said John Collinson, were interested in "the sale and purchase of said bonds, at the reduced prices "you have named?

"A. Certain parties in Amsterdam, Holland.

"Q. 12. Please give the dates of the first and last sale of "said bonds, if you can?

"The first real sale of said bonds was made on or about the "19th day of November, 1870, and the last on or about July "31st, 1871."

7th. Under these circumstances the bonds get to London, to the house of Hopkins & Co., and Collinson, who make the combinations with Boissevain, Milders, Zaddock, Stoop, Mangay, and others in Amsterdam and Rotterdam.

The bill of the Western Division Company charges (fol. 86) that Collinson, Hopkins & Co., and the Dutch parties in Holland, all worked together, and that whatever knowledge one had was the knowledge of all. These allegations are not denied by the answer of Schutte et al., but are really proven by their witness, H. L. Pierce (fol. 2027), who, when asked who were engaged in speculating in said bonds, replied:

"Collinson, Hopkins & Co., Boissevain, Milders, Zaddock, Stoop, "Mangay and others were jointly and personally interested in said "speculation in bonds."

The testimony of this witness is fully corroborated by the following facts shown by the records:

(a.) That on the 4th day of May, 1870, Littlefield, as president of Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, appointed Hopkins & Co. agents of said company to sell said State bonds (fol. 3911). Note.—This was before the consolidation of the Tallahassee and Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Companies.

(b.) On the 17th of November, 1870, Hopkins & Co. appointed Collinson, of London, a sub-agent to sell and dispose of the same bonds in European markets, with power to appoint other sub-agents:

"58 OLD BROAD STREET,
"LONDON, E. C., Nov. 17, 1870.

"JOHN COLLINSON, Esq.:

"Dear Sir,—Agreeable with contract, dated November 14, "1870, you are hereby authorized to appoint and arrange with "such bankers and brokers as you may deem it advisable, to "invite subscriptions for Florida State 8 per cent. loan of four "million dollars.

"We remain, dear sir,
"Your most obedient servants,
"S. W. HOPKINS & Co."

By this appointment Collinson was constituted an agent of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company.

(c.) On the 17th of November, 1870, John Collinson, in the exercise of the power vested in him by the appointment from Hopkins & Co., repeated the same to Messrs. Holje & Boissvain, and A. T. & M. Milders, of Amsterdam and Rotterdam, as follows:

"50 OLD BROAD STREET,
"LONDON, November 17, 1870.

"JOHN COLLINSON, Esq.:

"Dear Sir,—Agreeable with contract, dated November 14, "1870, you are hereby authorized to appoint and arrange with "such bankers and brokers as you may deem it advisable to "invite subscriptions for Florida State 8 per cent. loan of four "millions of dollars.

"We remain, dear sir,
"Your obedient servant,
"(Signed,) S. W. HOPKINS & Co."

"To Messrs. HOLJE & BOISSEVAIN and A. T & M. MILDERS:

"In accordance with the authority of which the above is a "true copy, I hereby nominate you to bring out for subscrip- "tion the said loan in Holland.

"(Signed,) JOHN COLLINSON."

(d.) On the 28th of November, 1870, Littlefield, as President of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, addressed to Collinson a letter confirmatory of the agency and power of Hopkins & Co., to appoint Collinson agent, as follows:

"London, November 28, 1870.

"John Collinson, Esq., London—Florida State Bonds:

"Sir,—In accordance with request, I hereby state that "Messrs. Hopkins & Co., of 50 Old Broad street, London, "possess full authority to sell or otherwise dispose of the "$4,000,000 Eight per cent. Gold Bonds of the State of "Florida, issued to the Jacksonville, Pensacola, & Mobile "Railroad Company, and that any agreement entered into by "the said S. W. Hopkins & Co., for the sale of these bonds, "will be binding on the above mentioned railroad company.

"Believe me, sir, yours obediently,

"(Signed) "M. S. Littlefield,

"[SEAL J., P. & M. R. R. CO.] "Pres. J. P. & M. R. R. Co."

(e) And on the 19th of December, 1870, Collinson enlarged the powers of Messrs. Holje & Boissevain, as follows:

"9 Victoria Chambers,
"Victoria Street, Westminister, London,
"19th December, 1870.

"Messrs. Holje & Boissevain, for the Dutch Consortion,
"Florida State Loan:

"Gentlemen,—Referring to the enclosed letter from S. W. "Hopkins & Co., dated December the 16th, I hereby authorize "you to open subscriptions for these bonds in Holland during "the present week, closing the same on or before Saturday, "the 24th inst.

"Believe me, gentlemen, yours truly,

"(Signed) "John Collinson.

"Endorsed on back Exhibit, G. M. B. No. 7, referred to in "the evidence of G. M. Boissevain.

"D. Eckstein, Commissioner."

By these several appointments it is clearly shown to the court that in the very beginning of the negotiation—November, 1870—and before a bond was sold, a regular combination of agency and sub-agency was created between Hopkins & Co., Collinson, Holje & Boissevain and A. J. & M. Milders, in the United States, England, and Holland, for the sale of these bonds, which at that time had been denounced as unconstitutional, void, and fraudulent. These papers also show that the said parties were each and all acting as the agents of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company.

Can it be doubted, then, that they made known among themselves, to each, all the knowledge possessed by the others? That this information as to the fraudulent, unconstitutional and void character of the said State was given, circulated, and received by all these parties, is not left in doubt, as the record shows.

8th. Whilst the matters above stated were transpiring, the publications of the press, and the writing of notices and warnings from various sources were kept up; and the fact that said bonds were declared void was becoming wide spread. To meet this situation became a necessity. Therefore the opinion of J. P. Benjamin and others was sought. On this subject Frank H. Collins, of the firm of Hopkins & Co., a witness, on the part of Schutte et al., in answer to 10th cross-interrogatory (fol. 2708), testifies as follows:

> "It is my impression that the opinion of eminent counsel
> " in England was obtained as to the constitutionality of the said > " Florida State bonds, and it is my impression that J. P. Benja> " min, Queen's counsel, gave an adverse opinion as to the VALIDITY
> " of said bonds, while De Tracey Gould, an eminent counsel in > " London, maintained that the bonds were constitutional.
> " After said opinions were given, said Collinson insisted upon and > " obtained from our firm a modified contract or agreement, which > " was executed on the 28th December, 1870, of which a copy annexed
> " to the cross-interrogatories, and marked A, I believe to be correct."

By reference to this modified contract, testified to by the witness Collins (fols. 2838 to 2841), the court will see that it was made a sort of wager as to whether the State bonds were or were not unconstitutional, whereby a given sum of money was to be placed with Drake, Kleinwort, & Cohen, bankers, to abide the result of an application to be made to the Supreme Court of Florida, for its opinion as to the constitutionality of the said bonds; and in the event the opinion was that the bonds were valid, the money should go to Hopkins & Co., but if the opinion should be that the bonds were illegal and void, then the money should go to Collinson.

Upon the signing of this contract, Mr. Collins, connected with the firm of Hopkins & Co., was sent from Europe to Florida to obtain the stipulated opinion of the Supreme Court of Florida, and other officials of that State, which were to determine the effect of this wager contract. Up to this time only 480 bonds had been sold, and all sales were suspended until this messenger should report, or cause to be reported, the opinion of the court.

But, again:

The witness Collins being asked by the 10th cross-interrogatory (for the court will see that all these facts are developed by the cross-interrogatories, and none of them by the direct-examination), as to the character and source of the information which gave rise to the taking of the opinion of the Supreme Court of Florida as to the validity of said bonds, and whether such information was public or private, says:

> "I suppose all the information was accessible to everbody; "our firm had no information that was not accessible to every-"body; I cannot now put my hands on any of the printed or "published statements, as the time when they were circulated "is so remote."

That this information was "accessible to everybody," and was known to those dealing and speculating in the State bonds, in Holland, is proved by the fact, as alleged in the bill of the Western Division Company (fols. 598–9), and is nowhere contradicted, the Dutchmen, through Boissevain, on the 18th day of December, 1870, telegraphed to Governor Reed, as follows (fols. 598–9):

> "Being negotiating four millions bonds issued by your State to "the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad, beg to know, by "telegraph from you, whether provision made for payment of in-"interest; whatever result of railroad traffic; financial position "of State really sound, and bonds undoubted security.
>
> "BOISSEVAIN."

To this despatch Governor Reed replied as follows:

> "Bonds recently recalled by the company; no provision will "therefore be made for interest.
>
> "REED,
>
> "Governor."

Fols. 598–9.

The court has seen by the deposition of Chapman (supra), as also by the written proposition of Littlefield, of the 14th of Nov., 1870, as follows:

"58 Old Broad Street,
"London, Nov. 14th, 1870.

"Messrs. S. W. Hopkins & Co.,
"London:

"Gentlemen,—I herewith offer you four thousand (4,000) "Florida State 8 per cent. gold bonds, in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company, for one thousand ($1,000) dollars, gold, each, at the price of one hundred "(£100) pounds sterling for each bond, in the City of London, "subject to the commission agreed as per contract dated 13th "day of April, 1870, with your good selves.

"I remain, gentlemen, yours faithfully,

(Signed) "M. S. Littlefield,
"Pres. J., P. & M. R. R. Co.
"Jacksonville, P. M. & M. R. R. Co."

The witness Littlefield, being asked why the bonds were sold at such a low rate, testified as follows:

"Q. 67. You have stated that you contracted to dispose of "said bonds for Florida State bonds at the price of only £100 "sterling for each $1,000 bond; do you, or do you not know, "and if yea, please state what reason, if any, caused you to "contract to sell said bonds at such reduced price—please "state in detail the facts as they occurred within your knowledge?

"A. I do know the reason; they were many, but principally "because of the damaging statement in relation to the issue of "said bonds which appeared in the public press of the State "of Florida, in the City of New York, and other places, which "papers were sent to London, England, Amsterdam, Holland, "Frankfort, Germany, thus rendering it impossible to sell the "bonds in open market at any price whatever. The only way "they could be converted into money was by placing them in "the hands and under the control of a syndicate formed for "the purpose of floating securities, and then we had to accept "just such terms as they proposed; before I accepted the "proposition, I tried to dispose of the bonds in open market, "and a private negotiation in London, England, in Brussels, "in Berlin, in Frankfort, and Vienna in person, and through "correspondence in Paris and in Holland; the damaging re-"ports in relation to the said Florida State bonds had pre-"ceded me at every place I went, and finally I was compelled "to accept the reduced offer from the necessities of the com-"pany at home; the company was extending its road west-"ward from Quincy and was greatly in need of money to pay "for material and iron and to pay employees upon, of which "there was a large number of men clamoring for their pay."

The enormous speculation which the so-called Dutch bondholders and operators saw in these State bonds at these rates only awaited the result of the wager contract of December 28, 1870, and the report of the special messenger, Collins, who had been sent to Florida, and the answer to the Boissevain telegram, to make up their minds how to act. The selling of bonds in Holland stood still, therefore, from the 29th of December, 1870, until the 20th of February, 1871 (see report of sales, Exhibit H, to Collins' and Hopkins' depositions, fol. 2859).

But whilst these matters were so actively carried on in Holland, there was no less activity in Florida. Persons deeply interested in the railroads, but not interested in the swindle, continued their efforts to notify the world not to deal in these fraudulent bonds, and ascertaining by the telegrams between the Governor and Boissevain, and also the mission of Collins to Florida, E. M. L'Engle, on behalf of himself and the Florida Central Company, on the 8th day of February, 1871, addressed to the Dutch Syndicate, the Messrs. Holje & Boissevain, an elabroate communication (fols. 314 to 326), in which the fraudulent and illegal character of the whole of said bond issue is fully exposed.

The receipt of this communication in Amsterdam is admitted by the Dutch agents, through Boissevain (fol. 3856), who referred it to their co-agents in London, Collinson and Hopkins & Co., and were by them advised that Mr. L'Engle's information was a "blackmailing letter," and was contradicted by the "Governor of Florida's declaration of the 26th" of February, 1871.

About the 17th of February, 1871, Collins, who had been sent to Floride to get the opinion of the Supreme Court as to the constitutionalty of said bonds, the sale of which was suspended meantime, caused the good news to reach the speculators that the Supreme Court had decided the bonds consitutional (fols. 3939 to 3955), and that, consequently, the wager contract of the 28th of December, 1871, was determined in favor of the State bonds.

These announcements were first made by telegraph to Holland and London (fol. 3947), and afterward followed up by an elaborate and significant official letter (fols. 3951–2) from the Governor, Treasurer, and Secretary of State of Florida, which shows that the constitutionalty and character of said bonds were very fully inquired into by and reported to the "Dutch bondholders."

Upon receipt of this information the sale of bonds was again resumed, to stimulate which, an assuring communication from the Dutch speculators in Amsterdam was published in their daily papers, as follows:

" Advertisement published in Amsterdamsch Effedenblad, No.
" 23, dated 23 February, 1871; in Nieuw Algemeen Effedenblad,
" No. 16, dated 24 February, 1871, and other papers.

" UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,

" 8 per cent. Florida Loan.

" The undersigned have the honor to advertise that, in con" sequence of some difficulties occurred lately in some of the " States of the United States of America regarding the posi" tion of loan issued in behalf of railroads or other public " works, and desiring to give full security regarding the 8 per " cent. Florida Bonds which they issued the holders of the " same, they decided to have the questions regarding this loan
" submitted to the Supreme Court of Florida, acting therein
" according to advice of legal and other authorities in the " matter of American law and legislation; and they now have " much pleasure in stating that it appears, from cable messages

" now at hand, that the Supreme Court have unanimously
" given their decision that said loan is a constitutional State " loan.

" Amsterdam, }
" Rotterdam. } 20th February, 1871.

" HOLJE & BOISSEVAIN.
" A. J. & M. MILDERS."

On the day of the publication of this notice (Feb. 20, 1871), the sale of said bonds was resumed (see fol. 2859), and was vigorously pushed until 2,800 bonds were sold. But, is it possible, in the face of these demonstrated facts, for anyone to believe that any of these bonds were sold or purchased without notice?

Besides the abundant evidence of notice above given, in the most authentic and conclusive form, there is yet other testimony upon the same topic, showing how general and universal the notice of the illegal and fraudulent character of these bonds was among those dealing in such securities in England and Holland.

The witness, L. P. Bayne, testifies (fol. 1499) as follows:

"A. I did have occasion, and was compelled to deal with " some of said bonds while in Europe; I found their " standing in the market was very bad, because of a general " impression that they were not legally issued and would not " be paid by the State of Florida; this impression and current " opinion, I perceive, was founded on the same reports of fraud " and illegality which had assailed them in New York, and that, " in order to meet these reports, a portion of the bonds had to " be used to pay the interest on the others before they were " sold, so as to hold them up in the market; these charges of " fraud and illegality emanated from statements written and " published by parties in the railroad interest in the State of " Florida; also by some of the officials that no provision for " payment would be made of interest; these rumors and " reports were very numerous.

"Q. 9. State who at that time had the control of the negoti" ation of said bonds in London and Amsterdam, as far as you " know?

"A. In London they were controlled by S. W. Hopkins &

"Co., and John Collinson; in Amsterdam, as I was informed, "by one Boissievain and others."

The witness Aaron Barnett, on the same subject (fols. 1708–9), as follows:

"22. Q. At the time of the issue and sale of bonds to which "you have referred to, Mr. Barnett, was there not any question "raised about the legality and validity of the same?

"A. I so heard frequently.

"23. Q. To what extent did you hear it alleged and stated "that said bonds were illegal, and on what grounds?

"A. Mr. Collins, the old gentleman, representing S. W. "Hopkins & Co., passing through Savannah, Georgia, stopped "at my office in such place, and told me that the bonds could not "be sold or negotiated, as they are pronounced by some parties "in Holland as an illegal issue, and for that reason was going "to Florida, and for that reason asked me to go with him; "whether I went with him or not I do not remember, but he "stated that it was necessary to get some decision, I believe "to be from the highest court in Florida, to legalize the issue "of the bonds.

* * * * * * *

"31 Q. Did you not yourself, subsequent to giving these "notices, visit Europe in reference in part to the use being "made of the issue of said Florida State bonds?

"A. Yes, sir.

"32 Q. What part?

"A. England and Holland.

"33. Q. While there, was or was not the matters mentioned "in your examination, touching the validity and use of said "bonds, the subject of remark and more or less notoriety, both "in England and Holland, by or among those who were "engaged in handling said bonds?

"A. In the summer of 1872, while in Holland and England, "I remember having seen papers published in Holland, notices "which had been taken from Florida papers, attacking the "validity of the State of Florida bonds. I remember having "been spoken to in regard to the notices in papers, by whom "I do not now remember, but they were parties in interest, "asking me at the time as to the validity of this issue, the "entire complication as to the bonds being about to be compromised, but I do not remember having said anything "against the issue of the bonds.

"34. Q. Were the publications you refer to in Holland "printed in the public journals in the local language of the "country?

"A. Yes, sir; they were published in the Dutch language in "the papers for general circulation."

The witness, C. L. Chase, who went to Europe on the subject of these bonds, testifies as follows (fol. 1572):

"Q. 21. You have stated that about the time of the issue of "said Florida State bonds to said railroad company, during "the year 1870, that charges and allegations of their being "illegal and unconstitutional were circulated in print and "otherwise; will you please state whether or not said statements and publications, or any of them, were or were not in "circulation in Europe at the time of or preceding your arrival there; and, if yea, state at what places said publications and statements were made or spoken of in Europe?

"A. There were damaging reports in circulation in Europe; "I learned them first from Mr. John Collinson in person on "the 4th day of July, 1872, in London, and the reports were "published in a Dutch paper in Amsterdam, as I was informed at the time, although I could not read the paper; in "consequence of these reports I was requested by John Collinson to procure from the Attorney-General of Florida, the "Judge of Florida, and the Governor of the State of Florida, "statements to counteract these damaging reports; they desired the statements for publication in Holland; the object "of the publication of these statements or reports was to "publish them in Amsterdam to advance the market in such "bonds."

The witness, Collins, examined by Schutte et al., in answer to the sixth cross-interrogatory (fols. 2705–6), says:

"Sixth.—To the sixth cross-interrogatory he saith: Before "or at the time we were selling said bonds I believe a question arose as to their legality, and it is my impression that " it was alleged that the statute under which they were issued " was unconstitutional, and I believe these charges were pub-" lished, and the publications copied in some public journals " in the United States, but I do not remember that any such " charges were ever published in England and Holland; I did " not credit the statements made and circulated with respect " to the validity of the issue, because our lawyers had exam-" ined all the laws under which they had been issued, and they " advised our firm that the bonds were legally issued and con-" stitutional, and, therefore, a good and valid security; I can-" not state more definitely as to the publications with respect " to the character of the bonds.

" Seventh.—To the seventh cross-interrogatory he saith: In " consequence of such charges of illegality in the issue of said " bonds being so circulated, we were embarrassed in our efforts " to sell said bonds, and it was agreed between our firm and " M. S. Littlefield, who was at that time in London, and who " was the president and agent authorized to represent the said " railroad company in its dealings with our firm, that we should " sell the issue of four thousand of said bonds to said Collin-" son, at one hundred and thirty-eight pounds one shilling and " ten pence sterling for each bond, and that our firm should " account to the said railroad company for them when we re-" ceived payment for the same at the price of one hundred " pounds sterling for each of said bonds, less five per cent., " and that the said thirty-eight pounds one shilling and ten " pence sterling on each of said bonds should belong to and " be the property of our firm to indemnify us for such extra-" ordinary expenses of such negotiations as we might find it " necessary, as we might find it necessary, to incur by reason of " the attacks that were being continually made upon the " character of said bonds. In pursuance of said agreement " between said Littlefield and our firm a letter, dated Novem-" ber 14, 1870, was addressed to our firm by said Littlefield, " and replied to by letter, dated November 28, 1870."

And the affidavit of Jacobus Wertheim, sworn to May 28, 1877 (fols. 4016 to 4021), made part of his deposition taken May 20, 1879 (fols. 1765 to 1771), in which all the papers in relation to the seeking of advice from Florida as to the validity of said bonds are verified, shows the same knowledge and the line of inquiry testified to by other witnesses, and that the purchasers of the bonds acted upon this information.

We submit that the evidences of notice, published and repeated in every way, and in every form, taking the shape of newspaper publications and official proclamations is conclusive. Not only were these sufficient to put the Dutch bondholders upon inquiry as to the validity and constitutionality of said bonds, but in fact they suspended operations in the bonds from the 29th December, 1870, until the 20th February, 1871. This, we claim, was good and sufficient legal notice. The fact that they received erroneous advice from certain sources does not relieve them. Being put upon inquiry they were bound by the best notice they could have acquired.

"Whenever there is a duty of inquiry, the party is charged with knowledge of every fact which by inquiry he could have learned."

Wade on Notice, Secs. 11, 24.
Kerr on Frauds and Mistakes, p.

In support of the XXXIXth assignment of error, we contend that the court erred in finding that Schutte et al. were the owners of any bonds, because there was no evidence before the court proving that fact. All the testimony tending to prove the ownership of any bonds was that taken in Amsterdam, which was suppressed for cause sufficiently apparent upon its face, wherefore it was excluded, and thus all the evidence of ownership of Florida State bonds on the part of Schutte et al. went out of the record.

There were certain papers purporting to be bonds of the State of Florida brought into court, but that was not conclusive evidence as to their ownership. Nor is there any allegation in the Schutte bill showing the number of bonds they did own. All the bill contains on the subject is in par. xi. (fol. 541–2) which alleges: "That complainants are the owners of a large number of the said bonds issued by Governor Harrison Reed to the said Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, and sold by its agents, as before set forth, which bonds are numbered between number one and number three thousand two hun- dred." This allegation can neither be proved nor disproved with any certainty; nor could a decree pro confesso be entered for any fixed amount had the defendants to the bill made default of answer thereto. It is evident, therefore, that when Schutte et al. filed their bill, they did not know what bonds they owned, or what interest they had in the suit.

But the allegations of the bill are denied by the Western Division Company, and consequently, so far as the pleadings are concerned, the case is with the defendant.

The Schutte bill (fol. 542) speaks of certain affidavits filed, showing "the number belonging to each complainant, which " are prayed to be referred to as part of the bill." The record, however, contains no such affidavits.

The record does contain as part of the deposition of Hon. George P. Raney (fol. 1390) the petition of Willard, as the attorney in fact of Schutte et al., sworn to on the 31st day of March, 1879, in which was an affidavit of said Schutte, wherein he swore that he owned just 103 bonds; the affidavit of Jans Prins, who swore he owned 20 bonds; the affidavit of Adrianus Prins, who swore he owned 11 bonds; the affidavit of Heinrich Ulrici, who swore he owned 11 bonds; the affidavit of Elias Fuld, who swore he owned 33 bonds; the affidavit of J. Borzo, who swore he owned 23 bonds; the affidavit of H. Van Booran, who swore he owned 17 bonds, and the affidavit of G. M. Boissevain, who swore he owned 84 bonds (see Supplemental Record B.). And no other affidavits ever were made part of the record, or are to be found in or about it. And they show only 308 bonds, which are the only bonds controlled by the promoters of the Memorandum Plan, on the 31st of March, 1877, when petitioning the Governor to seize and sell the roads, and are consequently the only bonds averred in the bill when filed, and the bill has never been amended.

The bonds [made part of the affidavit of Boissevain are all numbered above 3000, as follows:

3002 3009 3013 3014 3016 3017
3020 3021 3022 3023 3026 3028

Total 103.

It will be seen that just 9 of these bonds are numbered above 3000.

Upon this, and only this presentation of bonds, the pleadings were perfected, and the proofs taken. Pending this period, and on the 26th day of July, 1878, said Schutte swore to another affidavit, showing that pending the suit he had become the owner of 447 more bonds (see folios 3779–80) and this additional accumulation of bonds by Schutte shows a block of 72 bonds numbered above 3000 (see fols. 3780–1).

The power of attorney accompanying the 447 bonds is worthy of inspection.

On the 5th of August, 1878, Schutte swore to two additional affidavits (fols. 3784–5), showing he had procured two additional lots of bonds, amounting to 58 and 39, respectively, making in all 534 that this enterprising litigant had procured since he did his first swearing, and constituting a grand total of 637 bonds.

But becoming the purchaser of these additional bonds, he did not amend his bill so as to put them in issue, and afford the Western Division Company and other defendants an opportunity to contest his title, and where and how he got them pendente lite. Not having amended his bill how can he get a decree for over $1,000,000, without either pleading or proof.

And just here we ask the court to observe that a very important question is presented respecting the Florida Central Company, which looks like a fraud.

The Supreme Court of Florida decided that the Florida Central Company was not liable for any of said State bonds, because there was no proof that any had been sold above 3000. It was in proof there, and again in this case, that no bonds above 2800 ever were sold by Hopkins & Co.; that those above 3000 were held by Collinson and the Dutch Syndicate to provide for the interest on the whole issue, that is 3776 bonds, due January 1, 1873 (see decree, fols. 48 to 51). But the Florida Central was not a party to that proceeding, and, of course, did not consent to dispose of its bonds for sixty per cent. of their par value, to pay interest on the bonds of the State of Florida. When the break-up occurred these bonds were unsold and still in the hands of Collinson and the Dutch Syndicate, and never were sold out of the hands of these parties.

The bill of the Western Division Company respecting the Florida Central Company, (fols. 12 to 16), avers and charges that none of the bonds above 3000 were sold, and these allegations never were denied by the answer of Schutte et al., though the Dutch Bondholders, and Collinson were all made parties to that bill; John Collinson was personally served, in London, with a copy of the bill, under an order of the court (p. 93), and a decree pro confesso, duly entered against him (fol. 537), which never was vacated. No claim was ever asserted, from any source, to any bonds numbered above 3000 until made by J. Fred Schutte et al., who started with a sworn statement that he was the owner of 103 bonds, of which only nine were numbered above 3000, which added to the Boissevain lot of 84, makes 156 of the 197 charged to the Florida Central Company, and that, too, without pleadings, proof, or any opportunity to contest the ownership of said bonds.

We submit that there was no proof of the ownership of any State bonds before the court when the decree was rendered, and that all the bonds which were in the hands of Schulte et al. were subject to the same notice that attached to Boissevain, Milders, Holje, Den Tex, and others, before the bonds passed from their hands. This will relieve the Florida Central Company of at least 156 of the 197 bonds decreed against it, aside from all other defenses relied upon in the court below, or here.

In addition to the forgoing, the court will see by the testimony of C. L. Chase (fols. 1571 to 1573), that as late as Dec., 1872, 2,000 of said bonds were in the hands of the Dutch syndicate, as he was informed by John Collinson. And a Mr. Mangay, one of the Dutch syndicate, told the witness that he did not think more than 500 of said bonds were held outside of the syndicate.

(See Ques. 18 to 25; fols. 1571–2.)

Now, compare this testimony with the facts that no bonds were presented with the Sherwin petition of Sept. 22, 1876 (fols. 144–5–6), and that less that 350 bonds were in hand on the 31st of March, 1877, when Willard presented the petition of Schutte et al. (Suplemental Record "B."), and it looks as if the testimony of the witness Chase is correct as to how, and by whom, said bonds were held.

And this conclusion gains force when it is seen that NOT A SINGLE BONDHOLDER is sworn except the speculating litigant, Schutte, whose deposition was suppressed below for manifest illegality in its manufacture.

By the XLth and XLIst assignments of error we have deemed it just and proper to insist that the disposition of Jacobus Wertheim should have been disregarded by the court below in its findings, instead of being favorably commended upon, as at folio 1228. There were three papers imported into these suits from Amsterdam, one of which was a paper in the Dutch language, bearing the signature of Jacobus Wertheim; another was an affidavit sworn to by said Wertheim, on the 28th day of May, 1877; and the third was a proposition for the sale of bonds made part of the said affidavit marked "A." It was desirable to put these papers in evidence before the court, which could only be done by the oath of somebody in Amsterdam knowing the facts, and there was no such person accessible until the arrival of said Wertheim in Jacksonville, at the time of the trial.

Application was made in open court in the presence of Wertheim, for his examination (Judge's Minutes, fol. 3054), when he declared aloud his readiness to be examined. An order of the court was made, an examiner appointed, and an hour and a place fixed.

He was served with a subpœna, and the usual fee for witnesses in that jurisdiction left upon his knee. At the hour appointed for his examination he did not appear.

Application was made the next morning for an attachment against him.

Upon the hearing of that application, it was ruled that he must be paid mileage from the place of his landing in this country (New York City), and return, and one day's attenance, amounting to over $100, before he could be compelled to attend for examination.

The fees ordered by the court were paid to him, whereupon he appeared for examination, attended by counsel (the same who appeared for the Dutch bondholders in this case). He made various objections to be examined. In answer to these objections he was assured that his examination would be confined to three papers, of one of which he was the author, and the others, papers to which he had made oath.

He was finally examined as to the three papers mentioned, and as to nothing else, by complainants. He avoided every question in a manner which exhibited a determination not to answer. In order that the court may conveniently see just how he behaved, and how he replied, we reproduce his examination entire, omitting the colloquies of counsel (fols. 1764 to 1773).

Order for the Examination.

" Application having been made to the court for leave to " examine Jacobus Wertheim, as a witness in behalf of com- " plainants, and the defendant's solicitors consenting in open " court that such order shall be taken, it is on motion of Joseph " B. Stewart, the solicitor of the complainant

" Ordered, that the complainant have leave to examine " said Jacobus Wertheim, as a witness in its behalf, before " Joseph H. Durkee, under and pursuant to rule 67 of Equity " Practice, prescribed by the Supreme Court.

"Jos. P. Bradley,
" Circuit Justice."

" Question 1. Please state your name, residence, age and " occupation.

" Answer. I am Jacobus Wertheim, Law Doctor, Barrister at " the Court of Amsterdam, and Deputy Judge of the First " District Court of Amsterdam. I reside in Amsterdam. My " age is 51.

" Ques. 2. Do you know the parties plaintiff and defendants " to this suit, or either of them, and if yea, state who?

" Ans. I desire to know who are the parties plaintiff and " defendants.

" Ques. 3. The party plaintiff is the Western Division of " the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, and the " parties defendants are George F. Drew, Governor of the " State of Florida, ex-officio trustee for Gideon M. Boissevain, " Adrian Isaac Mildeus, Joseph Zaddock, Doctor Nicholas " Jacob, Den Tex, J. Fred Schutte, Jan Prins and others, " known as Dutch Bondholders. Do you know any of said " parties, and if so, state who of them?

" Ans. I have heard the names of all those parties. I know " only personally Mr. Boissevain ,Mr. Milders, Mr. Den Tex, " and Mr. Zaddock, and Mr. Schutte, and Jans Prins.

" Ques. 4. What relation, if any, do you hold or occupy to " the parties named in your answer?

" Ans. They belong to the Dutch Bondholders, of whom I " am counsel.

" Ques. 5. What do you mean by Dutch Bondholders?

"Ans. I consider them those who hold Eight per Cent. " Florida bonds.

"Ques. 6. When and in what manner did you become coun- " sel for the persons whom you name as Dutch Bondholders?

"Ans. I decline to answer, because I am counsel for those " people.

"Ques. 7. When did you become counsel for the persons " whom you describe as Dutch Bondholders?

"Ans. I cannot give you the exact date, because I have not " my professional diary with me.

"Ques. 8. Please state the date as near as you can?

"Ans. I cannot, or I should have done it.

"Ques. 9. Was it as early as the year 1870?

"Ans. I don't recollect.

"Ques. 10. Can you give any date?

"Ans. I find those queries being tedious; I should have " answered if I could.

"Ques. 11. You are not able to state, then, at or about what " time you became counsel for the persons you describe as the " Dutch Bondholders; is that so?

"Ans. I have answered that question fully.

"Ques. 12. Were you, or were you not, at any time, and if " so, when, counsel or solicitor for any other persons in refer- " ence to the Florida Eight per Cent. bonds of which you " have testified, and if yea, please state for whom and " when?

"Ans. If the gentleman is acquainted with the different " documents in those lawsuits he can answer himself the " question.

"(Complainant's solicitor excepts to the answer as evasive, " and question repeated.)

"Ans. I answer the same way, and I leave it to the court " whether my answer is evasive or not.

"Ques. 13. Were you, or were you not, at any time counsel " for other parties in reference to the Florida Eight per Cent. " bonds spoken of in your previous answers, and which are " the subject matter of this suit, than those whom you describe " as Dutch Bondholders in your former answer?

"Ans. I have been counsel for a great many people; if I " had my diary with me, I could give you all the names; as it " is, really I cannot.

" (Complainant's counsel excepts to the answer as evasive.)

" Ques. 14. I did not ask you for any multitude of persons " or the names which might or might not appear upon the " diary you have mentioned, but I did ask you the simple " question which I repeat: were you, or were you not, counsel
" or solicitor for any other parties in relation to the said " Eight per Cent. Florida bonds than those you describe as " Dutch Bondholders?

" Ans. I answer that I refer to my previous given answer, " that the gentleman, if he will look at papers in the case, he " will find for whom I am counsel; where some persons are " not named in the papers, I am bound as counsel not to answer " that question.

" Ques. 15. Do you or do you not know Frank R. Sherwin,
" Charles D. Willard, Henry R. Jackson, Charles H. Simonton,
" Robert Walker, Calvin H. Allen, Hubbard L. Hart,
" John Clark, or either of them, and if yea, when did you
" first make their acquaintance, and did you or not, at any " time, and if so, when, act as solicitor or counsel for said " parties or either of them, jointly or severally, in reference to " said Florida Eight per Cent. bonds involved in this suit?

" Ans. I know all those gentlemen except two—that is Mr.
" Walker and Mr. Clark; I have never been, and am not at this moment, the solicitor or counsel for any of those persons, either jointly or severally; I consider the gentleman too good a lawyer to ask that question only in joke.

" Ques. 16. Will you please look at the paper now shown
" you, and a copy of which I now make a part of this question,
" purporting to be a translation entitled in these words,
" 'Proposition for a settlement tendered to the holders of " Eight per Cent. Florida bonds, by M. J. Wertheim, Attorney
" and Counsellor of Amsterdam,' which original purports
" to be in the Dutch language, and state what, if anything,
" you know about said people, and whether or not the same,
" the original was prepared by yourself?

" Witness states that being a full stranger here, and unac" quainted with the customs of the bar, he asks Mr. Stewart if "he could answer that question, and he said to me upon his "honor as a barrister, that I am bound to answer, and there"fore I answer.

"Ans. The document you show me is an abstract of a "speech that I made extempore, in more than three hours, in "a public meeting of bondholders, and is in the Dutch lan"guage. Some gentlemen present at that meeting made an "abstract and printed it. My name is signed under an ab"stract of a report of R. Walker, ex-Receiver of the Jackson"ville, Pensacola, & Mobile Railroad, to certify that the said
'abstract was correct with the original copy which I had be"fore me. I must earnestly warn any man not to have much "confidence in the English translation, as it is badly trans"lated, and there are many expressions in the translation
"which I never made, and which are not in the original Dutch "context. The title of that document is entirely wrong, be"cause I have never offered a proposal of settlement, but I "have merely given my professional opinion about the Memo"randum Plan signed by Frank R. Sherwin, Henry R. Jack"son, and Charles H. Simonton, to my clients, in a general "meeting, I believe in April, 1877, I am not quite sure of that "date.

"Copy received, filed in evidence, and marked Exhibit 'A,'
"Jac. Wertheim.

"Ques 17. The translation which is made part of my former "question was made by Henry L. Thomas, the official trans"lator of the Dutch language of the Department of State of "the United States Government, at Washington, D. C., and is "such as is received as official by the Government of the "United States. Will you please state in what respect you "find the same inaccurate, and for that purpose please look "at the original translation in manuscript.

"(Solicitor for Defendant, George F. Drew, Governor, &c.
"objects to the question on the ground of irrelevancy.)

"A. I decline to answer that question, being a witness and "not a schoolmaster to correct cacographies of a United " States translator, and much the less, because I am only " bound to give my opinion upon original papers in my own " language, and not in any foreign language, because I may " understand that language.

"Ques. 18. The original paper in Dutch, which you have testi- " to as an abstract of your speech, bears date Amsterdam, " 10th April, 1877; were you, or were you not, at that date, " counsel and advisor of the persons you describe as Dutch " Bondholders?

" Ans. I truly answered that question in my previous an- " swer.

" Ques. 19. The paper purporting to be a translation con- " tains the following language in the first paragraph: 'Having " been requested last year by certain parties in the United " States, interested in the reorganization of the railways in " Florida, to present plans, in the event of certain contin- " gencies, to holders of bonds in the Netherlands, expressed " my entire willingness to do so, on the following conditions.' " Will you please state, looking at the original in the Dutch " language, whether the same represents what you said or ex- " pressed, and state who were the parties in the United States " who had requested you to act?

" (Defendant's solicitor interposes same objection as to for- " mer question).

" Ans. Mr. Stewart promised to my learned friend, Mr. Car- " penter, yesterday, not to put before me questions which as " an honest lawyer I could not answer; I consider this a ques- " tion that I cannot answer, and therefore I decline to do it.

" Counsel for the complainant states to the witness that if " the question tended to elicit matters known to him only as " counsel, and not published to the public, he would not put " the question, but as the witness has stated that the paper in " the Dutch language was an abstract of a speech made to the " public, and the same appears to have been published in " pamphlet form and circulated to the public, he therefore sup- " posed it was not private so as to prohibit the propounding " of the question, or to come within the restriction of confi- " dential relations between counsel and client.

" Ques. 20. Will you please look at the paper shown you, a copy of which is made a part of this question, marked Jac.

"Wertheim, Exhibit 'B,' and state what, if anything, you "know about said paper?

"Ans. That is a document that one of my clients handed to "me, and was attached to and referred to an affidavit that is "signed by me.

"Ques. 21. You have spoken of an affidavit made by you, to "which the prospectus Exhibit 'B' was attached as an annex, marked 'A'; will you please look at the paper now "shown you, and state whether or not the same is the affidavit "to which you refer?

"Ans. The affidavit which you show me was made and "signed by me; I was asked by one of my clients to make "that affidavit before the United States Consul at Amsterdam; I have no objection to do so. Paper received and "marked, 'in evidence and Exhibit C,' the paper is dated "18th May, 1877.

"Ques. 22. Are the matters and things in said affidavit "stated facts within your own knowledge, or matters derived "from others, and if from others, state whom?

"Ans. I decline to answer that question.

"Mr. Stewart must be satisfied when he has the paper "signed by me.

"Ques. 23. Do you know or can you state any other matter "or thing material or of interest to the parties to this suit, "plaintiff or defendant, and if yea, please state the same fully "in your answer?

"Ans. I cannot state anything to Mr. Stewart which can be "of any use to him in this suit.

"Cross-examination by Henry R. Jackson, solicitor for defendant, George F. Drew, Governor, Trustee, &c.:

"Ques. 1. Do you know that Mr. Boissevain, Mr. Milders, "Mr. Den Tex, Mr. Zaddocks, Mr. Schutte are purchasers and "holders of the Florida State Eight per Cent. bonds?

"Counsel for complainant objects to the question, as introducing matter not called for in the direct-examination.

"Ans. I knew that they are holders and purchasers of said "bonds, because they told it to me personally.

"Ques 2. Are you not yourself the holder of some of the "Florida Eight per Cent. State bonds?

" Ans. I was so stupid as to invest some of my money in " the Florida Eight per Cent. State bonds; at the rate of 80½ " per cent., believing in the good faith of the State of Florida " and the managers of the railroads; I was bitterly deceived, " and I was unhappy enough to have more of these bonds out " of the inheritance of my father—not I alone, but a great " deal of widows, orphans, and charity institutionsin Holl and, " who also believed it to be a good and safe investment, are " sufferers.

" Complainant's solicitor objects to the answer as irrespon- " sive and beyond the call of the question.

" Ques. 3. Did you buy these bonds upon speculation, or as " an investment of money?

" Ans. I am 51 years old, and I have never in my life specu- " lated, not for a penny.

" Complainant's solicitor objects to the question and answer " for the reasons before stated.

" Ques. 4. Are you still the owner of these bonds, and how " many do you hold?

" Ans. I am still the owner; the bonds are here in court; " the receipts for the bonds are at home in my trunk.

" Ques. 5. Did you not purchase the bonds, upon the faith " which you gave to the Act of the Legislature of Florida, un- " der which they were issued, to the decision of the Supreme " Court of Florida which pronounced them to be constitutional " and to representations which were made, that the were se- " cured as well by lien upon the line of railroad from Jackson- " ville westward as by the statutory obligation of the State?

" Complainant's solicitor objects to the question for the rea- " sons before stated and for the further reason that the same " is leading and otherwise incompetent.

" Ans. One of my brothers, who is a stock broker, told me " at the time of the issue of these bonds that this loan was a " State loan, with the guarantee or lien upon the railroad, " so as I have stated in my affidavit of 28th May, 1877, which " Mr. Stewart has shown you, I asked that my brother if he " could prove me that, and he said yes, and took me at the " office of Mr. Holje & Boissevain, where all the official docu" ments and a map lay for inspection; I went there; I saw

" the papers, and I believe at that time that it was just as you " told me, the facts are narrated in my affidavit already sub" mitted, marked Exhibit 'C,' Jac. Wertheim.

"I certify that the foregoing testimony of Jac. Wertheim " was taken before me as Special Examiner on the 20th of " May, 1879, in my own handwriting, and that all erasures, al" terations and interlineations made upon said testimony were " made in the presence of the witness and before the signing " of the same.

"JOSEPH H. DURKEE,
" Special Examiner.

"Jacksonville, Fla., May 21, 1879."

Having concluded his examination in chief, Mr. Wertheim was then cross-examined by counsel for Gov. Drew, as Trustee, upon matters in no wise inquired about in the direct-examination, and to which objection was made on that account.

In the midst of this the witness left the stand, and never returned to be further examined or cross-examined, or to sign his deposition.

We will abstain from any comment upon the manner of this witness, and leave it to this Honorable Court alone to judge of the degree of credibility to which he is entitled.

The document in the Dutch language, dated, April 10, 1877, written by said Wertheim, and addressed to the so-called Dutch bondholders, was translated at the State Department, and made part of his deposition, and is set forth in full at folios 1774 to 1784 of the record, to which we invite the special attention of the court. (We also bring the original, with said translation, before the court for its inspection.) By reading the paper the court will see, at once, that said Wertheim was not the counsel of the Dutch bondholders, as he swore, but was the counsel of the promoters of the "Memorandum Plan" for wrecking the Florida railroads, to impose it upon the Dutch bondholders.

We submit that this paper so completely contradicts the position assumed by Wertheim in his deposition as to place him in an attitude of utter discredit.

We do not overlook the fact that he is our witness. We only called him to prove papers of his own creation or verified by his oath, addressed to the public, as to which matters we were entitled to the truth as he knew it, as from any other witness. But having manifestly evaded, as he did, we have a right to be protected from his falsehoods so far as to ask the court to disregard him.

Under the XLIId assignment of error we contend that the court below erred in not allowing the Western Division Company to put in evidence the five letters of Hopkins & Co. to Littlefield, under dates of September 6, 7, 8 and 10, 1870, in contradiction of the depositions of Hopkins and Collins respectively, wherein they state that Woodfin aided in the sale of said State bonds.

As before stated, these depositions were not taken until the eve of the trial, and no opportunity afforded for the Western Division Company to see them until after the trial commenced. The application was in strict accordance with the rule respecting the production of evidenceon the hearing of the cause, when opportunity had not before been afforded.

It was not oral, but written evidence that was offered, and not the writing of strangers, but that of the witnesses whose testimony had just been published, as set forth in the petition for leave, referring to the contents of the letters fully.

Note.—We discover that the petition is omitted from the record, the only reference to it being in the judge's minutes (fol. 3064), and hence we cannot pursue our argument in a satisfactory manner, and leave it where it is.

By the XLIIId assignment we contend that when court found, as it did find (fols. 1202-3 and 6), that the stock of the Florida Central and the $960,300 paid in the purchase of the Pensacola & Georgia and Tallahassee Roads were purchased with the bonds of the Western Division Company, it certainly should have found that the complainant was entitled to the relief prayed, even though held subject to a prior lien in favor of the Dutch bondholders, and that it was error to dismiss its bill without any relief.

The finding of the court fully established that the misapplied funds of the Western Division Company, to an amount exceeding $1,000,000 were used in the purchase of said stock and roads, then being "reorganized" by strangers under the "Memorandum Plan." The existence and the locality of this $960,300 were pointed out (fols. 328 to 535), which, under the repeated rulings of this court, as the fundamental law of trusts, entitled this defrauded cestui que trust to relief. We contend that the case stands on the exact footing of Cook vs. Tullis, 18 Wal., 341, cited earlier in this argument that, "it is a rule of "equity jurisprudence, perfectly well settled, and of universa "application, that where property held upon any trust to keep, "or use, or invest it in a particular way, is misapplied by the "Trustee, and converted into different property, or is sold, and "the proceeds are thus invested, the property may be followed "wherever it can be traced through its transformations, and will "be subject, when found in its new form, to the rights of the "original owner, or cestui que trust."

This, we contend, is precisely the case at bar. That, like this, was for the misuse of bonds. The bonds have been traced. The eye of the court is fixed upon the property purchased, and the same relief was certainly due this defrauded cestui que trust. It was not proper to treat the Western Division Company as the offending party, and grant it no relief, when, according to the findings of the court as they stand, it was a second lienor, but condemned without day. We think this was error.

The XLIVth assignment of error presents rather a technical than a substantial error—but an error nevertheless.

The case, as tried, was upon the Western Division Company's bills, and the answer and cross-bill of Schutte et al. But the cross-bill was simply a mode of defense, and could not change the title of the cause. Any decree in the case, therefore should have been entitled in the Western Division Company's suits.

Under the XLVth assignment of error, we earnestly contend that when the court decided that the right to sue on the part of Schutte et al., was not founded upon the general principles of equity, but stood wholly upon the statute (fol. 1230), wherein they had an adequate remedy at law, it divested itself of jurisdiction and should have dismissed the bill of Schutte et al.

We insist that a statute declared unconstitutional and void cannot be enforced by any process known to the law, and that the real and only remedy of Schutte et al., was an action at law to recover the money they paid for these void bonds.

By the XLVIth assignment we contend that the court below erred in granting some $15,000 too much against the Florida Central Company, and about $200,000 too much againt the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Company, even upon its own theory of the facts and for this reason at least, must be returned for correction.

By the XLVIIth assignment of error we contend that the court below erred in decreeing that the bonds of the State of Florida, adjudged to be unconstitutional and void, should be paid as the consideration of the purchase of said railroads under the decree in this case, for the reason that such bonds cannot constitute a lawful consideration for the purchase of anything, and for the further reason that the decree violates the positive provision of the 3d section of the statute the court pretended to be executing, which provides that said roads shall be sold for "lawful money of the United States, and for nothing else." We do not believe these void bonds are "lawful money of the United States."

Under the XLVIIIth assignment we contend that the court should have decreed that the bonds of said companies were made payable to the State of Florida, and so not negotiable; that whatever lien or liability it was possible for them to create was in favor of the State alone, and that since the State had given no value for them, they should be delivered up to said companies to be cancelled.

The Dutch bondholders could not by any means, be placed in a better position than the State itself in this transaction, so far as we are able to learn. And the State can have no standing in either a court of law or equity to enforce these State bonds.

The record shows that full knowledge of the illegal and fraudulent character of these bonds was had by—was accessible to Schutte et al., and of course they speculated at their peril.

Before concluding, we wish to avail ourselves of another ground of error which we omitted to assign in its order. And that is that it was error in the court below not to find, as the truth is, that said Schutte et al. knew that the interest which was paid on the State bonds was not provided by the State of Florida, as falsely alleged in their bill (fol. 542), wherein it is stated:

> " That interest was paid on said bonds after they were sold
> " up to January 1, 1873, semi-annually, by a trust company in > " the City of New York, which was appointed by the Governor > " of Florida as the fiscal agent of the State to pay such inter> " est; that the said Governor gave notice to the holders of > " such bonds of such appointment; that it was represented to > " the person who dealt in said bonds, including complainants, that > " the money for the payment of such interest was provided by the > " State."

Not a syllable of proof exists to prove this averment. It was known, or should have been known, to be untrue when it was made.

To prove this it is only necessary to look at the account of sales put in evidence by Schutte et al., themselves, by their witness Hopkins & Collins (fol. 2859). This account shows that the allegations was made either in ignorance or bad faith.

We have before shown that on the 18th of January, 1871, the Dutch Syndicate were notified by the Governor of Florida that the bonds were "recently recalled by the company; no provision will therefor be made for interest."

It is evident, therefor, that the speculators in these bonds were advised at that date, not only that the State was not paying any interest, but that it did not intend to pay any.

In addition to this sufficient information and notice, the Dutch Syndicate (which included Schutte et al.) knew perfectly well that the money to pay the interest on each bond as sold, from and after the 20th day of February, 1871, was deducted from each sale of bonds as made for as much as two years.

That is to say, a $1,000 bond was sold for $500 to the combination or syndicate, composed of Collinson, Hopkins & Co., Boissevain, Milders, Zaddock, Stoop, Mangay, and others (see deposition of Pierce, fol. 2027) and the interest then and there, and by them deducted from each sale, and deposited with Drake, Kleinwort & Cohen, until £67,506 6s. 1d., or say $337,550 was so deducted and deposited.

Thirty per cent. of the proceeds of the bonds being deposited to pay interest, with the knowledge of the Dutchmen, and not a dollar provided by the State of Florida, or any one else in New York, as charged in the Shutte bill.

Again:

The so-called consent decree in England (Exhibit H, to Western Division Company's bill, fols. 48 to 50) also reserved £31,800, to pay the interest on the whole 3,776 bonds due January 1871, which was well known to said syndicate.

These facts completely disprove the allegation of Schutte et al., that the interest was provided by the State of Florida, and paid through a trust company in New York.

For these, among other good and sufficient reasons, the decree appealed from should be reversed, the bill of Schutte et al. dismissed, with costs, and the relief prayed by the Western Division Company fully decreed.

THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY, APPELLANT,

vs.

GEORGE F. DREW, GOVERNOR ET AL.

These are appeals from decrees of the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida.

CASE.

There was a continuous line of railroad in Florida, extending from Jacksonville, on the St. John's River, westward to Quincy, with branches to St. Mark and Monticello. From Jacksonville to Lake City was owned by the Florida Central Railroad Company, and from Lake City to Quincy, with branches to St. Mark and Monticello, was owned by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company; but the whole road from Jacksonville to Quincy, and branches, was operated as one road by the J. P. & M. Company—both roads being a part of the system of internal improvements adopted by the State of Florida.

By an act of the Legislature, the Governor of the State was authorized to exchange the bonds of the State with the railroad companies, dollar for dollar, to the amount of $16,000 per mile on any part of the road between Jacksonville and Quincy; the bonds of the companies to be a statutory lien upon the roads to secure the payment of the State bonds. This exchange was made: $3,000,000 on the J. P. & M. road, and $1,000,000 on the Central road; and the State bonds delivered to said companies were sold in Holland to the amount of $3,206,000.

At the May Term, 1879, of the court below, there were three causes in equity pending in said court, as follows:

(1.) The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company vs. George F. Drew, Governor, &c., The Florida Central Railroad Company and others, to cancel said bonds issued by the Central Company. Certain of the Dutch Bondholders were named as defendants, but were not served. (R., p. 1.)

(2.) The same complainant vs. George F. Drew, Governor, &c., The J. P. & M. R. R. Co. and others. This suit was brought to cancel the bonds issued by the J. P. & M. Railroad Company. Certain of the Dutch Bondholders were named as defendants, but not served. (R., p. 40.)

(3.) J. Fred. Schutte and others, the Dutch Bondholders, against both Railroad Companies and the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund.

This suit was brought to have it declared that the holders of the State bonds had a lien on the roads to the amount of the bonds held by them, and to have the roads sold to satisfy the same. (R., p. 201.)

The court (Record, p. 547) ordered that the Dutch Bondholders should enter appearance in the suits Nos. 1 and 2, as condition to obtaining the relief prayed by them in No. 3, and they did so. (Record, pp. 547, 548.)

These causes were not consolidated, but, relating to the same subject-matter, they were heard at the same time.

In No. 1 the court rendered final decree dismissing the bill, and the complainant—The Western N. C. Company—appealed.

Decree, Record, p. 550.
Appeal, Record, p. 549.

In No. 2 the court rendered final decree dismissing the bill, and the complainant—The Western N. C. Company—appealed.

In No. 3 the court rendered final decree ordering a sale of the roads to satisfy the lien of the bonds, and the Railroad Companies, defendants, appealed.

This makes it necessary to state the condition of the pleadings in each cause.

No. 1.

The bill was exhibited by the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company against Geo. F. Drew, Governor, &c., the Central Railroad Company, four of the Dutch Bondholders, and others.

The bill set forth—

(1.) That the complainant was the equitable owner of 4,370 shares of the capital stock of the Central Company.

(2.) That the bonds of the Central Company, which were exchanged for the State bonds, were illegally—that is, without legal authority—issued. That the bonds of the company are void for various irregularities in their execution.

(3.) The exchange of the company's bonds for the bonds of the State.

(4.) That the Governor and Treasurer of the State claim that the bonds of the company in their hands are valid, and will sell the road of said company to pay the same unless restrained, &c.

(5.) Various reasons why the Governor should not sell the road.

(6.) Prayer for injunction, and for discovery, &c., and that the bonds be declared void, and returned to the company.

The bill does not set out any fraud committed by the Dutch Bondholders, nor does it allege that they are not bona-fide holders of the bonds; nor does it show any reason why the complainant, even conceding it to be a stockholder, has any right to maintain a suit; as, for instance, that the company, of which the complainant is stockholder, has in any particular refused to protect its interest, or is acting in collusion with the Dutch Bondholders, or in bad faith in any way.

Before the hearing, the complainant corporation having been dissolved by act of the Legislature of North Carolina, and the Western North Carolina Railroad Company made its successor, the latter company filed bill of revivor, and the cause proceeded to final hearing and decree in its name. The bill was dismissed at the final hearing.

No. 2.

Is a bill by same complainant against the J. P. & M. Company and others, and is similar in all respects, and was revived in the same way, and proceeded to final hearing and decree in the name of the successor company, the Western North Carolina Railroad Company. At the final hearing this bill was also dismissed.

No. 3.

This bill was exhibited by the Dutch Bondholders against both railroad companies of Florida and Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, to have their lien declared and the roads sold to satisfy the same. The court rendered decree of sale according to the prayer of the bill.

Bill, R., p. 201.
Decree, R., p. 578.

This brings us to a statement of the real controversy involved in this litigation, and to comprehend it, a chronological statement of the principal facts is necessary. For this purpose we have taken the statement of facts as recited in the opinion of the court, giving reference to the record for the documents referred to.

There was a railroad company in Florida called the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company, and another called the Tallahassee Railroad Company; both companies had received aid from the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund; and a lien existed on both roads, which was foreclosed, and a sale of both roads took place on 20th March, 1869. Dibble and associates became the purchasers of both roads at this sale, and paid part of the purchase-money in the bonds of the respective companies, which constituted the lien upon the roads to pay which the sale took place; and a part of the purchase-money was not paid at all; and this unpaid balance constitutes the lien upon the property of the J. P. & M. Co. which is saved and protected by the decree in No. 3, the Schutte case vs. the Railroad Companies.

The claim made by the North Carolina Company is that the bonds which were used by F. Dibble and his associates in payment of the bid for the two railroads in question, namely, that of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and that of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, were furnished to them by George W. Swepson, and that Swepson procured the same by a fraudulent use of money in his hands, produced by the sale of North Carolina State bonds belonging to the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, of which he, Swepson, was president. After the roads were bid off at the said sale thereof by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, and before any payment was made on such bid, the purchasers, F. Dibble and his associates on one part, and Swepson on the other, entered into a written agreement, dated March 26, 1869, by which, after reciting the fact of the sale and the amounts respectively bid for said railroads, it was, amongst other things, agreed that Swepson should deliver, as he should come into possession thereof, to be surrendered to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, the first mortgage bonds of said roads purchased by him, amounting to about $900,000 of the Pensacola and Georgia bonds, and about $150,000 of the Tallahassee Railroad bonds—the former to be surrendered at par, and the latter at their pro rata of the amount bid for said road at said sale, and the balance of the purchase-money to be supplied by said F. Dibble and his associates. Secondly, it was agreed that as soon as might be after the title should be acquired from the Trustees, first mortgage bonds should be issued, secured by a mortgage or trust deed on said roads, their equipments and franchises, to be given to said F. Dibble and Swepson, as trustees. Thirdly, it was agreed that the bonds so to be issued should be delivered to Calvin B. Dibble and George W. Swepson, to be sold or negotiated, and the amount thereof for that purpose should be paid to George W. Swepson, to reimburse him for the amount of money paid out by him in purchasing the first mortgage bonds aforesaid, and for commissions and attorney's fees, together with interest, and the additional sum of $100,000. Fourthly, it was agreed that the stock was to be divided and owned as follows: Swepson to have one-third, Calvin B. Dibble to have enough with Swepson's share to constitute a majority, and F. Dibble and his associates to have the remainder. Fifthly, it was agreed that Swepson should appoint four directors;

F. Dibble and associates, four, and that Calvin B. Dibble should be the ninth director, which arrangement was to last until Swepson was fully paid. (R., p. 291.)

In pursuance of this agreement, Swepson shortly after furnished the first mortgage bonds, which were delivered to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, namely, $806,600 of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad bonds, and $153,700 of the Tallahassee Railroad bonds, in all $960,300 of said bonds, leaving still due as aforesaid the sum of $472,065. The deeds for the property were executed by the trustees, in the name of the purchasers, on the 8th of April, 1869, but delivery of them was withheld until the balance should be paid. An arrangement was made that two of the trustees should go to New York with the deeds, and there receive the said balance in cash. A worthless check was palmed off upon the trustees, who gave a receipt for the amount and delivered the deeds. In the consummation of this device Swepson bore the principal part. The deeds were subsequently recorded in Florida, on the 22d day of April, 1869. On the same day Dibble executed to Swepson a trust deed as security for the fulfillment of the engagements entered into by the agreement of 26th of March, which trust deed was never recorded, its purpose being accomplished by carrying out the arrangement contemplated. This trust deed recited that Swepson had paid for Dibble and associates, in purchase of said roads, bonds to the amount of $960,300, and that he had paid to the trustees for the same parties the sum of $472,065, being the full amount due for said roads; it also recited the engagements of Dibble made in the agreement of 26th March, and after formally conveying the property of the two railroads as conveyed by the trustees to Dibble, it declared the object of the trust deed to be to enable Swepson—which he bound himself to do—to convey the same to the corporation to be formed, consisting of Dibble and his associates, as soon as they should have granted to them such or similar relief as the Legislature had granted William E. Jackson and his associates by the act of July 29th, 1868; it was also declared to be for the purpose of securing Swepson in all advances made as specified and agreed upon in the agreement of March 26th, 1869, and the advancement of said sum of $472,065 until such time as said relief shall have been granted, and said Swepson should have conveyed said property to said corporation. (R., p. 62.)

The counsel for the North Carolina Railroad Company places great stress on this trust deed, insisting that it inured to the benefit of the said company, whose money had been fraudulently used by Swepson in purchasing the $960,300 bonds; and that it conveyed the legal title of the property to Swepson, in whom it still remains, inasmuch as he never executed any deed in pursuance of the trust. But this trust deed was never recorded, and was never heard of by any of the parties to these suits until since the commencement thereof; and as all the terms of the deed were complied with which made it the duty of Swepson to convey the property to the company thereafter formed, and as the title was sufficiently transferred to the company in other ways, it is to be presumed that this deed was either looked upon by the parties to it as having no further office to perform, or the execution of a deed in pursuance thereof was purposely omitted, in order to perpetrate further frauds on some other innocent parties.

The fact is, that an act was soon after procured similar to the act passed in behalf of William E. Jackson and his associates, in relation to the Florida Central Railroad, and bonds were given and the stock was disposed of amongst the parties in accordance with the agreement of March 26, 1869. The act referred to was passed on the 24th day of June, 1869, and is entitled "An act for the relief of Franklin Dibble, A. Huling, E. M. Cheney, and their associates, purchasers of the railroad from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, and of the railroad from Quincy to Lake City, and incorporating the Tallahassee Railroad Company." It recites the sale of the two roads on the 20th day of March, 1869, by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, to Franklin Dibble, A. Huling, E. M. Cheney, and their associates; and that it was essential for the interests of the people of Florida that the parties aforesaid should be invested with such corporate powers as were needful for the operations of said road, as well as more accurately to define their powers and duties. It then enacted as follows:

"SECTION 1. That the said Franklin Dibble, A. Huling, E. M. Cheney, and their associates, and their successors and assigns, are hereby made a body politic and corporate, under the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, and they, their successors and assigns, as such body politic and corporate, are hereby vested with and shall be entitled to exercise and enjoy the like powers, franchises, and privileges as were granted to the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and to the Tallahassee Railroad Company by the several acts incorporating said Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company and said Tallahassee Railroad Company, and with the right to hold, operate, and enjoy the said railroad, under the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, subject to the conditions annexed to the sale of said roads by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, and by and in the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company they, their associates, successors, and assigns may purchase, receive, and hold lands and tenements, goods and chattels of whatsoever character that shall be necessary or useful for the purposes of said railroads, and the same to grant, sell, mortgage, or dispose of, and to sue and be sued, implead and be impleaded, to make common seal and at pleasure to break and alter the same, and to establish and put in execution such by-laws and regulations as may be necessary and expedient, not inconsistent with the Constitution and laws of the State of Florida.

"SEC. 2. Be it further enacted, That the provisions of the act incorporating the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company for the protection of its roads from trespass, injury, or intrusion, and providing for the punishment of persons who shall trespass upon or injure the same, be, and they are hereby, made applicable to all cases of trespass, injury, or intrusion on, to, or upon the aforesaid railroads, and the said Tallahassee Railroad Company shall be entitled to all the benefits and protection thereof and therefrom.

"Sec. 3. Be it further enacted, That said Franklin Dibble, A. Huling, E. M. Cheney, and their associates shall be entitled to declare the amount of which the stock in the said Tallahassee Railroad Company shall consist, and to divide the same into shares, which shares, however, shall not be less than one hundred dollars each.

"Sec. 4. Be it further enacted, That said Tallahassee Railroad Company may, when they shall see fit, rent, lease, farm out, or sell any part of the said railroad to any person or persons, corporators or corporations, upon such terms as may be agreed on; provided said sale, renting, or leasing shall not be made to any person or persons or corporation owning any railroads out of the State of Florida.

"Sec. 5. Be it further enacted, That the board of directors of the said Tallahassee Railroad Company shall consist of nine directors, of whom the president of said company shall be one. The first directors shall be elected or appointed within one month after the passage of this act, and annually thereafter, at such time as may be fixed by resolution or law; but the said company shall not be dissolved for failure to elect or appoint its directors so long as the said railroads shall be kept running and in operation, but the directors may be elected or appointed at the next meeting thereafter.

"Sec. 6. Be it further enacted, That said company shall have the right to issue coupon bonds in such denominations and at such rate of interest, annual or semi-annual, and payable at such time and place as they may determine, and may secure the same by mortgage on said railroads, their equipments, depots, workshops, property, and franchise, executed in such form and manner as may be determined: Provided, That any deed of trust, mortgage, conveyance, bond or bonds, or security which may have been executed, made, created, or contracted for as a lien on said railroads or otherwise by said Franklin Dibble, in behalf of himself and his associates, prior to the passage of this act, shall be valid and effectual to all intents, either at law or in equity, as a lien or mortgage or security on said railroad, as if the same had been made by virtue of this act, and shall in nowise be affected by any provisions thereof.

"Approved, June 24, 1869." (Record, p. 69.)

It was the purpose of this statute to clothe with corporate powers the said Dibble and his associates as purchasers and owners of the roads, and that no further conveyance from them to the corporation into which they were constituted was contemplated. As a corporation, they are invested with the rights to hold, operate, and enjoy the said railroad, under the name of the Tallahassee Railroad Company; and in the enjoyment thereof, free from molestation, they are to have the benefit of the provisions of the original charter of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad Company. Instead of a subscription to capital stock, they are authorized to declare the amount of which the stock shall consist, and to divide the same into shares. They are authorized to lease or sell the "said railroads and to issue coupon bonds and secure the same by mortgage on said railroads, their equipments, franchise," &c. The counsel for the North Carolina Company supposes that the concluding part of the last section was a notice to any person dealing with the corporation of the trust deed executed to Swepson. But this does not follow. That deed is not mentioned, and the provision itself is a proper one to prevent the operation of the act in transferring the title to a new personality from affecting the previous conveyances or mortgages—which it might be thought to do. Such previous conveyances or mortgages, however, would stand on their own inherent validity and effect, and would not, if unrecorded, operate to the prejudice of those dealing with the company without notice of them.

But the parties did not stop here. Fearing that the title so conferred by the statute might be questioned, a deed of confirmation and release was subsequently executed by Dibble and his associates to the Tallahassee Railroad Company. It is not dated, it is true, except by the year, (1870,) but that does not interfere with its effect and operation. Having to be executed by a number of parties and their wives, it is probable that the date was left to be inserted when it was completed, and was then overlooked.

Record, p. 952.

The statute and this deed of confirmation and release are sufficient for the protection of all parties dealing with the company, without any knowledge of the trust deed to Swepson.

It is pertinent to remark that the North Carolina Railroad Company, in its original bill, which is sworn to, expressly and without qualification states that the railroads were duly conveyed to the corporation. The averment is as follows:

"That pursuant to said acts of incorporation, or one of them, the said Franklin Dibble and associates did convey and transfer said Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroads according to the terms of said trust agreement, when, and from and after which time the said Pensacola and Georgia Railroad and the said Tallahassee Railroad, as separate properties, and the said Tallahassee Railroad Company, as incorporated in the name of said F. Dibble and associates, on the same 24th day of June, 1869, became and now are the railroad owned by the corporation defendant, the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, as aforesaid." (Record, p. 43.)

It is true the complainant obtained leave to amend its bill by adding an averment that no such title ever was conveyed to the corporation. Had this positive averment in the original bill been called to the attention of the court, it is doubtful whether the amendment would have been allowed. Standing as it does, however, in the bill, it shows that it was always the understanding of all parties that the title of the roads had been regularly passed to the corporation.

The Tallahassee Railroad Company being duly organized according to the plan proposed by the parties, took possession of the railroads and operated or leased them to others. It maintained a separate existence for only eleven months, when it became amalgamated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, as will be mentioned hereafter.

It appears that its officers executed bonds to the amount of $1,500,000, which were delivered to Swepson, but were never used, and, if still in existence, have never been regarded as bona fide or valid issues of the company; being superseded by subsequent transactions, effected by and through the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, after the two companies were consolidated. No relief based upon these bonds is sought by any of the parties.

We are next brought to the consolidation of the Tallahassee Railroad Company with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. The charter of this company was granted by the Legislature of Florida on the 24th day of June, 1869, by an act entitled "An act to perfect the public works of the State." As this act as amended has an important bearing on the questions to be decided in these cases, we state the substance thereof in some detail. (R., p. 69.) The corporators were George W. Swepson, Milton S. Littlefield, J. P. Sanderson, J. L. ReQua, and William H. Hunt. The company was authorized to construct a railroad from Quincy, the terminus of the Pensacola and Georgia Railroad, westward to the Alabama line, in the direction of Mobile, touching certain specified points. To aid the company in the construction and equipment of its road, by the 9th section of the act as amended, in January, 1870, the Governor of the State was directed to deliver to the president thereof coupon bonds of the State to an amount equal to $16,000 per mile for the whole line of road and length of railroad owned by, or belonging to, the company, in exchange for first mortgage bonds of said company, when the president should certify upon his oath that the road or parts of the road were completed and in good running order.

Laws Extra sess., 1869, p. 29.

By the 10th section of the act it was provided that, in exchange for the bonds of the State, the president of the company should deliver to the Governor coupon bonds of the company, payable to the State of Florida, signed by the president, sealed with the corporate seal, and payable at the same time and place as the State bonds.

By the 11th section, as amended by the act of January 28, 1870, a statutory lien was given to the State, valid as a first mortgage duly registered, on the part of the road, for which the State bonds were delivered, and on all the property of the company appertaining to that part of the line which it might then have or thereafter acquire, together with the powers and franchises, &c.; and on failure of the company to pay either principal or interest, for twelve months after due, the Governor was empowered to enter and take possession of said property and franchises, sell the same at public auction; and it was directed that all moneys arising from such sale should be promptly and exclusively applied to the payment and satisfaction of the bonds issued by the State, or if the bonds should not be presented, to be invested, and held by the State of Florida, as trustee for the bondholders, until they should demand the same, and then to be paid to them by the treasurer.

By the 14th section of the act, it was declared that it should be lawful for the several companies owning the road or parts of roads from Quincy to Jacksonville, from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, and the branch to Monticello, or either of them, by a vote of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest, and with the consent of the owners of a majority of the stock in interest of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, to consolidate with the latter company, so as to become one corporation under its name, on such terms as might be agreed on; and after such consolidation, the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company were authorized to raise money by way of mortgage, &c., of the railroad and property, franchise, and effects acquired by such consolidation, and issue coupon bonds; and to each of said companies was granted the same privileges as those granted to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

By the fourth section of the amended act of January, 1870, it was enacted that the Governor should, for the purpose of aiding the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in the speedy construction of its road, deliver to the president of said company coupon bonds of the State to the amount of $16,000 per mile upon receiving from the president of the company first mortgage bonds of like amount on any part of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville; but not for a greater length than one hundred miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville; provided the said railroad company or companies should not issue first mortgage bonds to a greater amount than $16,000 per mile.

Under the fourteenth section of this act the Tallahassee Railroad Company, on the 25th day of May, 1870, was consolidated with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company by the unanimous vote of the stockholders of both companies. From the minutes of the stockholders' meeting on this occasion, it appears that Littlefield, who had succeeded to Swepson's interest, held 18,000 shares of the 30,000 of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, and 9,930 of the 10,000 shares of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and that by the consolidation the stock of the two companies was increased to 60,000 shares, of which Littlefield held 38,433. The consolidated company was duly organized, and the road from Quincy to Lake City went into its possession.

Record, pp. 1327, 1328.

The effect of this consolidation was to vest in the consolidated company the property and franchises of both the companies who were parties thereto.

The North Carolina Railroad Company must seek for the enforcement of any equities it may have by reason of the misappropriation of its moneys by Swepson and Littlefield, through its right to the interest which they acquired as stockholders in the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. So far as the public was concerned, Littlefield was the apparent owner of this stock. In dealing with the company the public had a right to regard him as the owner of the stock. The corporation could only act by its officers. The action of those officers, unless known to be fraudulent, bound the company and its stockholders, and all those who claimed any equitable interest in the stock. If the North Carolina Railroad Company knew of the destination which its moneys had taken, and suffered Swepson and Littlefield to retain possession of the stock and control of the Florida corporation, they must abide by their acts as such. It had a remedy in the Florida courts to prevent the continuance of this state of things, and if it did not choose to resort to this remedy, it must not call third parties in question for dealing with the corporation as a duly organized body capable of transacting business.

Under the powers conferred by its charter, and the amendments thereto of January 28, 1870, (Laws 3d Sess., 1870, p. 9,) the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company executed its bonds to the State of Florida in May or June of that year to the amount of $3,000,000, and received therefor the bonds of the State to the same amount, which were delivered to the president of the company, M. S. Littlefield, for disposition and sale thereof. Littlefield had already, by an agreement executed on the 13th of April, 1870, made an arrangement with S. W. Hopkins & Co., of New York and London, to dispose of the bonds which he expected to receive from the State on account of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. This agreement is set out in the pleadings. It purports to treat for $4,000,000 of State bonds to be issued to the railroad company. It will be seen that $1,000,000 were contemplated to be issued by the Florida Central Railroad Company, of which Swepson had the control. Only three days after this arrangement with Hopkins & Co. to dispose of the bonds not yet issued, Swepson and Littlefield, whose speculations had now been discovered by the agents of the North Carolina Railroad Company, entered into an agreement with them for a participation in the proceeds of these Florida State bonds. This agreement was made at the city of Washington on the 16th day of April, 1870. It is as follows:

MEMORANDUM

of agreement and settlement between the Florida Central Railroad Company, George W. Swepson, President, and the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, Milton S. Littlefied, President, and Milton S. Littlefield, majority owner of the stock of said companies, and also of the stock of the Tallahassee Railroad Company, of the first part, and the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, represented by N. W. Woodfin, W. G. Candler, W. Pink Welsh, and W. W. Rollins, commissioners appointed by an act of the Legislature of North Carolina, approved by the stockholders of said corporation, of the second part:

Witnesseth, that whereas George W. Swepson, late President of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, made certain investments of the funds of said company in securities of and interest in the said Florida Central Railroad, Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and the Tallahassee Railroad, of the said State of Florida, as per report made by the said George W. Swepson to the said commissioners, amounting in the aggregate to the sum of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents, to bear interest from the first day of November, 1869, at the rate of eight per cent per annum; and

Whereas the said George W. Swepson heretofore conveyed to the said Milton S. Littlefied, subject to the payment of the above-recited claim, his interest in the above-recited railroads; and

Whereas the said Littlefield has received authority from the Legislature of the State of Florida and the several railroad companies to receive bonds to be issued by and for account of the several railroad companies, which bonds are to be exchanged for the bonds of the State of Florida, to be issued for the purpose of aiding the finances of the said several railroad companies, all of which bonds are now in a state of preparation; and

Whereas the said Milton S. Littlefield has made a contract with S. W. Hopkins & Co., No. 71 Broadway, for the disposition of said bonds as the same may be issued, the proceeds of the issue of the bonds of the Florida Central Railroad Company of the said State of Florida, amounting to nine hundred and sixty thousand dollars, are to be applied to the payment of the existing liabilities of the said several railroad companies, including the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars to be paid to the commissioners aforesaid for the purpose of paying existing liabilities of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

It is understood and agreed by the parties of the first and second parts, that the proceeds of the sale of the said bonds so to be issued by the said Florida railroad companies and the said State of Florida, are to be equally divided, dollar for dollar, between the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company and the said Florida railroads, and as the commissioners aforesaid receive by this first sale of bonds only the sum of one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, it is further understood and agreed, that out of the proceeds of the sale of the issue of the bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroads there is first to be received by the commissioners aforesaid a sum sufficient to be equal to the amount received by and on account of the said Florida railroads, and then an equal amount is to received by the said commissioners and the said Florida railroads, dollar for dollar, until the entire amount of one million two hundred and eighty-seven thousand four hundred and thirty-six dollars and three cents, with interest at eight per cent., as aforesaid, being the sum reported by the parties of the first part as due to the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad, is fully paid.

It is further understood and agreed by the parties of the first and second parts, that all the interest owned or claimed by the said parties of the first part, George W. Swepson and Milton S. Littlefield, or which they, as individuals, have a right to control in the said Florida railroads, are hereby pledged for the faithful fulfillment of this contract, without the right on the part of any party to interfere with our management or control of the affairs of the road.

Upon this branch of the subject the Circuit Judge expressed his opinion as follows:

Opinion. (Record, p. 568.)

"After reading this agreement, it seems to me impossible to contend that the North Carolina Railroad Company did not accept the situation, and acquiesce in the organization of the Florida Railroad Companies by Swepson and Littlefield, the issue of stock therein to them, and the issue of the bonds in question in this suit.

"It has been strenuously argued by the counsel of said company that the issue of these bonds was a fraud upon it, and done without its knowledge, and against its interests and will. On the contrary, the fact is plain, that the North Carolina Company acquiesced in their issue, and stipulated for a large portion of the proceeds of the sale thereof. If a fraud was committed in the issue of these bonds, it was rather committed on the State of Florida and on the small minority in interest of the other stockholders of the Florida companies; and it is hardly possible to refrain from observing that the North Carolina Company itself was a particeps criminis. What right had that company to make a private stipulation with Swepson and Littlefield, its own officers and agents, to take to its own use the proceeds of bonds issued by the State of Florida with the fond, but mistaken, expectation that they should be employed in developing its own resources upon its own soil?

"It is idle to contend that the North Carolina corporation was not represented in this transaction. The authority of the commissioners appointed by the Legislature of North Carolina to act in behalf of the company cannot be questioned. The State was much the largest stockholder, and the Legislature had repealed the charter of the company on the 14th of February preceding, and had appointed these commissioners to settle up its affairs. They were the only representatives of the company then existing. Littlefield himself was president of the company at the time of the repeal of its charter, and Rollins and Candler were directors. The commissioners acted in the company's name, and no one can justly challenge their right so to do. Besides, from that time onward, throughout the year 1870, and afterwards, the same commissioners continued to represent the company. as well as the State, in many ways, and always in affirmation of the issue of the bonds. Actions were brought and actions defended in the company's name in asserting its claim to the bonds or the preceeds thereof. One of the commissioners, Col. Woodfin, was sent to London to secure their rights in this regard, and then made another final settlement there with Littlefield, by agreement dated November 10, 1870, on the part and behalf of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, which agreement, throughout, purported to provide ways and means for carrying out the agreement of April 16, 1870, and securing to the said company the proceeds of the bonds sold and to be sold. Amongst other things, providing that an order should be given to said company on S. W. Hopkins & Co. for 800 of the bonds still in their hands, but with the condition that the bonds should be sold by Hopkins & Co., and the proceeds paid to the company. Such order was in fact given and accepted, and £10,000 sterling were subsequently received by the company on account thereof.

"Calling these settlements conditional settlements, compromises, &c., is a new thought, the result of new light. No such language is used in the original bill. Besides, though they were conditional settlements or compromises, they were entered into and had the same effect in misleading the public and inducing a sale of the bonds, as if they had had no conditions attached to them. They were not like unaccepted offers of compromise, which, it is true, cannot be used to the prejudice of the party who makes them. They were executed agreements, and show the position which the North Carolina Railroad Company deemed it expedient to assume.

"It is useless to go into all the evidence on this subject in detail. The truth is too evident, that not only did the North Carolina Company acquiesce in the issue of the bonds, but that they urged and promoted the sale thereof. The principal contest of this company consisted in endeavoring to get the proceeds of the bonds after they were sold; and this contest was continued until the 3,000 State bonds issued to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in exchange for its own bonds, had been sold and disposed of. In view of all the evidence on this subject, I am clearly of opinion that the North Carolina Railroad Company is to be held as participating in putting out these bonds upon the money market of the world, and that it cannot be heard to except against the bona fides of their issue and sale.

"Having reached this conclusion I must hold that the complainants in the case of J. Fred. Schutte and others who have produced these very bonds, claiming to be the bona-fide purchasers and holders thereof, are such holders, unless the contrary be shown. But there is no evidence, of which I am aware, that shows in the slightest degree that they are not bona-fide holders. The bonds being sold with the acquiescence of the North Carolina Company, the holders thereof stand in the same position as the holders of any other negotiable securities. If, therefore, as the owners of these bonds they have any title to relief as against the railroad and property of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, they are entitled to such relief notwithstanding, and prior to any equities which the North Carolina Company may be entitled to. The equities of the latter company are to be affected, as equitable owners of the stock of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company held by Littlefield and Swepson, and are to be enforced through the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and can rise no higher than the rights of that company itself, as against third parties dealing with it in good faith.

"The question then arises whether the holders of the State bonds have, by reason of being such, any lien, legal or equitable, against the railroad and property of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

"It has been decided by the Supreme Court of Florida that the State bonds which these parties hold were created and issued in violation of the Constitution of the State, and that they are for that reasan absolutely void. But the same court has also decided that the bona-fide holders of such bonds are entitled to the benefit of the bonds issued by the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, in exchange for them, and to have such company bonds, and the first mortgage lien created thereby, enforced for their protection. In the case of Holland v. The State of Florida, when this question was involved, the court held that the State of Florida occupied two distinct relations to the holders of the State bonds and to the railroad company, the first being that of a primary debtor on its own bonds, and mortgage creditor of the company for its indemnity; the second, that of a trustee for the holders of the State bonds. 'In this relation,' says Mr. Justice Westcott, (in which the other justices concurred,) 'the lien created by the statute was for the benefit of the holders of the State bonds. The proceeds of the sale, if he declined to surrender his bonds, were to be invested for him, and he was to have the beneficial interest of a cestui qui trust. The lien of the statute and the company bond, viewed in this light, was for his benefit, and the property and franchises of the company were to be his security for payment; and as the company received his money and the State received nothing, the company was to be held to the obligation of common honesty in the matter of payment and satisfaction.' (15 Fla. Rep., 534.)

"In the subsequent case of The State v. The Florida Central Railroad Company, (15 Fla, 723), the court further defines its position on this subject. It then says: 'In the case of Holland v. The State of Florida, we held, that while the State bond, as an obligation against the State as a simple and primary debtor, was void for want of constitutional power in the Legislature to authorize such obligation, yet that, under the statute, the State held the bonds of the company and the mortgage lien, enuring thereby for the benefit of the holder of the State bonds. That the State, under the statute, was to occupy these two relations, and that while the one failed for want of constitutional power in the Legislature to authorize it, the other must be sustained, because the Legislature did have the constitutional power to create it, and it was the duty of the court to enforce it. This court did not hold that the relation and rights of the State as 'trustees' were the result of any equity springing from the circumstances independent of the statute, but that its relation as a trustee was a creature of the statute. That viewed in this light, the lien created by the statute and the company bond was for the benefit of the bondholder, and the property and franchises of the company were to be his security for payment.' The court then proceeds to show, that under this view, the bondholder is not restricted to the amount paid by him for his bonds, but has all the rights of a 'holder' of bonds, including that of recovering the full amount thereof.

"The same views were again repeated in the recent case of the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund v. The Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and also reported in 16 Florida, 719.

"A careful examination of the statute leads me to concur in this view of the subject. But the decision of the State court on a question of the construction of a State statute, if not absolutely binding on this court, is, at least, entitled to the very highest consideration and respect, and is to be regarded as of great authority. I feel compelled, therefore, to hold that the holders of the State bonds have a right to the enforcement of the mortgage lien created by the statute by virtue of the bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company given in exchange therefor. The result of this opinion is, that next to the lien for the balance of purchase-money due to the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund, the complainants in the case of J. Fred. Schutte and others are entitled to a mortgage lien upon the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, extending from Lake City to Quincy, and from Tallahassee to St. Mark's, including the branch to Monticello, with all its equipment, property, and franchises, for the payment of such portion of the bonds held by them, and the interest accrued thereon, as are to be considered as having been exchanged for the bonds of that company; and a first mortgage lien for the payment of the same bonds and interest upon the railroad extending from Quincy to the Chattahoochee River, and its equipment, property, and franchises, reserving, however, for the present, further consideration of the claims of J. G. Gibbs, who has intervened pro interesse suo in respect to that portion of the lien.

The said J. Fred. Schutte and others, holders of said State bonds, will also be entitled to a decree dismissing the bill of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, which relates to the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad."

THE CENTRAL RAILROAD CASE.

The Circuit Judge states the facts and delivers his opinion in the Florida Central case as follows: (Record, p. 571.)

"I will now proceed to the consideration of the case relating to the Florida Central Railroad Company and its property. I have already stated that, in this case, there is no question about the status of the Western Division of the Western N. C. Railroad Co. of North Carolina. Its interest arises altogether from its equitable right to the stock of the Florida Central Railroad Company, and its equities rise no higher than those which belong to the rights of a stockholder. This stock, during the period of transactions under consideration, was held either by Swepson or Littlefield, or by those to whom they transferred it from time to time for their own purposes. Parties dealing in good faith with the Florida Central Railroad Company as a corporation have nothing to do with the manipulations of this stock. The main question in the present controversy is whether the corporation itself became bound by the bonds which were issued in its name, the amount of which; as before stated, was $1,000,000.

The first inquiry that naturally presents itself is, whether the said company had power to issue such bonds. The act which incorporated the purchasers of the road, passed 29th July, 1868, was in the same general form as that which incorporated the purchasers of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, already recited. It did not, however, contain any section corresponding to the 6th section of that act, authorizing the issue of coupon bonds and the securing of the same by mortgage; but it gave the company the general power to grant, sell, mortgage, or dispose of any property acquired for the purposes of the railroad. It will be recollected, however, that the act entitled 'An act to perfect the public works of the State,' which incorporated the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Co., by its fourteenth section not only authorized the several companies owning the road or roads from Quincy to Jacksonville, &c., to consolidate with the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, but gave to each company the same privileges as were granted to the latter company by the act; and by the fourth section of the amended act, passed January 28th, 1870, it was enacted as follows, namely: 'That the Governor shall, for the purpose of further aiding the said Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Co. in the speedy construction of its road, deliver to the president of said company coupon bonds of this State, of the same character as those above described in this act, to the amount of $16,000 per mile, upon receiving for and from the president of said company first mortgage bonds of like amount on any part or portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville: Provided, however, The State bonds under this section shall not be exchanged for first mortgage bonds for a greater length than 100 miles of any part of railroad between Quincy and Jacksonville: Provided, The said railroad company or companies shall not issue first mortgage bonds to a greater amount than $16,000 per mile.'

"Now, there were only two roads between Quincy and Jacksonville, a part of the road belonging at the time of the passage of this act to the Tallahassee Railroad Company, extending from Quincy to Lake City, and the road of the Florida Central Railroad Company. The act, therefore, must necessarily have referred to these roads and to the companies owning the same. The Supreme Court of this State so decided in the case of The State v. The Florida Central Railroad Co. et al., 15 Fla. 704, 705, and held that this section authorized the Florida Central Railroad Co. to issue coupon bonds to be exchanged for State bonds by the president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Co. Taking the two acts together, that of June 24th, 1869, and its amendatory act of January 28th, 1870, I have no doubt that the Florida Central Railroad Company did have all the requisite powers for issuing such bonds as were issued in this case in the name of said company, and that they might be issued for the purpose of exchanging them for a like amount of State bonds in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company. Of course it would be for the Florida Central Railroad Company to prescribe the conditions or consideration on or for which it would issue such bonds. It had the power to do it. If done, and the exchange should be made, and after this the State bonds received by the president of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in lieu thereof should be misappropriated by the agents of that company, this would not relieve the Florida Central Railroad Company from its obligations arising upon its bonds to the bona-fide holders of the State bonds..

"Much stress has been laid in this case upon the fact that the bonds issued in the name of the Florida Central Railroad Company were not regularly executed, but were made and executed in the city of Washington, and signed by George W. Swepson as president of the company, and by one H. H, Thompson as treasurer, when the latter was not treasurer, and no authority having been given by the directors for the issue of any such bonds. But before the bonds were issued the following action was taken by the board of directors on the 25th day of May, 1870, to wit:

"'General Littlefield stated that Mr. Swepson, late president, had appointed H. H. Thompson, Esq., as secretary and treasurer of this company for the past year, and moved that the action of the late president in this respect be approved and confirmed, which was agreed to.'

"A few days later, on the 2d of June, 1870, (Record, p. 1334,) a meeting of the stockholders was held, representing a very large majority of the stock, when it was unanimously resolved, that bonds to the extent of $16,000 per mile be issued by the company, to be a first lien or mortgage on the Florida Central Railroad, its equipments, franchise, &c., and thus reciting that George W. Swepson, the late president, had caused to be prepared bonds to be issued by the company, preparatory to an order of the board of directors to that effect, and which bonds were signed by said Swepson, as president, and countersigned by H. H. Thompson, treasurer. It was therefore unanimously resolved, that the said bonds be adopted as the bonds to be issued, and that when issued they be a first lien or mortgage on the Florida Central Railroad, its equipment, franchise, &c., (except the lots in Jacksonville not used for depot purposes.) It was further resolved that the bonds be placed in the hands of Edward Houston for the purpose agreed upon by an arrangement between himself and Milton S. Littlefield, who, it was declared, was 'owner of nearly all the stock in the company,' and the bonds or their proceeds to be held and applied according to said arrangement, except the proportion thereof applicable or apportionable to the stock owned by other parties; and upon the satisfaction otherwise of the terms of said arrangement with said Houston, the said bonds were to be by him transferred to Littlefield, or according to his direction, to the extent of the stock owned by him at the time. On the same day the directors adopted the same resolutions, and further, a resolution that the president be authorized to do all acts, and if necessary to execute and deliver any proper deed, under the seal of the company, that might be deemed needful to make the first lien or mortgage in favor of the bonds.

"In view of these resolutions, all talk about the irregular execution of the bonds, or of the application of the seal thereto, would seem to be irrelevant. It cannot be denied that the bonds were executed and placed in the hands of Littlefield for disposition according to the arrangement between him and Houston. That arrangement, as it stood at this time, was, that there should be placed in Houston's hands as collateral security for $163,000 due to him from Littlefield, one million of dollars of bonds of the State of Florida, to be exchanged for said bonds of the Florida Central Railroad Company. After paying himself, the balance of the proceeds of said bonds was to be distributed and paid as follows, to wit:

To Edward Houston	$163,000
" John P. Sanderson	57,000
" M. D. Papy	16,000
" T. W. Brevard, attorney for holders of Pensacola and Georgia bonds	50,000
" John P. Sanderson, President of the Florida Central Railroad Company	340,000
	$620,000

The balance, if any, to Littlefield.

"The arrangement further provided, that if Littlefield should pay his debt of $163,000 to Houston, the latter should place the bonds in the hands of S. W. Hopkins & Co. to be sold, and the proceeds to be held subject to the other claims above specified, and the balance to be paid to Littlefield.

"Houston, in January, 1871, placed the bonds in the hands of T. B. Coddington, on substantially the same trusts as he held them. On the 13th of April, 1871, at a stockholders' meeting of the Florida Central Railroad Company, he was authorized to place them in the hands of S. W. Hopkins & Co., subject to the same trusts as to the proceeds thereof.

"Now, the counsel for the North Carolina Company and for the Florida Central Railroad Company contend that the bonds executed by the company and exchanged for State bonds were executed for an unlawful purpose, namely, for the purpose of paying private debts or speculation, and not for that of aiding the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company in the speedy construction of its road; nor for any corporate purpose of the Florida Central Railroad Company itself.

"Supposing this to be true, how can the corporation itself, or any one claiming under it, raise this objection after having actually executed its bonds and procured the State bonds in exchange therefor, and authorized them to be sold to the public? It seems to me that there is a clear estoppel in the case. It would be to allow the company to perpetrate a fraud upon the public to allow such a defense to prevail. If the stockholders have used the money produced by the State bonds for their own purposes, instead of using it in aid of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company, or for the corporate purposes of their own company, neither they nor the corporation can be permitted to allege their own dishonesty as a reason for avoiding the binding obligation of their bonds. The fact seems to have been, that the arrangement for making this issue of bonds had in view a distribution of their proceeds amongst the stockholders in proportion to their several interests. If there was not a fair deal; if some got more than their share, and others less, they must look to one another for an adjustment of their respective equities. They ought not to be permitted at this late day, after the State bonds procured in exchange have been sold to purchasers, to plead that their bonds were created for an unlawful purpose.

"The Florida Central Railroad Company itself is clearly estopped from making such a defense. The North Carolina Co. is also estopped, because in the agreements and proceedings which have been referred to, in which it was a party, it acquiesced in the issue of the bonds, and only claimed to share in the proceeds thereof. The agreement of April 16, 1870, before recited, expressly recognized the issue of bonds by the Florida Central Railroad Company, and provided that $150,000 of the proceeds thereof should be paid to the commissioners; and in a supplemental complaint of the said North Carolina Company, filed in August, 1871, in a suit instituted by said company against Sidney W. Hopkins and others, in the Supreme Court of New York, the said company alleged and insisted as follows, to wit: 'And the said plaintiffs further show that said S. W. Hopkins & Co. have in their hands, as plaintiffs are informed and believe, a very large amount of the proceeds of the sales of said 4,000 bonds, which belong to these plaintiffs and to other parties interested therein, and that they intend to conceal and fraudulently retain such proceeds to their own use, &c.; (Record, p. 1279;) and they then invoke the equitable interposition of the court in respect to the proceeds of said bonds. This is but a casual instance of the manner in which the North Carolina Company ever treated the transactions relating to said bonds. Here, it will be observed, the company speaks of the entire issue of 4,000 bonds in one category, thus including those issued in exchange of the Florida Central as well as others. As late as January, 1873, a consent decree was entered in the case of John Collinson vs. S. W. Hopkins and others, in the city of New York, to which the North Carolina Railroad Company was a party, whereby it was provided that $200,000 should be paid to said company out of the proceeds of the bonds which formed the subject of that litigation, being the last 1,200 bonds issued of the 4,000, and including the 1,000 bonds issued in exchange for those of the Florida Central Railroad Company. (Record, p. 1150.)

"It is useless to pursue this subject further, or to examine in detail all the voluminous testimony and documents which have been adduced in relation to it. It is too plain for doubt or question, that the North Carolina Company acquiesced as well in the issue of the Florida Central bonds as of those of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company.

"The truth is, that the agents of the North Carolina Company seem to have been very well satisfied with the issue of the bonds, thinking, by means thereof, to be able to snatch something out of the fire by way of indemnity for the losses sustained by that company through the malfeasance of Swepson and Littlefield, and I think that said company is concluded from disputing the validity of the bonds as against those who have, in good faith, purchased the State bonds issued in exchange therefor. They may have been unfortunate in their endeavors to get the proceeds of the bonds after they were sold, but that was not the fault of the purchasers, and is no reason for depriving them of their property.

"The question then arises, whether the complainants in the suit of J. Fred. Schutte and others are bona-fide holders of the bonds which they produce in this litigation.

"The possession of the bonds is strong prima-facie evidence of just title, and in ordinary cases throws upon the party questioning it the burden of showing that it is not bona-fide—that the holder had notice of some vice or defect which vitiates the title. No such notice is shown in this case. On the contrary, it appears from the evidence of Collinson and Collins that the bonds were sent to Holland to be sold. Collinson says that the bonds were purchased by him of S. W. Hopkins & Co., in London; that they were put on the Dutch market, and were sold there, as he was informed; that the transactions were conducted by Messrs. Boissevain & Milders, and Mangay of Holland, who purchased the bonds from him for the purpose of putting them on the market and selling them. Collins corroborates this testimony, and says that Mr. Woodfin, the agent of the North Carolina Company, whilst in England, did all he could to promote their sale. Dr. Wertheim, who has been present at the hearing of these cases, was examined at the instance of the North Carolina Company after the cases were called, and testified to having been a purchaser of some of the bonds himself in Amsterdam, and to the fact that some of his friends were purchasers at prices which forbid the supposition that they were conscious of anything wrong in the sale of the bonds. He says that he was so stupid as to invest some of his money in these bonds at the rate of 80½ per cent, believing in the good faith of the State of Florida and the managers of the railroads; that he was bitterly deceived, and was unhappy enough to have more of the bonds out of the inheritance of his father; and not himself alone, but a great many widows, orphans, and charity institutions in Holland purchased them, believing them to be a good and safe investment. (R., p. 802.)

"In an affidavit made by him in May, 1877, which was exhibited to him by the counsel of the North Carolina Company on the examination, he says distinctly that after examination and such information could be obtained in Holland, the loan was issued there and the bonds were bona fide purchased in the market. He says the belief there was, that the whole line from Jacksonville to Chattahoochee was consolidated into one line, and that all the bonds had respect to the line as one property. This was undoubtedly the impression that was given abroad, and had some foundation in the representations which were made by Littlefield and others. (R., p. 1462.)

"In my judgment, upon the whole case as presented by the evidence and pleadings, the said bondholders are to be regarded as bona-fide purchasers and holders of these bonds, and are entitled by reason thereof to a first mortgage lien therefor upon the Florida Central Railroad, so far as any of the bonds held are to be deemed as exchanged for its bonds.

"This also seems to me to be in accordance with the justice of the case. These parties have parted with their money, relying on the good faith of the State and the companies. It is not their fault that this money did not reach the proper hands. Had it been properly applied, the Florida railroad companies and their stockholders and those having an interest in the stock, including the North Carolina Railroad Co., would have reaped the benefits. If the money has been squandered or misapplied, it is their misfortune, and should not be visited upon the purchasers of the bonds.

"It remains to determine what portion of the bonds raise a lien on the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad, and what portion a lien on the Florida Central. This branch of the subject is invested with some difficulties. I think it is pretty clear from the evidence in the case that the first 3,000 State bonds were, in fact, issued in exchange for the bonds of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad Company, and that the last 1,000, numbered from 3,001 to 4,000 respectively, were issued in exchange for the Florida Central Railroad Company's bonds, the latter not being issued until April, 1871, when they were procured by Coddington. It is urged on the part of the bondholders that they had no knowledge of this distinction, and ought not to be affected by it. But I am not satisfied that their ignorance on the subject can affect the question. The lien of the bondholders is created by the statute. A resulting equity would have arisen without the aid of the statute, but the statute takes the place of this and regulates the right. Now, the eleventh section of the 'Act to perfect the public works of the State,' passed June 24th, 1869, as amended in January, 1870, declares that 'to secure the principal and interest of the said company's bonds the State of Florida shall by this act have a statutory lien, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as a first mortgage duly registered, on the part of the road for which the State bonds were delivered, &c.,' when by the fourth section of the amended act, passed in January, 1870, authority was given to issue State bonds in exchange for first mortgage bonds on any portion of the road between Quincy and Jacksonville, it cannot be supposed that such bonds were to be security for any other State bonds than those which should be given in exchange therefor. The question is not so much what the bondholders ought to have, as what the statute gives them. If they stood on grounds of mere equity, they might not be able to secure more than the amount paid by them for the bonds. I think, however, that the matter is to be governed by the statutes. I am of opinion, therefore, that the bondholders cannot claim to have a lien on the Florida Central Railroad for any bonds except those whose numbers exceed the number 3,000. Of these it appears they hold 197. For these bonds, therefore, and the interest due thereon, they are entitled to a first lien on the said railroad, its equipments, franchise, and property. For the remaining bonds held by them, whose numbers are 3,000 and under, of which they have produced 2,749, they will have a lien, as before expressed, on the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Railroad.

"This disposes of the most important questions in these causes, and a decree will be made in conformity to this opinion, with such qualifications as may be agreed upon by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund and the holders of the old first-mortgage bonds of Pensacola and Georgia and Tallahassee Railroad Companies on one part, and the holders of the State bonds on the other, as expressed in the Memorandum Plan which has been referred to, or otherwise. A decree will also be made for a sale of the several railroads for the purpose of raising the amount due to the respective parties according to the respective liens. The bills of the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company will be dismissed with cost.

"I have not deemed it necessary to advert to a great deal of the voluminous evidence taken in the causes. The ground taken in the opinion covers all the material points at issue between the parties, and I have stated the conclusions to which I have come from the most careful consideration which I have been able to give to the whole case."

POINTS AND AUTHORITIES.

I.

The suit No. 1 of the North Carolina Company is disposed of by the following considerations:

(1.) The company claims to be the equitable owner of about 5,000 shares of the capital stock of the Florida Central Company.

Conceding this to be so, it is in the same condition as any other stockholder of the Central Company.

A stockholder cannot maintain a suit for the benefit of the corporation, unless it be shown that the corporation itself is refusing or neglecting to protect its own interests, and thus acting in bad faith towards its stockholders.

Bronson v. Railroad, 2 Wall., 283, 301
Railroad Company v. Alling, 9 Otto, 463.

The bill of complaint shows no such case, nor any reason whatever why it is necessary for the North Carolina Company to proceed in its own name to protect its rights as a stockholder of the Florida Central Company.

It has, therefore, no right to maintain this suit as against the Dutch Bondholders to cancel obligations against the Central Company, even conceding that the Central Company itself might do so on the facts shown in this case.

(2.) The stock of the North Carolina Company is principally owned by the State of North Carolina.

If this company can recover the avails of her State bonds embezzled by her officers, it would be for the benefit of the State to the extent of her stock in the company. But the State has repudiated these bonds by act of her Legislature. It would, therefore, result that the State repudiates its bonds, and would still recover the avails for which they were sold.

Such a result would grate harshly upon the conscience of a chancellor.

(3.) The North Carolina Company made a settlement with Swepson for and on account of the very misappropriation of funds by Swepson by which it claims to have become the owner of the stock of the Central Company.

When the funds of a principal are misappropriated by his agent, the principal has his election either to recover such funds from the agent, or follow the funds into the property in which it was invested. But he cannot do both. The North Carolina Company, by its settlement with Swepson, is estopped to assert its ownership in the stock of the Central Company. (See settlement, Record, pp. 1223-1227.)

(4.) The North Carolina Company is also estopped to question the validity of the Central Company's bonds, having been a party to their issuance and sale, and having received a portion of the proceeds of such sale.

II.

Suit No. 2 of the North Carolina Company is subject to all the objections above stated.

In this case the North Carolina Company claims that by a misappropriation of its funds its president (Swepson) became the owner of certain bonds of the Pensacola and Georgia Company and of the Tallahassee Company; and that he used these bonds in the purchase of those roads, when they were sold by the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund.

But Swepson co-operated with Dibble and associates, purchasers at those sales, in forming a corporation, to wit, the new Tallahassee Railroad Company, and received the stock of that company to the amount of his contribution to the purchase-money of those roads; which stock was afterward exchanged for stock in the J. P. & M. R. R. Co. All this was done before the North Carolina Company took any steps to assert its rights to the fruit of Swepson's fraudulent transactions.

In other words, when the North Carolina Company determined to follow its perverted funds into their fruits, they found them invested in the stock of the Jacksonville, Pensacola and Mobile Company. Therefore if the N. C. Co. is entitled to any relief in suit No. 2, it is, that it shall be declared to be the equitable owner of the stock held by Swepson in the J. P. & M. Co.; and it is entitled to no relief as against the Dutch Bondholders, because it would have no other rights than those of a stockholder; and a stockholder cannot maintain such a suit.

III.

We come now to suit No. 3, the foreclosure suit of the the Dutch Bondholders.

The claim made by our opponents, that the J. P. & M. Co. is not the owner of the road, but that the legal title is in Swepson, is shown by Mr. Justice Bradley in his opinion to be unfounded in fact.

Again, in a foreclosure suit the mortgagor cannot set up in defense an outstanding title in a third person. The transaction set out in our bill of complaint is equivalent to a mortgage by the J. P. & M. Co. which we are seeking to foreclose. If they have no title, we shall acquire none by foreclosure sale.

Our purchaser will acquire all our rights and all the right and title of the J. P. & M. Co.

The N. C. Co. is not a party to our suit, and its rights will be in no way affected by our foreclosure and sale, except as a stockholder of the respective railroad companies.

IV.

The Dutch Bondholders are bona-fide holders of the State bonds.

Possession of negotiable paper is prima-facie evidence of bona-fide ownership; and the burden of proving mala fides, is on the party who asserts it. (Murray v. Lardner, 2 Wall., 110.) There is not a word in the evidence in this case tending to show that the Dutch Bondholders are not bona-fide holders.

At the hearing in the court below, the court on motion suppressed certain depositions taken in Amsterdam showing affirmatively that the Dutch Bondholders, complainants, are bona-fide holders.

These depositions are found in the Record, p. 1382.

The order suppressing them is found in the Record at p. 517.

The order itself does not state the ground upon which it was made; but the record does show the certificate of the commissioner as to the manner of taking the depositions. (Record, p. 1393.)

No other evidence was before the court to support the motion to suppress these depositions. This certificate shows that the witnesses, in giving their testimony, used memoranda prepared beforehand, as they stated, to enable them to give "their testimony more intelligently, in proper language and save time to them, a valuable consideration."

In Commercial Bank v. Union Bank, 1 Kernan, 210, the attorney had conversed with the witnesses, "and at their request wrote down for them the substance of the facts in answer to the several interrogatories."

The court refused to suppress the depositions, and said: "But I see no reason for suppressing the depositions, especially in the absence of any suggestion that the witnesses have been imposed upon, or that any fact has been misstated, unduly colored, or concealed." The report of this case in 3 Woods, 696, shows that the Circuit Judge was under the impression that the memoranda used by the witnesses was prepared by counsel. He says: "The fact, however, that the answers of the witnesses were prepared in writing by their counsel in advance, is fatal to the deposition."

But this was a misapprehension. The certificate states (Record, p. 1392) that the witnesses referred to memoranda "prepared beforehand," but it does not say by whom the memoranda were prepared; nor is it true in fact that they were prepared by counsel. We submit, therefore, that the learned justice erred in suppressing these depositions, and that we are entitled to use them on this hearing.

If so, they abundantly prove—what it is unnecessary for us to prove—that the complainants, the Dutch Bondholders, are bona-fide holders.

These depositions show in detail the circumstances under which these bonds were sold in Amsterdam; show the proclamation of the Governor; show that bankers refused to put the bonds on the stock market until the opinion of the Supreme Court of Florida was furnished to them, showing that the State bonds were constitutional and valid. (13 Florida, 699.) After which the bonds were placed upon the Stock Exchange in Amsterdam and the subject of daily sale and transfer, passing from hand to hand like other securities in the money market of the world; and that the complainants purchased the bonds in some instances at the rate of 84 cents in gold, and they were quoted and sold at about this rate until default was made in the payment of interest, July 1, 1873.

V.

This suit is between the Dutch Bondholders and the debtor companies only.

The lien of the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund is decided to be a first lien, and is protected in this decree, and the trustees do not appeal.

These debtor corporations who sold these bonds and received the avails of them are estopped to deny their validity, or to deny the lien upon their roads. What other creditors might do it is immaterial to consider here, as none such are made parties in this case, nor can be affected by the decree herein.

The North Carolina Company, as a stockholder in these respective corporations, is covered by the estoppel, which applies to the corporations of which it claims to be a stockholder.

VI.

The only remaining question is whether the transaction—the giving of bonds by the companies to the State and the exchange of the bonds of the State with the companies, and the subsequent sale of the State bonds by the company, and the receipt by them of the proceeds of the sales—entitles the bona-fide holders of the State bonds to a lien upon these railroads, which a court of equity will enforce, as between the creditor and the principal debtor.

This question depends upon the Constitution and statute laws of the State of Florida. It has been fully considered by the Supreme Court of that State, and decided in the affirmative. This court holds that where the Supreme Court of a State has given construction to a constitutional provision or statute of the State, such construction is as binding upon this court as the text of the Constitution or statute.

Leffingwell v. Warren, 2 Black, 599.
Fairfield v. County of Gallatin, 10 Otto, 47.

The Supreme Court of Florida has made three decisions upon this question.

Holland v. State of Florida, 15 Fla., 454.
The State v. Central Co., 15 Fla., 690.
Trustees Int. Imp. Fund v. J. P. & M. Co., 16 Fla., 708.

The decision in Holland v. The State was the subject of some misapprehension, and the court, in the case of the The State v. The Central Co., 15 Fla., 723, restates its former decision. The court say:

> "This court did not hold that the relation and rights of the State as 'trustee' was the result of any equity springing from the circumstances independent of the statute, but that its relation as a trustee was a creature of the statute."

And the court held that the bona-fide holders of the State bonds were entitled to the benefit of the statutory lien to the full amount of the bonds held by them without regard to the amount paid therefor. It will thus be seen that what we claim in this case is declared by the Supreme Court of the State to be a right secured to us by the statute of that State. And this court says, in Leffingwell v. Warren, that such construction of that statute is conclusive upon this court.

In other words, after that court has decided that the statute gives us the right we claim, this court cannot say it does not.

But, aside from the conclusive effect of the State court's decisions upon this subject, there can be no doubt of the correctness of their determination. Equity looks not at the form, but at the substance of things. The substance of this transaction was, that the corporation, wishing to borrow money, desired the benefit of the State's indorsement.

It was not contemplated that the money borrowed was to be paid by the State. The company was the real debtor, and its property was the security upon which the indebtedness was ultimately to rest.

The company did receive the money it sought to borrow, and these bondholders loaned it. It would be grossly inequitable to hold that any technical infirmity in the evidences, or any part of them, given to the creditor, should prevent his recovering his money out of the property which was intended, and which the law of the State permitted, to be pledged therefor, as between the creditor who advanced the money and the debtor who received it.

Again, it is a universal principle that a creditor may pursue any security given by the real debtor to a surety or guarantor. Suppose such guarantor to be an infant or a feme-covert, so that the creditor could not enforce his claim against such guarantor: Can there be a doubt that a court of equity would enable the creditor to reach security given by the debtor to such guarantor? The right of the creditor to resort to such security does not depend upon the fact that he loaned the money on the strength of it; because the creditor may pursue it although he was ignorant of the existence at the time the debt was contracted. The reason of this principle is, that the debtor gave the security for the purpose of obtaining money, intending that the property pledged should be chargeable with the debt. This principle applies in full force.

Our opponents rely upon the case of Chamberlain v. Railroad, 2 Otto, 299. In that case the State had issued its bonds for the benefit of a railroad company, taking from the company a mortgage to indemnify the State against its bonds. Default was made by the company, and the State foreclosed the mortgage and sold the property. This sale discharged the land from the lien of the mortgage.

The State became the purchaser at the foreclosure sale, and subsequently disposed of the property to other railroad companies for value. The State made default on its bonds.

After twelve years' delay, which this court held to be fatal laches,—sufficient to defeat his suit,—he brought suit against the companies to which the State had conveyed the property subsequent to its purchase at the foreclosure sale.

This court held that there was no specific lien on the property in the bond of the grantees of the State.

There are some expressions in this opinion which have given great consolation to counsel opposed. But it is submitted that the case is distinguishable in several respects from the case at bar.

(1.) The bonds issued by the State were legal and valid obligations when Chamberlain brought his suit.

(2.) The lands which he sought to reach had been discharged from the lien by the foreclosure sale.

(3.) There was no State statute and State court ~~disclosing~~ that Chamberlain lien upon the property.

Again, the definition given by all the best authors of an obiter dictum is, that it is a ruling of the court upon some point not necessary to the decision of the cause; one which, if decided the other way, would not have changed the judgment in the case.

It is submitted, with great respect, that all which is said in the opinion in regard to the effect that no relations existed between the holder of the State bond and the company which made the mortgage to the State, falls within this definition; because if the court had held otherwise upon this point, and held, as is half-admitted in the opinion, that Chamberlain might originally have reached this property through a court of equity, still the court would have been compelled to decide the case as it did decide it—upon the ground that the foreclosure sale had discharged the property from the lien; and that Chamberlain had been guilty of such laches that he could not maintain his suit, as against a purchaser from the State for value.

was intended, and which the law of the State permitted, to be pledged therefor, as between the creditor who advanced the money and the debtor who received it.

(2.) The lands which he sought to reach had been discharged from the lien by the foreclosure sale.

(3.) There was no State statute and no decision of the State court ~~disclosing~~ determining that Chamberlain was entitled to any lien upon the property.

Again; the definition given by all the best authors of an obiter dictum is, that it is a ruling of the court upon some point not necessary to the decision of the cause; one which, if decided the other way, would not have changed the judgment in the case.

SUPERSEDEAS.

Under the decree in No. 3, a sale, in fact, took place on the 25th September, 1879. It is practically of great importance to the parties that this court should decide whether any supersedeas of the decree was in force at that time, so that the sale is invalid. This question settled one way or the other, will make a year's difference in obtaining possession of the property.

At a former term of this court we made two motions, as follows:

"THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD CO., Appellant,

vs.

GEORGE F. DREW, Governor, Trustee, &c., THE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, et al.

AND

THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD CO., Appellant,

vs.

THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA, AND MOBILE RAILROAD COMPANY, et al.

AND

vs.

J. FRED. SCHUTTE, JAN PRINS, et al., Appellees.

Here in court comes the appellees, J. Fred. Schutte and others, by their counsel, Matt H. Carpenter, C. D. Willard, and Wayne Mac Veagh, and move the court to vacate the order heretofore made allowing the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company to be made a party in this cause, and allowed to prosecute the appeal originally taken by the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, and in support of said motion we will present to the court a certified copy of the judgment of the Supreme Court of the State of North Carolina, whereby it was by said court determined that the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company ceased to have any corporate existence on the 13th day of March, 1879, by reason of the act of the General Assembly of the State of North Carolina passed on that day, abrogating the charter of the said Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company."

vs.

GEORGE F. DREW, Governor, Trustee, &c., THE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, et al.

AND

THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD CO., Appellant,

vs.

THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA, AND MOBILE RAILROAD COMPANY, et al.

AND

vs.

J. FRED. SCHUTTE, JAN PRINS, et al., Appellees.

Here in court comes J. Fred. Schutte, Jan Prins, et al., appellees in this cause, by their counsel, Matt H. Carpenter, C. D. Willard, and Wayne Mac Veagh, and move the court to vacate and set aside the supersedeas bond filed in this cause by the Western North Carolina Railroad Company, on the grounds that said bond is no security to said appellees, as intended by the order of this court approving said bond."

—which were not decided by the court, but were held, as we suppose, to be disposed of at the final hearing.

At the May Term, 1879, of the court below, there were three causes in equity pending in said court, as follows:

(1.) The Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company v. George F. Drew, Governor, &c., the Florida Central Railroad Company and others, to cancel said bonds issued by the Central Railroad Company. The Dutch Bondholders were named as defendants, but were not served.

(2.) The same complainant v. George F. Drew, Governor, &c., the J. P. & M. Railroad Company, and others. This suit was brought to cancel the bonds issued by the J. P. & M. Railroad Company. The Dutch Bondholders were named as defendants, but not served.

(3.) J. Fred. Schutte and others—the Dutch Bondholders—against both railroad companies and the Trustees of the Internal Improvement Fund. This suit was brought to have it declared that the holders of the State bonds had a lien on the roads to the amount of the bonds held by them, and to have the roads sold to satisfy the same.

The court (Record, p. 547) ordered that the Dutch Bondholders should enter appearance in the suits No. 1 and No. 2, as condition to obtaining the relief prayed by them in No. 3, and they did so.

These causes were not consolidated, but, relating to the same subject-matter, they were heard at the same time.

In No. 1 the court rendered final decree dismissing the bill, and the complainant—the Western N. C. Company—appealed.

Decree, R., p. 550.
Appeal, R., p. 549.

In No. 2 the court rendered final decree dismissing the bill, and the complainant—the Western N. C. Company—appealed.

Decree, R., p. 550.
Appeal, R., p. 549.

In No. 3 the court rendered final decree ordering a sale of the roads to satisfy the lien of the bonds, and the railroad companies, defendants, appealed.

In this cause the North Carolina Company was not a party, and of course could not and did not appeal. The only parties therefore who could appeal, or obtain a stay of proceedings, were the Central Company and the J. P. & M. Company.

Afterwards, June 6, 1879, at Chambers, at Savannah, Georgia, Mr. Justice Bradley made an order in No. 1 and No. 2 as follows:

"United States Circuit Court, Northern District of Florida.

"THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY
vs.
"GEORGE F. DREW, Governor of the State of Florida; THE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY; THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA AND MOBILE RAILROAD COMPANY, GIDEON MARIA BOISSEVAIN, ADRIAN J. MILDERS et als. } Two cases.

"And now comes the above-named complainant company, by its solicitor, and moves the court for an order permitting the supersedeas bond upon the appeal prayed and allowed in the above-entitled suits to be executed by sureties residing outside the State of Florida, should such course for any reason be desirable and necessary.

"Wherefore, it is now at Chambers, in the city of Savannah, Georgia, on this 6th day of June, 1879,

"Ordered, That the complainant and appellant in the above-entitled suits have leave to execute, or cause to be executed, a good and sufficient bond in the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, by sureties residing outside of the State of Florida, to be duly qualified as to the responsibility and sufficiency thereof; and that such bond, when so executed, approved, and filed with the clerk of the United States Circuit Court for the Northern District of Florida, at Jacksonville, shall operate as a supersedeas of all sales under the decrees rendered in the above-entitled causes pending the hearing and determination of the appeal taken herein.

"JOSEPH P. BRADLEY, C. J."

(Record, p. 551.)

It will be observed that no sale had been ordered in either of the two causes in which this order was entitled; and the order was not entitled in, nor does it refer or apply to the cause in which the decree of sale had been made.

July 31, 1879, the solicitor for complainants in No. 1 and No. 2 presented to Mr. Justice Bradley an affidavit as follows:

"United States Circuit Court for the Northern District of Florida.

AND
vs.
GEORGE F. DREW, Governor of the State of Florida, THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA AND MOBILE RAILROAD COMPANY et al.

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA,
Southern District of New York:

Joseph B. Stewart, being duly sworn, deposes and says that he is solicitor for the plaintiff and appellant in the above-entitled suits; that since praying the appeals herein his unavoidable professional engagements in Kansas and elsewhere, at long distances from his home, have consumed much of his time that might and would otherwise have been devoted to perfecting said appeals and securing the bond to effect a supersedeas; that although, as matter of precaution, said appeals were prayed and allowed immediately upon the rendering of the judgments herein, the change of clientage which occurred upon the trial, transferring the suits to the jurisdiction of another corporation from that by which they were begun, necessitated the instructing of the officers of the new corporation as to the nature and merits of the litigation in order for them intelligently to determine whether or not it was their duty to prosecute said appeals; that the making of this investigation necessarily occupied much time; that said corporation has finally determined to prosecute said appeals, and called a meeting of its board of directors at as early a day as consistent with their by-laws to take into consideration the completion of the necessary supersedeas bonds, which meeting has not yet transpired.

Deponent further says, that by reason of the intermeddling of parties interested adversely to the appellant, the persons who had promised and agreed to become sureties on the necessary bonds have, at this late day, refused to execute the same, thus requiring further time to arrange for other parties to take their places; that the sixty days allowed by law in which to prepare and file supersedeas bonds will be insufficient in this case for the reasons stated; and that deponent therefore asks that the time be enlarged until September 1, 1879, in which to perfect and file supersedeas bonds herein.

(Record, p. 552.)

Upon this affidavit Justice Bradley indorsed as follows:

"Inasmuch as these cases involve the rights of J. F. Schutte and others, bondholders, who have a suit pending to enforce said rights, the decree wherein has been appealed from, which suit was argued at the same time with these suits as one common litigation, the application to extend time to file a supersedeas bond herein will not be granted unless the appellants in that suit as well as the present suits will stipulate that the cases shall be decided on the merits only, all parties having gone to the final hearing by consent, and that said stipulation be made a part of the record.

(Record, p. 553.)

At Stowe, Vermont, August 16, 1879, the complainant and appellant in No. 1 and No. 2 presented to Justice Bradley the stipulation of the J. P. & M. Co. and the complainants in No. 1 and No. 2, and a bond, as follows:

"United States Circuit Court, Northern District of Florida.

vs.

THE J. P. & M. R. R. CO., GEORGE F. DREW, Governor, etc., et al.

Know all men by these presents: That we, the Western N. C. R. R. Co., as principal, and James W. Wilson, Samuel McDowell Tate, and Samuel H. Wiley as sureties, all of the State of North Carolina, are held and firmly bound unto George F. Drew, Governor of the State of Florida, The J. P. & M. R. R. Co., The Florida Central R. R. Co., Gideon M. Boissevain, Adrian J. Mildens, Joseph Zaddocks, Adrian Stoop, Frank R. Sherwin, claiming to be agent for the four parties last named, John Collinson, Milton S. Littlefield, Walter Gwynn, Thomas B. Coddington, J. Fred. Schutte, Jan Prins, Adrian Prins, Heinrich Ulrice, Elias Fuld, Dr. Nicholas Jacob Den Tex, J. Borzo, Edward Isaac Asser, and Adolph Engler, trustees, in the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, to be paid to the said George F. Drew and others above named as obligees, to which payment, well and truly to be made, we bind ourselves and each of us, our heirs, executors and administrators firmly by these presents. Sealed with our seals; dated this 15th day of August, 1879.

Whereas the above-named Western N. C. R. R. Co. has taken an appeal to the Supreme Court of the United States to reverse the decree rendered in the above-entitled suits by the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida:

Now, therefore, the condition of this obligation is such that if the above-named Western N. C. R. R. Co. shall prosecute its said appeal to effect and answer all costs and damages if it shall fail to make good its appeal, then this obligation shall be null and void; otherwise to remain in full force and virtue.

Wilson, Samuel McDowell Tate, and Samuel H. Wiley, being so under oath, did acknowledge the execution of the foregoing bond and obligation to be their joint and several act and deed, and that they executed, signed, and sealed and delivered the same for the uses and purposes therein mentioned, and that the said persons are personally known to me to be the same persons mentioned and described in said bond.

[SEAL.] Geo. C. Lloyd,
Notary Public, New York Co., N. Y.

Upon this bond Justice Bradley made the following indorsement:

"Application for extending the time to present a bond to operate as a supersedeas having been applied for before the expiration of the sixty days allowed by statute, and the delay being satisfactorily explained, and the parties having stipulated to argue the appeal on the merits only, the foregoing bond is approved and received for the purpose aforesaid.

"Joseph P. Bradley,
Asso. Justice of Sup. Ct. U. S.

"August 16th, 1879."
(Record, p. 554, 555, 556.)

It will be observed—

(1.) That the bond itself is a bond in No. 1 or No. 2, but not in No. 3, because the obligees in the bond are the parties defendant in No. 1 and No. 2, but are not the complainants in No. 3.

(2.) That the application for the extension of time in which to give the bond was made only in No. 1 and No. 2, and the order enlarging the time was only made in No. 1 and No. 2.

(3.) This bond was given by the North Carolina Company, not a party to cause No. 3.

Upon these facts it is contended that the bond and approval never created a supersedeas in No. 3, which was the only cause in which a sale of decree had been rendered.

Again, after this bond was approved as aforesaid the complainants settled with the North Carolina Company and paid it $25,000, in consideration of which that company stipulated to and did dismiss its appeal, under Rule 28 of this court. This court, subsequently, on the intervention of another corporation, reinstated the appeal for the benefit of the corporation last referred to, but no new bond was given to the complainants.

After the appeal was dismissed, and while it stood dismissed, the sale took place. And even conceding that the restoration of the appeal had the effect to restore the supersedeas, it could not make the supersedeas created by such restoration retroactive, so as to render void a sale which was made at a time when there was no supersedeas in force.

Especially is this the case, inasmuch as neither of these corporations was a party defendant in our case No. 3, nor had either a right to obtain a supersedeas in any way whatever.

II.

The Central Company, which was a defendant in cause No. 3, obtained an order for supersedeas from Justice Bradley upon a bond which was so fraudulent that this court has declared it no better than a forged bond; and this court refused to accept a new bond to operate as a supersedeas.

It is submitted that the defendants are estopped to claim any advantage of a supersedeas order thus fraudulently obtained; and that the supersedeas predicated of this bond and approval was void ab initio; and that the sale, though made before this court declared the bond a fraud, was valid.

THE JACKSONVILLE, PENSACOLA & MOBILE RAILROAD COMPANY, Appellants, vs. J. FRED. SCHUTTE, JAN PRINS, ADRIAN PRINS, AND OTHERS, Appellees; THE FLORIDA CENTRAL RAILROAD COMPANY, Appellants, vs. THE SAME; THE WESTERN NORTH CAROLINA RAILROAD COMPANY, Appellants, vs. THE SAME.	APPEALS IN EQUITY.

BRIEF OF W. G. M. DAVIS,

One of the Counsel for the Appellees.

The case of the appellees against the Florida railroad companies is briefly stated in paragraphs 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 18, 19, 20, of the original bill. (See page 240 to 246 inclusive of Record.)

If the decree rendered in the Circuit Court is found to be correct as to said companies, the appeal of the North Carolina corporation must fail.

The Florida corporations appeared and made full and vigorous defence. A decree which concludes the corporations bars likewise the corporators, where no fraud appears.

The North Carolina Railroad Company was improperly admitted to litigate with the appellees. Both the Florida corporations, acting by their respective directions, employed counsel, filed answers which omitted no defence possible to be made, examined witnesses, and are now here appealing from the decrees rendered against them. It is manifest that no ground existed for allowing the individual corporator to intervene in the cause and make a distinct defence.

There are no such grounds for such interference as in Memphis vs. Dean were prescribed. If the decrees are right as against the corporations, they cannot be wrong as to the corporators, therefore no severance was proper. It was a wrong done to the appellees when they were compelled to litigate with the North Carolina Railroad Company. They were put to great and useless cost, a hearing of the case was delayed and opportunity for vexatious proceedings afforded.

The North Carolina Railroad Company claimed title to stock in the Florida corporations. (See paragraph 17 of its bill, found on page 44 of Record.) The following is an extract: "And that the capital stock and all the bond issues of the said Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company likewise became, was and is the property and estate of your orator."

In the 12th subdivision of the prayers of the same bill a decree is asked, so as to invest it with title to the same stock in the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company.

In the bill filed by the North Carolina Company, touching the Florida Central Railroad Company, the same claim is made as to the stock in that company. (See paragraphs 4th and 8th on page 3 of Record.)

Similar assertions of title to such stock are made in the answer filed by the North Carolina Company to the original bill filed by the appellees in the Circuit Court. (See paragraph 14 of such answer, on page 274 of Record.)

The case of the appellees, against the Florida corporations, went to a hearing without the North Carolina corporation being a party. A decree was made in their favor against the Florida corporations, who appealed therefrom. We are here to meet them, the appellants who are alone entitled to be heard and ready to show cause why the decree in favor of J. Fred. Schutte, et als., should be reversed. A decision on the appeal of the Florida corporations must conclude all whom the corporation represents; no other or further hearing can be had on the merits as made in the pleadings in the cause of Schutte et als. vs. The Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company and the Florida Central Railroad Company. The learned Judge, who heard the causes in the court below, saw fit to order Schutte and his co-complainants to appear and answer the bills which were filed by the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company. When this order was complied with the identical issues appeared for trial which were presented in the Schutte case. His Honor, the Judge, in his opinion conclusively established from the evidence that the North Carolina Railroad Company was estopped by its participation in the issuance and sale of the bonds, from setting up any such objections to their validity as were set forth in the several original bills filed by it. He decreed the dismissal of both bills, but as there were no allegations of law or fact contained in them not sufficiently presented in the answers filed by the Florida corporations to the bill of Schutte, et als., it may be well said that the bills of the North Carolina Railroad Company ought to have been dismissed, as of course, when the conclusion was arrived at in the case of Schutte, et als., vs. The Florida corporations, on which the decrees, as to them, are based; there could be nothing more to try after such judgment was pronounced.

We grant, that if the North Carolina Railroad Company had filed bills solely for the purpose of fixing the railroad and property purchased by Swepson, with trusts in favor of such company arising out of the investments of its funds by Swepson, questions peculiar to such an equity might have been considered, such as priority of equities, notice to the bondholders' acquiesence and participation in sale of the bonds by the North Carolina Railroad Company. But when it set up title as a stockholder in the Florida companies, such questions could not be considered after the full hearing and determination of the case between the bondholders and the Florida corporations. They were foreign and incompatible with the case made by Schutte, et als.

It is proper to notice that the bill filed by the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company alleges that the proceeding was taken because the complainant could not procure any one authorized as officers to act for the Florida Central to interfere to prevent the sale of the road by the Governor. (See 45th paragraph of bill, page 14 of Record.) But in paragraph 38 of the bill (page 11 of Record) it is alleged that the company, through counsel, appeared before the Governor and protested against the sale. There was no evidence adduced by the North Carolina Railroad Company to prove any unwillingness or incapacity, on the part of the Florida Central, to act. It appeared and answered the bill of the North Carolina Railroad Company. (Record, page 125.) The answer admits the allegation in the 45th paragraph of the bill, as to the conflict of title as to the Directors' office. But it fully appeared by the record that Edward M. L'Engle was acting as President of the Florida Central when the bill was filed, and has acted as such through the whole litigation. L'Engle, in his answer to the Schutte bill, alleges he was elected President of the Florida Central on the 30th of October, 1873, and other persons Directors; that they remained in office until March 15th, 1877, when he and others were elected, etc. So the allegation in the 45th paragraph of the bill of the North Carolina Railroad Company, on which it made out a right to sue in behalf of its interest as a stockholder, was not only not proved at the hearing but is disproved.

In the 45th paragraph before referred to, the claim of title as stockholder is asserted as giving the right, and asserted for the purpose of maintaining the suit.

With this bill there was filed a copy of a complaint in a suit in a New York court, instituted by the North Carolina Railroad Company, in which it asserted title to a large amount of the stock in the Florida Central Railroad Company. (Pages 18, 19, 20 of Record.)

There was a demurrer filed by Governor Drew to the bills of the North Carolina Railroad Company. They were overruled. They should have been sustained, especially that which related to the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company.

It clearly appears that the North Carolina Railroad Company occupied, at best, but the same position which the individuals did who owned stock. It was not a proper or necessary party to the Schutte Bill. It was made a party, but the bill, as to it, was dismissed before the cause was heard; not being a party it could not appeal from the decree in favor of Schutte, et als. It could not prosecute an appeal under the law regulating appeals and writs of error. No order could be made by a Justice of this Court providing for the North Carolina Railroad Company such a remedy. A fortiori, a supersedeas could not be awarded. The appeals taken by the North Carolina Railroad Company bring up only the records and proceedings in the suits instituted originally by the Western Division of the Western North Carolina Railroad Company.

The case of the appellees, Schutte, et als., is simple. The decree declares their bonds valid obligations of the several corporations who issued them, and that liens on the railroads and properties of such companies were created by the statutes of Florida enacted in 1869 and 1870, which provided for the issuance of such securities. It further declared, that Schutte et als. were bona fide holders of a large amount of the bonds, and entitled to an enforcement of the liens.

Whether the bonds were valid and binding on the respective corporations, whether there were liens created by the statute to secure their payment, whether bona fide holders of the bonds were entitled to have the aid of the courts to subject the property of said corporations to sale for their payment, are not open questions in this court, nor were they in the Circuit Court.

The learned Judge, who tried the cause in the Circuit Court, adopted the decisions made by the Supreme Court of Florida in the cases referred to by him in his opinion, wherein the legal questions above stated were settled. (See opinion of Mr. Justice Bradley, page 570 of Record.) His Honor the Judge did not decide that decisions of the State Court were absolutely binding on the Federal Courts. He indicated a doubt as to that, but this court at its present term settled the question. The decisions of the Supreme Court of the State of Florida, in Holland vs. The State of Florida, and State vs. The Florida Central Railroad Company, and Trustees, etc. vs. The Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Railroad Company, are binding on this court as constructions of the Constitution and statutes of the State. Those decisions support the decree.

I repeat, the questions as to the right of the bondholders to subject the property of the defendant Florida corporations are settled by the decisions referred to.

This Court, in the case (original) of The State of Florida vs. E. C. Anderson et als., adopted and acted on those decisions. The decree by which the railroad of the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company was directed to be delivered to the State of Florida was expressly put on the ground that the statutes of Florida, before quoted, created a trust in favor of the bondholders. (Vol. 91 U. S. S. C. Rep., Otto.)

This Court treated the property as though a final decree had been rendered in the State Court against the Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile Company, settling the rights of the bondholders. The application of the railroad company, for delivery to it of the railroad and property, was refused in such terms as showed that the Court considered the questions as to the lien on the property to have been adjudicated. It is impossible to uphold the disposition made by this Court of the property then in its possession upon any other hypothesis. This Court could not have tried and decided the question originally.

I refrain from making any argument on the evidence in the record touching the issuance and sale of the bonds, as the opinion filed by his Honor the Justice, who tried the cause in the Circuit Court, fully disposes of all the questions made by the defendant corporations as to the validity of the issue, the sale and the title of the appellees.

The bill filed by the appellees stated the proceedings in the State Courts in which the State sued, on behalf of the bondholders, to establish the lien on the several railroads and appurtenant property. The Jacksonville, Pensacola & Mobile and the Florida Central Companies appeared and answered. The issues in the suit required the courts to determine the questions as to the validity of the bonds and the existence of liens for their payment.

The appellees, in their bill, insist on the decisions made by the Supreme Court of the State in Holland vs. The State, and the State vs. The Florida Central, and claim that they are decisive and final adjudications in their favor, and conclude the Florida corporations; the parties were the same, if the State be treated as trustee for the bondholders, sueing in their behalf. The subject-matter was the same, and the same defendants. The Florida corporations were defendants. If what the appellees so claimed in their original bill be allowed to be well founded in law, there would be nothing remaining for decision but the integrity of the title of the appellees to the securities which they produced at the hearing, as to which nothing will be added beyond what is before stated.

Motion to suppress Depositions of S. W. Hopkins and Frank H. Collins, taken at New York City, on behalf of Schutte, et al.

POINTS.

I.

"A deposition not taken according to the rules of law MUST be excluded if objection is made. No practice, HOWEVER CONVENIENT, can give validity to depositions which are not taken according to law, unless the parties expressly waive the objection, or by previous consent agree to the mode in which they are taken."

Evans v. Eaton, 7 Wheat., 356, 426.
3 Green. Ev., sec. 351.

In the Case at bar there is no Waiver.

As stated in our general argument, motions were made below, on behalf of this appellant, to suppress the depositions on behalf of Schutte, et al., at Amsterdam and New York City. The motion as to the Amsterdam depositions was heard and granted "on the ground that the answers were prepared beforehand" (Judge's minutes, fol. 3056).

The New York depositions having only been published on the trial, and no printed copies of them being available at the time, the motion, as to those depositions, was not disposed of in limine, but reserved for the Court, on reading the testimony, whether to consider these depositions or suppress them.

No intimation is given in the opinion of any disposition of this motion.

"The witness having been duly sworn, the Com"missioner or Examiner is to put the interroga"tories SINGLY and SERIATIM, in the order in which "they are written; and may explain to the witness "their import and meaning; but should not permit
"him to read or hear any other interrogatory

"until the one already propounded be fully "answered; nor unnecessarily depart until the ex- "amination is concluded."

3 Green. Ev., Sec. 324.
Shaw v. Lindsey, 15 Vesey, 380.

In the case of the Amsterdam depositions which were suppressed below, but brought up with the record, notwithstanding, the Examiner certified (fol. 3824) "that the said witnesses made use of written "memoranda, prepared beforehand, to which they "referred in giving their testimony."

Several of the witnesses themselves swear in answer to the 20th cross-interrogatory that "Dr. "Wertheim has read over to me both the direct- "interrogatories and the cross-interrogatories pro- "posed to me" (fol. 3798); "Dr. Wertheim re- "quested me to give testimony in this cause, and "read the interrogatories and cross-interogatories "to me" (fol. 3821); "Dr. Wertheim * * * * "read to me the interrogatories" (fol. 3832); and so on.

Upon the infirmity thus disclosed in the Amsterdam depositions they were suppressed.

To show that these depositions are obnoxious to the same vice of preparation in advance, which destroyed the Amsterdam depositions, and that they, therefore, should have been, and still be, disregarded, we place the answers of Collins and Hopkins to the same interrogatory, in several instances, in parallel columns.

Interrogatory Fifth.—State what induced S. W. Hopkins & Co. to undertake to act as agents of said company to effect the sale of the bonds specified in the power of attorney given to you by said railway company; what led your said firm to believe that such bonds could be sold, either in the United States or in Europe?

Fol. 2324.

FRANK H. COLLINS.

(Fol. 2675.)

S. W. Hopkins and Company were induced to act as agent of said Company to sell said bonds, because they believed said bonds to be a good security, that they would have no difficulty in selling them, being as they were bonds of a State whom they believed held first mortgage bonds of said company for an amount equal to the amount issued by the State of Florida in exchange therefor; and that the purchaser of said bonds would really hold a double security: First, the State of Florida, and secondly, the Railroad itself, two hundred and fifty miles in length, built and in operation from Jacksonville to Quincy, with branches at Monticello and Tallahassee. Said bonds bore a high rate of interest, namely, eight per cent. per annum, payable in gold, and it was represented to the said firm by the president of said company that the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company owned the line of railroad I have just named, and that under the the Act of the Legislature of the State of Florida the said railway company were to deliver to the said State first mortgage bonds of said railroad company to the extent of sixteen thousand dollars per mile before the said state should deliver a like amount of state bonds as security for the bonds of the State so to be issued to said company."

S. W. HOPKINS.

(Fol. 2722.)

The firm of S. W. Hopkins & Co. were induced to act as agents of said Company to sell said bonds, because they believed said bonds were a good security; that they would have no difficulty in selling them; that they were bonds of a State whom we believed held first mortgage bonds of the said company for an amount equal to the amount issued by the State of Florida in exchange therefor; and that the purchaser of said bonds would really hold a double security, namely, the State of Florida, and also the Railroad itself, which we were informed was then built and in operation from Jacksonville to Quincy, with branches at Monticello and Tallahassee, two hundred and fifty miles in length; said bonds bore a high rate of interest, namely, (8) eight per cent. per annum, payable in gold, and it was represented to our firm by the president of the said company that the Jacksonville, Pensacola, and Mobile Railroad Company owned the line of railroad I have just named, and that under the Act of the Legislation of the State of Florida, the said company were obliged to deliver to the said State first mortgage bonds of the said company to the extent of $16,000 per mile before the authorities of the State could or would deliver a like amount of its State Bonds as security for the bonds of the State so to be issued to said company.

Interrogatory Seventh.—What was represented to you by the officer of said company who employed you and gave you information, or made statements to you, as to the locality of the railroad of said company, the number of completed miles, its eastern terminus, and projected route and western terminus; what documents, map, papers, or laws of the State of Florida, if any, were produced to you by such officer of said company; what reliance did you place on such statements, and how was your firm affected by them or by any documents, maps, and laws of the State of Florida?

Fol. 2325.

It was represented to the said firm at and for their appointment of agents of said company by its president, that there were no prior liens upon any part of said line of railroad from Jacksonville to Quincy, with the branches at Monticello and Tallahassee. Each of said bonds has on its back an endorsement signed by the then Governor of the State of Florida, setting forth that there had been deposited by said company with the State of Florida first mortgage bonds of said company to the extent of sixteen thousand dollars per mile of completed road.

The locality and line of railroad from Jacksonville westward, consisting of two hundred and fifty miles, was learned from statements made to said firm by the president of said company. From the then existing terminus at Quincy, the said railroad was to be built to the city of Mobile, in the State of Alabama, and the bonds issued to said company by said State were to be sold, and a sufficient amount of the proceeds used in the completion of the line of railroad of said company to said city of Mobile, an authenticated copy of the Act of the Legislature authorizing the issuing of said bonds; a map of the line of said railroad already constructed, and proposed to be constructed, and statements of the

It was represented to our firm, at and before their appointment as agents of said company by its president, that there were no prior liens upon any part of said line of railroad from Jacksonville to Quincy, with the branches at Monticello and Tallahassee. That each of said bonds had on its back an endorsement signed by the then Governor of Florida, setting forth that there had been deposited by said company, with the State of Florida, first mortgage bonds of said company, at the extent of $16,000 per mile of completed road. That the locality and line of railroad from Jacksonville westward consisted of two hundred and fifty miles; that from the then existing terminus at Quincy the said line of railroad was to be built to the city of Mobile, in the State of Alabama, and that the bonds issued to the said company by the said State were to be sold, and a sufficient amount of the proceeds thereof were to be used in the completion of the line of railroad of said company to said city of Mobile. An authenticated copy of the Act of the Legislature authorizing the issue of said bonds, a map of the line of said railroad already constructed and proposed to be constructed, and statements of the then Governor of the State of Florida, and other officers of said

Governor of the then State of Florida and of the president or other officers of said railway company that said line of railroad was unencumbered by any prior lien, were delivered to said firm by the president of said company at or before the appointment of said firm as agent of said company. All of which statements and representations were relied upon by said firm, and were repeated in Europe. I certainly believed that the enterprise was a good and sound one and would commend itself to the public. The most perfect reliance was placed upon the representations made to said firm that the line of railroad was two hundred and fifty miles in length, from Jacksonville to Quincy, with branches at Monticello and Tallahassee, and that no part of said railroad was encumbered by any prior lien.

That first mortgage bonds had been executed upon said line of railroad and delivered in accordance with the Act of the Legislature of the State of Florida to the proper officers of said State as security for the payment of said bonds of the State of Florida and for a like amount, in order to aid in completing said line of railroad to the City of Mobile, thus perfecting, as I then believed, a great public work in the State of Florida, as well as a leading trunk line of railroad in the South which would be a valuable property, abundantly able to pay the interest on its bonds.

Fol. 2,677-8-9.

company, that said line of railroad was unencumbered by any prior lien, were delivered to our firm by the President of said company, at or before the appointment of our firm as agents of said company, all of which statements and representations were relied upon and believed by our firm, and were repeated in Europe. I personally believed that the enterprise was a good and sound one, and would commend itself to the investing public. The most perfect reliance was placed on the representations made to our firm that the line of railroad was two hundred and fifty miles in length, extending from Jacksonville to Quincy, with branches to Monticello and Tallahassee, and that no part of said railroad was encumbered by any prior lien. That first mortgage bonds had been executed upon said line of railroad, and delivered in accordance with the provisions of the several Acts of the Legislature of the State of Florida to the proper officers of said State as security for the payment of said bonds of the State of Florida, and for a like amount, in order to aid in completing said line of railroad to the City of Mobile, thus perfecting, as I then believed, a great public work in the State of Florida, as well as creating a leading trunk line of railroad in the South, which would be a valuable property, abundantly able to pay the interests on its bonds.

Fols. 2,725-6-7.

Cross-interrogatory Sixth.—Before you sold any of said bonds were they not denounced as being fraudulent and illegal in their issue, and was it not also alleged that the statute under which they were issued was unconstitutional and void, and that said bonds would never be paid by the people of Florida; and were not these charges of illegality published, and the publications copied in various public journals and newspapers throughout the United States, England, and Holland where said bonds were offered for sale? State fully all the knowledge and information you have on the subject.

Fol. 2,457.

Before, or at the time we were selling said bonds, I believe, a question arose as to their legality, and it is my impression that it was alleged that the statute under which they were issued was unconstitutional, and I believe these charges were published, and the publications in some public journals in the United States, but I do not remember that any such charges were published in England or Holland. I did not credit the statements made and circulated with respect to the validity of the issue, because our lawyers had examined all the laws under which they had been issued, and they advised our firm that the bonds were legally issued and constitutional, and therefore a good and valid security. I cannot state more definitely as to the publications with respect to the character of the bonds.

Fol. 2,704.

Before we sold any of said bonds, I remember that they were by some parties denounced as being fraudulent and illegal in their issue, and I remember that some party alleged that the statute under which they were issued was unconstitutional and void, and that said bonds would never be paid by the people of Florida, and I remember that these charges of illegality were published, and the publications copied in some public journals and newspapers in the United States, but I do not remember whether any such charges or allegations were published at the time in England or Holland. I never believed in the truthfulness of any of the damaging statements made and circulated about the validity of the issue of the bonds, because I had personally examined all the laws under which they had been issued, and I came to the conclusion at the time that said bonds were properly and legally issued under a constitutional enactment, and therefore they were good and valid securities.

Fol. 2,758.

Nothing, it seems to us, could be more mathematically certain than that the two depositions from which we have quoted the foregoing, were prepared in writing in advance, by counsel, or some other party for the Dutch bondholders. It is physically impossible that any two witnesses, knowing the same facts, and desiring to tell the whole truth, even, in relation to any matter, could, without preconcert or preparation, make answers so peculiarly identical as the Exhibit we have made, shows these two witnesses to have done.

That they were read from papers prepared for the witnesses is rendered more certain, if possible, by the accident of their both copying the grammatical errors of their prompter, as witness the expression, "state whom," in the former part of the first answer quoted. Any school boy, far enough advanced in mathematics to have learned the problems of probabilities, will be able, from the data found in these depositions, to demonstrate that so many coincidences in language could not possibly have occurred in the answers of any two witnesses in any legitimate and bona fide answers to the same interrogatory propounded to each.

The Court having found upon the oath of the Dutchmen, and the certificate of the Examiner, that the Amsterdam depositions were "prepared beforehand" by counsel, or some one else, and therefore suppressed them, we have a right to suspect that the same parties would prepare other depositions in advance, if necessary, and that in this case they did do so.

No human intelligence can examine these two depositions, of which we have reproduced samples, and not conclude that they were manufactured, and read or memorized, from one manuscript.

II.

The witness Hopkins had been previously examined by this appellant, on notice to all parties (fol. 1746, et seq.), and should have been examined at that time by Schutte et al. Under the coaching he received before his last examination he is made to contradict his first deposition, which was fully corroborated by other witnesses.

It was irregular to permit this second examination upon interrogatories, after the appellant had given notice that it desired the testimony taken orally, under rule 67 of Equity Procedure.

III.

For the foregoing, among other reasons, the depositions of Hopkins and Collins should have been suppressed below, and also should be disregarded here.

Appeals from the Circuit Court of the United States for the Northern District of Florida.

And now come the appellants by their counsel, and, opposing the motion for an immediate issue of a mandate in the causes above entitled, submit:

1. That appellants have under careful consideration the question of applying to this Honorable Court for a rehearing of the decision recently made therein, and will in a short time come to some determination thereof.

2. That it is only within the last day or two that they have been able to obtain copies of the opinion delivered therein, whereby to examine the same with such care as to state specifically and advisedly the ground of such proposed rehearing.

3. That by expediting the issuance of a mandate, great and irreparable injury may result to the appellants, as respects important matters which will be presented to this Honorable Court in such proposed application for a rehearing; while no harm, whatever, can result to the appellees if the issue of the mandate may take its orderly course at the end of the term.

Samuel F. Phillips,
Jos. B. Stewart,
Of Counsel for Appellants.

As I was retained specially to argue this cause, and have done so, I do not feel authorized at present to sign the foregoing as counsel, but if it is proper to say so, I will say that I was surprised at the judgment, and believe it due to justice that the judgment ought not to be carried into execution by special order, until the parties in interest may have reasonable time to consider what course they may be advised by counsel to take.

Geo. F. Edmunds.
